Although I have been a reader of the NEWS for many years, and while I have kept very close watch on the N. A. M. L. since it was an infant, as you will know my membership dates back to 1918, I have never written in to the League. Possibly one of the reasons is that I have just kept putting it off, but the real reason has been that I was just sitting back like many other of the older projectionists of to-day, watching and waiting to see what the League was going to be, and although you may lose your temper for a moment, I must admit that I am very disappointed in it.

Criticises N. A. M. L.

Although the N. A. M. L. is no doubt a wonderful movement of its kind and could be made into a great thing, I can't see where the columns that now appear from week to week in the NEWS are worth very much to even the rank beginner, not mentioning the older projectionist, who is always striving, just the same as the beginner is to improve the standard of his work. If all the operators and projectionists looked after their work, cared for their films as they state in letters that appear in the NEWS, the N. A. M. L. would soon be useless to any one, just for the simple reason that there would be no damage the films. While true enough a large portion of the so-called film damage is due to carelessness, I believe firmly that the greater part is done through ignorance of the smaller town men, and, yes, the big town men, too, of not knowing their machines. In other words, they do not know how to keep their machines in good running condition; they lack knowledge of fine adjustments of their projectors; therefore the result is that they cannot help but damage films. It is also true that the said film exchanges are responsible for a certain percentage of the film damage, simply because they neglect to give them the proper inspection, but if the films were not damaged in the first place there would be no need of inspection in the exchanges. I have been in the projection game for the past eleven years. Six years on the present job, and at one time in your own state, because that happens to be my state, too. Before leaving this subject, do not get the impression that I am blaming the small town man altogether. On the contrary, I am not. I have faith in every small town man who wants to learn his profession, and I am sure that the most of the larger town men feel the same and would at any time assist them in any way possible in gaining a better knowledge of their work. Because the small town man does not have the chances and opportunities of improvement as the larger town man.

Milton O. Field, projectionist, Empress theatre, Lethbridge, Canada

What Is Needed

In getting back to the N. A. M. L. Forum, why can't its editor get right down to business with the co-operation of projectionists throughout the country and give us a real live, honest-to-goodness projection department in the NEWS in the place of two or three split-up pages of letters from this man and that man simply saying that he desires to join your league or that he desires to wear one of your buttons and find enclosed 25 cents? No doubt you are looking for the nearest brick and wishing that Lethbridge wasn't so darned far from New York, but just the same we will take that chance. About the only thing of real interest that has appeared in the Forum lately was the series on Mazda projection. Let's have more of it.

To start the ball rolling, why can't the Editor start a real projection department off by giving a series of questions, having them deal at different angles on the optics of the projectors, electricity, including generators, converters, etc.? Say, give from five to ten questions each week, depending, of course, upon their nature, publishing the best answers and offering, say, an honor roll. This, of course, would involve a little more work on our Editor, possibly too much, but if the NEWS wants to serve the projectionists it would be the least the NEWS could do, and I am sure that if this is gone after in the right way that it won't be long until you will have the co-operation of projectionists everywhere, and we will have a Projection Department that all can be proud of and not a disappointment from week to week. The new N. A. M. L. members could be looked after in, say, another honor roll.

Alberta Has Real Ones

Here in Alberta we have some real projectionists if I do say it myself, but then when we stop to consider who is behind the "boys" we could not expect anything else. We have an examination that we are proud of, and we have a theatre inspector of whom we are still prouder—Mr. Philip Barber, of Edmonton. He is a thoroughly experienced projectionist and one of the best versed men on the profession in this country. He was the first up here to introduce the classification of the projectionists in Alberta, and it has done wonders. It has made many good men out of just mere operators, and we certainly pity

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

RAVEN HAFTONE SCREEN

Has a surface of very finely woven material, into the pores of which, by a special process, a reflecting substance is forced from the rear. This congeals or partly solidifies, yet always remains pliable. Secured to this is another layer of woven material, and back of this is a coating of black rubber, making the whole very strong and absolutely opaque, points very essential in screens.

Little Stories of

Coming from a small town in Minnesota to New York at the age of 13, S. L. Rothafel started as a $2-a-week cash boy. From this he graduated into a book agent; then he joined the Marines, with which he served in the Boxer Rebellion in China. His first moving picture venture was behind a bar-room in a small Pennsylvania mining town, where he met with the usual difficulties of a pioneer. He borrowed his chairs from a local undertaker, and when there was a funeral there was no show. But, naturally, he soon outgrew this field.

After a rapid rise he returned to New York where he opened the Strand, the Rialto and the Rivoli. It is no wonder that when the builders of the biggest theatre on Broadway looked for a man big enough to direct its management they should seek out S. L. Rothafel. Nor is it a wonder that in their choice of ultra-modern equipment they should select GOLD SEAL Automatic Registers for the Capitol ticket booths.

No modern theatre starts without a GOLD SEAL. And every established theatre which installs a GOLD SEAL finds it second in importance only to their projector. Its price is low and it is a time-saver as well as a money maker.

New Theatre Assures Patrons of Cool, Fresh Air in Summer

CERTAIN to be one of the coolest and best ventilated theatres in all Greater New York—the new Forum theatre, located at 138th Street and Brook Avenue, is scheduled to be opened within the next few days.

It stands out as a splendid example of the modern motion picture theatre. The appointments throughout are of the finest and were selected with an eye single for the utmost in comfort for the public.

For instance, in the hottest summer weather, every one of the Forum's patrons will be able to enjoy the program in absolute comfort. Cool refreshing breezes will make the interior of the Forum far more pleasant than any seashore resort.

Up on the roof are two gigantic Typhoons—each 12 feet in diameter. It can readily be imagined what the effect will be on a broiling hot day when these two mammoth breeze makers get on the job. In just one minute they will blow in over 285,000 cubic feet of fresh air—nearly 17,000 cubic feet every hour. The magnitude of this volume of air may be more easily grasped when it is said that its weight is over 1,200,000 lbs.—600 tons of air per hour.

The Forum theatre is one of the large chain of other houses all controlled by the same interests—and practically all equipped with the Typhoon Cooling and Ventilating System.

Necessity of "Safety First" For Theatres, Exchanges, Studios, Laboratories

"GIVE some well merited thought to 'Safety First'," is the message of Frederick H. Elliott, Vice-President of the Feaster Manufacturing Company, to those engaged in the motion picture industry. Mr. Elliott knows whereof he speaks, for he has the unique distinction of having inaugurated and directed the original "Safety First" movement in this country and subsequently co-ordinated the various branches of the motion picture business through the formation of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

"Throughout the theatre, the 'Safety First' slogan should be brought home forcefully to every employee, particularly in the projection room," says Mr. Elliott. "In handling film the greatest care should be exercised to avoid even the slightest trouble. Smoking when motion picture film is exposed is criminal and the law prohibiting smoking, or even the carrying of parlor matches, should be rigidly enforced by the management.

"It is the duty of attendants at theatres to exercise the greatest watch over the carelessness of smokers, owing to the habit of throwing matches, lighted cigars and cigarettes about the lobbies and theatre entrances. There have been many instances where panics have been created through such carelessness.

"The attainment of good housekeeping conditions rests largely with executives whose first duty is to thoroughly instruct all employees concerning what is expected of them. They should be informed regarding the various proper and improper practices and warned that they must adhere strictly to the rules and regulations under pain of instant dismissal.

"Particular attention should be given to the handling of crowds attending the motion picture theatres. The safety, comfort and convenience of theatre patrons should be the watchword and undue diligence will gain thousands of friends for the silent drama and the management of the motion picture theatres.

"In the exchanges, laboratories and studios, the same care and diligence should be exercised to safeguard life and property. Motion picture film should be kept in approved containers at all times, except when being actually handled or inspected.

"The stacking of naked film is one of the most dangerous practices in the industry and should be absolutely forbidden. Such exposure of film affords an opportunity for fire to spread; whereas, containers or other protection retard the spread of fire.

"The ease of ignition can only be offset by an habitually careful and conscientious elimination of all possible causes by which film might be ignited, through contact with flame, sparks or heat.

"Rubbish, scraps of paper under tables and desks and back of radiators, cabinets and other fixtures afford a starting place for a conflagation that might prove most disastrous.

"Many fires have their origin with the heating system, because combustible materials, such as wood, paper and film, if left in contact with hot pipes or surfaces for a sufficient length of time, may ignite. Steam pipes and radiators are especially dangerous and should be properly guarded.

"Nitro-cellulose motion picture film handled with simple precautions offers no great danger or hazard; nevertheless, those engaged in the industry should have a full knowledge of the characteristics of motion picture film and applying the correct methods of handling and storing, with an understanding and an appreciation of the necessity of complying with the established rules and regulations for the protection of life and property.

"Good housekeeping should be the motto of everyone connected with the great cinema industry; for the art of good housekeeping consists principally of two things;—order and cleanliness. The easiest, most effective, yet most neglected means of eliminating hazards is the exercise of this warning."

World Ticket Co. Reports Sales

S. G. Lamm of the World Ticket & Supply Co., has just returned to New York from a very successful trip through the middle west and reports the following installations of Simplex Ticket Machines: Kunsky's Columbia theatre, Detroit, Mich.; La Salle Gardens, Detroit, Mich.; New Diamont theatre, Phila., Pa.; and the Garden, New, Parkway and Century theatres of Baltimore, Md. The Wilmer & Vincent Co. of New York have also placed an order with the World Ticket Company for a three unit Simplex Ticket Machine to be installed in their Hippodrome theatre, Reading, Pa. Mr. Lamm, while in Detroit, also made arrangements with G. D. Brady of the Exhibitors Supply Co., Detroit, to handle Simplex Ticket Registers and World Tickets exclusively in the State of Michigan.

the man who has the impression that any "dub" in technical knowledge can hold a first-class Alberta license.

This is getting to be quite a lengthy letter, and no doubt is headed straight for the waste-basket. However, it would not hurt to give a brief description of my equipment, which is one that any man can well be proud of. My projection room is just a little small, but we hope to soon have this larger. It consists of two type "S" Simplex projectors, finished in battleship grey, one equipped with Gundlach-Manhattan lens, the other with the "Snaplite." The "Snaplite" I have for a try-out. The Martin rotary converter, which we have also found to be a very serviceable machine, supplies D. C. at the arcs. An emergency panel board is a part of the projection room. This board controls both the converter and the A. C., and is equipped with ammeters, voltmeters, etc. The lamp houses are piped off to an 18-inch exhaust fan, which is located in the ceiling, which leads to a large vent which leads directly to the open. Sufficient vents allow a supply of fresh air at all times. I have in stalled the second rewinder, one being of the hand rewind for inspection and assembling purposes, while the other is an automatic electric rewind. I will at an early date send you some photos of both my projection room as well as the room in which the converter, controlling devices, etc., are installed.

In closing allow me to wish you much continued success, and, for goodness sake, let's have a real projection department in the NEWS. You will certainly have my co-operation, and there will be lots of others, too.

Sincerely yours,
MILTON O. FIELD,
Projectionist Empress Theatre,

Mr. Field undoubtedly will be glad to know that this department is planning a series of short articles which will deal with mathematics, electricity, optics, etc., to be presented in such a manner as to inform the projectionist on the phases of these subjects of most help to him. This series will probably commence within the next two or three weeks.

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

At Universal City

Four subjects have been selected for Hoot Gibson to be made following the completion of his present vehicle, "Poor Worm." They are "Katydid," western, "The Shave Tail," Boy Scout training story, and "Out o' Luck," a story of the Navy.

Tully Marshall, Braden Hurst, Eulalie Jensen and Raymond Hatton have been added to "The Hunchback" cast.

Harry Pollard has completed "His Good Name," baseball and convict story, to embrace an all-star cast.

Ed Sedgwick has been engaged as director. Assignment to company will be made this week.

R-C Production Notes

Joe Rivers and Ad Wolgast double for the knock-out fight of eleven years ago in the sixth of the "Fighting Blood" series, titled "The Gall of the Wild," featuring George O'Hara and Clara Horton, direction of Mal St. Clair. Leach Cross and Phil Salvadore are in the cast.

The DeHaven's next starring two-reeler, titled "Private, Keep Out," from an original by George W. Bartlett, is being directed by Carter DeHaven.

Emory Johnson's "Westbound Ninety-Nine" troupe have leased track and trains of the Southern Pacific and are making exteriors at Pacoima. The cast includes Ralph Lewis, Ella Hall, Claire McDowell, John Harron.

Ethel Clayton's "The Greatest Glory" is completely edited.

Johnny Walker's "The Fourth Musketeer" is being completed.

Harry Carey, directed by Val Paul, is at Barstow, making exteriors for "The Man from the Desert." The complete cast embraces Margaret Clayton, George A. Wagner, Charles LeMoyne, Alfred Allen, Camilla Johnson, Dan Crimmons, A. W. Fremont, Fred Kelsey, Ford West, Ashley Cooper, C. Sovern, Otto Myer.

Hyatt Dadd has been transferred from the New York publicity department to the coast department in charge of Will T. Gentz.

Around Metro Studios

Buster Keaton's first five-reel subject for Metro, "The Three Ages," is now being made under the direction of Eddie Cline. The players engaged include Margaret Leahy, Wallace Beery, and Lionel Belmore.

The complete cast for Hunt Stromberg's "The Two Twins," starring Bull Montana, includes Roy Atwell, Fontaine LaRue, Chuck Reisner, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Billy Armstrong, Grace Gordon, Margaret Cloud, "Pal," the dog, and Jimmie Clemmons, for-

Warner Brothers Items

The complete revised cast for "Main Street" includes Florence Vidor, Monte Blue, Noah Beery, Robert Gordon, Harry Myers, Louise Fazenda, Josephine Crowell, Otis Harlan and Gordon Griffith. The picture is under the direction of Harry Beaumont, the continuity written by Julian Josephson.

Harry Rapf has engaged Chet Franklin to produce a northwest story title "Wolf Fangs," featuring the police dog named "Rintintin." The continuity was written by Fred Myton. Sada Cowan has been engaged by Rapf to write the continuity of the Kathleen Norris novel "Lucretia Lombard" and Mary O'Hara to write continuity for "Beau Brummel."

Warner Brothers have assigned Julien Josephson to write the continuity of "Little Johnny Jones," from the play by George M. Cohan. William Beaudine will direct.

Here and There

Phil Goldstone has completed a Richard Talmadge subject titled "Through the Flames," and will make as his next picture one founded on a story laid in Central America, also starring Talmadge.

Goldstone has engaged Howard Mitchell and Reaves Eason to direct an original melodrama titled "His Last Race." The cast to date includes Pauline Starke, Noah McKim, Tully Marshall, Alec. B. Francis, Rex "Snowy" Baker, William Scott, Dick Sutherland, Robert Kortman, Harry Depp, Phil Hall, Ed Burns and "Boomerang," Baker's educated horse. Goldstone is also planning to make "David Crockett," as an all star special.

The first Douglas McLean production for Associated Exhibitors was started this week at Hollywood studios, under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham, the James Montgomery play "The Aviator," later adapted as the musical comedy, "Going Up." The executive staff has been named, with Bogart Rogers, business manager and J. R. Crone, production manager.

Fred Caldwell Productions have been organized and the filming of "Knighthood in Hollywood," by John Blackwood, is under way. In the cast are Raymond Cannon, Victor Potel, Cecil Holland, Gale Henry, Violet Schram and Charles Mack. Edgar Lyons will act as camera-man, the continuity by Helen Van Upp. Caldwell, responsible for this comedy drama, also directed "Night Life in Hollywood."

Edwin Carewe has engaged J. Warren Kerrigan, for the lead, Sylvia Breamer, for the role of teacher, Russell Simpson, the sheriff, Hector Sarno, the heavy for "The Girl of the Golden West," the David Belasco stage play.

The Jackie Coogan picture "Toby Tyler," has been completely edited.

Kenneth Webb, who directed "Secrets of Paris," the C. C. Burr feature, has just been elected director of the Eastern branch of the Motion Picture Directors' Association. The office corresponds to that of President and the organization here is affiliated with the same association on the Pacific Coast.

Roy Del Ruth, comedy director, has been signed by Jack White, producer of Educational-Mermaid comedies, to direct Lige Conley in his next production.

Herschel Mayall has been added to the cast of "The Isle of Dead Ships" which Maurice Tourneur is now making on the coast for the M. C. Levee for First National release.

Edgar Lewis has already completed "Are You Guilty" and will start work shortly on "Oh Ye Fools." Both these pictures are for C. C. Burr. "Oh Ye Fools" is an original story by Mr. Lewis. "Are You Guilty" features James Kirkwood, Doris Kenyon and Mary Carr.

Betty Blythe is now working on her third Whitman Bennett production, "The Garden of Desire." Will Carleton is leading man, while Tyrone Power is also cast in a prominent role.

Corinne Griffith will complete work on "The Common Law" about the middle of January, when she will return East to begin a series of productions of her own. Webster Campbell will direct this star's productions and several stories have been bought.

Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, who produced "The Wheel of Fortune" for Anchor, has finished his second production of this series, which has Vola Vale as the star.

Earl Hurd is now at work on his fifth comedy for C. C. Burr. No title has been chosen for it yet, but it will be along the lines of his other work for the same company. Mr. Hurd recently finished a comedy called "Chicken Dressing."

With Paramount Units

Herbert Brenon is engaged in preliminaries for production of "Rustle of Silk," adapted by Sada Cowan and Ouida Bergere from the Cosmo Hamilton novel, which will co-star Betty Compson and Conway Tearle.

Frank Condon has written "Seventy-Five Cents an Hour," continuity by Grant Carpenter, the next vehicle for Walter Hiers, to be directed by Joseph Henabery. Production begins January 22, upon Hiers' return from his honeymoon. Jacqueline Logan will play the feminine lead.

Charles Maigne is finishing "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

George Fitzmaurice puts "The Cheat' into production on January 29.

William DeMille is half finished with "Grumpy."

Sam Woods is making the last scenes for "Prodigal Daughters." These include airplane trips through a storm to Lonely Inn.

Battles between Tartars and Gypsies for "The Law of the Lawless" are being fought at Lasky Ranch under the direction of Victor Fleming. Dorothy Dalton is the star, with Kosloff and Charles De Roche in the support.

Wesley Ruggles has been assigned to direct Agnes Ayres in "Contraband," the Clarence Budington Kelland story, adapted by Albert Levino.

Irvin Willat has arrived from the Coast to prepare for the filming of "Fog Bound," which will be made at the Long Island studio with Dorothy Dalton as the star.

Paul Dickey, famous as a playwright and author, has been engaged to write the scenario of "Fog Bound" from this story by Jack Bechdolt.

"Bella Donna," the first American-made starring picture of Pola Negri, has been completed after nearly three months of production work at the Lasky studio by George Fitzmaurice, Paramount producer.

Guy Wilky, who has started his fourteenth picture, "Grumpy," as cameraman for William DeMille, has just signed a three-year contract with Famous Players-Lasky, by which he will continue to be associated with Mr. DeMille for that length of time in the same position.

On the Goldwyn Lot

A unit system is being installed to give freer rein to individual directors, each to have a complete staff working in co-operation with executive organization of plant.

Eileen Pringle has been placed under a long-term contract by Goldwyn as a result of her work in "Strangers Banquet" and "Souls for Sale."

William Orlamond has been placed under contract.

Marshall Neilan will film part of "The Ingrate" in Grand Canyon.

Katherine Hilliker and H. H. Caldwell are titling the foreign production starring Pola Negri for release in February, release title to be "Mad Love."

William Worthington has been engaged for an important role in Marshall Neilan's "Red Lights," directed by Clarence Badger.

Katherine Kavenaugh, from the New York scenario department has been named writer and personal assistant to June Mathis.

Goldwyn has signed Claude Gillingwater to act in its screen version of Austin Strong's play, "Three Wise Fools," the role of Findley which he created upon the speaking stage.

Centralized Buying

PRODUCERS of the West are saving thousands of dollars each week through centralized buying. Their combined purchasing power effects an economy that benefits the whole industry. If it's a keg of nails, complete furnishings for a lavish set, or building materials for a new stage, they save money by the system of centralized buying. Many of the foremost producers are applying this same system to their laboratory work with the same beneficial results. They have found they can get more for their money at THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES than by operating an individual laboratory of their own.

NO one producer can afford to maintain an organization the size and character of THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES. It wouldn't be sound business. But any producer, large or small, can utilize our superior facilities and can profit by the completeness of our equipment, and the efficiency of our organization. Each one gets the same service he would if he owned the plant, without having the responsibility of its operation. This is possible through the power of centralized buying, the efficiency that is the salvation of big business. Our camera-to-screen service is a matter of economy for any producer.

In "Manslaughter" you saw one aspect of the modern girl.

In "Adam's Rib" you see the other.

Who's right—the modern girl or her old-fashioned parents?

DeMille shows you—in a drama that blazes a new trail in screendom.

"Adam's Rib" will arouse discussion everywhere.

It was made to be talked about!

City Officials Anxious as "One Exciting Night" Breaks All House Records

Municipal authorities of Minneapolis watched closely when this great D. W. Griffith mystery picture played the Garrick theatre and the crowds packed every inch of space in the house, jammed the lobby and milled around in the streets. Then the management put on an extra force of employes to handle a patronage that broke all attendance records for the first week and went into a tremendous opening for a second big week. The advance campaign for "One Exciting Night" was chiefly through liberal newspaper space.

A Race-Track Melodrama That Starts With a Sprint And Gallops All the Way to A Most Spectacular Finish

Race-track melodrama never was more popular and more in demand than today. This type of motion picture is a certain winner from both the audience and the box-office standpoint.

Jack Pickford in "Garrison's Finish"

Is the exceptional screen feature of the melodrama type. Not only does it tell a really big story and have a genuine plot, but it shows actual racing scenes of the Kentucky Derby and the Metropolitan Handicap that have been described in the Exhibitor's Herald as "the best racing scenes ever screened." There also is one of the sweetest and most beautiful love stories ever spread on celluloid, and a tender theme covering the sacrifices of mother love.

THANK YOU,

AN APPRECIATION BY CARL LAEMMLE

Certain directors make certain types of pictures. ABSOLUTELY, MR. HENLEY.

A great " society " picture comes from Director X. After that we expect Director X to make " society " pictures. AND HE DOES.

Another director, Mr. Y, makes a great spectacular production and ever after HE REPEATS THE DOSE.

And so on down through a great and growing list of director-specialists. We know what to expect from them, AND WE GET IT.

But you have shown a greater versatility, Mr. Henley, because you have produced not only " THE FLIRT " but " THE FLAME OF LIFE."

Totally different types, but each a gem of purest ray serene. Each a masterpiece, much as the word has been abused.

I thank you, Mr. Henley, I THANK YOU! You have shown that you are a specialist in great pictures, REGARDLESS OF TYPE.

POSITIVELY, MR. HENLEY!

"Driven"

Charles J. Brabin—5400 Feet

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is a picture that for gripping situations has not often been surpassed. If it has a fault it is that its tensity is too continuous; that there is no relief for an overwrought audience perched on the edge of its seat in eager anticipation of the outcome of each sequence.

Highly melodramatic, Mr. Brabin has moulded a simple smooth-running story and has entirely eliminated the usual complications. From start to finish it unfolds naturally and not a foot of the way does the plot become involved.

It is a moonshine story of the southern mountains with a kick the equal of the product they turn out from those stills. Five reels of it leave you in much the same conditions five potions of moonshine would the average individual if he could drink that much.

Uniformly the cast is as good as the picture, with the work of none standing out more prominently than that of any other. Emily Fitzroy is the stoic mountaineer mother who is splendid particularly in the scene where she betrays her husband and sons, moonshiners, that her youngest son may marry the girl of his choice.

Charley Mack, appearing in this picture through the courtesy of D. W. Griffith proves his worth as a screen actor in the role of the young son whose ambition is to foresake the lawlessness of the mountains.

George Bancroft as Lem Tolliver and Burr McIntosh as Paw Tolliver do excellent work, as does Eleanor Fair in the role of the girl.

DRAMA—life stripped of its veneer and transferred to the silver sheet with a touch both human and artistic—that is this wonder-story of the beautiful Kentucky Hills. Never before have the people of the mountains been painted so carefully as here, and never before have the ideals and smoldering revolt underlying their calm existence been given to the world beyond their mountains so vividly and so graphically!

AND never did critics of the Trade Press so enthusiastically agree upon the merits of a great production, as they did upon this one! All hailed its dramatic fascination, the wonderful acting, the splendid story and direction.

THE sweeping climax—the most terrific and realistic ever screened—the tense situations of the drama's closing moments, all comprise one of the finest dramatic productions ever offered.

CRITICS AGREE!

"RIVEN"

The Supreme Epic of the Kentucky Hills

Presented by CARL LAEMMLE

With a great cast including CHARLES MACK (Courtesy D. W. Griffith)
ELEANOR FAIR, BURR McINTOSH, Emily Fitzroy and Geo. Bancroft.

An Achievement!

"The mountaineers . . . are so faithfully and so powerfully portrayed as to make the film an epic of the Blue Ridge. . . . So true and so different from the usual run . . . is an achievement."

EXHIBITORS HERALD

Sounds Depths and Heights!

"A powerful picture, one that makes strong demands on the emotions. . . . The picture sounds the depths and the heights. . . . The picture digs under your skin at the beginning and stays there. . . ."

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

Among the Year's Best!

"A very fine picture from every angle . . . a really worth-while achievement . . . should find a place among the year's best pictures. . . . They'll remember the picture. It is that kind."

FILM DAILY

A Wonderful Picture!

". . . it is a wonderful picture, a gripping drama, powerful character study . . . the director accomplished what he set out to depict with tremendous effect."

SCREEN OPINIONS

One of the Finest!

"'Driven' proves to be a really splendid film. It is gratifying to recommend this picture as being one of the finest we have ever seen."

N. Y. MORNING TELEGRAPH

Intensely Dramatic!

". . . it is unusually artistic, intensely dramatic, well directed and acted, finely photographed and tells a straightforward story with no deviation on side issues. . . . There is a pretty little romance."

Were you there?

Did you attend the special morning showing of "The Christian" Tuesday?

Every important exhibitor in the East was present and the vast audience of 3,500 combined to give a great picture a reception unprecedented in screen annals.

"The Christian" was acclaimed the greatest box-office attraction in years. Attractive booking offers were made on spot immediately after showing.

The opinion was unanimous that the widely heralded book and play had been made even more dramatic in pictures by Goldwyn.

Here's what the industry's great editors said right after the showing. These are men who weigh their words, for their editorial opinion is precious to them and they call a spade a spade!

L. W. BOYNTON, Editor Exhibitor's Trade Review:
"'The Christian' is a screen marvel. It takes its place with the acknowledged classics of the motion picture. Unquestionably the biggest box-office picture Goldwyn has ever released."

ROBERT E. WELSH, Editor Motion Picture World:
"'The Christian' is a really great picture without an 'if' or a 'but.' It will make a pile of money."

JOHN SPARGO, N. Y. Editor Exhibitor's Herald:
"'The Christian' will clean up. It has everything!"

Goldwyn announces: Despite numerous offers from legitimate theatres "The Christian" will not be road showed!

CRASH!

THE storm-driven schooner shuddered sickeningly as it struck the reef. From stem to stern she trembled like a wounded thing. Canvas ripped and timber splintered. High up in her gale-swept rigging the angry cries of the two fighting demons blended in the exulting shrieks of the hungry hurricane. Shot-swift rain and spray tore at their faces. Furious thunder boomed even above the pound of hull-breaking seas. A sudden, blinding, Heaven-rending flash of lightning revealed the forms of the two men—fighting to the death atop the dizzily swaying mast. They are

Friends:

We are preparing to resume our moving picture activities, because we feel that better times are in sight and that this is the psychological moment to combine our picture triumph of former years with our recent record, dramatic and vaudeville, box office successes. We feel positive that our next picture -- which will be begun when this advertisement goes to press -- will prove that we have not only our picture following of other days, but also hundreds of thousands of new friends made by our intimate personal contact with dramatic and vaudeville audiences.

It is a matter of record that our legitimate stage tour under the management of Oliver Morosco was a "landslide".

It is also a certified fact that during the two years of our engagements on the Keith and Orpheum Circuits we broke more house records for attendance than were ever before broken by any one act and for this reason in some cases we were held over for the second week. Obviously, these successes have broadened our clientele and increased our following by many millions of people throughout the entire country.

Our pictures will be so constructed that the fifth reel can be played on the stage with a setting identical with that on the film as a novel form of personal appearance. We will appear with the film in this manner (assisted by two of the other artists in the picture cast) for just one week in one theatre in each of twelve key cities. We would like to do more but this is all the time available between pictures.

Yours for prosperity,

Francis X. Bushman

with

IVOR NOVELLO
Gladys Cooper Ellen Terry
Constance Collier C. Aubrey Smith

Each of the five stars in this beautiful Harley Knoles' production has reputation values and drawing power over millions of Americans.

All or any part of the opera "The Bohemian Girl" can be used as an accompaniment without paying license. There is a remarkable opportunity for one of your big local singing organizations to put on for you the musical accompaniment of this picture.

The picture fans will go wild over the astonishing personality of Ivor Novello. He is destined to be a new national idol in "The Bohemian Girl" and as the big, new personality of D. W. Griffith's new picture, now in production, he will receive tremendous additional publicity.

Dear Mr. Rankin:

We understand you have the picture "Bishop of the Ozarks" to be distributed from your office. You certainly may congratulate yourself. We previewed it when Mr. Finis Fox finished the picture, and it is one of the best, most wholesome pictures that we have ever had the pleasure of throwing on our screen. It has a fine plot, well directed, beautiful scenery, good photography, in fact I would say it is as near perfection as any picture we have ever seen.

We wish you the success with it that a picture of this kind deserves. We wish there were more Finis Fox pictures.

Yours very truly,

Motion Picture News

Talk vs. Deeds

WE have just read several submitted articles attacking producer - owned theatres, stars' salaries, production and distribution costs, excessive rentals, advance deposits, C. O. D. shipments, etc., etc.—all the well-known industrial abuses, the burden of which the exhibitor bears.

We'd like to print them—if it would do any good. But it wouldn't.

They would result only in more words, and there have been too many words that are merely words.

For years these same abuses have furnished fireworks for oratory, planks for political platforms, food for trade press editorials, resolutions for exhibitor conventions, opportunities for personal publicity.

All of which has largely gone into thin air—all except the abuses. These—though some progress has been made—we still have with us.

Perhaps all the shouting hasn't been wasted; and all in all the whole industrial situation has improved of itself, anyway.

But there's one thing certain: doing is away ahead of shouting; doing stands or falls by what it is; doing is a sincere effort backed by money and convictions. Deeds are best in any field: but if ever an industry needed deeds today this one does!

About all this industry can expect today is a dose of clear common-sense, so far as these "industrial abuses" are concerned. That first, and then to have every single man get down to his job, forget the other fellows', and do his work to the level best of his mental and physical ability. Just his own job—that's all!

If that is done not only will the individual be better off, but it will be astonishing how quickly these well-known abuses will correct themselves.

You can talk your head off about how a thing ought to be done: but let a fellow do it and others follow, and a whole industry is vastly bettered by that one deed.

And another thing we know this pretty well: that the fellow who is always yelling about oppression is anxious to have others help him get out of a hole he can't or won't lift himself out of.

Good pictures sell successfully; they sell better still if the selling effort is right; and an exhibitor who buys them right and works hard to put them over makes money.

We know this because some producers, distributors and exhibitors are doing just these things right along. They are deeds not words, facts not theories.

We are pretty well agreed about censorship—that it is for the public to decide. We know that the way to correct a thing is from the bottom up, not from the top down.

Well—it's quite the same with our industrial troubles.

The public is going to demand and the producer and distributor and exhibitor—those with brains and energy—are going to supply. And the things that are done—wrongly—will gradually give way to the things that are done rightly. That progress is the history—and the only history—of every industry.

All the articles we refer to suggest an exhibitor organization to compel these reforms.

That's dangerous. You can't regulate the business laws of supply and demand. The government knows better than that.

But you can do this: an exhibitor body, protective only in principle, can have a representative committee sit around the table with the producers' and distributors' representatives and proceeding with the clear and complete understanding that all concerned are industrial partners discuss each other's position and make suggestions for each other's welfare.

That can be done.

And just the mutual understanding that will result is alone worth the effort.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

EXTRA. That's the name of the show which slipped unobtrusively in at the Longacre theatre Tuesday night with none other than Jack Alicoate, treasurer and business manager of Film Daily as auther and half owner. The co-producer is William (Buster) Collier, Jr., also known in the "fillums" as a promising juvenile.

"Extra" is an amusing comedy that promises to place the debonair Mr. Alicoate and the youthful Buster on the high road to fortune.

Incidentally the manuscript of the play has a history. It was not dashed off in odd moments but is an heritage of Jack's newspaper days down in Washington, just one of a whole trunkful of scripts, so "the mountain breezes say."

The play has merit. The critics, for the most part, were kind and a first night audience of prominent film people and stage celebrities gave it a warm welcome. Here's hoping that it lasts for three years on Broadway and that the picture rights sell for a hundred thousand.

TOM MOORE of Washington paid New York and the Hotel Ambassador a flying visit this week. Aside from building a golf course—the best in Washington and not a small or bad business venture these days—he is a motion picture man with sleeves rolled up. Tom Moore is a showman and the Rialto—one of the finest houses in the land—is humming along.

Independent exhibitors everywhere will take hope when as seasoned a theatre man as Tom Moore makes this emphatic statement: "The outlook for the independent exhibitor is better and clearer today than in several years. He will be able to get as good pictures as he wants. There's no question about it."

S. L. ROTHAFEL is sailing for Europe on the Berengaria next week, leaving it to "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" to take care of the crowds. The impresario of the Capitol is scheduled to address a meeting of the British motion picture exhibitors in London, after which he will make a flying trip to Paris before steaming home. The trip will last only seventeen days.

WALLACE REID is gone and it's rather hard to keep a stiff upper lip. It is only because Wally himself would have frowned on any outward show of sorrow that no such expression is being made. Was there ever passing of a public character that entailed so little of public mourning? And the reason for this lack is that most of us prefer to remember Wally at his smiling, happy, ingratiating best. To us he is yet the Wally Reid of a year ago whose productions were looked forward to as regular antidotes for gloom. This is the "still" that we shall always carry of him. Morbid details concerning his passing are not our concern. We merely know that the niche left in the professional ranks by his death will remain forever unfilled.

FRANK KEENAN is deserting the screen to return to his first love, the stage. Which of course will be sad news to the boys and girls who have come to look upon his character studies as acting of the first order. Mr. Keenan will appear in a Sam Harris production, "Peter Weston," which was tried out in San Francisco last fall. The piece is scheduled for an early appearance in Chicago, after which it will be presented in New York. We always delighted in Keenan's expression of the elderly Kentucky colonel—a role he could play a little better than anyone else. Claude Gillingwater looks like his successor in this study.

OUR secret agents on the Coast tell us that Ethel and Dorothy Clark's suit against Herbert Rawlinson has been quashed after one day of evidence in which his letters were introduced as exhibits A, B, C, D, etc. The Los Angeles press states that an adjustment out of court is probable. Not much chance in this case for the scandal sheets to put over their well-known brand of sob stuff.

THE invited guests who packed the Capitol theatre, New York, Tuesday morning to see Goldwyn's masterly production, "The Christian," with the anticipation of sitting in on something extraordinary in celluloid drama, were not disappointed. They came, they saw and the picture conquered them. Truly an inspired achievement not only in the progressive development of its story and incident, but also in the skillful manner in which it has been directed. Maurice Tourneur, always a stickler for correct backgrounds and atmosphere, has given it an authentic stamp through his collection of scenes depicting English countryside life and the shots of London.

The acting is also inspired, considering the admirable handling of the role of John Storm, a difficult character to play, by Richard Dix. He manages to catch the spiritual significance of the saintly figure who was conquered by the flesh, and acted at all times with most commendable repression. But the most surprising feature of all is the emotional expression of Phyllis Haver, heretofore associated with bathing girl bits in Sennett comedies. She brings a rich note of poignant pathos to the role of the wronged girl who lived for life's pleasures. Miss Haver is scheduled to go far if provided with the proper media for expression. If Mack Sennett can make actresses of his bathing beauties, we recommend that he establish a training school.

"The Christian" is well interpreted by other members of the cast, although several are not mentioned on the screen. A few of these are Walt Whitman, Arthur Hoyt and Harry Northrup. The picture should be accepted everywhere as one of the finer things. We agree with the spectator who remarked, upon making his exit, that if this doesn't get over, the exhibitors might as well turn their theatres into garages.

IF it be true, as Heywood Broun asserts, that the proper realm of the screen is the great outdoors, and the sort of thing which the stage cannot do, then "Hunting Big Game in Africa," now running at the Lyric theatre, New York, is an ideal screen vehicle. Presented under the auspices of Eugene H. Roth, prominent west coast exhibitor, and filmed in conjunction with an academy of natural science, it stands unique among travel pictures. Whaling, diamond mining, African villages and native customs, every conceivable type of wild animal known to southern Africa, the thrill and hazard of the hunt, the seemingly inexhaustible humor of the "flivver"—all are here, abundantly. There is a certain quality in a picture of this sort which no feature, however well done, can possess, for we know that we are witnessing stark reality—no pretense or pose here. Just as the news weekly sometimes carries the biggest emotional punch on the program, through its convincingness, so do the highlights of "Hunting Big Game in Africa," such as the pursuit by the wild elephants, the lion hunt, the battle with the rhinoceros, carry an element of thrill and suspense that no acted drama can attain.

SID GRAUMAN opened the doors of his newest theatre, the Metropolitan, in Los Angeles, Friday night. Fred Niblo, the m. p. director of "Blood and Sand" fame, was master of ceremonies. The dedication services included several short speeches by the mayor and other prominent citizens, and screen and stage favorites present were introduced to the audience. The orchestra of one hundred, under the leadership of Ulderico Marcelli, played the national anthem, accompanied by a chorus of five hundred voices.

For a prologue, the Wright Ballet of twenty-five dancers appeared, as well as forty violins and eight harps, which rendered "Ave Maria." In addition, one hundred California beauties appeared in a surprise act, and to balance the program a jazz band of college men rendered jazz numbers on a variety of instruments. The feature was "My American Wife."

The admission was (and our typewriter is in tip-top shape to spell the words) FIVE DOLLARS. Who dares to mention the word NICKELODEON in the face of these figures?

THE National Board of Review calls attention through its latest bulletin to January's exceptional photoplays, namely, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," the revival of "The Birth of a Nation," and "The Teleview," the newest invention in photographic art, and advises that "The Hero," "Making a Man," "The Hottentot," "The World's Applause," "Dr. Jack," "A Front Page Story," "Back Home and Broke," "The Flirt," "Fury," and "Kick In" are pictures worth watching for. The National Committee for Better Films, affiliated with the above-mentioned Board, awards the asterisk to the features, "Suzanna," and "Driven," and to the short subjects, "Jenkins and the Mutt," and "Moonblind," sponsored by Robert Bruce.

FRITZ TIDDEN, erstwhile screen critic for one of our contemporaries, is managing a vaudeville act which he declares to be a sensation in its initial tryout in Elizabeth, New Jersey.

TO show the hold which Valentino has upon the public (at least the New York public), you should have been with us at the Actors' Fund Benefit at the Century theatre one day last week when celebrities of the stage offered their services in enriching the treasury. Rodolph, with his wife, Winifred Hudnut, put on their tango dance which featured "The Four Horsemen," and knocked 'em dead. The popular Italian took twenty encores—which may or may not be a record in the annals of the theatre—before the audience allowed him to depart.

But stay! At the stage door, Rodolph was stampeded by enthusiastic worshippers of the feminine sex. It is estimated that there were about two or three hundred of them paying homage to their newest idol. And Valentino repeats his tango dance in a second edition of the Benefit which is to be held at the Hippodrome this Sunday night. We predict a large platoon of cops will be present to keep the girls in line.

Incidentally the screen star is to take a flyer in vaudeville with his wife—and their repertoire will include songs and the well-known tango. They will have their own orchestra, and it is said that Rudy's salary will be $6,000 a week, probably the highest ever paid to a performer in the history of variety. His appearance in the two-a-day is made possible through the modification by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court last week of the blanket injunction obtained against him by Famous.

HERE'S a little bit of color from Missouri. W. C. Sears of Boonville has a theatre which was built in 1852. It was first constructed as a prison and from 1861 to 1865 many prisoners of note were held there during the Civil War. In 1866 the German Society made a Turner Hall out of it and in 1875 it was again remodeled into an opera house, where some of the famous singers of those days used to have a ferry across the Missouri River to play their engagements. Even to this day the ferry is depended on, as the new bridge will not be ready for a year. The original prison front still stands as the theatre but in 1906 the interior was again transformed into a picture house. At the present writing Mr. Sears contemplates again remodeling the interior.

FIRST NATIONAL executives and representatives of the trade press and New York City papers were guests at a luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton last Wednesday, given by Arthur H. Jacobs in honor of Frank Borzage. The contract has just been closed with First National for a series of Borzage productions and Messrs. Jacobs and Borzage are leaving immediately for the Coast to begin production. Mr. Jacobs acted as toastmaster and brief addresses were made by Robert Lieber, Richard A. Rowland, Frank Borzage, Harry Reichenbach and C. L. Yearsley.

ANY entertainment which has to do with the history of the screen must include the name of Vitagraph, one of the pioneers. The company contributed to the bill of "Thirty Years of Motion Pictures" at the Selwyn theatre, New York, the other night, one of the earliest comedies, "License No. 13," which was produced in 1905, and a short reel of John Bunny, who was the first of the screen comedians. "Bunny, Bunny—who was John Bunny?"—the youngsters inquire. And we forthwith proceed to tell them. The moral of this is that Time and History are easily forgotten in the hands of that perennial infant, the Camera.

THE Coueism which is sweeping the country (we shall not repeat the little rhyme) is finding its way into the copy of the publicity experts. It has become as common as the vulgarism which once adorned the glass behind the bar of every saloon—"Don't expectorate here, remember the Johnstown flood!" We give fair warning that the next pufflicist who brings in copy leading off with Coue's little rhyme will be hoisted up by his thumbs and lashed with a rope of twenty knots.

CHADWICK versus Goldwyn has been marked on the calendar for a future hearing. The actress who has been featured in a few of Rupert Hughes' productions for the past several months claims her contract with Goldwyn made in 1919 has expired.

Wisconsin Exhibitors Map Program

Midwinter Convention Plans Numerous Activities to Combat Opposition

PLANNING an intensive campaign against non-theatrical competition, the proposed state censorship, blue law and taxation programs, and endorsing the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation project, the midwinter convention of the Motion Picture Owners of Wisconsin concluded after a two-day session at the Hotel Wisconsin last Friday.

A complete survey is being made throughout the state to determine the exact status of the non-theatrical competition problem at present, and at its conclusion the organization intends to spare no effort in bringing the matter to a quick solution.

It has been understood for some time throughout Wisconsin that the "stiffest censorship imaginable" is being planned, and that a Blue Law bill also will soon be drafted. Greater taxation of the motion picture theatre owners has also been rumored, and to organize to combat these, the legislative committee of the Motion Picture Owners of Wisconsin, with representatives from the F. I. L. M. Association and the State Operators' Association, are to meet.

The convention adopted a resolution reiterating its earlier stand in the matter of reinstating Arbuckle to the screen, stating it was the organization's unanimous opinion he should be kept off the screen in Wisconsin. Walter Baumann, secretary of the Wisconsin Exhibitors' Association, presented a resolution from the Milwaukee County Auxiliary of the State Federation of Women's Clubs commending the organization on its stand.

Governor Smith of New York received formal recognition for advocating the repeal of the censorship law, which provided for the creating of a censorship board, and it was stated that the law had been a "joke and a failure."

A personal letter was written to Governor Blaine of Wisconsin pointing out New York's example, and asking him to use his influence in the legislature to prevent a similar mistake in Wisconsin.

The second day of the convention was occupied with an explanation and discussion of the Theatre Owners' Distributing Corporation project, a co-operative plan embodying an "exhibitor owned and exhibitor controlled" organization.

A handsome parchment containing a resolution of thanks to the retiring president, Joseph G. Rhode, was presented. A telegram expressing sympathy was sent to Mrs. Wallace Reid, as Mr. Reid's death occurred while the convention was in session.

The following new members were admitted, every key center in the state now being represented in the association's membership; Majestic, Janesville; New Milwaukee, Strand, Rialto, Tivoli, Princess, Modjeska, Savoy, Milwaukee; Park, Waukesha; Pastime, Thiel; Rex, Berlin; Orpheum, Majestic, Oshkosh; Strand, Green Bay; Strand and Cozy, Marinette.

Jack Silliman, of Milwaukee, presided in the absence of F. J. McWilliams, of Madison. National officers attending the convention were Sydney S. Cohen, William A. True, M. J. O'Toole, W. D. Burford and Arthur Ryan.

Pathe Portland Office Is Sales Winner

PATHE reports that the Eschmann Sales Contest covering a period of eight weeks and ending at midnight, Dec. 30, established new records for nearly all branches. In the list of product which looms large in the contest returns of completed bookings of Pathe standard features hold a prominent place. Between fifteen and twenty of these, which have been continuously active since the date of their release, showed remarkable gains. Harold Lloyd's "Dr. Jack," the Hal Roach Our Gang and Snub Pollard two-reel comedies, the Leo Maloney Range Rider Series and the new Pearl White serial, "Plunder" stand high in the list of big contest bookings. ond and third in the prize money.

The completed returns declare the Portland branch winner of the contest, with Los Angeles and Milwaukee second and third in the prize money.

Schad Nominated to Head Exhibitor Body

H. J. Schad, of Carr & Schad, Inc., owners of a number of picture theatres in Reading, Pa., was nominated at a meeting in Philadelphia on January 5 as the new president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, and it was predicted he and other officers and members of the board of managers named at the same time would be elected without opposition at a meeting to be held later in the month.

The others nominated are: W. C. Hunt, of Hunt's Theatre, Inc., of Philadelphia, first vice president; C. Floyd Hopkins, general manager of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg and Reading, second vice president; William Butler, of the Clearfield and Edgemont theatres, treasurer; George P. Aarons, Philadelphia, secretary (renominated). Board of Managers: Dr. S. M. Morris, Franklin and Hippodrome theatres, Philadelphia; Boyd Chamberlain (renominated); George Kine (renominated), and Harry Stevenson.

Three of the managers nominated were to fill vacancies automatically occurring this year and the fourth was to succeed John Evans, who resigned.

Two amendments to the by-laws were adopted, one providing for the use of proxies in balloting, providing the proxies are of members in good standing, and the other providing for the crediting of reels and slides used by a member on the current year's dues instead of on the following year.

Michigan Women Foster Censorship Bill

A censorship bill is to be introduced by the Michigan Association of the National Federation of Women's Clubs in the state legislature, which is now in session. The Michigan association does not approve of censorship as censorship, but feels that it is the only weapon at hand to make pictures what they should be.

They feel that the fault lies with the producers and the booking systems now in use; that exhibitors to show pictures they want to show are often forced to accept undesirable pictures along with the good ones.

Late News Notes from the West Coast by Wire

WILLIAM C. FOSTER, for ten years a prominent cinematographer and former president of the association, died at his home in Hollywood on January 17.

Mary Pickford has Svend Garde, of Copenhagen, Denmark, as art director for "Faust," to be directed by Ernst Lubitsch. Garde produced "Johannes Kreisler" in Europe and is to stage "Peer Gynt" in Amsterdam this year.

Harry Rapf leaves for New York the first of the month with the negative of "Brass," which Sidney Franklin recently completed for Warner Brothers.

Picture Exposition to Be Held at Chicago

A moving picture exposition to be held at the Chicago Coliseum, May 21-27, inclusive, will be an important adjunct of the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, which will be held in Chicago on the same dates, according to President Sydney M. Cohen.

Mr. Cohen made the announcement at a luncheon of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, which was held at Malloy's Restaurant on January 18. Business Manager Moeller, of the national organization, it was stated, already has leased the Coliseum for the above dates and details of the plans for the exposition and its management will be forthcoming shortly.

Chicago motion picture men have agreed to get behind the exposition heart and soul and considerable local interest in it is already manifested.

The luncheon, which was given in honor of President L. M. Rubens, of the state organization, who was about to depart on a vacation to California, was attended by practically all the directors of the I. M. P. T. O. and President Sydney Cohen, of New York, and W. A. True, of Connecticut, were special guests of honor and made brief addresses.

Censor Cuts Editorial On Censorship

The extent to which a motion picture censor may go is shown in Greeley, Colorado. Mrs. Elfie Tew, censor in that town, saw fit to cut from a "Topics of the Day," issued by Pathe, a purely editorial statement presumably because it pretended to discourse against censors and censorship.

That part of the statement cut from the film by Mrs. Tew follows:

"Topics of the Day has consistently pointed out that people regard censorship with suspicion and distrust. They know it is a political game to give soft jobs to faddists, fanatics and reformers. They know it threatens the freedom of speech and press, institutions of which our people are jealous and hold inviolable. The people will obey and respect the laws framed for their welfare and protection, but they won't be dictated to by self-appointed guardians of their morals. Our citizenship is, as a whole, clean-minded and moral and resents intimations to the contrary. Submit censorship to referendum and self-thinking people will smash it to smithereens as they did in Massachusetts, where, at the last election, censorship was knocked into a cocked hat by a majority of four to one."

F. P.-Lasky Takes Over Southern Enterprises

Contract Is Executed Whereby S. A. Lynch Retires from Management of Organization

ANNOUNCEMENT was made by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation that contracts had been executed whereby S. A. Lynch of Atlanta and his associates had been relieved of the management of the theatres and film exchanges operated throughout the South by Southern Enterprises, Inc. The capital stock of the Southern Enterprises has been owned in its entirety by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the last three years.

At the same time Famous Players-Lasky Corporation paid to S. A. Lynch Enterprises Finance Corporation approximately $1,900,000, which appeared on the company's consolidated balance sheet as a liability. Of this sum $1,500,000 was paid by Famous Players agreeing to issue to S. A. Lynch and his associates 15.000 shares of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's common stock.

The taking over of the management of Southern Enterprises, Inc., by Famous Players means, it was pointed out, that the five Southern Enterprises exchanges, which have been distributing Paramount pictures in the South, will be operated in the future under the same management as the Famous Players' exchanges in other parts of the country. The theatres operated by Southern Enterprises will be brought into closer alignment with the theatre department of the Famous Players, and the whole transaction is looked upon as a move which will increase the efficiency of the Southern operations of the film company.

The announcement also emphasized the fact that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation did not contemplate any refinancing and that there was no truth in rumors recently circulated to that effect.

The following officers of Southern Enterprises, Inc., have been elected: President, Frederick G. Lee; vice-president, Harold B. Franklin; secretary and treasurer, Frederick Metzler. Daniel Michalove, director of theatres, will be in active charge of theatre operations under the supervision of Harold B. Franklin, and A. S. Barnard is retained as general counsel.

Complete separation of the exchange and theatre activities was the first step of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation upon assuming control of the holdings of Southern Enterprises, Inc. Fred Creswell, who has been in the South for some time, will have direct supervision over the five exchanges. and it is understood that the personnel will remain practically the same in the exchanges. Famous Players, however, will send down one financial man as a permanent adjunct to the district office in Atlanta.

The sale last week by the S. A. Lynch Enterprises of their mammoth independent distributing organization, the Enterprise Distributing Corporation, to William K. Jenkins and John W. Quillian, came as a fitting climax to the other deals in which the Lynch interests have figured recently and marks apparently the desire of Mr. Lynch to exit finally and completely from active participation in the film business of the Southeast.

The Enterprise is the largest independent distributing organization in the United States, covering a total of fifteen states in their entirety and portions of three other states. The history of its development goes back to May, 1917, when Mr. Lynch bought Triangle outright, later selling back a portion of the territory. Enterprise operates eight exchanges at Atlanta, Charlotte, New Orleans, Dallas, Oklahoma City, St. Louis, Kansas City and Omaha, serving the territory adjacent to all these points.

The new owners have been associated with the enterprise since 1919.

Plan to Secure Banking Credit for Industry

Acceptance Corporation Would Market Exhibitors' Notes to Distributor Among Banks of Nation

WILLIAM MARSTON SEABURY, prominent attorney in motion picture circles, submits for the consideration of the industry a plan designed "to bring capital on a large scale and on a commercial basis into the motion picture industry." The plan calls for the formation of a credit or acceptance corporation which would buy and discount exhibitors' notes held by distributing companies in lieu of cash payments on bookings. The acceptance corporation would be patterned on the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, which markets its automobile notes to the banks and financial institutions of the country, Mr. Seabury explains. The plan as applied to the motion picture industry would place the exhibitor on the plane of a retailer and the distributor on that of a wholesaler. By extending credit to the theatre owner and accepting the exhibitor's note, the distributor, Mr. Seabury points out, would acquire a new form of security or collateral wherewith, through the medium of the credit or acceptance corporation, it could obtain from the banking institutions of the country necessary capital for new production work or other enterprises.

Mr. Seabury declares that to make the plan effective distributing companies would have to revise their contracts with exhibitors to meet the new conditions of payment, but that the distributor "will greatly accelerate his turnover of capital" by being able "to anticipate perhaps 75 per cent of his bookings."

The submission, by Mr. Seabury, of his credit plan for publication was prompted by the remarks of William A. Johnston, editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, concerning the subject of Credit, in an editorial captioned, "Unity," which appeared in the January 27th issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. In a letter addressed to Mr. Johnston this week, Mr. Seabury outlines his plan of credit acceptances as follows:

"Dear Mr. Johnston:

"I read with interest your recent editorial on the subject of credit needs in the industry.

"There can be no doubt of the soundness of your view on this subject. Proper credit facilities would do much to improve conditions as they now exist.

"The way to bring capital on a large scale and on a commercial basis into the motion picture industry is to begin by extending credit to the exhibitor.

"For some months I have been working on such a plan.

"The plan is similar to that adopted in the automobile industry by the General Motors Corporation in the formation of the General Motors Acceptance Corporation.

"To make it effective in the motion picture industry a few distributing companies would have to revise their contracts with exhibitors, taking the exhibitor's note or other evidence of indebtedness on signing the contract for pictures.

"These exhibitors' notes would have to be endorsed by the distributor and bought or discounted and sold or rediscounted on a national scale by a motion picture acceptance or credit corporation formed for that purpose.

"I have had in mind the creation of an organization which would start with a business of about $200,000 of exhibitors' notes weekly to be marketed as the General Motors Acceptance Corporation marketed its automobile notes to the banks and financial institutions of the country.

"It would be part of the business of the proposed credit or acceptance corporation to rate the exhibitors as retailers are rated in other industries, and while the exhibitor doubtless needs credit in his business less than any other branch of the industry, he ought to be the first to receive it because by extending credit to him a new security comes into existence upon which the distributor will be able to obtain money for necessary production purposes far in advance of his present facilities in this direction and on much more reasonable terms.

"This means that the distributor will be able to anticipate perhaps 75 per cent of his bookings and thereby greatly accelerate his turnover of capital.

"The national distributors can make this plan possible if they care to indicate their willingness to revise their contracts with the exhibitors and put them on a credit rather than on a cash in advance basis.

"In my judgment every branch of the industry would be benefited by this substantial change in the methods of transacting business.

"Credit, of course, like every other good thing, may be abused, but this is no reason why those who know how to use it should be denied the benefits which result from its proper use.

"I will be very glad to know which distributors are interested in the plan and the extent to which each would care to discount its booking contracts provided the terms and conditions of the proposed discounts were acceptable to them.

"I think a general discussion of the subject would be helpful and timely.

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) "W. M. SEABURY."

Walker Sues M.P.T.O.A. for Fees

Directed to File New Complaint; Will Sever Connections with Film Industry

JAMES J. WALKER, New York state senator, was directed to file a new complaint in his suit against members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to recover $6,262 alleged to be due him, in an order signed by Supreme Court Justice Wagner.

This action was brought by Senator Walker last summer. In it he named as defendants Sydney S. Cohen, William A. True, Edward Fay, Marcus Loew, Samuel I. Berman, Charles L. O'Reilly, John Mannheimer, William D. Burford, and William A. Steffes.

It was alleged in the complaint that the organization had retained Senator Walker as national counsel in August, 1920, at $1,000 a month and expenses, and that his employment was terminated on May 10, 1922. He is seeking to recover $1,000 for each month from November, 1921, to May, 1922, and $262 disbursements.

The contention advanced by Gilbert & Gilbert, as attorneys for True, Burford and Steffes, in asking that Senator Walker be compelled to file a new complaint, was that he alleged that he was employed by the defendants and "others," and failed to name the "others" as defendants also. This was upheld by Justice Wagner.

It is understood that Senator Walker, who for three years has been a conspicuous figure in national exhibitor affairs, will shortly end all affiliations with the motion picture industry. This will include his resignation as general counsel of the T. O. C. C.

This step has been made necessary by the election of Alfred E. Smith as governor of New York and by the fact that the Democratic party obtained a majority in the state senate, making Senator Walker majority leader and the personal representative of Governor Smith in all legislative matters. This added responsibility, together with his extensive legal practice, will make it impossible to participate actively in exhibitor affairs.

Senator Walker's resignation is expected about February 1, and is expected to carry an important message to exhibitors regarding the future of exhibitor organizations and the proposed exhibitor-distributor plan.

"Poor Men's Wives" to Go In at N. Y. Criterion

"POOR MEN'S WIVES," a Preferred Pictures production, will open at the Criterion theatre, New York, on Sunday, January 28th, for an indefinite run, according to annoucement by Al Lichtman, president of the Al Lichtman Corporation.

It is a companion production to "Rich Men's Wives," also directed by Gasnier, which was shown at the Capitol theatre, New York.

"Poor Men's Wives" deals with the lives of two young women, one of whom married a wealthy dilettante, while the other became the wife of a man in moderate circumstances. It was written by Frank Dazey and Agnes Christine Johnston.

In the cast are Barbara La Marr, David Butler, Zasu Pitts, Richard Tucker, and Betty Francisco. The play is presented by B. P. Schulberg, president of Preferred Pictures.

T.O.C.C. in Controversy with F.I.L.M. Club

Claiming a breach of faith on the part of the F. I. L. M. Club, the T. O. C. C. of New York by resolution has withdrawn its representation on the joint arbitration board. The controversy arose over an alleged rider issued to be made part of existing contracts.

In regard to the issue the T. O. C. C. has made the following statement:

"Certain local exchanges represented by their respective managers in the Film Club have caused a rider to be issued, to be made part of existing contracts. This rider provides for a form of arbitration contrary to the understanding and the present agreement existing between the T. O. C. C. and the F. I. L. M. Club of New York.

"The Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce has not been consulted by the F. I. L. M. Club with reference to the above-mentioned rider and we deem it to be a breach of good faith on the part of the Film Club, in forcing upon the exhibitor a rider which becomes a covenant to a contract, the contents of which are contrary to the agreement which is now in force between the Film Club and the T. O. C. C.

"Under the circumstances, the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce deems the above act on the part of the Film Club one of discourtesy and a breach of faith and by a resolution passed at our meeting held this day, the T. O. C. C. representation on the Joint Arbitration Board has been ordered withdrawn."

St. Louis Women Ask for "Family Night"

Motion picture exhibitors of St. Louis will be asked to set aside Friday evenings as "Family Nights" with programs of films of "approved artistic and educational value" by the St. Louis Council on Motion Pictures, formed at a recent meeting of women's civic and welfare organizations. The meeting was held under the auspices of the College Club.

Exhibitors will also be asked to give special matinees for small children on Saturday mornings. A voluntary reviewing committee will also be organized and a bureau of information about films for the benefit of schools, churches and other organizations.

Virginia Censor Board Shows Deficit

Concluding its first five months of operation, the Virginia State Board of Censors is a losing proposition, according to a report covering its activities and financial status since August 1st and just submitted to Governor Trinkle.

Instead of paying its own expenses during the five months of its existence, it has incurred a deficit which will have to be made up either by charging an increased fee for inspection of films or through an appropriation from the State Legislature to cover this shortage and to help carry the office.

Theatre Swindled by Bogus Industrial Producer

C. R. SULLIVAN, manager of the Fair theatre, Amarillo, Texas, reports a swindling scheme operated in his city by a W. A. Wallace, who came into town and proposed to make a local motion picture, as well as special advertising trailers for several merchants. He collected a considerable sum of money for these, according to Mr. Sullivan, and then disappeared.

Mr. Sullivan has requested other exhibitors to be on watch for this man, and to wire him should any information be obtained concerning him.

Wallace is described as being about 42 years of age, 5 feet and 6 inches in height, weight, about 145 pounds, hair, dark brown, wears glasses, nervous and rather quick moving. He was driving an automobile when he left Amarillo.

Labor Conditions Close Ottawa House

The attitude of several unions of organized labor has brought about the closing of the Family Theatre, Ottawa, by Harry Brouse, owner of the Family and Imperial Theatres, Ottawa, and also prominent in First National circles. The closing of the house was directly due to certain demands on the part of labor unions which Mr. Brouse considered unreasonable, and now all employees of the theatre are out of employment.

For some months the Family was the home of dramatic stock presentations, but the stock company season came to a close early in December. Mr. Brouse then decided to revert to the original policy of the house in the offering of moving pictures and vaudeville specialties. An outside musical director was introduced, whereupon the officials of the local musicians' union demanded that an orchestra leader be maintained in addition to the new director. As the latter also led the orchestra there was nothing for the union leader to do but draw his pay, according to reports. The stage employes also insisted, it is said, on having five men back stage when only two men, at the outside, were necessary in the opinion of the management. The three extra men did nothing but sit around and draw their pay, it is stated.

The theatre reopened even under these stipulations, but patronage did not come up to expectations, with the result that Mr. Brouse closed the theatre completely after the union officials refused to reconsider conditions.

N. C. Women Fail to Present Censorship Bill

The North Carolina Federation of Women's Clubs will not present a censorship bill at the present session of the North Carolina General Assembly, as it is not believed there are any other interests friendly to censorship who will push the matter and the state is pretty sure to get a two-year rest from the evil, according to a resolution passed by the State Federation at Pinehurst, December 7, 1922, and which has just been made public.

It is believed that the organization of Better Films Committees throughout the state had much to do with this action on the part of the women at Pinehurst, and that a rapid extension of this work will result in forever stalling any desire on their part to reopen the censorship matter.

Bronx Exhibitors Install Officers for 1923

Bronx County, N. Y., officialdom played a prominent part in the installation ceremony and banquet of the Bronx Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association, held Monday evening, January 22. Judge Harry Robitzek acted as presiding officer at the installation and officiated as toastmaster at the banquet.

The speakers and guests of honor included Judge Robitzek, F. A. Wurzbach, president of the Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Children; Police Inspector George G. Liebers, Assistant District Attorneys Al Henderson, William F. Quigley and J. A. Sullivan, Assistant Corporation Counsel Silas S. Lippman, Hon. Charles A. Goldreyer, Hon. John A. Pateracki, of the Sureme Court, and Charles B. McLaughlin, counsel for the association.

The speakers emphasized the ready co-operation given by the exhibitors to their respective departments and were unanimous in their praise of the theatre owners' avoidance of law violations in the conduct of their houses. Mr. Wurzbach told of the success that had crowned his policy of "co-operation with and not persecution of the film business interests in the Bronx." Assistant District Attorney Henderson denounced the practice of censorship and the "well-organized, well-financed, militant minority" that made such legislation possible. As an assemblyman, he said, he had to witness the passage of the Mullin-Gage Act by "spineless legislators, who were politically 'dry' but personally 'wet.'" He drew applause when he flayed certain Mullin-Gage supporters, who, he said, after voting for the act, "were obliged to drown their shame with a doctor's prescription."

The officers installed for the 1923 term are: President, John J. Wittman; vice president, John C. Bolte; executive secretary, Henry Cole; treasurer, Henry Suchman; sergeant-at-arms, William Wilson; trustees, Eddie Falter, Maurice Sussman and Morris Ginsberg, the last named succeeding M. Rothman. Henry Cole, chairman, B. Rosenthal and A. Leff comprised the committee on arrangements.

The exhibitors present included, in addition to the officers: H. Stravitz, Benjamin Rosenthal, A. Hurchman, Isidor Rothman, D. B. Newman, William Wilson, David Weinstock, Morris Kurtzack, Irving Berman, Abraham Leff, Benjamin Knobel, Eddie Falter, Irwin Krauss, Harry Thomas, Morris Sussman and Bernard Grob.

Hampton to Film "Spoilers" for Goldwyn, Announced

JESSE D. HAMPTON will produce "The Spoilers" for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, instead of Metro, it was announced this week on the coast.

Lambert Hillyer will direct this second version of the Rex Beach story, and Anna Q. Nilsson has been selected for the role of Cherry Mallotte.

The first film version of "The Spoilers," produced by Colonel William N. Selig, will be remembered as one of the most sensational successes of the screen. The fight between William Farnum and Tom Santschi may be said to be responsible for the vogue of fight scenes as "punches." Kathlyn Williams added to her laurels as Cherry Mallotte, the role which Miss Nilsson will portray.

The picture was unusually successful, and was revived only a few years ago. It did much to establish screen reputations for Rex Beach. William Farnum, Kathlyn Williams and others connected with it.

Arbuckle Starts Filming Comedy on Coast

ROSCOE ARBUCKLE, screen comedian, this week started filming "Handy Andy," under the direction of Herman Raemaker, with Molly Malone as leading woman.

This will be a two-reel comedy, financed by Arbuckle's attorney, Gavin McNab, and his associates, of San Francisco.

This move is the first definite intimation of Arbuckle's plans for the future since Will Hays announced that, so far as he was concerned, Arbuckle was free to attempt to return to the screen.

Seattle Musicians Sue Exhibitor for Libel

A libel suit for $25,000 against John Danz, owner of the Colonial, Class A and Rialto theatres in Seattle, has just been filed by the Musicians' Association, Local 76, Incorporated, of Seattle, as a result of labor trouble that has been brewing in the Pacific Coast city for several months.

The suit grew directly out of statements alleged to have been made by Mr. Danz on December 28, 1922, the day following the wrecking of his automobile by a dynamite bomb. The blame for the placing of "stink bombs" in his theatres was laid up to union supporters, a charge vehemently denied.

Danz has had trouble with organized labor in Seattle for many months. After the explosion that wrecked his car, he made statements blaming labor trouble for the affair. The union heads indignantly denied his charges, saying they were frame-ups to discredit the unions.

When the "stink bomb" cases was brought up for trial in Seattle recently, Percy Adlan testified that he was offered $2 for each bomb he broke in large Seattle theatres, running under union regulations, by two operators employed by Mr. Danz. The operators, in company with one of Mr. Danz's doormen, were arrested recently on charges of having tried to distribute the bombs. The operators are being held, but the doorman was released because of lack of evidence. The trial is now going on in Seattle.

Southern Theatrical Man Dead in Atlanta

Hugh Latimer Cordoza, forty-eight, well known Southern theatrical man, died at his home in Atlanta, Thursday, last. After leaving Washington, Cordoza had been in the business in Richmond, and then moved to Atlanta twenty years ago. He was general manager for the Jake Wells syndicate covering the principal theatre towns of the South. His mother, Mrs. E. W. Cordoza, lives at Virginia Beach, Va. His four brothers live in Chicago, Norfolk, Havana, Cuba, and New York.

Receiver Is Named for C. C. Pictures

James A. Hamill has been appointed receiver of C. C. Pictures, Inc., as a result of a complaint filed by Harold C. Cornelius. The defunct concern was formerly Chaplin Classics, Inc., and is the successor of Clark-Cornelius Corporation, having taken over all the assets of the latter and assumed all of its liabilities.

Censor Commission Bills Up in Indiana

The bill to create a State motion picture censorship commission of three members was introduced in the House of the Indiana State Legislature last week. It was identical with that introduced in the Senate the week before. Both bills are in the hands of committees and were scheduled for early hearings.

Meanwhile there was not open organized effort to combat the bills on the part of either Indiana exhibitors or exchange men. It was understood, however, that a quiet fight was being directed by the national organization.

The Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays, the independent, unofficial, body of prominent women who believe in indorsement of good and ignoring of bad photoplays rather than in censorship, are in the fight and are regarded as doing effective work. Opposed to them are some groups of club women and the Church Federation of Indianapolis. The indorsers, who have had the hearty co-operation of exhibitors all over the state for two years, have been gathering letters from theatre owners who have made cuts in films at their suggestion in order to convince legislators that movie men do all they can to insure clean films at the present time and to answer the argument of enemies of the indorsers that they do not accomplish anything.

Gray to Direct Boston Unit of Theatres

New England Theatres, Inc., has concluded arrangements whereby its Boston unit of theatres will be operated under the direction of William P. Gray. No change of ownership is contemplated and the present New England Theatres officials will continue in office.

For some months past Mr. Gray has operated for New England Theatres, Inc., its theatre holdings in the States of Maine and New Hampshire.

Universal Signs Duncan to Year's Contract

WILLIAM DUNCAN, for several years a leading serial star, has been signed to make serials for Universal, it has been announced from the home office of Universal Pictures Corporation.

The contract, which calls for a year's work on the Universal lot, with an option of an additional year, was signed just before Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, left for the Coast. It will go into effect as soon as Duncan completes his present contract with Vitagraph.

Edith Johnson, Duncan's wife and leading woman, also will join the Universal forces, and will continue to play chief supporting roles in pictures made and starred in by her husband.

Recently Duncan has confined his efforts to feature pictures for Vitagraph. In re-entering the serial field he will be getting back into a phase of moving-picture production in which he is intensely interested.

Duncan's contract with Universal provides that Duncan shall direct and star in a series of chaptered entertainment for the screen. It is not known at this date whether these serials will be of the "thrills from history" type. Duncan, himself, is understood to have some brand new ideas on serial production, which Universal will back him up in putting into screen form.

Chicago Essanay Studios Active

Production Resumed at Famous Old Plant by Newly Incorporated Company

FOR the first time in many years the famous Essanay Studios on Chicago's north side are the scene of production activities, and the stages once occupied by Chaplin, Bushman, G. M. Anderson, Hazel Daly, Ruth Stonehouse, Bryant Washburn, Ben Turpin, Henry Walthall, Richard Traverse, and many others, are in use, and it is the hope of the Chicago picture men that the Windy City will stage a comeback as a production center.

The present activities are those of Blair Coan Productions, a recently incorporated Illinois company, which started work on its first production at the Essanay Studios two weeks ago.

The backers of the company are Chicago men, and according to Mr. Coan, Blair Coan Productions has been incorporated for one hundred thousand dollars worth of preferred stock and fifteen hundred shares of common (no par) all of which has been subscribed for. Mr. Coan also states that the company has been given the O. K. of the Illinois Blue Sky Commission.

The picture under production is the rewritten version of "The Little Girl Next Door," originally produced about seven years ago by Mr. Coan and George K. Spoor, which enjoyed an unusually successful run netting a large profit. The feature will be developed as a mystery story, which, although retaining some of the original incidents, will be treated from new and novel angles, and according to Mr. Coan, prove a fascinating story.

A strong cast has been assembled for "The Little Girl Next Door," including Pauline Starke, Carmel Meyers, James Morrison, and Mitchell Lewis. W. S. Vandyke, well known director, is handling the megaphone.

Mr. Coan is convinced that there is nothing wrong with Chicago as a production center and those backing the company expect to make a number of pictures there, which will offer the motion picture public fresh and unused exteriors of great beauty and interest, and stories which can best be developed in the Windy City.

Exhibitor Raps M.P.T.O.A. Policies in Resigning

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is in receipt of a letter from John E. Evans of the Drury theatre, Philadelphia, enclosing copy of a letter which he has sent to the M. P. T. O. A. and the M. P. T. O. of Eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey and Delaware, resigning from the national and local organizations as member of the board of managers and as a member.

In this letter Mr. Evans severely criticizes certain policies of the national organization and of Sydney S. Cohen as president.

The letter is, in the main, a reply to charges made by Sydney S. Cohen on the floor of a meeting of the local organization on December 23. Mr. Evans cites his record as national representative and as president of the unit, asserting that, contrary to Mr. Cohen's charges, he had at all times worked with the best interests of all exhibitors at heart.

He also discusses the Movie Chats matter at length, he being one of the original signers of the contract. This was, he claims, the means of using the screens of the country to sell securities of questionable value, and did not bring exhibitor organizations the revenue which was expected, although many exhibitors who were running it considered their obligations fulfilled and refused to pay other assessments.

It is also charged in his letter that Sydney S. Cohen, while urging exhibitors to fight the Music Tax, was himself paying it, and that Mr. Cohen filed a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission without consulting his lieutenants or proper legal advisors.

In closing, he expresses his good wishes toward fellow exhibitors and his freedom from rancor in taking this action.

Clergymen Win Jersey City Sunday Closing Fight

The controversy between the clergymen and theatre owners of Jersey City has terminated in favor of the clergymen. By decision of Supreme Court Justice Francis W. Swazey the theatres must close, even to benefit performances, on Sunday nights.

It has been the custom in Jersey City to have the theatres open several Sunday nights before and after Christmas to raise funds for the annual Christmas tree of the city fire department. This fund benefits 25,000 poor children of the city.

A bench warrant was obtained for William Quinn, director of public safety, whom the ministers appealed to in vain to prevent Sunday openings. A temporary injunction was obtained by the theatre owners to prevent the head of the police department from interfering with Sunday shows. The decision was the result of the hearing.

Bennett Laboratory Razed by Fire on Coast

Fire of unknown origin totally destroyed the building and equipment of the Chester Bennett Laboratories at Fine Arts Studio Wednesday morning. About one hundred scenes of the negative of the Halperin Production's coming feature "Tea with a Kick" and a great quantity of positive prints in work were lost.

Nat Deverich, president of Fine Arts Studios, Inc., and owner of the building, states that he will probably not rebuild, but instead a big enclosed estate will be erected on the site. Bennett has been negotiating for the Downing Process Laboratory and ia is reported that a deal for its purchase has been consummated.

The Laboratory was built by Kinemacolor in 1913, and the following year was taken over by D. W. Griffith, who retained the plant until going East.

Dawn is Signed to Direct Series for Paramount

ALLAN DWAN, who was specially engaged to direct Edith Wharton's "The Glimpses of the Moon" for Paramount and now has the production well under way at the Long Island studio, has signed a contract for a series of Paramount productions to bear his name.

The first production to be made by Mr. Dwan under his new contract will be "Lawful Larceny," Samuel Shipman's play which, produced by Al. H. Woods, ran the good part of a year at the Republic Theatre in New York. Edmund Goulding has been engaged to write the script. The picture will be started shortly after the completion of "The Glimpses of the Moon."

Dwan has had a successful career as a screen director, his latest work being seen in "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood." Among other productions with which he was associated as director are "Wildflower," with Marguerite Clark; "Panthea," with Norma Talmadge; "Cheating Cheaters" with Clara Kimball Young; "Mr. Fixit," "Bound in Morocco," "He Comes Up Smiling" and "Heading South," with Douglas Fairbanks for Paramount.

"Girl of Golden West" Cast Lining Up

Edwin Carewe has picked J. Warren Kerrigan, Sylvia Breamer and Russell Simpson to head his big cast in the screen version of David Belasco's play, "The Girl of the Golden West," which Carewe will begin shooting soon in the United studios, Hollywood, for his second Associated First National release.

Beside Kerrigan, Miss Breamer and Simpson, Carewe is angling for other well-known screen favorites, according to information from the coast.

Sylvia Breamer will be the girl.

Russell Simpson was the unanimous choice for the role of the sheriff, the part played by Enrico Caruso in the opera and by Frank Keenan on the stage.

Additional Players for Melford Cast

To the cast of George Melford's present picture have been added Julia Swayne Gordon and John Daly Murphy, who are to play Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Reddell, important characters in Waldemar Young's original story, "You Can't Fool Your Wife." The principal roles in this picture now being produced at the Paramount Long Island studio are in the hands of such popular players as Leatrice Joy, Lewis Stone, Nita Naldi, Pauline Garon, Tom Carrigan and Paul McAllister.

Maurice Costello Back After Five Years

Maurice Costello is returning to the screen in "The Glimpses of the Moon," the Allan Dwan Paramount production now being filmed at the company's Eastern studio. He has been away from the camera for five years with the exception of two independent pictures recently made, but in the character of Fred Gillow in the screen version of Mrs. Wharton's popular novel he has jumped back into motion picture work with both feet.

"The Christian" in Capitol Preview

Invitational Showing Brings Praise for Classic from Critical Audience

GOLDWYN'S invitation preview showing of its cinema masterpiece, "The Christian," directed by Maurice Tourneur, at the Capitol theatre on Tuesday, January 23, was attended by over three thousand persons. Among them were exhibitors controlling chains of theatres and individual exhibitors from the territory served by the Boston, New Haven, New York, Albany, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Buffalo branch exchanges.

Many men and women prominent in motion picture circles, newspaper and magazine reviewers and special writers were among those seated in the large auditorium. The photoplay held the audience spellbound as its dramatic, emotional story was unfolded on the screen.

S. L. Rothafel had prepared special music and lighting effects to precede and accompany the projection of the film.

Before the photoplay was flashed on the screen a singer appeared on the stage and sang, "I Am the Captain of My Soul." At the conclusion of the song he raised his arms horizontally and the lights were dimmed until his shadow formed a black cross on the curtain. The shadowy cross faded into the first flash of the picture.

The unfolding story was followed with the closest attention and at its conclusion there was a great outburst of applause. Goldwyn came in for many compliments from prominent exhibitors and other film men in attendance. They agreed that "The Christian" is one of the biggest and finest productions that has been produced, and that its gross earnings should rival the biggest sum yet taken in by any picture. Director Maurice Tourneur, Richard Dix, Mae Busch and the rest of the cast received high praise.

"The Christian" will be shown at the Capitol theatre for the week beginning Sunday, February 11.

Among the prominent exhibitors present were:

Fred Mitchell, Loew Circuit; A. G. Whyte, U. B. O.; J. J. Murdock, U. B. O.; Nicholas Schenck, Loew Circuit; F. G. Hall, Jersey City; Charles Levin, Fox Circuit; Sydney Cohen, 132 W. Forty-third street; A. J. Vanni, Poli Circuit; Joseph Stern, Newark, N. J.; Louis Rosenthal, 1482 Broadway; Sol Brill, 132 W. Forty-third street; Walter Reade, 112 West Thirty-fourth street; George Cohen, 201 W. Forty-ninth street; H. Rachmil, Brooklyn, N. Y.; S. Rinzler, Brooklyn, N. Y.; A. Fanchi, Consolidated Amusement Co.; A. H. Schwartz, Brooklyn, N. Y.; E. Mayer, M. & S. Circuit; Jacob Fabian, N. J. First National; Chas. Haring, Haring & Blumenthal; Louis Blumenthal, Haring & Blumenthal; D. V. Picker, Loew Circuit; Leo Brecher, Plaza theatre, city; Chas. Goldreyer, city; Benj. Knobel, city; Benj. Grobe, city.

"Desire" in Production at Metro Studios

Louis Burston is producing at the Metro studios in Hollywood, "Desire," a photoplay written by Henry Symonds and John B. Clymer.

Rowland Lee, who recently completed the direction of "Alice Adams," starring Florence Vidor, will direct. Mr. Lee was, before his staging of the Booth Tarkington story, associated with Thomas H. Ince, with Herbert Bosworth and Goldwyn. The cast which he has assembled for "Desire" includes John Bowers, Marguerite De La Motte, Estelle Taylor, David Butler and Lucille Hatton. George Barnes will handle the camera work.

The production of "Desire" marks Mr. Burston's second association with Metro. The company released last year his production, "Forget-Me-Not," with tremendous success. The authors of "Forget-Me-Not" wrote "Desire."

Fox Announces February Releases

"The Net," "Town That Forgot God," and "Romance Land" Are Scheduled

"THE NET," directed by J. Gordon Edwards, and "The Town That Forgot God," directed by Harry Millarde, are the two productions which head the February release program of Fox Film Corporation. The schedule also includes feature pictures starring Tom Mix, John Gilbert, and Dustin Farnum, and an Al St. John two-reel comedy.

"The Net," which is an adaptation of Maravene Thompson's drama, will be released February 25th. It is based upon a novel mother love theme and is said to embody highly decorative interior and exterior scenes. Barbara Castleton, Albert Roscoe, Raymond Bloomer, Peggy Davis and Arthur Gordoni appear in the cast.

"The Town That Forgot God," which recently completed a three-month run at the Astor theatre, has been set for release on the 11th. The cast features Bunny Grauer and Jane Thomas.

The Tom Mix vehicle for February is "Romance Land," a story by Kenneth Perkins and adapted by Joseph Franklin Poland. Barbara Bedford supports Mix, and in the cast are found Frank Brownlee, George Webb, Pat Chrisman, Wynn Mace and Fred Burns.

George Barr McCutcheon's novel, "Truxton King," is the basis for the picture of the same title in which John Gilbert will appear during the forthcoming month. Director Jerome Storm handled the production. Ruth Clifford has been chosen for the feminine lead. The cast also includes Frank Leigh, Mickey Moore, Otis Harlan, Henry John Mill, Jr., Richard Whayne, Willis Marks, Winifred Bryson and Mark Fenton.

Another William Patterson White story has been selected by William Fox for the February offering of Dustin Farnum. Doris Pawn appears opposite the star. The scenario is by Jack Strummwasser, and the direction by Colin Campbell.

The Al St. John comedy, "The Salesman," will be released February 4th. The Sunshine comedy, "The Wise Cracker," will be released February 4th, and the Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoon, "Nearing the End," February 4th.

Glenn Hunter Release Due February 4

It is announced that "The Lap of Luxury," the second of a series of Film Guild productions, starring Glenn Hunter with Martha Mansfield in the stellar feminine role, is scheduled for release on the Hodkinson program February 4.

"The Lap of Luxury" was written by Townsend Martin and Frank Tuttle and was produced under the personal direction of Mr. Tuttle, with the assistance of Fred Waller, Jr., as photographic and technical director.

Burr's Sales Representative on Business Tour

Lester F. Scott, Jr., general sales representative for C. C. Burr, left New York for Chicago several days ago. Mr. Scott will stay some time in Chicago and then travel through the key cities of the Middle West. Mr. Scott will acquaint the independent market with the latest Burr releases. These are "The Last Hour," "Are You Guilty?" and "Luck" the new Johnny Hines feature.

Blanche Sweet Selected As "D'Urbervilles" Lead

Announcement was made this week that Blanche Sweet would play Tess in "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," which Marshall Neilan will produce in association with Goldwyn from the story by Thomas Hardy, setting at rest discussion as to the lead to be selected for this picture.

She has been selected by Goldwyn for the leading role—the part that Mrs. Fiske has played so often on the speaking stage and did years ago when screen technique was far from its present high stage of development in motion pictures. It is one of the greatest and most difficult roles that can fall to the lot of any actress to portray, and Goldwyn and Mr. Neilan believe that they have found the ideal actress for the part in Miss Sweet.

In private life Miss Sweet is Mrs. Marshal Neilan, but that had no bearing on her selection for the role of Tess, it is stated. Miss Sweet was considered along with many other actresses for the part by Goldwyn's production officials.

Corinne Griffith Engaged for "Six Days" Lead

Corinne Griffith has been engaged to play the leading role in Elinor Glyn's "Six Days," which is scheduled for early production at the Goldwyn studios.

Miss Griffith has been acting under the Vitagraph banner since her debut in pictures. After appearing in two or three productions she was given ingenue leads with Earle Williams. For several years past she has been a star in her own right.

Goldwyn selected her for the lead in "Six Days" after careful consideration of several actresses known wherever motion pictures are shown. The choice fell upon Miss Griffith because of her especial fitness for this role.

Elinor Glyn recently "shot" a number of "atmospheric scenes" for Goldwyn's picturization of her story in Paris, where some of the action takes place.

Goldwyn Signs Mae Busch and William Orlamond

Long-term contracts have been closed by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation for the services of Mae Busch and of William Orlamond, character actor, it was announced this week.

The decision to place Miss Busch under contract was arrived at because of her work as Glory Quayle in Goldwyn's screen version of Sir Hall Caine's novel, "The Christian," produced for it by Maurice Tourneur. When the completed picture came to be run off at the studio for Goldwyn officials they were so pleased with her acting that it was at once determined to give her a role in the new Rupert Hughes' picture, "Souls for Sale," and to place her under contract for a term of years.

Orlamond won favor by his work in such exacting parts as that of the motion picture director in "Doubling For Romeo," as the inventor in "The Sin Flood," and, most recently, as Lord Fryingham in Rupert Hughes' production of "Souls For Sale."

Next Vehicle Selected for Clara Kimball Young

"Cordelia the Magnificent," a story by Leroy Scott, will be Clara Kimball Young's next starring vehicle to be produced by Harry Garson for Metro.

Miss Young has completed her performance in the Henry Kistemaecher-Paul Kester play, "The Woman of Bronze," in which she was directed by King Vidor. The stage version was a signal success when presented on Broadway with Margaret Anglin in the leading role, and in the screen version Miss Young is declared to have scored effectively in the many emotional opportunities offered her.

"Cordelia the Magnificent" is being published serially in Hearst's International magazine. Production is scheduled to start upon Miss Young's return from a vacation. The screen adaptation is being made by Frank Beresford. After spending a month in New York, Mr. Garson has returned to Hollywood and is at work engaging a cast for the new production.

Goldwyn to Release Negri Picture March 4th

"Mad Love," in which Pola Negri is starred, will be released by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation on March 4th. This is claimed to be the greatest production ever made by the famous Polish star, and was selected by Goldwyn as a suitable release to follow "The Christian" and "The Strangers' Banquet."

"Mad Love" is the type of story in which the Polish beauty appears at her best. The exotic, ensnaring qualities of her personal charm are given full play and her powers of impersonation are realized to the full, it is said.

Agnes Ayres Starts Work On "Contraband"

Agnes Ayres, back at the Lasky studio from a short vacation trip, has started her new Paramount picture, "Contraband," under the direction of Wesley Ruggles.

"Contraband" is from a magazine story by Clarence Budington Kelland, and has been adapted by Albert Shelby LeVino. It is said to be filled with action and with an interesting set of characters.

Coue Message in Two-Reel Picture

Educational Will Release Film Made by Famous Apostle of Auto-Suggestion

EMIL COUE, famous French apostle of autosuggestion, is putting his message on the screen. The little druggist of Nancy began work this week on a two-reel picture, which Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., will release as its next Short Subject Special, carrying the message of hope to the many millions throughout the world who are unable to hear his lectures or attend his clinics.

Since coming to the United States recently to lecture on his theory of autosuggestion as a means of attaining health in body and mind, M. Coue has been flooded with offers from motion picture producers to make a picture in which he would personally appear. Having no desire for personal gain, M. Coue rejected all these offers, some of them carrying immense salaries, until a scenario was submitted to him which conveyed his message as he wanted to give it.

Arrangements were then made for the production of the two-reel film to be called "The Message of Emile Coue."

This will be the only motion picture to be made by M. Coue or authorized by him during his stay in the United States, it is claimed. His share of the proceeds from the film will go toward founding a Coue Institute in New York City.

The picture is being made at the New Rochelle studio of Motion Picture Arts, Inc., under the direction of John E. McCutcheon, who recently completed the feature picture, "Man and Wife." Production work was started Tuesday, and all the resources of the studio will be concentrated on the rapid completion of this unusual picture.

M. Coue and his advisers rejected all scripts based upon fiction or romance, refusing to allow his appearance in the light of a miracle man.

"The cinema," said M. Coue in approving the final plans to put his message on the screen, "is one of the most important agencies in existence for the wide dissemination of an educational message on an entertainment basis.

"As a teacher I desire to have its help, but I have no ambitions as an actor and do not wish to be financially benefited. This educational screen story is the only one I have authorized or will authorize for the present, and the many flattering offers are declined with deep and sincere thanks."

"Educational will make every effort to release this picture at the earliest possible moment after the completion of production work," said E. W. Hammons, president of Educational. "With the public fighting to hear the lectures of M. Coue, it is obvious that the entire American public will welcome such a film as this, which will convey his lesson, in his own words and in his own way, to the millions who are unable to see or hear him on the stage or in the clinics."

Brenon Starts First Film For Paramount Release

Work has been started at the Lasky studio on "The Rustle of Silk," Herbert Brenon's first production for Paramount, in which Betty Compson and Conway Tearle will be featured and which was adapted from Cosmo Hamilton's novel by Sada Cowan and Ouida Bergere.

In addition to being published in book form, this story also ran as a serial and achieved great popularity.

New Universal Group of Features

The Capitol Series of Nine Five-Reelers Available Within Two Months

ENCOURAGED by the favorable reports from exhibitors in all sections of the country concerning the Laemmle Nine, the group of nine Universal attractions which the Universal Pictures Corporation is putting out as its premier offering for 1923, a new group of high class five-reelers has been put into production at Universal City and will be ready for the trade late next month.

The group will be known as the Capitol Series of Universal Attractions, and will include nine pictures made by leading Universal directors and enacted by Universal's most popular stars and players. Most of the pictures are being made from stories by popular authors. The others are original stories written especially for the Universal by experts in the technique of the screen.

The first picture of the Capitol series to be released will be "The Prisoner," a feature production picturized from George Barr McCutcheon's famous novel "Castle Craneycrow." The Universal screen adaptation of McCutcheon's pen success was made by Jack Conway, with Herbert Rawlinson in the starring role.

For several weeks it was thought that "The Prisoner" would be released as a Universal-Jewel production. The only reason which prevented it was Mr. Laemmle's desire to include pictures of Jewel quality in the Capitol Series.

A strong cast was engaged to support Rawlinson in "The Prisoner." Eileen Percy has the chief supporting role. Others in the cast are Esther Ralston, June Elvidge, George Cowle, Lincoln Stedman, Gertrude Short, Bertram Grassby, Mario Carillo, Hayford Hobbs, Lillian Langdon, Bert Sprotte, and Boris Karloff. "The Prisoner" will be released February 26.

Following "The Prisoner" will come "The Bolted Door," a live screen drama starring Frank Mayo and adapted from a strong story by the popular author George Gibbs. Phyllis Haver has the feminine lead. Others in the cast are Nigel Barry, Charles Stevenson, Kathleen Kirkham, Frank Whitson, Anderson Smith, and Dorothy Cassill. It will be released March 5.

On March 12 a Gladys Walton picture will be released. It is entitled "Gossip," and was adapted from a story by Edith B. Delano, which was called, "When Carey Came to Town."

Supporting Miss Walton in this feature are Ramsey Wallace, Freeman Woods, Albert Priscoe, Kate Kent, and Edith Yorke. "Gossip" was directed by King Baggot.

The next picture in the Capitol Series will be an all-star cast picture made by George Archainbaud. It is "The Midnight Guest" and is said to be a mystery drama of the first water. Grace Darmond has the leading role, supported by a cast which includes Mahlon Hamilton, Clyde Fillmore and Mathilde Brundage. The story, which originally was called "Flash" was written by Rupert Julian.

The fifth picture scheduled in the Capitol Series is a starring vehicle for Edward (Hoot) Gibson. It is called "Single Handed" and is being made from an original story by Edward Sedgwick, who also is directing it. In the cast are Elinor Field, William Steele, Philip Sleeman, Tom McGurie and Dick La-Reno. It will be released March 26.

The next picture will be an all-star cast picture adapted from a story by William Slavins McNutt. It is called "His Good Name" and is being directed by Harry Pollard.

In "His Good Name" the following players are taking principal roles: Rockliffe Fellows, Fritzi Ridgway, Buddy Messenger, William Welsh, Hayden Stevenson, Sidney DeGrey, Frederick Stanton, William R. Daly, and John Hatton. It is scheduled for release April 2.

A second Herbert Rawlinson picture, "Nobody's Bride," will follow "His Good Name." Alice Lake will play the chief supporting role.

"One Million in Jewels" is the title of the Wm. A. Brush production, directed by J. P. McGowan, for distribution via American Releasing Corporation.

Famous Signs Sada Cowan On Return from Trip

Sada Cowan, scenarist and playwright, who has just returned from a trip around the world, has been engaged by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to write a number of original special stories and adapt others for Paramount pictures, according to an announcement by Jesse L. Lasky.

Miss Cowan has been abroad for about a year touring the Orient and resting. Prior to this she had written in collaboration with Beulah Marie Dix, "Fool's Paradise," a Cecil B. DeMille production, and following that a number of scenarios for other companies as a free-lance writer.

Her first work under the present arrangement is "The Rustle of Silk," which she and Ouida Bergere have been adapting from the book by Cosmo Hamilton. This will be Herbert Brenon's first production for Paramount and will co-feature Betty Compson and Conway Tearle.

F. P.-L. Foreign Manager Leaves for Cuba

E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, left on Sunday, January 21, for Havana, Cuba, in company with Chester E. Sawyer, vice president of the Caribbean Film Company, on a business trip of from ten days to two weeks.

Plans for the distribution of Paramount pictures during the year will be discussed with officials of the Caribbean Film Company, which has been the Paramount distributor in Cuba, Porto Rico, Central America, Colombia and Venezuela for several years.

Error in Review of Series "Fighting Blood" F. B. O.

There should be no confusion in identifying the two distinct and entirely separate series of H. C. Witwer stories, "The Leather Pushers," the "New Leather Pushers," Universal, and "Fighting Blood," a product recently launched by Film Booking Offices of America. Nevertheless, in reviewing the first three of the "Fighting Blood" series a NEWS reviewer made the error of naming "Fighting Blood" series, "New Leather Pushers," which mistake the NEWS desires to rectify.

The Universal Pictures adapted from H. C. Witwer's stories are in two series, the first six being named "The Leather Pushers," the second series being identified by the "New Leather Pushers." Both series of two-reelers star Reginald Denny, directed by Harry Pollard, and include Hayden Stevenson in the role of the young pugilist's manager. The second series was made on the strength of popularity of the first "Leather Pushers."

H. C. Witwer's "Fighting Blood" stories, a series of twelve two-reelers, produced by R-C Pictures, and distributed by Film Booking Offices of America, star George O'Hara, directed by Mal. St. Clair, with Albert Cooke impersonating the fight promoter and pugilist's manager. There is positively no connection, the error having been on the part of the reviewer only.

Jack Ford to Direct Tom Mix in New Picture

Jack Ford, who directed "The Village Blacksmith" and "The Face on the Barroom Floor," has been assigned to direct Tom Mix in his next production, titled "Three Jumps Ahead. Alma Bennett will play opposite the star."

Associated Plans Great Campaign

National Advertising to Carry Appeal Direct to Public as Well as Dealer

PAVING the way for business developments in keeping with the present and prospective expansion in the organization's activities, Associated Exhibitors is launching the most ambitious project of its career, a great national advertising campaign. The plans for the whole first year have been mapped out and contracts already let for that period.

The Saturday Evening Post of February 3rd will contain two pages of advertising devoted to three big features recently released by the company. The merits of these photoplays will be told over again in the March issue, on the news stands in February, of four fan magazines, each of which will carry a full page advertisement.

These will be only the first guns. Other features will be exploited in the advertising pages as the campaign progresses. The plans as laid out by Arthur S. Kane, president of Associated Exhibitors, call not only for an aggressive business assault, which is not to terminate even when the first year has passed, but for its prosecution uninterruptedly and continuously during that time. In other words, the first attack is not to prove merely a foray, to be followed by a period of silence and then by a concluding volley. To use Mr. Kane's own words, "Associated is entering upon an aggressive, vigorous and incessant onslaught."

In his official announcement outlining in some detail the tactics to be employed, Mr. Kane made it plain that there is to be not the slightest let-up in trade paper advertising. Associated will continue, on quite as large a scale as ever, to place its case before the dealers through these unrivalled channels. But the field of operations is to be widened. A direct appeal is to be made to the consumer, the general public, as well as to the dealer, in order to create for the exhibitor the widest interest in the pictures when he plays them.

The first of the advertisements in the national campaign will mark also the initial appearance of the phrase, "Encore Pictures," which Associated Exhibitors has adopted as the catchword for these subjects nationally advertised. This expression, at once terse and full of meaning, is intended to symbolize the avowed ambition of Associated, which is constantly to present attractions of such quality that each one seen will evoke an invitation for another. "What we have in mind," said Mr. Kane, "is that each Encore picture will bring a definite desire for more Encore pictures."

The attractions to be covered in the first advertisements are Constance Binney in "A Bill of Divorcement"; the Edward A. MacManus production of "The Woman Who Fooled Herself," with May Allison, and Martin Johnson's stirring picture, "Head Hunters of the South Seas." Each of these is a recent release.

The Saturday Evening Post of March 3rd and the April numbers of the four selected fan publications will carry advertisements of Monte Blue and Mary Alden in "The Tents of Allah," which also is a MacManus production to be released March 4th, and "Breaking Home Ties," which has met with an enthusiastic reception in the short time since its first public showing.

Florence Vidor in "Alice Adams," the picturization of Booth Tarkington's prize winning novel, will appear in the Saturday Evening Post of April 7th and the fan journals of May. Douglas MacLean in "Going Up" will follow shortly thereafter. In all the succeeding advertisements, Mr. Kane asserted, the same high standard of attractions is to be maintained, Associated Exhibitors, in entering upon a campaign of such magnitude, being determined to include in its appeals only outstanding features.

It may be said that in arriving at important decisions upon plans for the prosecution of the campaign Mr. Kane brought into helpful play his earlier experience as a newspaper man and as an advertising exhibitor as well as a motion picture executive. Knowledge gained from all three sources had its influence in the determination to make the advertising campaign continuous.

First Nat'l Releases for February

"Mighty Lak' A Rose" and "The Pilgrim" on Schedule for Coming Month

"WHAT A WIFE LEARNED," "Mighty Lak' a Rose," "The Sunshine Trail," and "The Pilgrim" are set for release during February by Associated First National.

"What a Wife Learned" is a Thomas H. Ince production with Milton Sills, John Bowers and Marguerite De La Motte heading the cast. It is a story of Western cattle ranches and big city life. Flood scenes in which the husband and the wife's suitor fight for life lead to the climax. Others in the cast are Evelyn McCoy, Harry Todd, Aggie Herring, Francelia Billington, Bertram Johns, Ernest Butterworth and John Steppling. John Griffith Wray directed the picture under Mr. Ince's supervision. The story is by Bradley King.

"Mighty Lak' a Rose" is the first Edwin Carewe production made for First National, and is said to be a dramatically human story of the underworld and high society. The story is from the pen of Cyrtis Benton. A national exploitation campaign has been started on this picture. In the cast are James Rennie, Dorothy Mackaill, Anders Randolf, Helen Montrose, Sam Hardy, Harry Short, Paul Panzer and Jean Bronte.

"The Sunshine Trail" is a Thomas H. Ince production with Douglas MacLean as the star and Edith Roberts as leading woman. It is described as a rollicking comedy of ranch life in which MacLean leaves a trail of sunshine but continually envelops himself in gloom. James W. Horne directed it.

"The Pilgrim" is Charlie Chaplin's latest feature release. Edna Purviance is the girl. Those who have pre-viewed "The Pilgrim" declared it to be full of the old Chaplin humor. "It takes rank among his best productions," one reviewer writes. Others in the cast are Mack Swain, Kitty Bradbury, Dash Loyal, Dinky Dean, Mae Wells, Sydney Chaplin, "Chic" Reisner and Tom Murray.

Universal Will Release Brabin's "Driven"

For the first time in six years Universal has bought a big independent picture for Universal release. It is "Driven," a photoplay of the Kentucky mountains, directed by Charles Brabin from a Cosmopolitan story by Jay Gelzer. When recently reviewed as an independent production by the trade papers, it received commendation. It will be a Universal-Jewel release.

The cast includes Charles Emmett Mack, Burr McIntosh, Elinor Fair, Emily Fitzroy and George Bancroft.

It is Brabin's first independent production. The story was put into scenario form for him by Alfred Rabock.

Goldwyn Enlarges Branch in Milwaukee

Goldwyn Distributing Corporation has enlarged its branch office in Milwaukee and made it into an independent branch exchange. Sam Shurman, formerly sales manager of Goldwyn's Chicago exchange, has been promoted to be resident manager at the enlarged Milwaukee office.

Mr. Shurman has been with Goldwyn Distributing Corporation for several years as salesman and as sales manager. He is well known throughout the territory which will be served from the Milwaukee exchange.

Pathe Plans New Series for Snub Pollard

Hal. Roach's visit to New York, with headquarters at the Pathe Home Office, has brought to the Culver City comedy producer budgets of news. First came joyous exhibitor reports of the success of "Dr. Jack" all over the country. Next was the Pathe Home Office's enthusiastic reception of the newest completed Harold Lloyd comedy, "Safety Last." Then came the Pathe announcement of 24-sheet and other forms of "feature" exploitation which would go to exhibitors of a second series of Our Gang Comedies.

Producer Roach learns that Snub Pollard has proved so good with exhibitors and patrons as a star in two-reelers that a second series of six of these comedies is announced for distribution, one every four weeks beginning with "Before the Public," to be released March 4.

Holubar Picture Title Is Changed

First National announces that the title of Allan Holubar's next release has been changed from "The White Frontier" to "Slander the Woman." This picture is a story of the Canadian northwest and of Montreal. Dorothy Phillips is the star.

"Slander the Woman" is adapted from an original novel by Jeffry De Prend, and deals with the human trait of uttering false information against the character of others.

Holubar has made some of his scenes at Truckee, and will make others in northwestern Canada and Montreal.

F.B.O. Contracts for New H. C. Witwer Series

P. A. Powers, managing-director of F. B. O., has closed a contract with H. C. Witwer, author of "The Leather Pushers" and "Fighting Blood," whereby F. B. O. acquires the motion picture rights to all of Witwer's stories for the next five years with the exception of a few stories, as yet unpublished, which have been otherwise contracted for. Announcement to this effect was made this week from the F. B. O. home office.

H. C. Witwer

The contract provides for a new series of Witwer stories which will appear in the Cosmopolitan Magazine as well as on the screen. The first of this series which F. B. O. will adapt for the screen appeared in the February issue under the title of "Julius Sees Her." This series will run in the Cosmopolitan over a period of a year, and will comprise stories of American youth, blending action with humor. The title of the second story is "Sherlock's Home"; the third is "When Knighthood Was in Towers." These will not be connected with the prize-ring.

Witwer's "Fighting Blood" series, which are appearing in Collier's Weekly in story form, are now nearing completion at the F. B. O. studios under the direction of Mal St. Clair. Mr. Witwer, at present in New York, will shortly return to the Coast to cooperate with Director Mal St. Clair.

"Bishop of The Ozarks" February Release

Film Booking Offices of America announces for release in February the Finis B. Fox production, "The Bishop of the Ozarks." This picture adapted from the story by ex-Congressman Milford W. Howard, deals with the regeneration of a criminal by the power of love. Part of the action is laid in the rugged fastnesses of the Ozarks and part in a Southern city, where a startling dramatic climax develops.

Mr. Howard, author of the story, plays the title role. In the supporting east is seen Derelys Perdue whom Mr. Powers regards as a screen "find" and who has been placed under a contract by him whereby she will be featured in future F. B. O. productions.

Others in the cast are Cecil Holland, William Kenton, R. D. MacLean, Mrs. Milo Adams, Josa Melville, Fred Kelsey, and George Reed.

Supporting Cast Named for Madge Bellamy

Announcement was made in Culver City this week of the cast which Madge Bellamy selected for "The Tinsel Harvest," the production that will mark her debut as a star and in which she will make her first appearance under the banner of Associated Exhibitors. Production work by Regal Pictures, Inc., her producing organization, already has begun, under the direction of William A. Seiter.

The cast as announced will include John Bowers (as leading man), James Corrigan, Hallam Cooley, Billy Bevan, Norris Johnson, Ethel Wales, Otis Harlan, Arthur Millett, James Gordon, Francelia Billington and Myrtle Vane.

"Brass Commandments" Release Due

"BRASS COMMANDMENTS" starring William Farnum and "Young and Dumb," an Al St. John special comedy, are the two productions on the release program by Fox Film Corporation for the week of January 22nd.

"Brass Commandments," in addition to the star, features Wanda Hawley and Tom Santschi. The photoplay is an adaptation of Charles Alden Seltzer's well known novel by Charles Kenyon. Lynn F. Reynolds is the director. The picture will be released January 28th.

"Young and Dumb," is scheduled for January 28th also, having been set back from the previously announced release on January 21st.

New Paramount Manager in Mexico City

William C. Winship, until recently a member of the sales staff of the Los Angeles exchange of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has been installed as manager of Paramount's offices in Mexico City, according to an announcement made by E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department. The first production to be released under his management will be "Manslaughter," Cecil B. DeMille's production for Paramount, which will be shown at the Teatro Olimpia, the first run house for Paramount Pictures in the Republic of Mexico.

John L. Day, South American representative, who went to Mexico City early in December to arrange for the reopening of the Paramount distributing offices, has returned to New York after having successfully launched "Blood and Sand," "The Great Moment," and "To Have and to Hold."

Metro Negotiating for Release of "Three Ages"

Negotiations are now under way on the West Coast for the distribution of Buster Keaton's first five-reel comedy special which will be made under the title of "Three Ages." Representatives of the Metro Pictures Corporation have been conferring with Joseph M. Schenck, producer of the Keaton comedies, and an announcement from the Metro home-office this week forecasts the probable distribution of "Three Ages" by that organization.

"Three Ages" was written by Buster Keaton in collaboration with Jean C. Havez, Thomas J. Gray, Joe Mitchell an Clyde Bruckman. Margaret Leahy and Wallace Beery will appear in important roles in this production.

McDermott Treasurer of Select

J. E. McDermott has been elected treasurer of the Select Pictures Corporation, the distributing unit of the motion picture enterprises originated by Lewis J. Selznick. He has already entered upon his new duties, his election having been accomplished a few days ago. The announcement was made by Myron Selznick, president of the Select organization, on Monday. Mr. McDermott joined the Select Company about two years ago.

"East Side, West Side" Rights to Lessers

Irving Lesser, Eastern manager of Principal Pictures Corporation, this week announced that in association with Sol Lesser and Michael Rosenberg that firm had finally completed a deal whereby they acquire the screen rights to "East Side, West Side," a production that had a long run at the Nora Bayes theatre in New York and which is meeting with unusual success on the road.

The acquisition of rights to this play marks the consummation of the second of a series of deals negotiated by this concern, for final papers were signed this week with George M. Cohan whereby the latter becomes associated with Principal Pictures Corporation in the adaptation to the screen of Cohan successes.

Production on "East Side, West Side" will start within the next ten days at the new Principal Studios on the West Coast, where all Principal productions will be made in the future. Mr. Lesser, who is in charge of production, is negotiating with several well-known directors to produce this special, which will be distributed through foremost independent exchanges.

New Companies Enter Industry in N. Y.

The following motion picture companies were incorporated in New York state the past week, the capitalization and incorporators being also given: Adams Picture Craft Travels, $10,000; H. J. Curtis, J. J. Sameth, and M. Knapp, of New York; Valograph Picture Corporation, 5,000, F. J. Valentine, N. S. Minolfi, and E. F. Hinterer, of New York; Harry Walker, Inc., $2,000, H. Walker, S. Wallach, and C. L. Kahn, of New York; Kodascope Libraries, $1,500, F. W. Lovejoy, J. S. Havens and L. B. Jones, all of Rochester; Pacifis Cinema Corporation, $1,000, J. L. Tilton, Herman Siefke, Jr., Samuel Miller, of New York; Julian Rochlitz Studios, $5,000, J. J. Myers, S. Friedman and M. S. Brotman, of New York; Lewal Amusement Corporation, Ticonderoga, N. Y., $10,000, Lew and Margaret Fischer of Fort Edward and A. M. Barton of Ticonderoga; Fort Edward Amusement Company, $10,000, Lew and Margaret Fischer and W. S. Bascom, all of Fort Edward.

S. F. Associated Branch Wins First Award

W. B. FRANK, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors, announced this week the results of a $2,000 prize collections contest in which the salesmen of that organization were engaged during the last three months of the year just passed. The company had offered cash awards of $1,000, $500, $250, $150 and $100, to the five branches which should show the best results in collections on features which had been released between May 22nd, 1921, and March 19th 1922.

First Prize—San Francisco, M. A. Hulling, C. C. Thompson. Second—Portland, Ore., G. H. Christoffers. Third—Denver, G. A. Parfet. Fourth—Cincinnati, L. S. Muchmore, Charles A. Kuehle, W. W. Rowland, H. R. Calloway. Fifth—Albany, S. Hochstim, E. Hochstim, Nat Marcus.

Distinctive Gets Biograph Studio

Arthur Friend Leases New York Plant for Filming of Five Feature Subjects

ARTHUR S. FRIEND, president of Distinctive Pictures, has signed a long-term lease with the Biograph Company whereby Distinctive Pictures takes over the entire Biograph studio building on February 1.. The Biograph plant in East 175th street, New York, is one of the oldest and best known studios on the East Coast.

The acquisition of the Biograph studio by Distinctive was prompted by reason of the extensive production plans being made by Mr. Friend's company. Five feature productions are scheduled for production within the next few months, it is stated. The interior scenes on the first of these titled "Backbone" were completed at the Biograph plant two weeks ago by Director Edward Sloman. The studio is now being used by Harmon Weight for the filming of the interior scenes for "The Ragged Edge," adapted by Forest Halsey from Harold MacGrath's novel of the same name.

Extensive rearrangements are contemplated by Mr. Friend and Henry Hobart, vice-president of Distinctive. These renovations will be effected under the supervision of J. N. Naulty, studio-manager for Distinctive. An elaborate rearrangement of the floor area and the installation of new lighting and mechanical equipment are among the prospective alterations planned by Distinctive for its coming production work at the Biograph plant.

The following statement was issued in part by the Distinctive Pictures Corporation's headquarters in New York this week:

"In addition to the two stage floors, the Biograph building has a floor for dressing rooms and another floor contains fourteen offices. On the dressing room floor is a special restaurant which will be maintained for the use of the various companies and the studio staffs. The offices, the cutting rooms and the projection rooms will also be arranged to suit the new Distinctive purposes.

"Along with the new development of the physical facilities requisite for their big production schedule, Mr. Friend and Mr. Hobart are arranging for the augmentation of the personnel. Mr. Estabrook has been with Distinctive, as general production assistant to the two executives, for several months. Mr. Naulty, the studio-manager, was formerly with Famous Players-Lasky. He has with him as assistant, Joseph Nadel."

First National to Handle Borzage Productions

Richard A. Rowland, general manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., announces that negotiations extending over several weeks with Arthur H. Jacobs, the producer, and Frank Borzage, under which First National will distribute a series of Frank Borzage Productions, have been completed. The completion of the contract was announced at a luncheon at the Ritz-Carlton, Wednesday, given by Mr. Jacobs to Mr. Borzage, trade and fan press representatives and First National officials. Mr. Jacobs is leaving for the coast immediately to get things started for the production of the first story, "Terwilliger," by Tristan Tulpin, which was originally published in the Saturday Evening Post and afterward ran serially in many newspapers.

Universal Will Produce "Naughty Marietta"

Universal Pictures Corporation is to make a screen production of "Naughty Marietta," the musical comedy. This announcement was made early this week at the Universal home office, after final arrangements had been completed for the acquisition of rights to the piece.

Although details have not been definitely decided, it is highly probable that "Naughty Marietta" will be used as a starring vehicle for Virginia Valli, Universal's new star.

Geo. M. Cohan Plays to Be Filmed by Principal

George M. Cohan has entered into a contract with Sol Lesser, Irving Lesser and Michael Rosenberg of Principal Pictures Corporation whereby that organization will immediately start the filming of Cohan stage successes. All contracts have been signed, O'Brien, Malevinsky & Driscoll representing Mr. Cohan and Nathan Burkan, acting for Principal Pictures.

The first George M. Cohan production to be made by Principal Pictures Corporation will be the "Meanest Man in the World," one of his most recent productions. Immediately upon his arrival in New York last week, Irving Lesser went into conference with George M. Cohan, and an agreement was made whereby the latter will go to Los Angeles to oversee the production of his plays. He will co-operate in the making of "The Meanest Man in the World" in which an all-star cast will appear. The cast is now being assembled.

First National Announces Staff Changes

Announcement was made at Associated First National offices that Floyd M. Brockell, manager of distribution, has appointed Louis Bache, Washington branch manager, as district manager for First National in Canada. Vincent McCabe who was in charge in Canada resigned.

After consultation with H. A. Bandy, central district manager, who is temporarily attached to the New York office. Mr. Brockell appointed Walter E. Lusk, Cleveland manager, to the Washington post left vacant by the promotion of Bache. G. W. Erdmann, who has been the assistant manager in Cleveland was made manager.

C. E. Bond, who has been acting as manager of the First National Chicago office, has been confirmed as manager.

These changes were planned by Mr. Brockell before he left on his trip to all the First National offices in the United States, Mexico and Canada. They have just gone into effect.

Among the Exchanges

COUNTRY SALES MANAGER WILLIAM BROMBERG, of First National's Chicago exchange, has been confined to his home for several days suffering from a touch of pneumonia, but it is hoped he will be out again within a short time. The splendid results achieved recently by First National's country sales staff, are directly attributed to the hard work Mr. Bromberg has been doing since he took over his present position, and the long hours have somewhat impaired his health.

Two teams of Universal salesmen, captained by Harry Phillips and Ted Schlanger are at present engaged in a hot battle for the handsome money prize hung up by the local exchange for the team making the best sales record. At the end of the first week Harry Phillips' team, composed, in addition to the captain, of Lipton Astrachan, Ben Eisenberg, Sid Decker, R. Funk, N. Provencher, P. J. Dentor, was leading the Ted Schlanger crew, composed of C. Leserman, M. Henoch, W. H. Tracy, T. Stover, E. Phelps, and Jack St. Clair, by a comfortable margin, but the latter are suspected of having something up their sleeve and next week may show a different standing. The contest runs from January 15th to February 3rd, at which time final results will be announced. The salesmen participating in this contest are also eligible for the solid gold watches offered by Carl Laemmle, to all salesmen in the United States reaching a certain quota, and a number of the local salesmen are expected to soon be wearing Laemmle watches.

A weekly sales meeting is now part of the regular schedule of First National's Chicago exchange. The meetings were inaugurated last week by Manager Bond, and the first was well attended, every department being represented. Bill Brimmer, formerly of the city staff, has been transferred to Country Sales Manager Bromberg's department and will make his debut as a knight of the road this week.

Herman Stern, of Universal's Chicago exchange, has been promoted to assistant general sales manager of Universal, with supervision over the territory including Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, and St. Louis exchanges. His promotion comes as a result of Universal's new policy, which has just been inaugurated by President Carl Laemmle, with the object of facilitating the transaction of business between exchanges and exhibitors and keeping the executive officers of the company in closer touch with the theatres of the country. One feature of the new plan will be the division of the country into districts, each in charge of an assistant general sales manager, who will have authority to O. K. or otherwise dispose of contracts for picture rentals, so that hereafter, contracts will not have to be sent to the home office of the company in New York for approval. This, of course, will save much time and also will result in having the contracts passed on by a man in close touch with the theatres.

T. C. Baker is again connected with Metro and will cover the Indiana territory, making his headquarters at Indianapolis. Charles Dingman, who has been working the Indiana territory, has been transferred to Wisconsin by Manager Rozelle and in future will work out of the Chicago exchange.

District Manager Shirley, of Metro, is in New York this week attending a general meeting of Metro's district managers. This meeting is of particular interest, in view of the important new production plans recently formulated by this company.

Bradwell Sears and Bill Brimmer, two popular members of First National's staff, are celebrating their birthdays simultaneously this week and cigars and hand shaking are the order of the day at this exchange. Sears admits twenty-six summers, while Bill confesses that he is three years younger than Methusaleh.

Frank Hencler, Milwaukee representative of Metro, was in the city this week, and reports excellent business in Milwaukee and throughout the state of Wisconsin at the present time, the depression which existed there some time ago having been entirely overcome. Mr. Hencler was on the way to Detroit with his wife to attend the wedding of a relative.

The Kinema, Los Angeles, used this display ad to announce "Omar the Tentmaker."

General Manager Sheehan, of Fox Film Corporation, was a Chicago visitor this week and after conferring with Exchange Manager Meyer, left for a visit to the west coast studios of his company.

Around the Trade

THE annual stockholders' meeting of the Orpheum Theatre Corporation, was held last week at the Orpheum Building in Kenosha, Wisconsin, and directors and officers re-elected for the coming year. The board of directors include Harry M. Vale, Minard Tullgren, Thomas Saxe, Joseph G. Rhode and Edward Dayton. A. B. McCall will be the trustee, and the officers are: Thomas Saxe, president; Minard Tullgren, vice-president and Edward Dayton, secretary. The Kenosha theatres operated by the company are the Orpheum, Majestic and Rhode, of which Edward Dayton will continue to be general manager.

Charles H. Ryan, popular manager of the Garfield Theatre on Madison Street, is now the proud father of two future exhibitors, the stork having paid another visit to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Ryan, on January 21st. According to the proud papa, who has been in charge of the Garfield for the past eleven years, mother and son are doing nicely.

Dee Robinson's Madison Theatre, Peoria, recently played to three thousand kids, the occasion being a big Jackie Coogan birthday party at that house. A sixty-four pound birthday cake, three and one-half feet in diameter, was one of the features of the celebration and every kid attending was presented with a piece of this monster cake.

L. M. Rubens left for California on Wednesday of this week to join his wife and family, who have been in Los Angeles for a good part of the winter. He will make his headquarters on the coast at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, returning to Illinois as soon as he can persuade his family that the weather has sufficiently moderated in this district, which may be from one week to three months, according to the genial president of the I. M. P. T. O., who is anxious to be back with the boys.

Sam Katz is again at his desk at the Balaban & Katz headquarters in Chicago, after a ten days visit to New York.

Jack De Wall, traveling auditor of American Releasing Corporation, stopped off in Chicago for a day, en route to making an inspection of the St. Louis exchange.

"Monte Cristo," the big Fox special, got away to a flying start at the Randolph, Monday, where there was a holdout from two o'clock in the afternoon until after ten in the evening.

Jesse J. Goldburg, president of Independent Pictures Corporation stopped over in Chicago for a few hours, Monday, en route to Los Angeles, where he is going on company business. Mr. Goldburg's views coincide with other leaders in the independent field in regard to the outlook for 1923, which, he believes, will be one of the greatest years for the independent productions and independent distributors.

Opening day for Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood," at the Roosevelt was one of the greatest in the history of this house and indications are that the attendance during its run will equal the record established by "When Knighthood Was In Flower," backed as it was by the tremendous advertising campaign carried on by the Hearst publications.

Berney Russell, of Russell Productions, who has been at the Chicago headquarters of his organization since before Christmas, will return to the Russell coast studios within a few days to resume his duties as production manager. Elaborate plans for Russell Productions' 1923 program were mapped out during his stay in Chicago and both W. D. Russell and Berney Russell intend to make Russell Productions an important factor in the independent field this year.

Bert Ennis, representative of Sawyer Lubin Productions, has been in Chicago for several days working on the advertising and exploitation campaign in the interests of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," which opens at the Chicago on January 29th. The campaign started with teaser ads in various daily papers and interesting developments are promised by this live publicity man.

GOLDWYN

Gimme—
Not a big picture, but a pleasant one. The youngsters here like Gaston Glass and praised him to the skies in this one. (West.)

Lots of comedy and sufficient deep stuff. Went over very good. Receipts held up well. (Middle West.)

The Christian—
This one went over big, playing to crowded houses for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Mr. Barnes of New York—
Not so good. Business fair. It takes big pictures to get them in here. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Oliver Twist—
Best Coogan picture yet; fine business on two weeks' run. (Middle West.)

The Dangerous Age—
A high grade feature. Drew good crowds. (Middle West.)

Fury—
Somewhat heavy, but a splendid feature in which Barthelmess and a good cast are seen to advantage. Business good. (Middle West.)

White Shoulders—
Went over nicely. Patrons commented favorably. (Middle West.)

METRO

Enter Madame—
Clara Kimball Young well liked by patrons of this house and this one packed them in every night of the week. (East.)

Hearts Aflame—
An entertaining subject attracting very satisfactory business for seven days. Matinees off, but evenings capacity. (East.)

This was a thriller all the way. It had some wonderful camera work. Went big. (East.)

Trifling Women—

UNITED ARTISTS

Tess of the Storm Country—
Stood them out for three weeks, and held over for a fourth. (Middle West.)

A new and better Tess is right. Went over big here to excellent business. Fine photography. (East.)

Still holding its own on long run. Doing big. (West.)

One Exciting Night—
A different Griffith picture. Not up to expectations of some, but pleased generally. Excellent attendance. (Middle West.)

Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood—
A great picture according to press and public and exhibitor. Let's have another as good. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Flaming Hour—
Good business and satisfactory picture. (West.)

Broad Daylight—
A very good program picture. Our patrons liked it. Nice receipts. (Middle West.)

The Flirt—
Held over for second week to fair business. A fine box office number which was well liked by most patrons. (East.)

A Front Page Story—
Big business on this. Packed them in on Monday when it rained all day and evening. (West.)

HODKINSON

Slim Shoulders—
Put on a fashion show with this and did well. (West.)

A Certain Rich Man—
A fair enough picture. Attendance up to average. (Middle West.)

WARNER BROTHERS

Heroes of the Street—
A great picture playing to fine business. Appeal to the youngsters particularly good, the balcony, which sells for twenty-five cents, as compared with forty for the first floor, selling out first at almost every show. (Middle West.)

FOX

Without Compromise—
Not a good picture, but William Farnum fans came, only to be disappointed. However, did good business. (West.)

AL LICHTMAN

Thorns and Orange Blossoms—
One of the best pictures that we have had in some time. A real story, beautiful sets, excellent photography and good cast. Audience comment great. Excellent business. (East.)

PATHE

Dr. Jack—
The best drawing card in several weeks. Played to big houses and made a big hit with patrons. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

The World's a Stage—
Nothing to write in about. Didn't do so well ,either. (West.)

What's Wrong With the Women—
You will make no mistake booking this one. Should please any audience. (Middle West.)

Further Information About Electric Theatre Signs

IN the Technical Department of this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be found the third article of the series dealing with electric signs for motion picture theatres.

This week's article treats of the selection of signs for theatres not located on the principal streets of cities and should be of particular interest to the managers of theatres located on side streets in cities.

The effect of brightness, of motion, of special borders and of actual animated pictures are also discussed authoritatively.

The writer also takes up the matter of the theatre marquee, its proper design to secure maximum results, considered in relation to the neighborhood in which the house is located, type of house, and such conditions.

This series of articles contains practical information that every theatre manager may profit by, and that in the current issue is especially valuable to the neighborhood and small town theatre owner.

Elaborate display for "When Knighthood was in Flower" in the lobby of the Olympic theatre, Pittsburg, A. Slesinger, manager

Atmospheric Lobby Display Is Built Up for "Ebb Tide"

Beaumont, Texas.—Manager Tom Clemmons advertised "Ebb Tide" at the Tivoli theatre with an atmospheric lobby display, which stopped every one who passed in front of the theatre and brought many a person off the main street around the corner just to see this display that had caused so much talk around town.

Mr. Clemmons personally made a trip five miles out of town along the banks of a near by river to secure the palm leaves, the sand and the weeping willow branches. He borrowed three large artificial palm trees from a local gas company at no cost. He hired a truck to go to Port Arthur, Texas, a distance of twenty miles, to bring back green bamboo trees. He borrowed a live Armadillo.

The box office was concealed from view by the bamboo branches. The side walls were covered with palm leaves and the entire flooring of the lobby was covered over with sand six inches deep, with palm trees placed here and there. In the center of this sand bed was chained the Armadillo, which alone was a curiosity. On each side of the lobby stood cut-out figures of Jacqueline Logan dressed as a Hawaiian dancer.

Steam Gives Realism to Lobby on "Kindred of the Dust"

YAKIMA, Wash.—A special barricade about half the width of a 24-sheet was built by Manager H. A. Gillespie at the Liberty theatre for "Kindred of the Dust."

The sign was especially painted. In the evening the theatre front was made doubly attractive by colored lights in the trees on the marquee and lent a subtle realism to the scene of outdoor life presented in the barricade. The realism was strengthened by a simple device Manager Gillespie brought into play. Steam was amassed from radiators inside and sent through the marquee by means of hoses. Coming through the tops of the trees it gave the impression of a smouldering forest fire.

The entrances to the theatre were painted over in striped panels on each one of which was a hand lettered sentence with some particular point of appeal about "Kindred of the Dust."

Cut-Out on Spider Web Used in "Singed Wings" Lobby

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. Manager C. A. Crute of the Lyric theatre used an unusual cut-out display on "Singed Wings," for which he constructed a frame about five by eight feet.

In this he wove a spider web of gold thread. On the web he fastened a cut-out of Bebe Daniels in dancing costume, that is, with wings extended. Just under the cutout was placed a large artificial candle with electric lamp for flame.

This display was made Saturday night before opening of picture on Monday.

One Cent Check Stunt Aids "Back Home and Broke"

MACON, Ga.—Manager E. C. Kingman of the Rialto theatre used one cent checks as an exploitation stunt for "Back Home and Broke."

Checks were printed on "The Bank of Laughter," and filled in by hand for one cent, the signature being "Thomas Meighan." These were honored at the box-office for one cent, deducted from the price of admission.

Good "Omar" Stunt Is Put Over Through Auto Hook-Up

San Francisco, Cal.—The manager of the Tivoli theatre reports that traffic was blocked on the streets by an inexpensive stunt that was put over in exploiting "Omar the Tentmaker."

On the Wednesday morning before the opening a tie-up was effected with the San Francisco Bulletin whereby the paper, through its auto section agreed to give a good splash on a suggested automobile ballyhoo if a photographer could be in readiness by four in the afternoon. The theatre's manager was on the job. A dignified, Near East potentate, supposed to be Omar, was dressed up and driven around town giving out small cards that read, ont the outside; "Your future revealed."

The inside stated that the receiver would find himself going to the Tivoli at some time during the coming week when the theatre showed "Omar the Tentmaker." At times the crowds around the exploitation soothsayer were so thick that the police had to be called on to take a hand.

The Chevrolet agency supplied the automobile and got advertising coincidently with the Bulletin.

Traffic Tie-Up Put Over for "The Dangerous Age"

Detroit, Mich.—Street sign tie-ups were used to excellent advantage by Thomas D. Moule, manager of the Capitol theatre, in exploiting "The Dangerous Age."

Despite the fact that anti-speeding campaigns and sidewalk whitewash have been exploitation accessories in many cities, it is a fact reported by Manager Moule that Detroit had previously never permitted the use of its traffic towers, parking signs and trolley poles for this purpose. The permission was obtained only through the intervention of Inspector Jackson, of the Traffic Squad, who endorsed the campaign against reckless driving.

The title was sold to thousands of pedestrians and motorists, who saw "The Dangerous Age" warnings on the towers, the parking stations and street car signs. When a street car came to a halt at a tower located near a parking sign "The Dangerous Age" had a triple play in one inning.

Thirty thousand postcards with pictures of the Hotel Astor were mailed to Detroit residents with the message: "Having a great time. Saw a wonderful picture last night, 'The Dangerous Age.'" The papers commented upon this stunt, which cost only the postage, as the cards were supplied by the Hotel Astor because of the advertising value.

Front on "Sherlock Holmes," with banners covering marquee, arranged by Manager S. A. Buchanan of the Allen theatre, Edmonton, Alta, Can.

Hook-Up with Camera Store Made on "Robin Hood"

BOSTON, Mass.—A tie-up on "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" which almost any exhibitor can make was arranged by Pete Smith during the run of the picture at the Park theatre. It occurred to Smith that the camera angle had been overlooked. So he went to the Robey French Company, which handles Graflex cameras, and said: "Every still picture taken of 'Robin Hood' was made with a Graflex. Here's a chance for a good window display for you." They jumped at the proposition. It drew big crowds to the Robey French window.

Establishes "Kick In" as New Slang Phrase in Campaign

Charlotte, N. C.—Manager Ray Beall, of the Imperial theatre, put over a teaser campaign on "Kick In," starting ten days in advance, that established the title as a slogan or by-word in town before any one knew that it had any reference to a photoplay. This condition is, of course, the aim of every teaser campaign on a title.

The opening gun was the distribution one night of 4,000 teaser cards with only the words "Kick In" across the face in bold type. These were placed in automobiles and doorways of residences, tacked on trees, fences, posts, etc.; left on the counters of cigar stands, news stands, soft drink places and drug stores. The same night sidewalks all over the business section were stencilled with the words "Kick In" The first of a series of small teaser ads appeared in the paper next morning.

When Charlotte woke up and started stirring around everybody ran into this title in one form or another. It caught on and the young set started using it as a slang expression.

Four days in advance the teaser campaign was broken by a trailer, lithographs, window cards and a newspaper ad. Then 3,000 heralds were distributed on the doors and 500 postal cards carrying the manager's indorsement of the picture were mailed to a carefully selected list.

A jail front was used with a cut-out of Gareth Hughes behind the bars. In front of this were cut-outs of McAvoy and two "cops."

"Eternal Flame" Lobby Plays Up Love Theme of Story

Augusta, Ga.—J. Frank Miller, manager of the Modjeska theatre, built one of the most pretentious lobbies for the exploitation of "The Eternal Flame."

Built across the front of the theatre, completely cutting the lobby off, was a big white wall, resembling the walls built around convents. At either side was a tall, narrow arched gateway, through which one entered or left the theatre. Vines were growing over this wall, and flowers—artificial, but very effective—were placed here and there.

In front of this wall were three big white candles made of beaver board. The centre one was very tall and reached above the top of the wall. The two candles, one on either side, were smaller. At the top of each candle burned a yellow flame (electric globes, of course), which made the lobby most effective at night. The candle on the right carried a sign in small red letters which read, "Family Love"; the candle on the left carried also in red letters a tiny sign reading "Puppy Love," while the big flaming candle in the centre was placarded "The Eternal Flame—a love that never dies."

The whole lobby was artistically framed with lights which were masked, to throw the battery of their brilliance on the central candle.

Miniature Swimming Pool Used on "One Week of Love"

Austin, Texas.—Manager E. B. Roberts of the Majestic theatre advertised "One Week of Love" with an unusually striking lobby display.

It consisted of an out-of-door swimming pool made out of a large size bathtub which was covered over on all sides and squared off on the top with beaver board. On the top of the beaver board was painted a tile flooring—the sides of the box-like enclosure were painted green with a winding path leading up the slanting sides to the water.

There were cut-outs of bathing girls about 12 inches in height which were placed around the edge of the pool, a small diving board, a ladder leading into the water, a raft and a float. In order to create the proper atmosphere there were placed around the swimming pool several benches all of which were miniature in size also some tiny spruce trees.

For a background to this display, Mr. Roberts used a beaver board screen which was hand painted. This scene showed a large silver moon on which was painted the title of the picture and the name of the stars.

Adds Improvements to Stunt on "Back Home and Broke"

COLUMBIA, S. C.—Some time in advance of his campaign on "Back Home and Broke," Manager C. W. Irvin of the Imperial theatre heard of how a Macon, Ga., house put this picture over by mailing out checks for 1c, drawn on the "Bank of Laughter" and signed by "Thomas Meighan." It looked good to him, so he decided to go and do likewise. But he wasn't content just to follow the Macon idea, he worked out two improvements on it.

First, he had the checks printed on regular bank check stock instead of on ordinary bond. This gave them an authentic appearance. Second, on the left margin of the face of the check he had an excellent line cut of Thomas Meighan.

Special Coogan Performance of "Oliver Twist"

BOSTON, Mass.—All the Coogans in Boston were invited to attend "Oliver Twist" when it played at Tremont Temple.

The names were culled from the city directory and the invitations were signed by Jackie himself. A special performance was held for the Coogans. The stunt created interest in the picture and was good for a newspaper publicity story.

Cute Kids Have Their Innings in "Bachelor Daddy" Stunt

ROCHESTER, IND.—A new angle, heretofore overlooked, for exploiting "The Bachelor Daddy," was uncovered by the Paramount theatre during its run.

Bill Danziger, Paramount exploiter, sold the Rochester Sentinel the idea of a contest for the "cutest" wise-crack delivered by a precocious infant. These made good reading and the response was way in excess of that usually obtained in newspaper contests. The prizes were cash and tickets. This kept the picture on the front page a week in advance of the run.

Small Oil Derrick in Lobby on "Back Home and Broke"

Austin, Texas.—A miniature oil derrick that actually operated was used by Manager E. B. Roberts of the Majestic theatre in exploiting "Back Home and Broke."

In the center of the lobby was built a sand bed and as a background Mr. Roberts had painted on beaver board a scene representing the plains of Texas with a ridge of mountains in the distance. Across the top of this display in bold letters was the name of Thomas Meighan and the title of the picture.

An oil derrick about four feet high made of wood was placed on this sand bed. Just beside this oil derrick was the machine room and around the machine room stood miniature characters of Thomas Meighan and several other laborers. These miniatures were cut from black and white newspaper stills and pasted on beaver board, then set up in position. The exhibit attracted an unusual amount of attention since by means of an eccentric on the motor house, the oil derrick was made to operate forcing crude oil to the surface of the sand bed.

Wide Interest Stirred Up in "Oliver Twist" in England

London, Eng.—Widespread publicity for "Oliver Twist" was gotten by British First National through exploitation prior to the premiere at the Marble Arch Pavilion.

Ralph J. Pugh, Managing Director of British First National, arranged for a private showing of the picture at the Foundling Hospital, London, a hospital in which Dickens in his day took a lively interest and in which the royalty takes an interest. It was the first time these kiddies had ever seen a motion picture and the newspapers all over the United Kingdom gave the showing write-ups, the Manchester Guardian printing over half a column on it. The Prince of Wales sent a letter of regret at having been unable to see "Oliver Twist" with the kiddies.

A few cuts in the picture by the censors brought about a discussion in the newspapers between George Bernard Shaw and G. K. Chesterton, Chesterton calling the cuts "silly." The Dickens Fellowship also opposed the censors.

Selfridge's, the big "American" dry goods store on Oxford street, used a window display of Jackie as Oliver Twist asking for more. This was shown an entire week and was illuminated at night. Selfridge's also sold Jackie Cookan hot water bottles and the firm of Huntley and Palmers put out a special Jackie Coogan biscuit.

Children with 1918 Cents See "Days of Buffalo Bill"

TROY, N. Y.—Sabin and Judge, who run the Alpine theatre, nearly caused a riot among the children through a stunt which they used in connection with the showing of the first episode of "In the Days of Buffalo Bill."

Word went out that all children having a 1918 penny would be admitted upon presentation of the coin. As a result, hundreds of children started in stopping pedestrians as well as street cars, asking for the precious penny and even offering five cents for every 1918 coin.

Varied Campaign Used to Put "Omar the Tentmaker" Over

Omaha, Neb.—Every possible angle was seized upon by Manager Harry B. Watts and his staff in exploiting "Omar the Tentmaker" at the Strand.

Briefly tabulated the stunts were: Use of 2500 Library bookmarks for the "Rubaiyyat"; Dunlap hat window tie-up; Persian rug window tie-up; tie-up on Omar cigarettes; navy recruiting service tie up; radio lecture by noted elocutionist; baby naming contest on "Omar" and "Shireen"; Good Fellow tie-up.

Through the courtesy of the Omaha Bee's radio department, Mrs. Brown, a local elocutionist, recited passages from the "Rubaiyyat," tying up with the regular radio entertainment and the picture at the Strand.

The Daily News found a good front page story in a tie up with the First National bank whereby it agreed to deposit ten dollars in the bank to the account of the first boy born during the week named "Omar." It was agreed that the same sum was to be put to an account for the first girl born during the week to be named Shireen. In case of mixed twins, one to be named "Omar", the other "Shireen" the deposit was to be $25. The amount was to remain at the bank until the baby became of age with interest compounded semi-annually.

The Good Fellow tie-up resulted from Mr. Post's wire contributing $25 to the Good Fellow Christmas fund being raised by the World-Herald. The idea was good for newspaper stories and valuable publicity.

Clever Lobby Display Used to Exploit "Anna Ascends"

Austin, Texas.—A lobby display with strong attention value was used by Manager E. B. Roberts, of the Majestic theatre, in putting over "Anna Ascends." In the lobby was hung a beaver board ball about ten feet high and painted to resemble a balloon. In the basket of this display was a one-sheet cut-out of Alice Brady. The balloon was illuminated at night by tiny spot lights turned on it from the marquee. This balloon was suspended from the cornice of the theatre by ropes and was lowered and raised at intervals by one of the theatre employes.

A novel street stunt created considerable attention. He dressed his head usher as an immigrant woman and during the busiest hours of the day had this woman chased down the street by another employe, who was dressed as an immigrant man. The man was shouting at the top of his voice, "Anna, don't do it." At the busiest corner in town stood a long ladder which had been placed there early in the morning. When Anna reached this ladder she began to climb to the top of it with the immigrant man following her. A large crowd gathered to see what the disturbance was all about, and just as soon as the girl reached the top of the ladder she let fall a banner on which was painted the title of the picture—"Anna Ascends."

Display of Savage Implements Used on "Head Hunters"

New York, N. Y.—The management of the B. S. Moss Broadway theatre arranged an effective display for "Head Hunters of the South Seas," which put over the theme of the picture in good shape.

Forming a wide arch above the entrance were ten cut-outs of Nagapate, the cruellest of the cannibal chiefs, with the cut-out of another head hunting savage, the regulation straw costume of the natives flowing wavelike from around his neck in the keystone position.

In an exposed case in the lobby was a remarkable collection of poisoned spears and arrows, while stills showing representatives of the little tree-climbing monkey people with whom Mr. and Mrs. Johnson came in contact on one of the islands, the devil-devil grounds and jungle scenes were in evidence. Conspicuous also was a Malekula dress exhibit revealing the lava-lava costume of straw, which is the last word—indeed, the only word—in chic creations on the South Sea Islands.

Old Vehicle Contest Boosts "Quincy Adams Sawyer"

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—The management of Loew's Warfield theatre used an Old Vehicle Contest in which prizes were awarded to persons entering the quaintest antique carriages as an exploitation tie-up on "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Stories in newspapers and cuts of the contestants and their vehicles drew a great deal of interest to the stunt, and a parade of the eighteen vehicles through the city put a fine finish to it.

Most of the contestants were girls, and some of the coaches that they had discovered were popular fifty years ago. The oddest vehicles were photographed with the girls submitting them, and the San Francisco Bulletin published a new photograph every day.

For the best vehicle, a prize of $25 was awarded, with a second prize of $15, and a third of $10. Other rewards consisted of season tickets to the Warfield, with a number of tickets entitling the holder to see "Quincy Adams Sawyer."

Tied Up with Paper on Ade for "Back Home and Broke"

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—George Ade's syndicated Fables in Slang appear in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

When The Missouri Theatre played "Back Home and Broke," written by George Ade, Herschel Stuart, the manager, sold the paper the idea of a split one-sheet poster announcing both the picture and Globe-Democrat feature. Stuart paid for the printing and the newspaper paid for the posting and also made available their contract locations on the billboards and the news stands.

Merchants' Tie-Up Page Is Used for "Dr. Jack"

TAMPA, Fla.—Manager C. D. Cooley of the Victory theatre recently put over another merchants' tie-up page, this time on "Dr. Jack."

Full page spreads were used in the local papers, with a large heading, clear across the page, "Dr. Jack Prescribes From His Temporary Office At The Victory Theatre. Office Hours, 1-3-5-7-9."

The rest of the page was devoted to the house ad on the feature, and the ads of the seven merchants who contributed to the page. All of the merchants' ads started off with the statement that "Dr. Jack Prescribes:"

Novel Lobby Device Builds Up Curiosity for "Clarence"

Austin, Texas.—Manager E. B. Roberts, in exploiting "Clarence" at the Majestic theatre, made a large saxophone out of beaver board and painted it to represent the real instrument. It was about eight feet high and the bell end of the saxophone was hollowed out and covered over with red tissue paper.

This saxophone was placed in the lobby of the Majestic theatre and rested on an easel over which was a music staff carrying a large card with the following inscription: "Blow out the light and see 'Clarence' free." From the mouth of the instrument extended a rubber tube about two inches long with instructions to blow through it.

Inside of the saxophone concealed from sight was the wiring to the electric light that was in the bell end. The light could be blown out only when the switch was pulled from inside the theatre—and after several attempts had been made by all lookers-on to blow out the light, which attracted a large crowd, Mr. Roberts would pull the switch from inside the theatre and present a ticket free to the person who happened to be blowing on the rubber mouthpiece.

"Sherlock Holmes" Put Over in Legitimate Theatre

Wheeling, W. Va.—Manager F. E. Johnston, of the Court theatre, has a particularly difficult exploitation situation, since the house runs legitimate attractions a large share of the time, and each picture has to be "sold" strongly.

He recently staged a very successful campaign on "Sherlock Holmes" in conjunction with William Robson, Goldwynner, which he describes as follows:

"We used exceptionally heavy newspaper advertising, using the lay-outs furnished in Goldwyn's press book. We used a large number of posters and window cards; in fact, all the stands available.

"One of the best accessories we used was a reproduction of the finger print record card used by the Bertillon system of the Police department, showing the finger prints and other criminal record of the villain in the play, Prof. Moriarty, the greatest criminal of all time. In the centre of the card was the caption, "See how Sherlock Holmes captured this criminal at Court theatre, Wheeling, W. Va., week of Jan 8th, with John Barrymore in the title role." People saved these cards as curiosities.

"We had window displays in a number of book store and windows where the book was on sale. Mr. Robson also arranged with the Chief of Police for a private showing of the picture for the Police department and the members of the Sheriff's staff, and it gave us publicity in the newspapers."

Paper Ties Up Editorially with "Old Homestead"

MARTINSVILLE, Va.—Martinsville is out to double its 5,000 population, and frowns on any manifestations of the jazz spirit of the age.

Leslie F. Whelan, Paramount exploiteer, saw that the Henry County Semi-Weekly Bulletin, was campaigning editorially on the subject so he gave them an idea. "Martinsville must return to the code of 'The Old Homestead.' Simple devotion, love, fire-sides, mother's doughnuts, that's what Martinsville must get back to."

This is the fifth town to be sold on such a campaign. In Martinsville, the Bulletin claimed that at their request the exhibitor booked the picture to show the town what the simple life was like.

Elaborate Campaign Put Behind "East Is West" Showing

Wilmington, N. C.—D. M. Bain, publicity director of the Grand theatre, in collaborating with Carl B. Rehder, advertising manager, George W. Bailey, house manager, and Harry T Cooley, electrician, put over one of the most elaborate exploitation campaigns ever seen here, for the run of "East Is West."

A ten-day advance teaser contest was inaugurated in the newspapers using the "Chink" talks with a small cut of Connie. Stunt number two was the distribution of several thousand facsimile laundry tickets of the kind given by Chinese laundries, with "Chink" writing on one side and a "translation" on the reverse, giving a strong sales talk.

Three days before the opening the entire mailing list received large mailing cards printed in red on yellow stock, the front showing the famous "wink" of Constance Talmadge as "Ming Toy" with Chinese characters.

The entire lobby was transformed by the use of bamboo cane, a canopy effect being obtained in which was entwined artificial flowers and bamboo foliage. A bamboo cane fence was also constructed enclosing the lobby, against which background were grouped three-sheet cut-outs of the principal characters in the story. Forty-eight colored Japanese lanterns were strung underneath this canopy effect, each being wired and lighted from inside, and the color effect was still further heightened by the suspension of Japanese parasols. Miniature incandescents painted like Japanese lanterns were also entwined in the bamboo surrounding the box office in the centre.

Shopgirls' League Formed for "Only a Shopgirl"

Newark, N. J. — Will Kraft, exploitation man for the Apollo exchange, put over a novel exploitation stunt for "Only A Shopgirl" at the Strand theatre.

He was responsible there for the formation of The Shopgirls' League of Newark—An organization for the Economic and Social and Moral Betterment of the Shopgirl.

Kraft himself visited the various stores in the city at hours when he could talk to the girls when they weren't busy and told them that "Only a Shopgirl," which was showing at the Rialto, was propaganda showing shopgirls in particular the evils of working for someone else—and that they should be independent. Toward this end he urged that they consider a plan to pool their savings and save them up with a view to opening a co-operative shop where they would work for their own, not someone else's gain. He asked all girls who were interested in the plan to meet at the theatre Sunday morning to talk it over and elect officers. He even interested the theatre manager so deeply that the latter agreed to donate a percentage of the receipts of the run of "Only a Shopgirl" to the cause— and of course the girls worked hard.

Sunday morning brought out a big attendance at the meeting, officers were elected and letterheads printed. On this letterhead a statement of the League's formation and aims was sent to every newspaper. The girls were interviewed and photographed, and the papers gave front page publicity in the news sections and wrote editorials about it.

"Sherlock Holmes" Hook-Up Ad Is Given New Twist

Flint, Mich.—The manager of the Orpheum theatre evolved a new twist for his page of co-operative advertising on "Sherlock Holmes."

Clear across the top of the page in large letters was the line "Sherlock Discovers in Flint," and at the head of each individual "ad" a line worded substantially as follows, though varying slightly in each "ad": "Sherlock Holmes in his travels in Flint discovered that——" Here follows the advertisement of the merchant's goods.

A clever dodger was distributed from house to house. The wording of this herald might be used in any small or medium sized city—"Is there anything hidden in your life? Have you anything to conceal? Sherlock Holmes, the great detective, will be in Flint Sunday, Jan. 7, at the Orpheum theatre. See him unfathom the greatest mystery of London's underworld. Sir Conan Doyle sent Sherlock Holmes here! You can't miss or get away from him."

Gets W.C.T.U. to Endorse "10 Nights" Picture

HUNTSVILLE, Ala.—Manager A. L. L. Snell, in exploiting "Ten Nights In a Barroom," turned his lobby into an old time bar room and tied up with the NuGrape company to serve their product to all patrons. This company supplied a "bar tender" to serve the drinks and they were delighted with this ideal sampling opportunity to get their drink before the people of Gadsden.

He invited the local chapter of the W. C. T. U. to a private screening on the morning of opening day. As expected, they went out and spread the news.

Mr. Snell himself appeared at the services in three local churches on opening night and told them about the picture, stating that it had been highly endorsed by the W. C. T. U.

A street ballyhoo was arranged with eight or ten boys dressed as lumberjacks riding a bannered two horse dray. The boys wore mackinaws, heavy stockings, boots and caps. Occasionally the dray stopped in front of the theatre and the boys would jump off and stand around the lobby for a while.

"One Exciting Night" Contest Tied Up with Newspaper

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The management of the Circle theatre made a tie-up on "One Exciting Night" which took the form of a symposium, conducted for two weeks in advance of the play date for the picture, by the Indianapolis Star for the best letters from readers describing the most "Exciting Night" in their experience. Prizes of $1 each for the daily best letters were given by the Star. As the symposium closed all letters were judged again and the best of all won an award of a $50 cash prize.

This contest ended one week before the play date for "One Exciting Night," and immediately following it a teaser advertising campaign was started in Indianapolis newspapers, the copy referring mysteriously to "One Exciting Night."

Maritime Atmosphere Gotten for "On the High Seas"

BEAUMONT, Texas.—Manager T. B. Noble, Jr., of the Liberty theatre, created a maritime atmosphere in the lobby during the run of the picture, "On the High Seas."

The lobby was decorated in maritime fixtures and equipment including a dozen oars which encircled the top of the box office, a large wheel that is used to steer a ship, the center of which carried a large beaver board disc on which was painted the title of the picture.

Across the top of the lobby hung five cut-outs of life savers, the circular type on which was painted the name of the theatre—S. S. Liberty, Port of Beaumont. In the center of these life savers was painted the title of the picture and the cast.

Many Mercantile Tie-Ups Made in "Suzanna" Campaign

Los Angeles, Cal.—An unusually thorough exploitation campaign was staged for the premiere of "Suzanna" at the Mission theatre, centering heavily on mercantile tie-ups of various sorts.

The commodities tied up with the production, "Suzanna," such as hats, shoes, silks, biscuits, chocolates, dolls, sheet music, phonograph records, cards and the "Suzanna" novel, were the product of reputable and nationally known manufacturers. This in itself made it possible to arrange with the retailers for windows in their stores for display of these merchandise articles during the run of the picture.

Displays were arranged in more than sixty business houses in Los Angeles, including three of the biggest department stores, also the Western Costume Company and the big music stores. The leading jewelry stores used portraits of Mabel Normand, the star, together with production stills, neatly arranged in gold and silver frames.

Many Angles Utilized to Put Over "Making a Man"

Atlanta, Ga.—Manager W. R. Bedell, of the Rialto theatre, started his "Making a Man" campaign a week in advance with gum stickers bearing the title only in bold type. These were stuck on automobile windshields, soda fountain mirrors, show windows and every conspicuous available place. Four days in advance, 25 newsboys were secured to wear small banners on their backs. These banners also carried only the title of the picture. It was a good stunt and attracted unusual attention as the connection between newsboys and "making a man" is evident.

Two days before opening, tie-ups were made with a prominent clothier and a large bank. The clothier put in a display of suits and stills and a card reading, "A Fashion Park suit is one of the first essentials in 'Making a Man.'" Four cards were placed in the bank, reading, "A Savings Account Is First Aid in 'Making a Man.' . . . Our Savings Department Will Bank with You on the Future."

During the week of the run the street cars carried 800 window signs announcing the picture. These were read from the outside.

This week was the first of a tie-up with the Cable Piano Company, by which they will display in their window each week a one-sheet giving the Rialto's entire musical program and announcing the current feature.

Orange Recipe Contest Tied Up with "Robin Hood"

BOSTON, Mass.—The management of the Park theatre, playing "Robin Hood," tied up with the Boston American on a contest to encourage creative recipes from the housewives of Boston and to exploit the picture, in which ten crates of oranges, ostensibly direct from the Douglas Fairbanks orange grove in California, were given for the ten best recipes for ways in which the orange may be used for table purposes.

The Boston American printed the recipes daily. They covered cakes, pies, marmalades and countless delicacies from the orange. And the stunt got a lot of publicity for "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" and the Park theatre showing.

Gimme Club Formed as Hook-Up in "Gimme" Campaign

New York, N. Y.—Excellent results were obtained with a small "gimme" button which Eddie Bonne, manager of exploitation for Goldwyn, and W. R. Ferguson, headquarters Goldwynner, distributed widely in connection with the showing of "Gimme," at the Capitol theatre.

The button is about as large as a dime, with the title printed in white letters against a blue background. These buttons were distributed by the thousand and were worn by the majority of persons receiving them. It was a button about which the wearer was certain he could be humorous and extract a lot of fun.

Two students at Columbia University were interested in the matter of starting a "Gimme" club at that institution. They took 3,000 of the buttons and distributed them among the students and in a week's time there were more members of the "Gimme" club than there were Shifters among the Columbia students. The same stunt was worked in some of the city's high schools.

A novelty that attracted much attention was a small, four-page booklet, printed in black on yellow paper. On the front cover appeared this: "How to save gas and electricity." On the back page was the question: "Who handles the weekly pay envelope in your home?" On the two inside pages was the following: "Shut off your gas, turn off your lights, close up your home; take the whole family to see Goldwyn's latest pictorial production, "Gimme!"

Extensive Exploitation Drive Put Over for "Knighthood"

Brooklyn, N. Y.—A heavy exploitation campaign, starting well in advance, was used for "When Knighthood was in Flower" at the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, of which Edward L. Hyman is managing director.

Long before the picture opened, Fulton street pedestrians noticed handsomely engraved pictures all along the thoroughfare. Next the illuminated 24-sheet stands blazed forth their announcements with all the original papr. Then came a novelization of the story in one of the leading dailies of the borough.

On the opening day a full page in the rotagravure section of one of the dailies carried the caption: "Brooklyn Girls Who Have Attained Stardom," and portraits of Miss Davies were used profusely in this.

By careful building up, Society Night (opening night) was a big success. Miss Davies had issued personal invitations, attached to which were autographed photos. Society, represented by the leaders in all lines, turned out.

Nine hundred cards were used on street cars, schools were visited and special cards put on the bulletin boards, book store tie-ups brought displays on the principal shopping streets. a Marion Davies gown was placed in a prominent store window, singers from the Mark Strand visited broadcasting radio stations in return for a broadcasted theatre announcement, and a two-page co-operative ad in the newspaper helped things along.

Jewelry Store Tie-Up to Aid "Lorna Doone" Campaign

Wilmington, N. C.—D. M. Bain, publicity director of the Howard-Wells theatre, concentrated on the jewelry store hook-up on his campaign for "Lorna Doone," utilizing the Lorna Doone pearls.

One of the leading jewelry stores was sold on the proposition; also the Wilmington Star. The Star sold a page of co-operative ads in which appeared reproductions of the eight "famous women of history and arts," roles portrayed by Madge Bellamy, star of "Lorna Doone."

The jewelry store devoted an entire window to the display of the pearls, centered by the pearl necklace which the store offered as first prize to the one guessing nearest correctly the eight characters, accompanied by a fifty-word historical sketch of each one.

Black and white stills of the eight characters were each placed in silver frames and arranged in the window to make the task easier than from the small reproductions in the newspaper.

Other prizes consisted of tickets, so the only expense to the theatre was for the tickets.

F. J. Miller, manager of the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., arranged this appropriate display for "The Fast Mail"

Box with Peep Hole Exploits "The Face in the Fog"

AUSTIN, Texas.—Manager E. B. Roberts of the Majestic theatre advertised "The Face in The Fog" by creating curiosity with a lobby display. The display consisted of a large box attractively painted and decorated.

In this box was a peep hole through which could be seen in the distance a man's face which had been almost hidden from view by means of fine screens used to represent fog. By means of a proper lighting effect, Mr. Roberts created a weird spectacle for all who peeped through the hole in the box.

Comprehensive Campaign Used on "Omar the Tentmaker"

Duluth, Minn.—Manager P. F. Schwie of the Garrick theatre upheld his reputation as a showman in his exploitation campaign for "Omar the Tentmaker."

An inexpensive but effective trim for the front of the house was arranged by having a tent and awning company place a specially made strip of red and white awning around the marquee.

The picture was tied up with Omar cigarettes and a Superior Street cigar store used a window with a cut-out of the Persian poet and a bowl of Omars. A haberdashery shop showed Guy Bates Post, the star, wearing Dunlap hats, the tie-up that is being used throughout the country.

The Glass Block department store turned over the window usually reserved for a showing of "original" gowns and costumes to a display of Persian rugs that were tied up with the picture. They used another display in the book department and tied up both of them with an exhibition of the prizes offered by the Duluth News-Tribune in connection with its quatrain contest.

Copies of the full page Saturday Evening Post advertisement on "Omar" that appeared in the issue of December 9th were used for mailing window display and hand-outs. On each was pasted a small slip of paper with the sentence: "Opens at the Garrick December 9." To do this permission had to be obtained from the largest distributor of the Post in Duluth.

Practical Campaign Put Over for "Broadway Rose"

St. Louis, Mo.—Manager J. F. Brinkmeyer of the Grand-Florissant theatre recently put over a thorough campaign on "Broadway Rose," which he describes as follows:

I made two wooden frames large enough to hold a single sheet poster. This frame was made of lumber giving plenty of space to insert six clear receptacles in each one and had wired them complete, making them into a shadow box by using shadow lamps to match the colors of the poster. I then hung one of these shadow boxes on each side of my stage facing the audience. These shadow boxes were illuminated before the show began and during the showing of slide and news they were then turned out until the intermission.

A week in advance I put out 50 single sheets bearing the showing date in the windows of business houses within a mile of my theatre. Also, six frames holding six photos each were placed inside of drug and candy stores, in very prominent places showing date and name of theatre.

Auto Dealer Gives Window to "Broken Chains" Display

San Francisco, Cal.—An excellent window display advertising the showing of "Broken Chains" at the Granada theatre through a tie-up with an auto accessories dealer on nonskid chains.

On the floor of the window were hags of the chains. Back of that was a likesize oil painting of Colleen Moore as the heroine of "Broken Chains," with feet padlocked together. The frame of the picture was made of the nonskid chains advertised in the window.

At one side of the window was a three-panel screen with stills from the picture at the top of each panel. The first panel contained the name of the theatre, the third the date of the showing, while on the centre panel was painted the following: "You will never find broken chains in your experience with our skid chains. You will find 'Broken Chains' at the Granada theatre."

Consul's Endorsement Brings Publicity to "Omar"

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Few people, perhaps, are aware that there is such an official as a Persian consul, but the management of the Tivoli theatre discovered that there was one in San Francisco and managed to get a bit of extra publicity for "Omar the Tentmaker," through an endorsement obtained from him.

Thomas W. Firby is the consul's name. His endorsement was good for a notice in the San Francisco Examiner, especially as it was written on the consulate's letterhead.

Junior Naval Reserve Parade Aids "Heroes of the Street"

New York, N. Y.—Lon Young, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers, and his assistant, Lou Marangella, staged a big campaign on Broadway in connection with the Junior Naval Reserve for "Heroes of the Street" at the New York Mark Strand theatre.

The stunt involved the use of Cadet Barry, who headed a parade consisting of several hundred Junior Naval Reserve boys, the Catholic Protectory band and fully a score of policemen. The parade started at Columbus Circle, turned into Broadway and proceeded to the Strand. It was made possible through the courtesy of several officials of the New York Police Department and Mrs. Julia M. Loft, Hon. Deputy Commissioner, who acted as hostess to more than 2,000 boys and girls of members of the police force.

Edward A. Oldham, executive secretary of the U. S. Junior Naval Reserve, dispatched a special letter to the members of the organization.

Several hundred cadets responded to his notice and assembled at Columbus Circle. A group of syndicate photographers and cameramen were on hand, and despite the chilly weather Cadet Barry smilingly withstood the barrage of cameras for fully three quarters of an hour. As the parade reached the Strand, Managing Director Joseph Plunkett of the Strand and Mrs. Loft greeted Barry.

Junior Naval Reserve organizations are located all over the country, and the fact that Barry is a member will make it possible for the theatre owners to secure this tie-up at practically no expense.

Old Clothes Matinee Is Stunt on "Oliver Twist"

Kansas City, Mo.—An unusually energetic advance campaign has been put back of "Oliver Twist" by the management of the Liberty Theatre. Their advance campaign included:

The management issued 1,800 passes to school teachers for a pre-view showing, while a special tie-up between Mayor Frank Cromwell of Kansas City and Jackie Coogan resulted in columns of newspaper space given to a Cromwell-Coogan Warm Clothes matinee at the Doric Theatre, a house which has been dark, Saturday.

The matinee was given for children only, the "standard" of admission being old clothes, which were presented at the box office by the children. The clothes in turn were turned over to charitable organizations.

Exhibitors' Reports on Pictures

NOTE:—Exhibitors' Reports on Pictures is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third column, the number who considered it "Average"; the fourth, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fifth column, those who considered it "Big."

The last column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Average," 50%; Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

Around Metro Studios

Frances Marion has written the continuity for the next Mae Murray - Robert Leonard production from the stage play, "The French Doll." Orville Caldwell has been engaged as male lead, Rose Dione engaged. They will produce at the Goldwyn studio.

Milton Hoffman, Metro production manager, leaves for New York about February 1.

Rex Ingram has appointed Curt Rehfeld, for several years assistant to him, manager of the Ingram unit. Mr. Rehfeld's first assignment in his new position will be in connection with the filming of "Scaramouche," which the Metro director will produce as soon as he has completed the cutting and editing of his latest photoplay, "Where the Pavement Ends."

With Paramount Units

Lasky announces the purchase of several Zane Grey stories. Will film "To the Last Man," direction of Victor Fleming, in March. Lucien Hubbard and Doris Schroeder are preparing continuities. Later "The Heritage of the Desert" and "The Wanderer of the Waste Land" will be filmed.

Anna Q. Nilsson and Cyril Chadwick are principals of the Betty Compson - Conway Tearle subject, "The Rustle of Silk," now being directed by Herbert Brenon.

Albert Le Vino has completed the script for "Contraband," to star Agnes Ayres. Wesley Ruggles will direct.

Charles Maigne has completed the Mary Miles Minter subject, "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." The principals of the cast are Antonio Moreno, Ernest Torrence, Edwin Brady, Cullen Tate and Frances Warner.

Tully Marshall, Margaret Loomis and Fred Huntley have been added to the cast of "The Law of the Lawless."

William De Mille will complete "Grumpy" early in February.

John Colton, author of "Rain," one of the outstanding dramatic successes on Broadway this season, has been engaged to write the scenario for "The Exciters," a Paramount picture to be put in production soon at the Eastern studio under the direction of Richard Ordynski. Bebe Daniels and Antonio Moreno will be co-starred in the picture.

Ethel Clayton is scheduled to begin production next week, the story to be selected.

Harry Carey will require two weeks more to complete the filming of "Man of the Desert."

The story titled, "Day Time Wives" has been purchased with a view of an all-star cast production to be started as soon as the director is selected.

East and West with Fox

Jack Gilbert is beginning work in "Red Darkness," under the direction of Jerome Storm, now in the process of casting.

Colin Campbell has begun directing Dustin Farnum in "Klondike Kit." Arline Pretty is the lead: Hayward Hobbs and Colleen Chance also engaged.

"The Water Cross" is the title of the next William Russell production, being directed by Scott Dunlap. It is a Boston Blackie role in prison life story. The cast in support includes Eva Novak, Frank Brownley, Otto Matieson, Spike Robinson, Fred Eanelton.

Winfield Sheehan arrived on the Coast on Wednesday.

Jacob Sichelman, head of contract department of Fox, and E. B. McCaffrey, head of editorial department, are spending a short time at Fox West Coast studios.

Jack G. Leo, vice president, is on the West Coast for two weeks.

Here and There

The complete cast in support of Douglas MacLean in "Going Up," under the direction of Lloyd Ingraham, from a script by Raymond Griffith, includes Marjorie Daw, lead, Hallam Cooley, Edna Murphy, Francis McDonald, Hughie Mack, John Steppling, Lillian Langdon, Wade Boteler, Arthur Hall, and Mervin LeRoy.

Clifford Elfelt productions, now making "Danger" at Fine Arts studio, a semi-western starring H. B. Warner, is from a story by Frank Clark. The players include Lillian Hackett, June Lavere, Edith Sterling, Billie Rait, Bert Apling, W. M. McCormick and Charles Newton.

Schulberg has purchased an original story from Louis Leighton and Hope Loring.

Victor Schertzinger is making final scenes this week for Katherine MacDonald's "Chastity," by Ernest Paschal.

L. J. Gasnier arrives on the coast from New York Tuesday.

Reginald Barker is home from Truckee, Lake Tahoe and Feather River country after selecting snow locations for filming "The Law Bringer," by G. B. Lancaster. The script is being written by Hawkes.

An original story titled "Daughters of the Rich," has been purchased and will serve as the story for next John Stahl production.

Joseph L. Rhinock of Metro was on the coast recently conferring with Robert J. Trimble and Frederick G. Becker, president and producing director respectively of the Arthur Trimble Productions.

Allen Holubar has added Rosemary Theby to the cast of "Slander the Woman," a First National release starring Dorothy Phillips. Other additions to the cast are Richard Headrick, Cyril Chadwick, and Brinsley Shaw. The picture is based on Jeffry De Prend's novel, "The White Frontier," and is being made at the United Studios.

Under the supervision of Dick Thorpe, a troupe of All Star comedy players left last week for St. Augustine, Florida, to film several outdoor scenes for the next All-Star comedy.

Sanford Productions have engaged William H. Clifford to direct its first special production, "Power." Production is now under way, with a cast including Pat O'Malley, Cleo Madison, Otto Lederer, Frank Hayes, Gene Crosby and Leon Artigue.

Regional News From Correspondents

Western New York

Justice Hinkley has denied a motion of Levin Michaels, owner of the Allendale theatre property, to vacate a temporary injunction restraining him from prosecuting summary proceedings in city court for the purpose of ousting the General Theatre Corporation interests. Justice Hinkley has also denied the application of Golde Brothers' Shop, Inc., to evict the Loew State theatre from its Main street entrance.

The Western New York Federation of Women's Clubs at its annual midwinter meeting in the Lafayette Hotel, Saturday, January 20, adopted a resolution setting forth that the members earnestly protest the abolishing of the state motion picture censorship. Mrs. George Winters prefaced the resolution, a copy of which was sent to Senator Parton Swift, with a brief criticism of Will H. Hays for permitting the ban to be raised on Arbuckle.

Marcus Loew was in town last week to attend a meeting of the stockholders of the local Loew State. He declared that Buffalo was growing and making better progress than any other city in the country. He also said that the city has plenty of theatres and did not look for any new ones in the town for some time to come.

The early discovery of a fire in the basement of the Fredonia (N. Y.) Opera House permitted the quick arrival of the fire fighters who extinguished the blaze which did but $100 damage. The blaze started during the second show in the evening. There was no panic.

Ira M. Mosher, former manager of the Palace, and Robert W. Elms, who has been engaged in work on the Buffalo city directory and who is now business manager of the Northern Light, a Buffalo community newspaper, are associated with Elmer C. Winegar in the formation of E. M. W. Pictures Corporation, which will make industrial films. Mr. Winegar recently resigned as manager of the Elmwood theatre to devote all his time to the new concern, which is under contract already for a dozen or so industrial films for local firms.

Buffalo has lost one of its most popular exhibitors in the death of Chris Ruderich, manager of the Casino, whose brother died only recently of the same disease which claimed Mr. Ruderich.

G. McCleary has taken over the Cazenovia theatre in the South Park section for five years from C. Lembke. The house will now run every night. It has been running but two nights a week.

Around Buffalo's Branch Offices

ROBERT T. MURPHY has resigned from the firm of Filkins & Murphy, distributors of Merit product in New York State, to assume the Buffalo management of the new Renown Pictures exchange, which will be located in the new film building at Pearl and Tupper streets. There is a report that Educational exchange will move into the old Nu-Art office, which it adjoins, and that Mr. Murphy will take the Educational space. N. I. Filkins has come to Buffalo to take charge of the local Merit office in the Grand & North building, Franklin street. Mr. Filkins never looked more dignified in his life than he does behind his new Van Dyke beard. It takes nerve to introduce a thing like this to Film Row.

Everywhere Gene Markens, city salesman for First National, goes he gets money. He went to the Albany sales conference last week-end and returned to town with $50, the first prize in the monthly contest. H. L. Levvy, also a member of the local F. N. sales force, pulled down third prize. The office is going over the top for First National Week, February 4 to 10, every key city having been solid for this event. Every F. N. salesman who attended the Albany conference was presented with a cigarette case by R. H. Clark, general manager of the New York exchange.

Charles "Pop" Berliner and Lionel Edel are now members of the local Warner Brothers' exchange sales staff. Lionel Edel is well known in Buffalo. "Pop" Berliner is also well acquainted in the western New York section. General Manager Charles S. Goetz was in town last week for a conference with Branch Manager Joseph Levee.

Phil Gentille is placing the Richard Talmadge series in almost every house in this neck of the woods and reports exhibitors enthusiastic over the box office value of these First Graphic releases.

"Jimmy" Grainger, sometimes called James R., vice president and general sales manager of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, hit Buffalo last week on his swing around the Goldwyn exchange chain. While in town he visited several of the exhibitors in company with Branch Manager Thomas W. Brady. The new Goldwyn exchange in Albany, of which Charles Walder is manager, has taken over the Utica territory from the Buffalo office as well as Chenango, Louis, Madison and St. Lawrence counties. Under a rearrangement of salesmen, Otto Siegel will cover Buffalo and surrounding territory, Sherman Webster will look after Rochester and part of the Southern Tier and E. M. Hopcraft has been assigned to Syracuse and Northern New York.

Basil Brady, Pathe plugger par excellence, has broken all precedent. He has had a second haircut this winter. Pathe Manager Bill Mack announces that his company is about to revive six of the early Harold Lloyd comedies. Speaking of Lloyd, Mr. Mack arranged to have "Dr. Jack" screened privately for forty leading Buffalo physicians in the Buffalo club last Saturday evening so that they could express their views on Dr. Jack's methods. Mr. Mack is soon expecting a round robin setting forth these views. Mr. Mack, in seeking to regain his youth, went skating at Delaware Park one evening last week. In a non-youthful moment he found his feet going in opposite directions. Result—a sprained wrist. Moral — When you get over seventy-five do your skating at home, where the rugs are soft. Hub Taylor, also working under the Pathe banner, ventured into the Southern Tier last week in the middle of a blizzard. Hub's automobile is now stalled in twelve feet of snow somewhere downstate and he expects to drive it back to Buffalo about Eastertime.

Along Kansas City's Film Row

THE PARAMOUNT FILM CORPORATION is to make Kansas City a present of its new film, "The Covered Wagon," which is nearing completion, and which features some of the city's early history. S. R. Kent, general manager of Paramount, wired Frank L. Newman, owner of the Newman theatres in Kansas City, of his purpose to present Kansas City the first film, and Mayor Frank Cromwell, Mr. Newman and others will see that it has a fitting reception.

In Lew Nathanson the Kansas City F. B. O. exchange has a combination of salesman-exhibitor. Although Mr. Nathanson will continue to operate his Gem theatre in Topeka, Kan., he has been assigned as city representative for F. B. O.

Two new Universal salesmen have joined the ranks of the Kansas City branch. R. E. Recob, former Universal booker, has been given his first road assignment while Herbert Sulz, who has been selling Select product, now is in the territory for Universal.

As a reward for good work, William Branch, who holds the distinction as being president of the Kansas City branch of "Brothers Under the Skin," not only will have charge of exploitation in the Kansas territory, but also will have charge of the territory surrounding Omaha and St. Louis.

avenue, of which M. Wallack is manager, has been closed. E. J. Pantera has taken over the Walden, an east side house.

The Victoria theatre will get Herbert Alvin House, the Strand organist, when the latter house closes for all time, Thursday, February 1. C. Sharpe-Minor, the Lafayette Square organist who disappeared a few weeks ago and whose contract was terminated by the board of directors, came back to town last Saturday. There is a possibility that he may be re-engaged. M. Slotkin, general manager of the company operating the Lafayette, is about to leave for a month's vacation at Atlantic City. He will exhibit some high diving stunts while at the seashore. He is an expert deep sea diver.

John R. Stevens has succeeded James Savage as manager of the Central Park theatre, controlled by General Theatres Corporation.

Members of the Universalist Church organization in Middleport, N. Y., have started a Children's theatre movement in the town, showing motion pictures especially for the kiddies every Saturday afternoon.

Jay Berman is suing Joseph A. Schuchert and Rufus J. Wood for $15,000 alleging breach of contract in connection with the leasing of the Ellen Terry theatre on Grant street to Berman for a year. Berman alleged the Woodburn Real Estate Company had agreed to rent the house to him for a year and then broke their word.

Kansas City Slants

The Highland theatre, Kansas City suburban house, has been purchased by C. W. Price from James Foland.

Harold Lloyd's film, "Dr. Jack," was given a pre-view showing at the Davidson building before thirty representatives of Kansas City clubs last Saturday night. Mrs. Eleanore Walton and Mrs. A. H. Connolly of the motion picture committee of the Women's City Club, praised the film, which resulted in some free publicity and enlivened attendance at Samuel Harding's Liberty theatre this week.

A new precedent has been established by the Apollo theatre, one of Kansas City's larger suburban houses, owned by O. D. Rose. Heretofore the policy of the Apollo has been a change of program each night, but last week "Oliver Twist" showed the entire week did a greater business the last night than it did the first. In the future there will be only two changes of program, Mr. Rose announced.

Seattle Bulletins

"The Flirt" closed its engagement at Manager R. W. Case's Columbia theatre after having broken all records for length of runs at the theatre. The Universal feature closed after a solid three-week engagement. A total of one hundred and twenty-six performances of the picture were given at the Columbia during the three weeks, a record number of runs of any single feature that has ever played at the house. "The Flirt" had its world premiere in this city, opening here one day before the New York prerelease showing began. Regular admission prices ranging from 10 to 50 cents were charged for the picture.

The Princess theatre, owned and operated by the H. E. Woolley Theatres Company, and managed by O. R. Hartman, began a strictly first run policy last week with the showing of the F. B. O. attraction "Good Men and True." The theatre was formerly operated as a second run house under the name of the "Union," but has recently been remodeled and refurnished and is now known as "Seattle's Baby Grand Theatre." According to the printed announcements issued by Manager Hartman, the Princess is the smallest metropolitan first-run theatre in the world. Admission prices are ten cents for children and twenty cents for adults at all times. Following "Good Men and True," Mr. Hartman had booked "The Hound of the Baskervilles" and "The Snowshoe Trail" as coming attractions on the Princess' first run program.

George Mantor, chief of the Seattle fire department, was the honor guest of John Hamrick, at a special midnight showing of "The Third Alarm" recently at the Blue Mouse theatre. The picture has been booked for early showing at the Blue Mouse, and the stunt was arranged by Publicity Manager Vic Gauntlett. Battalion chiefs and other high members of the fire department also attended, as well as several city officials, who were all high in their praise of the picture after the special showing.

Gustava Malstrom and Naomi Wall recently returned to Tacoma from Los Angeles, where they had been sent as a result of a popularity contest conducted in that city, a neighbor of Seattle. While in Los Angeles, the two girls were used by Viola Dana in a few scenes in her latest picture, "A Noise in Newboro."

Herbert Hixon, doorman at the Columbia theatre for the past eleven years, returned to this city recently after a vacation trip to New York to spend the holidays with relatives. Mr. Hixon has been at the Columbia practically since it was built by James Q. Clemmer, about twelve years ago.

Announcement has just been made in this city that work on a $750,000 vaudeville-motion picture house will be begun in about three months by the Ackerman and Harris circuit. The organization at present runs the Palace Hip theatre in Seattle, playing vaudeville and first run photoplays.

In Seattle's Branch-Offices

H. WAYNE PIERSON, assistant general manager of the foreign department of United Artists Corporation, sailed from Seattle on board the steamship President Jackson the middle of January bound for the Orient on a tour of inspection of the foreign offices. Mr. Pierson's first stop will be at Tokio, and his itinerary will include Russia, Japan, the Straits Settlements, Philippine Islands, India, South Africa, Egypt and Australia. While in Seattle several days before sailing, Mr. Pierson was the guest of Charles A. Hardin, manager for the local United Artists exchange.

J. R. Beal, manager of the local W. W. Hodkinson exchange, has recently announced first run bookings on two of the latest Hodkinson products, "Slim Shoulders" and "The Kingdom Within." "Slim Shoulders" has been booked with the entire Hamrick circuit and will be shown in the Blue Mouse theatres in Seattle, Tacoma and Portland. "The Kingdom Within" was booked by the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit and opened at the Peoples' Theatre in Portland on January 20. Mr. Beal is at present working on plans for the new projection room being installed in the local exchange.

Fred Walton, manager of the American and Grand theatres in Bellingham, was a recent visitor in this city, and while here bought "The Flirt" from the local Universal exchange for early showing at one of his Bellingham houses. Robert Bender, publicity and exploitation manager of the local exchange, was to leave for Bellingham in a few days to plan an advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign for the Universal release when it was shown by Mr. Walton.

The first-run bookings that Tom Mix pictures have ever had in Seattle, Tacoma or Portland were arranged last week by G. F. Mavarre, manager of the local Fox exchange, when he closed negotiations with the John Hamrick Blue Mouse circuit for the showing of "Just Tony," Mix's latest feature. The picture was scheduled to open at the Seattle Blue Mouse on February 3, and follow shortly thereafter in the other first-run cities. These bookings were considered by Mr. Mavarre to be significant of the increasing box office and audience appeal that each succeeding Mix picture seems to have.

Four out-of-town theatre managers were visitors on the Seattle film row during the last week. Ray Grombacher, of the Liberty theatre, Spokane; E. L. Mann, of the Rialto theatre, Wenatchee; R. Ruffner, of the Capitol theatre, Vancouver, B. C.; and Fred Walton, of the American theatre, Bellingham; were around the exchanges at various times during the week, arranging bookings for the coming season.

Advice received at the local American Releasing Corporation exchange recently announced the fact that Herman Mazon, owner and manager of the M-W-A theatre in Marcola, Oregon, was making plans to reopen his house sometime in February, after being closed since the middle of last October because of fire.

Along Cleveland's Film Row

Oscar Watson, for the past several years associated with the Educational Film Exchanges of Cincinnati and Cleveland, has severed his connections with the motion picture industry and now has the Studebaker automobile agency in seven counties of Michigan. He takes with him the best wishes for success from his many Ohio film friends.

Eddie Carrier, Goldwyn exploiteer in Ohio, has been made special exploiter at large. He is to cover all the high spots in the country on the big Goldwyn pictures. His first job under this new arrangement is in behalf of "The Stranger's Banquet" which is booked for an early showing at the Colorado theatre, Denver.

Nat Baruch, Cleveland Goldwyn exchange manager, visited the Toledo exhibitors this week, to their mutual benefit.

Art Holah, long known in the territory through his connections with Pathe and Famous Players, as executive manager in both Cleveland and Cincinnati, has come to Cleveland to become associated with a prominent oil company of this city.

R. A. White, Fox general sales manager, stopped off in Cleveland for a day, coming from Buffalo, and going to Detroit, where he is to hold a special sales conference.

Lee Chapman of the Great Western Film Company, an Independent Exchange of Cleveland, has arranged for the first Ohio showing of "The Country Flapper," featuring Dorothy Gish, at C. A. Barbian's Waldorf theatre, Akron. Joe Trunk of the Dome theatre, Youngstown, and L. B. Cool of the Opera House, Canton, have also booked the picture each for a whole week engagement.

Bill Skirboll, of the Ohio Exchange of Educational Film Exchange, Inc., left Saturday for New York.

J. E. Beck, local Vitagraph exchange, announces that "The Ninety and Nine" has been booked at every key centre in the territory. The picture did so well during its recent engagement at Reade's Hippodrome, that the local demand for it has necessitated Beck's borrowing prints from all the surrounding exchanges.

C. L. Peavey, local Hodkinson exchange manager, who has set aside every Monday afternoon for exhibitor screenings, will show "Second Fiddle" next Monday at 1 p. m. The first of the series of screenings, held last Monday was very well attended, all space in the screen room being occupied.

Cleveland Bulletins

The Cleveland Exhibitors' League is now operating under the direction of a business manager, William J. Banks. Mr. Banks assumed his new duties this week and is duly installed in his recently acquired offices, 401 Film Exchange Bldg. Banks has not previously been associated with the film industry in any capacity.

Can a tax-free institution do business in competition with a tax-paying institution? That's what V. E. Rakestraw, motion picture exhibitor, and manager of the Grand theatre, Salem, Ohio, has put up to the courts to decide. A school of Salem has been playing motion pictures in direct competition to the Grand theatre. The result is that Rakestraw stands to lose his entire investment of $125,000. It is said that motion picture exchanges refuse to protect Rakestraw by cutting off service to the school. The M.P.T.O.A. of Ohio is backing him financially to make this a test case and to find out whether it is legal for a non-tax-paying institution to compete with a tax-paying institution.

George J. Maurer, manager of the Southern theatre, Columbus, O., wrote to the Standard Film Service Company of Cleveland saying that "all the hard boiled operators, the organist and the doorman sat through a screening of 'Shadows' without criticism and unanimously declared it the best picture ever shown in the house." Subsequent business, following the screening, proved that the people of Columbus had the same sentiments.

F. F. White, formerly of Loew's Euclid Theatre, Cleveland, has taken over the Town Hall, Wakeman, Ohio, a 600-seat house halfway between Oberlin and Norwalk, and will inaugurate a combination picture and vaudeville policy.

"Doc." Horater famous exhibitor of Toledo, has arranged to play "My Wild Irish Rose" for an entire week, under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus, for the benefit of the Little Sisters of the Poor. Horater has secured the endorsement of the Bishop, the Mayor, the Chief of Police and the city officials, all of whom will be present at the opening performance. The Knights of Columbus have pledged themselves to sell 50,000 tickets during the week. Each member has assumed the responsibility of a certain number of tickets. Tickets will also be on sale at the box office. A percentage of the entire week's profits goes to charity.

George Ryder and W. W. Kulp, who have taken over the Strand theatre, Prospect Avenue at East Ninth Street, Cleveland, opened Sunday, Jan. 21st with "Queen of the Moulin Rouge." "Thelma" is the second attraction of the Strand, under the new management.

Jack Greenbaum, of the Opera House, Mansfield, had recently acquired the Opera House in Lorain, a 1,600-seat house. It's being rejuvenated with lots of fresh paint, trimmings and fixings.

St. Louis Brevities

The Kilcare theatre, Wood River, Ill., was damaged January 15 when the wall of an adjoining building fell on top of the theatre roof. Fire gutted the other building, causing a loss estimated at $100,000. The roof and interior of the theatre was badly damaged.

St. Louis police are working on the theory that a gang of ruffians may have been responsible for recent fires at the Hickory and Hudson theatres in Central St. Louis. The management of both houses are very strict concerning the conduct of patrons and have found is necessary to eject and bar some of them. Naturally the gangs have resented this. It is possible the fires may have been started by some gangsters who wanted to get revenge.

Herschel Stuart, manager of the Missouri theatre St. Louis, brought Larry Wagner, celebrated Chicago impersonator of movie stars, to town to exploit Larry Semon in "The Counter Jumper," which played the Missouri the week of January 20. Wagner resembles Semon greatly even without make-up and when all togged out he looked like Larry himself stepped out of the screen.

The Olive theatre, Creve Coeur, Mo., has re-opened after being dark for many months. Shows will be given one day a week.

Mrs. I. W. Rodgers, of Poplar Bluff, Mo., was one of the out-of-town visitors to St. Louis exchanges the past week.

Des Moines Flashes

M. C. Lister of Moravia sold the Crystal theatre to C. C. Waughop, a prominent business man of Moravia.

Mr. Barquist of Stanhope reports a change of ownership of the picture house there to become effective the first of March.

Floyd Perry has bought the Majestic theatre at Eldon, Iowa.

Motion Picture houses cooperated with the Near East Relief Drive in Des Moines the past week when girls with badges and bags were allowed to solicit funds from within the lobbies of the theatres. A slide also announced that contributions could be made to the girls in the lobby on leaving the theatre.

Around the St. Louis Branches

J. DUGGER, St. Louis manager for Goldwyn, has resigned to accept an executive position with Famous Players in the South. He will leave St. Louis this week, but has not, as yet, been assigned to his new post.

Harry Niemeyer has been made publicity director for Paramount in the St. Louis territory. For several months past he has handled exploitation for Goldwyn in this vicinity. Prior to that he was with Famous Players Missouri Corporation, handling publicity for the Missouri theatre. While with Famous Players Niemeyer handled an important assignment in Paris, France, and his ability is well known to the Paramount executives.

Col. Bill Yoder and his bride are making a tour of the Pathe exchanges. Yoder is Pathe district boss and has headquarters in Dallas, Texas.

Tom Leonard, of Progress Pictures Corporation, is making the key cities of the territory.

George Bromley, of Chicago, well known state righter, and John Smith, of Chicago, were visitors of the week.

All ye who have excess congratulations prepare to unload them now. Harry L. Pittner, Southern Illinois salesman for Vitagraph, on Saturday, January 20, journeyed to Edwardsville, Ill., and was married to Miss Georgia Johnson, of Fairfield, Ill. They were childhood sweethearts in Fairfield, Pittner's home. Mrs. Johnson was employed as a stenographer by a St. Louis business house.

Miss Irma Biebinger, Western representative for the National Ticket Seller and Cash Register Company is looking for an office location in the vicinity of the Plaza Hotel group of exchanges.

With the Washington Exchanges

SECRETARY BACHMAN, of the Washington Film Board, announces that following executive meetings last Friday and a luncheon meeting Monday, the board will appoint a permanent paid secretary to handle correspondence, minutes, etc. By-laws being adopted are modeled after those of Cleveland, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and other cities, and include some features of the local by-laws in force prior to the Hoy system vogue here. Important arbitral relations are to be undertaken.

Manager Walter Lusk, of First National, has been a grippe victim.

Miss Marie Etheridge, film row fashion plate and booker's aid in the First National, is retiring from the film game and leaving the exchange Monday. Rumors of a farewell party for her on Monday are buzzing around the Mather block.

Miss Rose Fuhr, of the Educational poster and shipping room, is reported to be contemplating matrimony and resigning her present position.

Nat Sauber, local film executive, now with Goldwyn here, is renewing his athletic activities as a star member of the Yankees, a local basketball "Quint," and helped defeat the lively George Washington University team last week.

With Des Moines' Exchanges

R. J. McCURDY, formerly handling publicity and special pictures for Universal in Des Moines, is now established as exploitation man at the Universal Buffalo branch exchange.

Miss Grace Veenstra entertained the girls of the Famous Players office staff at her home on Thursday of last week. A very good time was had by all, reports Miss Hazel Douglas who was among those present. Miss Veenstra is secretary for Mr. Nichols, head of the exchange, and Miss Douglas is assistant in the accessories department.

Washington Snapshots

Will H. Hays was a Washington visitor Thursday and Friday of last week. Calling first at the office of Postmaster-General Work, his successor there, he later visited the White House, paying his respects to the President and Mrs. Harding. Before leaving town on Friday he said that he was deeply grieved by the sudden death of Wallace Reid, after his fight against the narcotic weakness that brought the end. He refused to comment on the government's narcotic fight or as to what would be done in the matter of relieving the industry of the drug onus. Although Mr. Hays was in town during the anti-movie control conference of the Reform Bureau and affiliated church bodies he did not attend.

Dr. Fowler, District Health Officer, announced that the theatre owners of Washington had thoroughly cooperated with him since his announcement that thirteen of the eighteen theatres inspected were found to have impure air. He added that the situation was rapidly being improved by the theatre managements concerned and said that one theatre had even closed down so a new ventilating system could be put in.

W. E. T. Thompson is now directing the pipe organ at the Central, now in the Crandall chain here, while Jack Griffith, brought here for that purpose having requested similar duties at the York theatre, Crandall's Petworth theatre, is now keyman at the Georgia Avenue console.

Official Washington has been crippled by the grippe epidemic that has resulted from the warm, damp weather. Now the theatre and exchange executives are under the weather. In the Crandall organization last week the victims were: Mrs. J. J. Locher, Public Relations; John J. Payette, assistant general manager; Nelson Bell and William Ewing of the Publicity staff; N. Mirskey, conductor and director, Musical department; William V. Broyles, manager of the Central; and J. Williams Clifford of the Lincoln. H. M. Crandall was on the border of the sick-room, but couldn't get more than a hard cold. And the new manager of the Crandall-First National exchange, Walter Lusk was also suffering from a similar ailment.

It is learned that the Truxton theatre, after being operated by Phil Powers for some months, has suspended and it is rumored that Ben Lust, equipment dealer, may take over the operation of the house later.

The Richmond theatre operator, Mr. Somma, when in Washington last week announced that the old Rayo theatre, there, recently renamed the Howard, and operated by the Howard-Wells chain, has been purchased by him, and will be operated by him as a unit of his mixed chain of white and colored theatres. He added that one of his larger theatres would soon play one of the biggest picture circuits in the country.

Messrs. Reddish and Durkee of Baltimore were visiting exhibitors here during the week.

Through the aid of Jack Connolly, Washington representative of the Will Hays organization, the benefit, for disabled soldiers, to be given at the Masonic Auditorium, Monday night, secured the Hodkinson-Will Rogers picture, "The Headless Horseman." The George Baldwin McCoy unit, American Women's Legion is giving the benefit, and had secured Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Coolidge as patronesses. Mrs. Charles W. Walcott who with her husband, curator of the Smithsonian Institute, has made Alpine movies in the Canadian Rockies, is in charge of the program.

Omaha Snapshots

John R. Webster, former theatre man of Albany, N. Y., visited Omaha this week in the interests of a syndicate which he stated intended to establish new motion picture theatres in Lincoln and Kearney, Neb. He indicated that the Lincoln house will be in the business district and will cost $250,000 and that the proposed Kearney theatre will cost $100,000.

Through an arrangement by The Omaha Bee a private showing of "Life's Collateral," was given at the Brandeis theatre before a group of business men and women. The purpose of the picture is to promote the home-owning idea.

The Empress Theatre announces that beginning January 28 it will show "Thirty Days," Wally Reed's last picture.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., conferred with the Film Board of Trade during the week. Commenting on the rumored introduction of a censorship bill before the Nebraska state legislature, which is now in session, Mr. Pettijohn advised building favorable impressions with the public by careful selections of pictures and truthful advertising, rather than to fight the legislators. While in Omaha he viewed a screening of "The Flirt," given by L. R. Pierce of Universal Film exchange for H. Goldberg of the World Realty company's string of theatres.

Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood" is playing the Strand theatre for two weeks with the program limited to the feature and an overture of the same name. Prices are 75 cents for the best parquet seats and 99 cents for box seats. S Vorzimer, branch-manager of United Artists, has negotiated two attractive window displays with the Columbia Phonograph Company for the picture.

News of Butte's Exchanges

EDGAR O. BROOKS, of New York City, serial salesmanager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., was in Butte on Tuesday relative to serial sales work. Mr. Brooks is making a tour of the Western states, visiting all the large cities of the various states for the benefit of the Pathe offices and incidentally to get better acquainted with the needs peculiar to each section, hoping to establish closer relationship with the home office. Primarily he is visiting the various exhibitors campaigning for the Pathe serial pictures.

Mr. Brooks was met in Miles City by Manager Van Horn, of the Spokane and Montana offices of the Pathe. On their way to Butte they stopped off at Billings, Bozeman and Livingston. They report exhibitors generally quite optimistic for future business.

Thursday Mr. Brooks goes to Helena and Great Falls and returns to Butte before starting on the coast trip that will include Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

B. F. Cale, Pathe salesman, will accompany Mr. Brooks to Helena and Great Falls.

P. C. Hurst from the Rialto theatre at Bozeman was in Butte this week exchanging compliments with the various exchange managers and incidentally doing some film shopping.

A. H. Goetz, owner of the American theatre that recently burned at Roundup, and Mr. Anderson, manager of the American, of Roundup, were in the city this week calling on the theatre men. Mr. Goetz says he is going to rebuild the American as soon as possible.

L. J. McGenley, a Paramount salesman is touring the state in behalf of his company.

J. A. English, Pathe salesman, stationed at Billings, Mont., passed through Butte Tuesday on his way to Salt Lake.

The First National office in Butte is preparing to celebrate the fifth anniversary of its birth by having a real honest to goodness First National week. Both the American and the Rialto theatres join in the celebration by running four First Nationals in one week.

C. M. Van Horn, branch manager of the Butte and Spokane offices of Pathe, is in Butte this week. In fact, he swings like a pendulum between the two offices, visiting here every other month. Mr. Van Horn has been touring the state to get in personal touch with the exhibitors.

In the Pathe national sales contest during November and December this territory finished eighth in position. That speaks well for sales in Montana.

Omaha's Film Row News

R. L. HARRIS is identified with the Omaha branch of Goldwyn as salesman in Southern Nebraska territory.

Sam Grossman has been promoted from position of shipping clerk to field man for the local F. B. O. branch. He will cover his territory in an automobile.

The second week in January broke all records of the local Select office, according to Steve O'Brien, branch manager.

"The Third Alarm" opened at William Swan's theatre in Columbus, Neb., on the same day that this picture was opened in the Astor theatre, New York. E. C. Jensen, from F. B. O. headquarters, here a few days ago, enthused over "The Fighting Blood," twelve two-reel fight stories. The F. B. O. is placing two more salesmen in the Omaha territory—Mr. Sheppard, of the Chicago office, and Mr. Calladway, of Salt Lake.

The local offices of the Fox Film Corporation have been moved into new quarters at 1509 Chicago street, just around the corner from the Film Exchange Building. Wherefore Harry Heyman, manager, and Earl Bell, assistant, are elated over their fine offices.

Central Penn. Notes

The Palace theatre, Coatesville, has been leased for a three-year period by Ed Leggus, who already has taken control.

The Victoria theatre, Bloomsburg, has been sold for $100,000 to a syndicate of local capitalists by the Chamberlain Amusement Company, of Shamokin, which operates a chain of picture houses in Pennsylvania. John W. Larned will continue as manager. Harry L. Magee is president of the company taking over the theatre, and the other officers are: A. F. McCullon, vice president; Samuel J. Johnston, secretary; Dr. J. E. Truman, treasurer; John W. Knies, Willie Law and Charles B. Lutz, auditors. These men will constitute the board of directors.

After having been completely renovated, the Globe theatre, Scranton, a Comerford Amusement Company house, was reopened on December 28. The same company is shortly to build a theatre on the site of the Eagle Hotel property in Pittston. A new Comerford theatre in Carbondale will be opened in February.

Nute Frederick and A. C. Candor have acquired control of the Garden theatre, Lock Haven, from the Excel Amusement Company, which operates a number of theatres in the vicinity of Lock Haven and Williamsport.

In formal dedication exercises in which Burgess Milton E. Reeder expressed the appreciation of the citizens of the community, the J. F. Fahnestock theatre, in Muncy, was opened recently. It is declared to be one of the most modern theatres in Pennsylvania. It is a brick and steel building, two stories high, on a plot 29 by 138 feet.

Baltimore Brevities

Meyer Perlin has been named manager of the Flaming Arrow theatre, neighborhood house here, and expects to inaugurate a number of changes in the methods of the theatre.

Thomas D. Sorriero, manager of the Century theatre, one of the Whitehurst houses, has established voice hearings for local singers who wish to try for a place on the Century bill. The scheme was given good publicity by the newspapers, and helped the Century to further establish good-will.

Incidentally the Century is paying even more attention to the musical portion of its program under Mr. Sorriero's direction than in the past. Several vocal numbers and an orchestral selection now are run regularly as a "musical interlude" to the performances.

The Victoria theatre, under lease to the Stanley company, has established a new departure in this city with a midnight show at 12:01 A. M. Monday. There are no Sunday motion pictures in Baltimore, and heretofore performances of any kind at this hour have been left for legitimate and burlesque theatres on New Year's Eve.

The Strand theatre, for several years operated by Thomas D. Goldberg and Arthur L. Price in conjunction with the Wizard and Blue Mouse theatres, has been sold for about $100,000 to Cleveland R. Bealmear, real estate dealer. The theatre was closed recently, although the lease under which it was operated still has some time to run.

A five-story office building and store will occupy the site of the theatre if present plans are carried out, it is understood. The theatre was built about seven years ago, and for some time was controlled by the Webb interests which then also controlled the Parkway. It is said not to have been a paying investment for some time, although when first erected it was regarded as a high-class shopping district house.

Detroit Paragraphs

James R. Grainger, Vice President of the Goldwyn Film Co., paid a flying visit to Detroit on Monday of last week to confer with the local force, get a birds-eye view of the Goldwyn business hereabouts and submit to a few interviews. While here Mr. Grainger arranged for the release of "The Christian" at the Broadway-Strand early in March. Mr. Grainger also expressed his satisfaction over the business his particular company is doing in Michigan.

Sundays are big days at the first-run houses. Last Sunday, from the time of opening at 12:30 for the symphony concert until the closing hour, practically everyone of the 4,250 seats at the Capitol Theatre was occupied. At the Broadway-Strand where "The Stranger's Banquet" was on view the S. R. O. sign was in demand. The same story was told about "Dr. Jack" who was precribing his cheerfulness at the Fox-Washington. At the Adams and Madison with "Quincy Adams Sawyer" and "Making A Man," respectively, seats were available most of the day but there were times when the queue had to wait.

Better pictures and better jobs, especially the first, seem to be the reason for the present prosperity.

Jacob Cooper has taken over the management of the Criterion theatre at Oklahoma City, succeeding J. W. McLaughlin, resigned. Pat Magee will be assistant manager and actively in charge.

A restraining order was issued by the District Court at Oklahoma City January 10, restraining Jacob Cooper, manager of the Criterion theatre at Oklahoma City from showing Governor J. C. Walton inaugural films in Oklahoma City and the International, Selznick and Pathe from showing the films anywhere in the United States.

The restraining order was based on petition of Dan V. Lackey who had what are claimed to be the only official barbecue pictures, made under his personal supervision, and at a cost approximately of $5,000. Lackey claims that the pictures belong to the barbecue committee, and if any proceeds are realized from exhibition of the pictures that they will go to the committee.

Final termination of the matter will be threshed out in the courts in the near future.

Incorporation papers have been filed by Strand theatre, Tulsa, Okla.; capital stock, $10,000. Incorporators are Hazel McCoy, Gladys Brest and C. R. Thurlwell, all of Tulsa.

Canadian Chatter

THE Capitol theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been sponsoring an organization of moving picture fans which is known as the "Pals' Club," the purpose of which is to conduct social features. The club was first organized by Oral D. Clakey, when he was manager of the theatre. He was the president until he was transferred to Hamilton, Ontario. The club has been reorganized with new officers and the new president is Harold Green the conductor of the Capitol Theatre orchestra. Meetings are held at intervals in the Capitol theatre when social gatherings are arranged. Other officers include: Bill Einarsson, vice-president; Claude B. Watt, secretary-treasurer; A. Temple, assistant secretary; D. J. Noble, Harry Hills and Art Merrill, entertainment committee; Al. Seigal, C. Campbell, Nelson Sasserson and L. Link, reception committee. Several of these officers are on the staff of the theatres and the remainder are theatre boosters.

Hugo Rignold, a member of the Allen Theatre orchestra, Winnipeg, Man., has won a scholarship in the Royal Academy and London College of Music, which entitles him to two years' violin instruction in London, England, according to an announcement made by Harold Green, conductor of the Allen orchestra. The competition for this prize was open to all Canada.

L. R. Acker, proprietor of Acker's theatre, Halifax, N. S., recently came to the rescue of a stranded theatrical company by donating the use of his theatre to the players for a special show of their own at both afternoon and evening performances on a specified day. The company raised enough money to enable its members to return to their respective homes. Acker's theatre is a moving picture house.

H. M. Thomas, general supervisor of the extensive chain of theatres controlled by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, is starting out on a tour of the whole circuit of houses from Montreal, Quebec, to Victoria, B. C. Mr. Thomas returned to the Capitol theatre, Montreal, from the Winnipeg Capitol, recently. Harry Dahn is in charge of the Montreal Capitol theatre during the absence of Mr. Thomas.

Statistics of the building trades in Ontario for 1922 show that 12 moving picture theatres in the Province were affected during the past year by building contracts which called for the erecting or remodeling of the houses at a combined cost of $754,000. Figures for the whole of Canada for 1922 show that 38 moving picture theatres were constructed or rebuilt at an aggregate cost of $1,189,300.

Manager Wilson, of the Garrick theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, has appointed V. S. Einarson, A.T.C.M., as director of the Garrick Theatre orchestra. Mr. Einarson was with the second divisional concert party of the Canadian Expeditionary Force in France during the war.

The Laurier theatre, Hull, Quebec, was partially damaged by an explosion of dynamite early on the morning of Saturday, January 20, when alleged carelessness on the part of civic employes caused the explosive to be detonated on the street in front of the theatre. Other buildings on Main Street were also wrecked by the concussion and three of the workmen were injured. The proprietor of the theatre is Fred Leduc. The city has had to pay the damages.

Eastern New York Items

The little group of exchange managers and exhibitors from Albany who attended the opening of the Strand in Hudson Falls last Wednesday night had a tough time getting back home because of the storm. While the management of the house provided an extra street car for the entire distance, it was close to 6 o'clock before Albany was reached.

George Tetrault who runs the Grand in Watervliet is having a hard time these days bucking the storms first and then the skating craze, which has struck the city, next.

"Around the World in Eighteen Days" has been booked for Amsterdam and plans are now being made for the biggest exploitation seen in this section in many a day.

The Leland in Albany established a new record last week with "When Knighthood Was In Flower," all attendance records being broken night after night. The picture has been held over for this week.

William P. Allen of the local Universal Exchange is out on a three weeks' trip through Northern New York.

William Berinstein has added another house to his rapidly growing circuit, having just taken over a new theatre in Newburgh. During the last three months Mr. Berinstein has expanded very rapidly until he now has houses in Elmira, Albany, Troy, Newburgh and a new $200,000 one in course of erection in Little Falls.

The storm of last Wednesday wasn't bad enough to prevent Mrs. Milligan, owner of the motion picture theatre in Schuylerville, from attending the opening in Hudson Falls of the Strand.

A motion picture machine has just been installed at the Executive mansion in this city for the use of Governor Alfred E. Smith and family. All of the exchanges have agreed to supply pictures to the governor, the booking to be alone through the local Fox exchange.

Connecticut continues on her previously mapped out road of voluntary censorship with royal strides. Last Wednesday at a meeting of more than 50 city and state organizations in Hartford it was voted to form the Connecticut Cooperative Association for Better Motion Pictures, the body to include representatives of the public and theatre owners for review purposes. Under the present scheme at least 200 persons will be available at all times for "movie jury duty." The movement has the support of the Connecticut M. P. T. O. and the Hartford theatre men, and the censor plan is entirely distinct from any unsavory political odor.

Adolphus M. Burroughs, head of the Waverley Amusement Company, which operates a theatre at the corner of Trapelo Road and Beach street, Waverley, has filed a bill in equity in the Suffolk Superior Court in Boston to compel Isaac Shapiro, trustee of the Elko estate, to make certain repairs to the property on the claim that the present condition of the house is such that the lives of his patrons are endangered to such an extent that Belmont officials, in which town the theatre is located, might close the place up.

William P. Gray of Lewiston, Maine, president of the Maine and New Hampshire Theatres Company, has assumed the management of nine more theatres in Massachusetts, Vermont and Rhode Island. They represent the remainder of the unit owned and controlled by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The circuit now extends from Taunton, Mass., to Burlington, Vt., and from Burlington to Fort Kent, Maine. The houses taken over are the Merrimac Square, Lowell, Mass.; Empire, New Bedford, Mass.; Broadway, Chelsea, Mass.; Strand, Rutland, Vt.; Park, Richford, Vt.; Park, Barre, Vt.; Savoy, Northfield, Vt.; Strand, Pawtucket, R. I.; and Laurier, Woonsocket, R. I.

The deed transferring the Majestic theatre property on North street, Pittsfield, Mass., to the Pittsfield Palace, Inc., was recorded late last week. The new owners are Samuel and Nathaniel Goldstein, and the purchase price is given as $317,500. The Goldstein brothers have announced that they will immediately start extensive alterations, that performances will continue uninterrupted, and they are about to reduce admissions. They now operate 15 houses in New England and New York state.

The Manchester Amusement Co., a subsidiary of New England Theatres, Inc., has sold the Strand theatre, Rockland, Mass., to L. A. Rhodenizer, the theatre's former manager.

Florida Flashes

B. H. Trumbull, who operates the Egypt theatre, in St. Petersburg, was a Tampa visitor this week. Mr. Trumbull has added a large dance hall to his theatre, and says that business is "very satisfactory."

H. Pitman, and his charming wife, of Clearwater, gave Tampa's great white way the once over this week. Mr. Pitman announced that he had taken over the Dixie at Dunedin. This gives Mr. Pitman complete control of Pinellas County, with the exception of St. Petersburg. He now has two houses in Clearwater, one in Tarpon Springs, the Dunedin house and the famous winter hotel, the Belleview, at Bellaire, where he operates a De Luxe picture show for the guests. With three famous writers of motion picture plays, Rex Beach, George Ade and Sewell Ford, all living in Clearwater, it looks like Pitman could stage some nifty "personal appearances."

C. D. Cooley, Manager of the Victory theatre, Tampa, laid aside his picture program for two days this week to play the road show, "Lightnin." Next week he will have Mme. Shumann-Heink for a one day stand.

The Strand, Tampa, is billing the town like a circus for the run of "When Knighthood Was in Flower." They are also planning an elaborate lobby display.

C. B. Stoddard, the noted globe trotter and lecturer, is wintering at Ozona. He was in Tampa this week arranging dates for his lecture, which he illustrates with motion pictures and slides. He says that he will lecture in several South Florida Cities during the winter.

Fire broke out in the boiler room, back of the stage, of the Plaza theatre, St. Petersburg, Fla., last Wednesday evening, during the performance of the play "Lightnin." The smoke filled the stage and wafted out over the large audience. Milton Nobles, who plays the leading role, in the play, stepped to the foots and told the audience there was no danger and so averted a panic.

The asbestos curtain was then lowered, and the fans turned on, which blew away the smoke. In the meantime the fire department and attaches of the house succeeded in extinguishing the blaze and the play proceeded, with but very few people leaving the house.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

"The Voice from the Minaret"

First National—Seven Reels

Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

MORE radiant in her beauty than ever, rising to still higher emotional heights, gowned more gorgeously than in any previous production, Norma Talmadge is about to appear on the screens of the world in what, in our opinion, is the most entertaining picture of her career—that sure fire box office attraction, "The Voice From the Minaret," which serves to bring back Eugene O'Brien as her leading man.

Robert Hichens' famous drama has been given a wonderful setting in every way. Meticulous attention has been paid to detail. The production shows that expense was not even thought of in the transplantation to the shadow stage. It is interesting to note that Norma does not appear twice in the same gown. In every scene she shows a new style creation, each more striking than the former.

Miss Talmadge as Lady Adrienne Carlyle, the heroine of this story of tempestuous love, is not only a treat for young and old, but an object lesson in how fine a talented actress can act just by being true to life.

The action calls for several honest to goodness love scenes between the star and her screen sweetheart of other days, and well, if there had been any "Sheik" pictures with similar scenes, they would be running yet. All praise to Frank Lloyd for his admirable direction and to Frances Marion for the wellnigh flawless scenario. From a photographic viewpoint, the picture is an artistic gem. The subtitles and their backgrounds are excellent.

Never has this famous desert atmosphere been more realistically transformed to the silver sheet. The views of old Damascus, the desert, shots in India—all are masterpieces. The story is one that holds the interest throughout its entire seven thousand or more feet and we're sure that most audiences will want more when the final clinch arrives.

The Cast

Lady Adrienne Carlyle.....Norma Talmadge
Andrew Fabian.....Eugene O'Brien
Lord Leslie Carlyle.....Edwin Stevens
Bishop Ellsworth.....Winter Hall
Secretary Barry.....Carl Gerard
Countess La Fontaine.....Claire Du Brey
Lady Gilbert.....Lillian Lawrence
Selem.....Albert Presco

Adapted by Frances Marion from the novel by Robert Hichens. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Photographed by Tony Gaudio and Norbert Brodin.

The Story—Lady Adrienne flees from her tyrant husband to England, but meets Andrew Fabian on the boat and falls madly in love with him. Fabian is on his way to accompany a pilgrimage through the holy land and persuades the Lady to go also. Fabian has decided to become a minister. In the desert each confesses their love, but Adrienne is persuaded to give up Fabian. Lord Carlyle becomes seriously ill and Adrienne accompanies him to London. In a fit of revenge his lordship stages a poison plot in order to force the two to confess their love. Lord Carlyle then dies and the two return to the desert for their honeymoon—unmindful of the voice from the Minaret, calling the faithful to keep their vows.

Classification— A colorful love story of India, the desert and London.

Production Highlights—Miss Talmadge as Lady Adrienne. The convincing atmosphere of old Damascus, the desert and London. The artistic photography. The lavish interiors. The thrilling climax. The excellent direction by Frank Lloyd.

Exploitation Angles—The star. Her fine cast. Play up Norma and O'Brien in their return as the perfect lovers. Dress your lobby in Oriental style and put on an Arabian ballet or solo number as a prologue.

"Milady"

Diamant-American Releasing Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is a picturization of Dumas' novel, "Twenty Years After," which is a sequel to "The Three Musketeers." The sponsors have it that the story and action in the picture are taken up precisely where Douglas Fairbanks left off. This is a pretty broad statement in view of the fact that Doug's opus is an American production and "Milady" is a French production. If the characters. D'Artagnan, the musketeers, Richelieu, Louis XIII, Queen Anne, Buckingham and others, are all assembled here, there is a different treatment of them entirely.

The picture may be called interesting in places. Certainly it bears an authentic stamp in regard to its color, detail and costuming, and the characters live up to one's conception of them. The story, however, is highly complicated and poorly edited so that the spectator has some trouble in following it. Indeed there are times when it looks like so many illustrated subtitles. And the gaps are indicated in the manner in which the scenes shift so rapidly. There is enough action but owing to the involved plot and the slowness in which it develops the suspense never accumulates. Dumas' tale of conspiracy should have been told with a few well chosen strokes and "Speed!" should have been the slogan.

We are presented with a story of an adventuress in the employment of Richelieu whose object is to embarrass his king and bring D'Artagnan into disrepute. But one has to have one's wits about him to follow the various complications and intrigues of court and romance. There is one outstanding bit which invites suspense. This shows the adventuress escaping from the castle tower by means of a rope ladder and a boat. The subsequent shot shows her capture and the suggestion that she is beheaded.

The interpretation is of the old school technique—which means that the players swagger about a good deal. In its favor are the atmosphere, the color and costume.

The Cast

Players not mentioned. Figures include D'Artagnan, Richelieu, the three musketeers, Constance, Milady de Winter, Buckingham, Louis XIII., etc.

Players not mentioned. Figures include D'Artagnan, Richelieu, the three musketeers, Constance, Milady de Winter, Buckingham, Louis XIII. etc.

The Story—Cardinal Richelieu is desirous of embarrassing his king and D'Artagnan for political purposes. Employs Milday de Winter to help his cause. D'Artagnan, however, is faithful to his queen and sweetheart, Constance, the latter in her services as spy. Milady is captured but a traitor aids her to escape. However, she has her revenge by poisoning Constance and in turn is beheaded.

Production Highlights—The authentic details of costuming, backgrounds, etc. The scene when Milady escapes from the tower.

Exploitation Angles—This is a costume drama of old France. Title won't mean much, so bill it as Dumas sequel to "The Three Musketeers." Use an atmospheric prologue. It's a French picture and the cast isn't mentioned.

"Dollar Devils"

Schertzinger-Hodkinson—5,600 Feet

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

VICTOR SCHERTZINGER may be relied upon to make small town stories consistently diverting. Since his entrance into the directorial field, when he made some of Ray's best vehicles under the supervision of Ince, his best efforts have been along the line of small town, heart interest drama.

In "Dollar Devils," he has the advantage of having a cast of players that is well fitted to the story and including several people of no mean ability.

Chief among these is Joseph Dowling, who appears as Zannon Carthy, a leisurely, philosophical old chap, who believes that too much money is a curse—that when a man covets property he is not chasing dollars but is himself being chased by "dollar devils"; hence the title of the picture.

The action of the story is laid in a typical rural community known as Hemling, where good fellowship reigns supreme and every one is neighbor to everyone else. Here lives old Zannon, who finds much of his happiness in aiding young Jim Biggers to become an engineer.

With the advent of a crooked stock promoter, who persuades the townsmen that there is oil beneath their feet, the town goes money mad and Hemling loses its quiet serenity, much to the sorrow of old Zannon.

The oil wells go dry, however, to the old man's delight, and the town becomes as of old. Interwoven with this is the romance of Jim Biggers and an element of melodrama around the crooked "slicker" and the striking of oil.

Jim is played by Cullen Landis, who is given here the type of characterization to which he is so well adapted—that of a sensitive, shy, but ambitious youth, and he handles it sympathetically throughout.

"Devil Dollars" is a picture of interesting incident and pleasing little touches rather than powerful melodrama. It is wholesome throughout and should be an excellent family picture.

The Cast

Zannon Carthy.....Joseph Dowling
Hal Andrews.....Miles McCarthy
Mrs. Andrews.....May Wallace
Amy Andrews.....Eva Novak
Bruce Merlin.....Hallam Cooley
Jim Biggers.....Cullen Landis
Mrs. Biggers.....Lydia Knott
Helen Andrews.....Ney Farrell

Written and directed by Victor Schertzinger. Continuity by Louis Stevens. Photographed by John S. Stumar. Produced by Schertzinger Productions.

The Story—Zannon Carthy, town philosopher, aids Jim to become an engineer. Jim is infatuated with Helen, banker's daughter. A crooked promoter comes to town and starts an oil drilling scheme. Jim gets the contract for the drilling. The promoter attempts to make a getaway with the money but is foiled by Jim. Oil is struck and the town goes money mad. The wells dry up, however. Jim goes to New York, where he is successful. Helen elopes with the promoter. Ji mreturns and finds, however, that it was Amy with whom he was in love with all the time.

Classification—Small town drama with strong heart interest.

Production Highlights—The excellent small town atmosphere. The clever directorial touches. The rural party. The work of Cullen Landis and Joseph Dowling. The striking of oil.

Exploitation Angles—The cast. Teaser campaign on the title. Contest on the theme of the picture, "Is the chase for the dollar worth while?" etc. Devil ballyhoo covered with dollar signs.

"The Crusader"

Fox—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Stuart Gibson)

A CERTAIN slowness of action mars this story, but otherwise it is a highly satisfactory example of that type of Western film in which William Russell does good work. By slowness of action is not meant paucity of action, for there are plenty of what the press sheets love to call "smashing climaxes;" but Director Howard Mitchell appears to have dwelt too long and too lovingly over some of his episodes.

Scenes in the silver mine after an explosion has caved in the mouth of the shaft are first rate. Another outstanding spot in the film is that in which Russell, pursuing his enemies in a canoe, is shot over a falls after losing control of his craft in the rapids. There are some very fine locations in the exteriors, and the photography is of such high order that the most is made of all of them.

Fritzie Brunette, Russell's leading woman, is nice to look at, and is a capable actress. The supporting cast in general is quite satisfactory, and Gertrude Claire's characterization of the mother in the story is excellent indeed.

As to whether these stories of noble young men who yearn for the bright lights and then suddenly find themselves content with the dim ones; these virile youngsters who set out to seek a fortune for one girl and wind up by handing her over to another man and falling in love with another girl, are quite natural, doesn't make much difference so long as they are competently presented; and this one is.

The Cast

Peter Brent	William Russell
Mary Dart	Helen Ferguson
Jim Symonds	George Webb
Bob Jephson	Carl Gantvoort
Mrs. Brent	Gertrude Claire
"Gunboat" Clark	Fred Kohler
Alice	Fritzi Brunette
Louis Bradeaux	Ralph Colinger

Story by Allen Sullivan. Scenario by William K. Howard. Directed by Howard Mitchell. Photography by David Abels.

The Story—Peter Brent, only support of his mother, goes to a silver country to prospect, and finds silver. He breaks up the efforts of scoundrels to exploit the mine at the expense of the people, and wins the love of a girl and his mother's commendation.

Classification—Drama of the silver country, with plenty of love interest.

Production Highlights—The canoe trip through the rapids and over the falls. The explosion in the mine, and the subsequent escape. The appearance at the town hall where the villain is selling stock in the mine he has wrecked. Some magnificent exterior shots.

Exploitation Angles—Play up William Russell's athletic ability. Point out the fact that this "crusader" for the right found his place in the country, rather than the city, despite his expectation to the contrary.

Drawing Power—Will please wherever they like dramas of the west as distinguished from "Westerns."

"The Darling of the Rich"

Whitman Bennett—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS picture presents a title which attracts attention and a cast which will attract more than passing notice—what with Betty Blythe, Leslie Austin, Albert Hackett, Gladys Leslie and Montague Love lending their personalities to the offering. The story, however, is not well constructed, for it shows several gaps in its development and is not entirely plausible. Any spectator will wonder over one of the richest men in New York being hoodwinked by a gang of crooks or not being shrewd enough to discover that he is taking part in an affair which features a woman auctioning herself off to the highest bidder.

It appears to us that there are too many strings to the story which taxes the director to knit them together. Jack Adolfi has done as well as possible under the circumstances. He was burdened in the first place with a scenario which lacks any real, outstanding highlights. It is the old idea of a girl left penniless whose desires are bound up with luxuries. She comes to New York and is hired by a gang of crooks to pose as a princess who is selling her jewels. Of course she doesn't know that the gems are stolen. The idea, not being inspired, does not tax the spectator to use his imagination. In other words it is just an ordinary story which will find its appeal among the average patrons—the type of patrons who are not looking for plausibility and do not miss it if it is absent.

The romance is the best part of the picture. The girl meets the man who once saved her life and encourages him. The action presents some melodramatic episodes in order that the young man may rescue his erstwhile sweetheart. He beats his rival and forgives the girl after her crooked friends are disclosed in their true colors. The picture carries a good production, there being an air of opulence in several of the backgrounds, and Betty Blythe displays a wardrobe which will excite admiration among feminine patrons. As for the acting it is entirely competent. Some may wonder, however, over a few of the characters who are not clearly defined.

The Cast

Charmion Winship	Betty Blythe
Lizzie Callahan	Gladys Leslie
Jane Winship	Jane Jennings
Peyton Martin	Montagu Love
Torrence Welch	Charles Gerard
Mason Lawrence	Leslie Austin
Dippy Helen	Julia Swayne Gordon
Fred Winship	Albert Hackett
Mike Callahan	Walter Walker
Detective	A. Gowin
The Baby	Rita Maurice

By Dorothy Farnum. Directed by Jack Adolfi. Scenario by Dorothy Farnum. Photographed by Edward Paul. Produced by Whitman Bennett.

The Story—Treats of a girl who is left penniless by her father. Her desire for riches leads her to New York where she is employed by crooks to pose as a princess who is selling her jewels for relief money. She is unaware that the jewels have been stolen. The girl meets her erstwhile lover who once saved her life, though she continues the disguise. A rich suitor and the young man are rivals for her hand, and the latter wins. He forgives her when her crook friends are exposed.

Classification—Melodrama featuring girl's fight with band of crooks. Carries romance. Poor girl's desire for luxury.

Production Highlights—First rate acting by well known players. Fair suspense. Scenic backgrounds.

Exploitation Angles—The cast looks like the best angle to exploit here. Mention the players, calling attention to Betty Blythe's wardrobe. Use a teaser campaign based upon the age-old question—"Should a girl marry for love or riches?" You might stage a fashion show for a prologue.

Drawing Power—Best suited for neighborhood houses. Also good for downtown houses featuring daily change of program.

"Cross Roads"

W. M. Smith Productions—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE we have an average western laid along the Mexican border—which introduces the hero in the role of a sheriff who is forced to bow to a villain of the land below the Rio Grande because the latter has forged his papers, thus making himself the elected officer. A novelty in the characterization is offered in the figure of the heroine, a friendless girl who is supposed to bring bad luck to anyone who associates with her. To complete the characters there is the Mexican's faithful retainer, a Yaqui Indian, who turns traitor eventually, and helps his American friend.

The story develops in an orthodox fashion without releasing any conspicuous high lights, but carrying a suitable amount of action for houses which feature a daily change of program. It is just another western of the Franklyn Farnum series. And in the cast are Shorty Hamilton, who looks out of place as the villain if one remembers that his forte is comedy; Al Hart, who, as the Indian, has not paid particular attention to his make-up, and Genevieve Berte is the girl. She gives the best performance—in that she appears more convincing that the others.

It is the villain's object to embarrass the real sheriff. And he causes the latter to kill a man in self-defense. However, the Westerner escapes and is befriended by the girl. And so to the pursuit by the wily Mex and his gang. He is imprisoned, but the girl obtains a pardon from the governor and the Indian offers his aid. The hero's commission is restored and the happy ending is in sight.

It is a type of story which has become familiar, yet this must not be held against it, considering the fact that the majority of westerns follow a well-regulated pattern. It didn't cost much money and was made for a certain clientele. And those who see it will doubtless enjoy it as well as anything else of its kind.

The Cast

Hero	Franklyn Farnum
Onate	Shorty Hamilton
The Yaqui	Al Hart
Jackie	Genevieve Berte

Produced by W. M. Smith. Released on State Rights.

The Story—Westerner is prevented from assuming office of sheriff because wily Mexican forges his papers thus electing himself to office. The real sheriff is forced to kill a man in self defense and the psuedo sheriff captures him. A friendless girl befriends the hero and obtains a pardon. Freed, he assumes office and proffers his love.

Classification—Typical western melodrama.

Production Highlights—The appropriate locations. The appealing work of Genevieve Berte as the heroine. The action, sufficient for story of this type.

Exploitation Angles—Title might suggest a teaser campaign. Bill it as a snappy western laid in the genuine country of its locale. Use the cowboy quartette.

Drawing Power—Suitable for second and third class downtown houses and in small town houses.

"The First Degree"

Universal—4,395 Feet

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

THERE is a direct swiftness of action about "The First Degree" that seemed to us distinctly enjoyable. It has been allowed to run natural length and there is scarcely a foot of padding in it. In fact, we confess to a distinct partiality toward these recent Universal five-reelers. With pleasing stories, well typed casts and modest footage, they are excellent entertainment.

Our real surprise, however, came in the work done by Frank Mayo as Sam Purdy, an ex-convict and sheep farmer. He appears in a guise quite different from his usual debonair appearance and does a real piece of character acting, a bit overstressed in points, perhaps, but a notable advance.

The story has been adapted by George Randolph Chester from a George Pattullo story, "The Summons." It is one of those "story within a story" affairs, the action opening in a jury room, where Sam Purdy relates the story which is the basis of the picture.

Director Edward Sedgwick has gotten a pleasing degree of realism in these grand jury scenes, and the small town atmosphere is first rate. In spots, he has permitted his players to over-act, notably Miss Breamer, but as a whole he has maintained an excellent melodramatic tempo.

The central situation of the picture is that of a man falsely accused of robbing the bank in which he is employed, sent to prison for a year, and then hounded from town to town by his blackmailing brother, who is in love with the same girl. Finally, in a fit of anger, he strikes his brother and presumably has killed him.

This, in itself, does not sound especially new, but the novel twist arises from the fact that at the opening of the picture Purdy is summoned to testify before the Grand Jury concerning the theft of some of his sheep. Conscience stricken, he believes he is wanted for murder, and tells the whole story of his persecution. The jury knows nothing of the murder, but he finds only sympathy and tolerance on their part. The sheep stealing suspect is then brought in and proves to be the erring brother, alive. A happy reunion follows with the girl who has been waiting and they decide to remain in the friendly little community.

Philo McCullough is a properly villainous brother and the other members of the cast are satisfactory.

The Story—Sam Purdy, who believes he has killed his brother, is summoned before the Grand Jury to testify in a sheep stealing case. He assumes that he is wanted for the murder, and confesses, pleading in extenuation the persecution which he has suffered at his brother's hands. He tells the jury how his brother railroaded him to prison for a crime of which he is innocent and has since blackmailed him. The jury declines to indict him. The brother then shows up, and is indicted for sheep stealing and blackmailing. Sam is then re-united with the sweetheart who has been waiting for him.

Classification—Small town melodrama with heart interest.

Production Highlights—Sam's confession of murder. The bank robbery. The fight in the shack. The return of the brother alive. The character portrayal of Frank Mayo.

Exploitation Angles—The story, which ran in the Saturday Evening Post, and the author, George Pattullo. The three principal players. The melodramatic situation about which the story revolved.

Drawing Power—Suitable for second class city houses and neighborhood and small town theatres.

"The Footlight Ranger"

Fox—4,800 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS picture is such a sudden departure from what Charles Jones has offered in the past that it will be hard to reconcile his followers to it. It wouldn't be so difficult if he had been allowed to interpret all kinds of stories. But he has done so well in "up and at 'em" westerns—westerns with snappy action—that his patrons will be disappointed in "The Footlight Ranger," which, compared to his previous subjects, is really colorless. In fact, Jones doesn't have much opportunity to show his customary stuff.

The idea is antiquated, showing, as it does, an infatuated youth following an actress to New York, where he must needs save her from attack from a vicious manager—the only difference in the characterization being the identity of the hero, who is a cowboy here. This type of story and character doesn't fit a star who is usually up and doing. If he must show his versatility, let him come forth in actionful melodramas like "The Fast Mail." There isn't much incident here, which makes the picture slow-moving and it is so easy to anticipate that the spectator can guess the outcome from the start. Not even when the cowboy is shown protecting the girl does any suspense enter to keep you sufficiently interested.

To introduce a punch, the climax reveals the vicious manager's intentions—which are broadly planted. He will star her for a price, which, of course, is her virtue. The cowboy had helped her when she was stranded in the West and digs up enough money to pay her expenses East. And when the climax is finished he takes her back to the open spaces. Technically the picture is first rate—considering its atmosphere, backgrounds, lighting and photography.

The idea is shopworn and the director hasn't added any original touches to lift it out of the ordinary class. The cast, comprising Fritzi Brunette, Lillian Langdon and Henry Barrows, is competent enough.

The Cast

Bill Moreland.....Charles Jones
Janet Ainslee.....Fritzi Brunette
Al Brownley.....James Mason
Nellie Andrews.....Lillian Langdon
Miss Amelia.....Lydia Yeamans Titus
Divid Marsh.....Henry Barrows

By Dorothy Yost. Directed by Scott Dunlap. Photographed by Dev. Jennings. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Cowboy become enamored with stranded actress. Pays her expenses East and follows her. Acts as her protector against a vicious manager and defeats the latter's purpose in making her a star through paying the price.

Classification—Familiar formula of hero protecting actress from vicious manager.

Production Highlights—The competent cast. The detail. The atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Star has established a following. Tell them that he appears in a different role from which he is usually identified. Use a teaser campaign based upon title.

Drawing Power—Best suited for second class downtown houses. Will probably draw better in small towns than in cities.

"Crinoline and Romance"

Metro—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE sentimental flavor of the days when our grandmothers wore crinolines is balanced with the frank expression of the styles which are favored today, thus bringing forth a contrast which may be appreciated when the heroine says to the chivalrous youth: "A man is a gentleman according to the style she affects." This is not the actual conversation, but the meaning may be interpreted as the same. It is a light, frolicsome comedy romance—one ideally suited to Viola Dana's personality. This star is one actress who is fortunate in having material which fits her.

Harry Beaumont has treated the slight plot so that it provokes interest most of the way. It starts off with a flair for pathos, showing a Southern colonel of the old school, keeping his grandchild from communion with the outside world and bringing her up in crinolines because her mother had married without his consent. The girl rebels and runs away accompanied by mammy, the servant. And she goes just over the border of the estate to her aunt's home, which harbors a group of youngsters on a party—youngsters who are the last word in jazz expression. The crinoline costume of our quaint heroine dazzles the eyes of the impressionable cake-eaters. And the spiteful young things who are there with rolled stockings, etc., proceed to use their claws. They would embarrass the girl. But she shows them up with a lot of playful pranks.

The bathing pool uses up nearly a reel, and a dance finishes it. After which the story verges on the farcical when the heroine returns home—followed by two rival suitors, who bring bags and baggage. Then it is give and take between them—with the girl having a great time trying to decide which one she prefers. She finally chooses the more honorable one because he has played fair in a fake duel. The atmosphere is very good. So are the exteriors, interiors and detail.

But the best acting is turned in by Claude Gillingwater as an old-time Southern colonel who wears long mustachios and drinks mint juleps. Somehow he appears convincing even though the type is mostly associated with the theatre.

The Cast

Miss Emmy Lou.....Viola Dana
Col. Charles E. Cavanaugh.....Claude Gillingwater
Davis Jordan.....John Bowers
Augustus Biddle.....Allan Forrest
Kitty Biddle.....Betty Francisco
Birdie Bevans.....Mildred June
Mrs. Kate Wimbleton.....Lillian Lawrence
Sibil Vane.....Gertrude Short
Abigail.....Lillian Leighton
Uncle Mose.....Nick Cogley

By Bernard McConville. Scenario by Bernard McConville. Directed by Harry Beaumont. Photographed by John Arnold. Produced by Metro.

The Story—Treats of secluded girl brought up in crinolines and therefore ignorant of the outside world. Rebels when she sees an attractive youth and runs away to her aunt's home where she experiences the sensations of living up to jazz ideas. Returns home to please her grandfather. Soon after two rival suitors follow and battle for her heart and hand. The most honorable of the pair wins.

Classification—Comedy romance which touches pathos at times and borders upon farce in its concluding reels. Features the contrast between old-fashioned customs and styles and the modern jazz ideas.

Production Highlights—The good direction—well emphasized in slight plot. The jazz scenes. The atmosphere of the South. The good detail. Claude Gillingwater's good sketch of befo' de war type of colonel.

Exploitation Angles—Suggests atmospheric prologue, showing contrast between jazz manners and old-fashioned days of crinolines. Suggests dancing of old times and the modern era. Also suggests a nifty teaser campaign and ballyhoo stunts. Ushers might be garbed in crinolines.

Drawing Power—Will please those who do not expect something heavy. Best suited for feminine audiences and neighborhood houses.

"Fighting Blood" Series—First Three

"Fighting Blood"—"The Knight in Gale" and "Six Second Smith"—F. B. O.—Two Reels Each

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

SOMETHING to look forward to is the promise that there are to be nine more rounds of the "Fighting Blood" Series, two reelers full of action, humor and impregnated with human interest. Nine more as good as the first three is no small order, for the samples are "all wool, a yard wide and true blue to life" screen entertainments.

The initial offering is "Fighting Blood," introducing George O'Hara in the role of Gale Galen, athletic hero, otherwise an ambitious young man, perfect specimen of American youth who might serve to illustrate a slogan "live right, think right, do right and look like this." The newcomer in a small town is also endowed with good looks and appealing personality, so that all he lacks is what he is after, a complete education.

Finding his friend, whom Galen seeks in the village, gone, the traveler secures his friend's old position of soda clerk in a drug store. There are incidents leading up to Galen being forced to deliver ice cream to the home of a village belle who is giving a party and has refused to allow her girl friend to ask the soda clerk to come as a guest. It happens, however, that just as Galen is leaving he sees his girl being annoyed by an outsider, known to the sporting world as K. O. Kelly, champion welterweight. One blow from Galen and out goes Kayo, which interests Kayo's manager to the extent that he keeps an eye on Galen, with a purpose.

In the second "Knight in Gale," Galen is rescued from jail, where he was sent, unjustly, for beating up his rival, not on account of the girl, altogether, but for cruelty. Nate Shiro, the promoter, pays Galen's fine on condition that the boy train to fight. The punishment Galen takes before he feels at home in trunks and gloves keeps the interest boiling. When he finally discovers his opponent's skill is brute strength rather than brains, he lands a swing, supplying the picture, also with a "punch." His reputation begins and soon Galen answers to the title of "Six Second Smith."

In the third, his professional bout terminates in knocking out a pugilistic terror in the first round. Later, Galen's mind acts as quickly as his fists, when he saves the populace, attending a Church Bazaar, from "hold up" men, and makes himself solid with the preacher.

There are some important characters besides Galen, skillfully played by George O'Hara. This young man has a start in life as a screen actor. In addition, there is Clara Horton, as Judy Wilcox, the "girl;" Rags Dempster, Galen's rival, which Arthur Rankin plays well, although his personal appeal may be a bit too marked. K. O. Kelly, played by Kit Guard, a "knock out" in the part, even if as a fighter he succumbs to youth and brains; the proprietor of the drug store, Ajariah Stubbs, splendidly played by William Courtright, and as Nate Shapiro, the fight promoter, Albert Cooke breaks the record for combination of type and ability.

Speed, speed and just enough "fight" to keep one alert, amused and entertained. Splendid direction, photography and logic; sub-titles that do a noble bit in keeping the humor as fast as the action. There is nothing offensive, on the contrary, these fight pictures carry a moral, embrace sufficient love interest and human-interest touches to make them ideal action offerings.

"One Stolen Night"

Vitagraph—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

WHEN it comes to portraying a diversity of roles and improving on each successive bit of screen portraiture, one must needs hand the palm to Alice Calhoun, who during her not very long shadow stage career has assumed a wide variety of characters and been entertaining in an unusually high percentage of them. Here she plays an American girl who goes abroad, arrives on the edge of the desert, there meets the inevitable sheik, falls in love instantly with him, steals to her room, dons a costume a la desert, dashes into the romantic night, meets her "perfect lover," and in spite of straight-laced parents, enjoys "one stolen night" which also proves a thrilling one for the young lady.

Robert Ensminger who directed the picture, has put some real pep into some of the desert fight moments and has provided the story with a convincing Bedouin background. The scenes at the Beni Mora market place is unusually well staged and some of the types used very much like one would find in a desert town.

The native dance scene is a colorful bit and well lighted. The attack on the two lovers by Amund and his band is a dramatic situation as is the kidnapping of the heroine by this dark-faced tyrant. There is an old temple replica in the latter part of the picture which is one of the best sets of its kind seen in a long while. The story has a surprise ending, the "perfect lover," the sheik, turns out to be the diplomatic official the parents want the girl to marry and who as a subtitle explains is often forced to don native garments and appear among the people. "One Stolen Night" is a good program picture.

The Cast

Diantha Ebberly.....Alice Calhoun
Herbert Medford.....Herbert Heyes
Horace Ebberly.....Otto Hoffman
Mrs. Ebberly.....Adele Farrington
Sheik Amud.....Russ Powell

Adapted from D. D. Calhoun's story, "The Arab." Scenario by Bradley J. Smollen. Directed by Robert Ensminger. Photographed by Steve Smith, Jr.

The Story—Diantha Allen, abroad with her parents, arrives at a town on the edge of the desert, expecting to meet her fiance, whom she knows she does not love. She is set upon by beggars in the market place and rescued by a dashing son of the desert. She falls in love with him. Later they ride into the night. They are attacked and the heroine carried off. The hero is wounded. Recovering he goes to the rescue. He discloses that he is Diantha's fiance. Happiness.

Classification—A romantic drama of "The Sheik" type.

Production Highlights—Miss Calhoun's work as Diantha Allen. The attack on the lovers by the bandits. The disclosure that "the perfect lover" is her fiance. The convincing Arabian atmosphere. The excellent photography. The good direction.

Exploition Angles—Put a man on the street in "Sheik" garments with suitable advertising. Dress up your lobby in Arabian style. Put on an Oriental dance as a prologue. Play up Alice Calhoun's name. She has a host of admirers.

Drawing Power—A picture suitable for second class first run downtown theatres, neighborhood houses and towns.

"Canyon of the Fools"

F. B. O.—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HARRY CAREY has been doing so well the past season that one looks forward to seeing his pictures. Take his latest, "Canyon of the Fools," for example. There is nothing offered here which has not been shown before. We have the victim of a frame-up who vows vengeance against the man who framed him—an idea which is involved with a feud between prospectors—and the whole action set against western backgrounds. Yet the story has been developed in such an interesting manner, releasing a deal of typically Carey incident and finishing with a climax which carries quite a melodramatic sweep, that the attention is held throughout.

The introductory scenes present a good slice of humor executed in the star's quaint manner. He is a hobo who hops off the train with an eye upon the sheriff. And the comedy between them starts the picture with a punch. The hobo meets his erstwhile sweetheart who has come West to meet her fiance, a man who is promoting some villainous scheme under an assumed name. It doesn't take any imagination to suspect him as the man who framed the hero. And after Carey shows his courage in saving a Mexican girl from an ardent admirer, the sheriff makes him a deputy whose duty is to capture the outlaws who are smuggling arms, etc., into Mexico.

For a counterplot there is the feud between a pair of elderly prospectors, and the deputy offers his services to the one who has played square. There isn't much riding and shooting until the climax—when enough of these western qualities are exposed to invite a volume of suspense. Carey gets on the track of the villain and his gang and traps them near a dam. His men appropriate a machine gun from the enemy and use it with deadly effect in puncturing the dam and releasing the flood. It is a thrilling touch and suggests that considerable danger was lived through to make it realistic.

A vivid rainstorm helps in making the action vital. You don't miss the romance much, nor the undeveloped scenes between the girl and the villain. It is one of Carey's best—which means that it will please almost any crowd.

The Cast

Bob.....Harry Carey
May.....Marguerite Clayton
Jim Harper } Polhill } .....Fred Stanton
Terragas.....Joseph Harris
Maricopia.....Jack Curtis
Inky.....Carmen Arselle
Swasey.....Charles J. LeMoyne
Knute.....Vester Pegg
Sproul.....Murdock McQuarrie
Aurelia.....Mignonne Golden

By Richard Matthews Hallet. Scenorio by John W. Gray. Directed by Val Paul. Photographed by Wm. Thornley and Robert DeGrasse. Produced by F. B. O.

The Story—Hero has been framed and goes West to search for the man responsible for his disgrace. Meets his old sweetheart who is the fiancee of the villain, the latter appearing under an assumed name. The hero gets involved in a quarrel between Mexican lovers and is locked up but sheriff allows him his freedom if he will capture the bandits. The hero succeeds after many difficulties and exposes the real crook. He wins the girl.

Classification—Western melodrama carrying intrigue based upon capture of bandits and flavored with romance.

Production Highlights—The introductory scenes when Care youtwits the sheriff. The atmosphere. The climax presenting a posse storming the retreat of the bandits and shooting up the dam causing the waters to burst forth. Much action.

Exploitation Angles—Emphasize that Harry Carey has likely story here—one characteristic of his past features. Star has a following. So concentrate upon his name in all advertising. Use the thrilling climax in your teaser copy.

Drawing Power—Good for any second class downtown house.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"The Champeen"

(Our Gang-Pathe—Two Reels)

THE title is not difficult to recognize, since champions from Sullivan down have been described as "the champeen," by fight fans, and this two reeler is principally about how Sunshine Sammy became a promoter and staged a non-professional bout, with two tiny blacks as opponents. The title describes not only the action, but the picture as a whole, for it is the "champeen" of its kind.

The usual juvenile cast, including Freckles Daniels, Jackie Davis, Little Farina and the rest, are all present in roles designed to accentuate, particularly their respective abilities.

Sunshine Sammy gets in trouble "swiping" apples. When finally caught by a policeman, he is ordered to pay the fruit man one dollar, if Sammy would keep out of jail. He happens into a training quarters, where he learns that the men who make the real money in connection with a fight, are the promoters. Then, he finds Freckles and Jackie about to go to the mat over the affections of a golden-haired little girl, which decides Sammy upon staging a prize fight. Therefore, the professional tricks he picks up with amusing alacrity, keeps the action fast and the comedy at an even tempo. This one will get many a hearty laugh from fight fans, and delight children.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Pop Tuttle, Detekative"

(Plum Center Comedy-F. B. O.—Two Reels)

HERE we have Pop Tuttle, the aged, but agile jack-of-all-trades of Plum Center, a graduate, by heck, of the Hawkshaw Detective College. There has been a lot of high-handed thievin' going on in the community and Pop and big Tillie are determined to put a stop to it. So when the old boy with the youthful ideas, gets his "detekative" outfit by mail he starts right out to catch the suspect. Pop doesn't fool Nifty Ned for a minute. In fact the crook makes him a party to the crime. Tuttle is handcuffed with his own instruments.

But what of Tillie? When Nifty Ned puts his hand through the gap in the fence to pick up the loot, the big girl puts the extra set of hand-cuffs on him. And Pop is highly elated. The comedy is good burlesque of rural doings, though there isn't sustained humor in the scenes. However, it should make a happy filler for most any program.—LAURENCE REID.

Pathe Review No. 4

(Pathe—One Reel)

EXCEPTIONAL photography and beautifully selected backgrounds, illustrate William Cullen Bryant's famous poem, "The Death of Flowers," and forms the major part of this reel. There follows a funeral procession of a Chinaman, who, in order to provide a fitting funeral for himself, saved all his life and deposited half his earnings to his funeral fund. The procession and customs embraced thereto, carry unusual interest. "Art a la Mode" describes Bonnie McLeary, sculptress, molding a statue, making changes and showing details of the work. The reel concludes with a study of odd fish, called puffer fish for reasons the pictures show.

Lloyd Hamilton in a scene from "Extra Extra," forthcoming Hamilton comedy for Educational release.

"When Knights Were Cold"

(Stan Laurel Comedy-Metro—Two Reels)

"ROBIN HOOD" is coming in for burlesque these days. Here is Stan Laurel wearing the mantle of the Sherwood Forest robber and carrying on in extravagant fashion. The piece is not so funny as it is unique. And it presents burlesques of most everything which pertained to the days of chivalry—even to the famous episode of William Tell and the shooting of the apple with bow and arrow. Where it is unique is noticeable in the summoning of the clan a la D. W. The horses, mules and other animals are so many skins which cover two men to the skin after the manner of vaudeville or circus burlesque. And they charge and jump over the barriers. The interiors might be put down as fair reproductions of medieval sets. In all it is a burlesque of an old-time extravaganza with the humor too labored, not only in the gags and incident, but in the captions and names of the characters (Epsom is one, Pluto another) to get over in the metropolitan house.—LAURENCE REID.

"Cheating the Cheaters"

(Aesop's Fable-Pathe—One Reel)

THERE is some clever cartoon work in this Fable, with the characters Henry Cat, Fido Dog and Milton Mouse in the leading roles. The three plan to steal some frankfurters from a delicatessen shop. Through the scheme of Milton Mouse they succeed. Then they encounter difficulties with a different kind of thief, a milk dealer who advertises pure milk, but adulterates it with water. The fable brings out the old adage, "It takes a thief to know a thief."—LILLIAN GALE.

"Once Over"

(Pollard-Pathe—One Reel)

HERE we have Snub Pollard as an apprentice barber.

A woman who would be beautiful and isn't, comes in for beauty treatment. By the use of a mirror frame, she looks into what she believes is a reflection of her own improvement, but is really seeing pretty Jobyna. When she arrives home, the results of her treatment cause the husband to go in search of those responsible. A riot ensues. There are more customers who suffer rather disagreeable treatment, a little too far fetched to be funny. However, the kind of work followers of slap-stick would possibly enjoy. Not offensive enough to taboo, but not particularly well adapted for refined audiences.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Smoked Out"

(Range Rider Series-Pathe—Two Reels)

THESE pictures have been holding a pretty even tempo all along, always containing a well-fought fight, some splendid scenic background and sufficient plot to weave nicely into two reels. However, "Smoked Out" is one of the best insofar as it has an unusual amount of human interest and stages the best fight seen in the series.

Leo Maloney, as a Ranger, is about to prepare for the night, when a stranger, evidently pretty well beaten up, staggers into camp. He explains he is trying to reach his mother before she dies, and directs the Ranger how to take him home. Upon arriving, the doctor has given little hope unless the son returns. So as there is little time to lose, Maloney is bound to impersonate the son and brother in order to prolong the woman's life until her own son can be made presentable. He has been a victim of foul play, and not until the barn in which the son is resting is set afire by the imposters (who desire to steal the ranch from the widowed woman) is extinguished at the risk of Maloney's life, are the villains caught in their own trap. A splendid fight ensues just before the end and the stranger's pretty sister seems due reason for Maloney to remain near the ranch, if not the real son, a prospective son-in-law.—LILLIAN GALE.

"By Lantern Light"

Bruce—Educational—One Reel

THIS describes a happening, disrupting an entire family, dwellers of a modest home on the Oregon sea coast, not far from "Big Boulder," a gigantic rock. The picture first acquaints spectators with the rock, then describes the tides during certain periods, when danger lurks in the incoming waves. The father warns the boys about going too close to "Big Boulder." Later, the mother dispatches the boys after the milk-cow, and the children, for a lark, take the way that leads them into a cave, from which they are unable to escape when, meantime high tide fills the cave and the children face death. A night fog creeps along the coast, the boys do not return, so a search party is formed, with only lantern rays piercing the intense darkness. A brave girl, perhaps an older sister, remembers the favorite haunt of the boys and finds them in the cave, herself becoming a prisoner. Finally, when the tide turns, a rescue is made. During the search a vivid description of the rock-bound coast and treacherous waters shares the interest the rescue party evokes. A splendid one reel that may be described as unique.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Egg"

(Metro—Two Reels)

MOTION picture comedies which twit their more dignified, but often quite as funny, brothers, the serious dray-mahs, usually are marked by some honest laughs; and this one, in which Stan Laurel is starred, is no exception. There are a dozen new twists, odd conceits, quaint turns of burlesque, about it, and these are emphasized by the pompous solemnity of the plot, which concerns a deep-dyed villain, a beautiful young heiress, and the poor but honest fellow who saves the heiress' father from the villain and of course wins the girl.—STUART GIBSON.

"Jenkins and the Mutt"

(Bruce-Educational—One Reel)

JENKINS, a hen-pecked man at home and a clerk when at business, takes a liking to a dog. His wife refuses to share the affection and orders her husband to do away with the harmless fellow. Jenkins begs to feed the dog before turning him out, which the wife also refuses and tells Jenkins he will not get any supper until he has lost the intruder. Which is the reason why Jenkins starts wandering over the beautiful western country, trying every possible way to part company with the canine friend. It does not work, for even when Jenkins decides to drown the dog. the shaggy friend soon returns, with a friendly wag of the tail. So the two keep wandering over hills, mountains and vales. Realizing that having been out all night will heap more blame upon him, Jenkins becomes a regular wanderer, his dog a constant companion. Some months later, Jenkins suffers an attack of "conscience," goes back to his old home and finds there a pleasant faced woman who informs him that Mrs. Jenkins departed long before and left no address. So back to the accidentally discovered peace, Jenkins has been enjoying meantime, he returns, happy in having tried to do his duty, happier to find that he is free to wander on, the faithful dog his companion.

It would be futile, indeed, to attempt a description of the scenic beauty contained in this reel. It illustrates the advice "See America First."

LILLIAN GALE.

"Second Childhood"

(Christie-Educational—Two Reels)

A LAUGHABLE farce with Bobby Vernon at his best, splendidly supported and in a comedy that has been well directed.

Vernon is cast as "Jimmie," the junior partner of "Jack," played by Earl Rodney. It would seem the firm have had difficulty in making "ends meet," and Jack has deceived his rich uncle with a story about his youngster, whom he calls "Oscar" and the boys have been getting by by the use of checks Uncle has sent for Oscar. When suddenly comes the word that Uncle is about to arrive, bringing little Violet (Charlotte Stevens), to play with little Oscar. The only way to save their business is to dress Jimmie up in youngster's clothes and represent him as "little Oscar." This is the cause of many embarrassing and amusing situations, especially since Jimmie is engaged to a professional dancer to whom Uncle begins paying marked attention.

There is considerable plot, so that the laughs are not forced, nor situations entirely without reason. On the contrary, the development is unusual for this kind of comedy, resulting in a very entertaining two-reeler of general appeal.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Terrible Tree"

(Sarg-Educational—One Reel)

A PARTICULARLY good novelty reel for matinees or entertainment designed to interest children. It is very amusing and one of the best of the series, moves in perfect sequence and rehearses the old situation of the contrite husband who endeavors to explain his delay in getting home, to an exacting wife. In addition, each sub-title is good for a laugh from grown folk as well as from the younger patrons. —LILLIAN GALE.

Scene from "Second Childhood," Educational-Christie comedy, featuring Bobby Vernon.

"Rough Going"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

OF the two reels of film consumed in this "drama," certainly more than one reel must be occupied by a series of "chases" in which a group of men on horseback is photographed from above, below, each side, the front, the rear and all other possible angles. It reminds an old movie-goer somewhat of that masterpiece of 1906 or thereabout, "The Great Train Robbery." But there is one series of shots of a galloping horse ridden by Leo Maloney which is enough to make for interest. The animal is superb and the camera has caught to a far more than usual extent the tremendous power exerted by a horse moving at top speed. The film may be of some value as padding at the end of a show; having seen it, an audience ought to be glad to leave.—STUART GIBSON.

"Bumps"

(Educational—One Reel)

BECAUSE he guessed the exact number of beans in the huge glass jar of a window, Jimmie Adams, in this rapid comedy, wins a Ford coupe. That suits the school teacher, a pretty girl, whose mathematical training failed her when she tried to count the beans by rule, and failed to win the coveted prize, because the winner has a heart for her and she knows she will be able to use the car as her own.

But when the two start out they have all the usual automobile troubles and then some. A great deal of it is planned by a rival who has just returned from Greece, where he studied to become a waiter.

The title "Bumps" is appropriate. The flivver "bumps" all the sentiment into amusing situations, but the villain's plans go wrong; Jimmie wins the girl as well as the Ford and all ends happily.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Women First"

(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS is a typical motion picture comedy. It is very much like several hundred other films, the chief differences between them all being well nigh indistinguishable. Lee Moran is a hotel clerk in one of those wayside establishments so frequent in the movies and so infrequent everywhere else. He has a series of episodes of an exciting and mildly amusing character. They conclude with a fire in the hotel in which, after more incidents, he saves the owner's daughter and is left to a life of wealth and love. It is unfortunate that so many of the two-reelers must rely so largely on old stuff. They do get monotonous after a time ,and new ideas seem to be almost pathetically noticeable by their absence.—STUART GIBSON.

"A Rough Winter"

(Pollard-Pathe—Two Reels)

BESIDES being funny in itself, this is a clever travesty on "Nanook of the North," and is due for a great deal of popularity in the not far distant warm weather. Pollard, who is amusingly described by action, as the coldest man in the world, has difficulty finding any place that is comfortable. The first is a street scene on Christmas eve, in what might be the slums of a fairly large town. Pollard promises to play Santa Claus, and experiences many laughable difficulties, getting into the wrong tenements through the wrong chimney. At length, the landlord dispossesses the girl (Marie Mosquini), and small child and by hook and crook the three make a get away by a freight train labeled "To Florida." But there had been a mistake. Instead, they landed in Iceland. A time lapse of several years in a two reeler is unique in itself, but it appears the hard-hearted landlord discovers the "little mother" of the youngster is really his daughter and the younger child his infant son, the children having been stolen from him one Christmas eve long ago. He goes in pursuit of his children, which takes him to Iceland also. There some more funny things occur in connection with the modes of living in close proximity of the North Pole, and a final reconciliation leads to a happy and laughable ending.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Rookies"

(Universal—Two Reels)

IT seems almost incredible that Brownie, that compact, bright-faced dog, is not a human being; it seems entirely incredible that we, members of the classification homo sapiens, can look at ourselves and then at Brownie and refer to him as "one of the lower animals" without blushing. As in all of the Brownie pictures, this one merely forms a background for the ever-new and always astonishing repertoire of tricks that Brownie knows. That dog does in the most nonchalant manner things which lots of human beings—we "greatest of God's creatures"—would take twice as long to learn as must Brownie. He's always clever and always interesting.—STUART GIBSON.

"Moon Blind"

(Bruce-Educatioonal—One Reel)

BEAUTEOUS scenery, background and vivid delineation of mountainous country, an element of human interest added thereto, describes "Moon Blind," a scenic with a story.

Shorty, a prospector, suffers with headache, which his experienced partner, York, recognizes as a condition caused from sleeping in the open, under a brilliant moon, without having any covering over the eyes. York suggests a bandage and a long sleep, which Shorty accepts, then York wanders off, starts down a steep cliff, terminating in a long distance fall. His attempts to rally from a serious accident are depicted convincingly, the background of wonderful scenery always demanding three-quarters of the interest, and it would seem that Shorty awakens, follows his friend, has much difficulty in attempting a rescue—the two finally being discovered by some fellow prospectors. But it is all a dream, and upon the real awakening Shorty discovers his eyes much improved as he recognizes the welcome sight of his friend, unharmed and still equipped with a valuable sense of humor. A splendid one reel scenic with a story for good measure.

Comedies, Short Subjects & Serials

Two Reelers Head Pathe Program for Feb. 4

BOTH Snub Pollard and Leo Maloney, in two reelers, lend their drawing powers to Pathe's list of nine releases for Feb. 4. The program consists of the second episode of the Pearl White serial, "Plunder," the title of the chapter being "Held by the Enemy." "Smoked Out," is the title of the Range Rider Series offering, featuring Leo Maloney, and there are two Hal Roach comedies, a two reeler with Snub Pollard entitled "A Tough Winter" and a one reeler featuring Paul Parrott in "Once Over." In addition, News Nos. 12 and 13; Topics of the Day No. 5; Pathe Review No. 5 and the Aesop's Film Fable, "A Raisin and a Cake of Yeast," complete the list.

King of Greece In Selznick News Reel

Selznick News is making a specialty obtaining pictures of Europe's Royal families. In Selznick News 1110, King George of Greece, the youngest monarch in Europe, makes his debut in an American news reel. Although the Prince of Wales is the most popular public personage who appears in news reels, King George may run him a close second.

More glimpses of European royalty are seen in Selznick News 1110, which contains some pictures of the uncrowned kings of the Rhineland —the American soldiers. Pictures of the transport St. Mihiel, which will bring the soldiers back to this country, are seen in the reel and there are also views of the land of cheap money and plentiful beer which the soldiers are regretfully leaving.

"Fruits of Faith" at Rialto, N.Y.

Will Rogers in Pathe Three Reeler Acclaimed by Newspaper Critics

THE New York Times screen reviewer, says Pathe, records the same estimate of Will Rogers in "Fruits of Faith," which influenced the Stanley and Loew Circuits in booking those three reels to play with Harold Lloyd in "Dr. Jack"—on the theory that both were so strong that neither would suffer by comparison with the other. Writing of the bill at the New York Rialto theatre, the Times reviewer said:

"Let the drums of fate sound as loud as they will, they cannot arouse the echo of smiles, laughter and applause called forth by the quiet little film, 'Fruits of Faith,' in which Will Rogers, his baby and a mule take possession of the program at the Rialto this week."

The Times reviewer then proceeds with a detailed analysis of the "Fruits of Faith" film, and his estimate of it is in much the same spirit shown by Manager W. M. James, James theatre, Columbus, Ohio, who closes a letter to Pathe on the subject thus:

"More power to Will Rogers. We hope that he will make many more comedies of the same high quality as 'Fruits of Faith,' and I assure you that we will always have room for them."

Other New York newspapers contained highly favorable reviews of "Fruits of Faith." Gertrude Chase wrote in the Morning Telegraph: "The program at the Rialto is dominated by a three-reel comedy in which Will Rogers does the best acting of his career."

Evening Mail: "The versatile cowboy, who has won fame on the stage and in the movies and is now budding out as a literary celebrity, scores in the movies by a mingling of pathos and humor, just as he scores in his speeches and writings by mingling philosohy and humor. 'Fruits of Faith' is unpretentious but appealing."

Tribune: "Will Rogers has a nice little picture on the program called 'Fruits of Faith.'"

E. Durling, Globe: "There is also on the program 'Fruits of Faith,' starring Will Rogers. This proved to be a very entertaining and appealing light comedy, the Follies' wit sharing the acting honors with an astonishingly apt two-year-old baby."

New Wilderness Tales Ready

First Three of the New Series to Have Premier Showings Soon

ROBERT C. BRUCE, creator of Wilderness Tales for Educational Film Exchanges, has finished editing and titling the first three of his next series of subjects.

The first three of the new series of wilderness Tales, which are now ready for shipment to branches and which will soon have premier showings in all of the key cities, are entitled "By Lantern Light," "Moonblind," and "Jenkins and the Mutt."

"By Lantern Light" is a sea picture, for which Bruce traveled the length of the Pacific Coast, from Washington to Mexico and return, in order to secure fitting locations. Ideals with an incident in the life of a family of coast dwellers whose children are caught on the rocks and imperilled by the rising tide.

"Moonblind," the second of the new series, was photographed in the midst of most beautiful scenery at the foot of Mt. Rainier. It was during the filming of this picture that Bruce encountered numerous delays, due to smoke from forest fires.

"Jenkins and the Mutt" is a tale of a man and a dog. In this story, which carries perhaps as much heart interest as any subject Bruce has ever made, he has taken a simple tale of a man's devotion to a mongrel dog—the first living creature to show him love—set it in a background of majestic scenery, and produced a picture that will rank high among the best pictures of the year.

Cartoonist and Writer Gag Man for Century

Vance de Bar Colvig, better known as "Pinto" by over 7,000,000 readers of newspapers supplied by the United Feature Syndicate, has been engaged as gag writer for Century Comedies by the Stern brothers. "Pinto," known throughout the United States as a cartoonist and caption writer of exceptionally subtle humor, was made gag man for the Al Herman Century Comedy unit. Clever men who create comedy situations—in the vernacular of the studio "gagmen" are very scarce. The acquiring of "Pinto" stands behind the Stern brothers statement that no expense would be spared to make the 1923 crop of Century Comedies a record one. His first job was with Al Herman in his initial release for the new year.

Arrow Acquires Novelty Comedy Series

ARROW FILM CORPORATION announces the acquisition of a distinct novelty in the comedy line. This is a series of single-reel subjects known as "Tom and Jerry." Tom and Jerry are animated mannikins, representing a negro and his mule. They are said to be more life-like in their actions than any other puppets ever created for the screen. Then, too, it is said that the scenic backgrounds and sets which have been created for them are wonderfullv true to life.

These subjects were produced by Lloyd Haynes under the Roop patents and each one is personally animated by Mr. Roop who has spent years perfecting the manipulation of the figures.

Educational Comedies Meeting with Favor

Following the reception accorded the Educational-Hamilton comedy "The Speeder," at the Rivoli and Rialto theatres, New York, Hugo Reisenfeld has signed for the rest of the Hamilton subjects to be released this year by Educational. "The Speeder" will be followed by "The Educator," "No Luck," "Extra! Extra!" and other Hamilton comedies. Altogether six pictures are to be released this year.

The Christie Comedy "In Dutch," featuring Bobby Vernon, is also having a Broadway showing the week of Jan. 21, at the Rialto. The Mark Strand theater is also showing an Educational subject, the Earl Hurd Cartoon Comedy, "Chicken Dressing."

St. John Comedies Get New Release Dates

"Young and Dumb," the two-reel special Al. St. John comedy depicting the trials and tribulations of a newly married couple, which was originally set for release on January 21st, has been announced for distribution on January 28th, according to Fox Film Corporation.

March 11th has been named as release date for "The Salesman," another St. John fun-maker. The date for release of this production, as previously announced, was March 4th.

Release Scheduled For "Sunshines" Changed

Fox Film Corporation announces changes in the release dates of the Sunshine Comedies, "The Five Fifteen" and "The Wise Cracker."

The former has been set up from February 4th to January 21st, while "The Wise Cracker" will be released on February 4th instead of on the original date, January 21st.

Educational Provides Free Mat Service

FREE service of mats for publicity and advertising purposes is to be inaugurated by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., beginning with its February releases.

Hereafter all publicity and advertising layouts prepared for use in connection with its short subjects will be offered by Educational without charge to exhibitors booking these subjects. This applies to all two-reel comedy releases and special releases.

Cast Selected for New Bull Montana Comic

The cast for "The Two Twins," Hunt Stromberg's newest comedy production for Metro, starring Bull Montana, has been chosen. Bull is one twin, Buster Brown. Chuck Reisner is Custer Brown. Mr. Reisner has played important roles in several of the comedian's recent productions.

Fontaine La Rue will portray the leading feminine role. Other members of the cast are Billy Armstrong, who was featured in Sennett comedies; Phyllis Allen, seen recently in support of Charlie Chaplin; Marion Harlan, daughter of Otis Harlan; Dan Crimmins, of the vaudeville team of Crimmins and Gore; Margaret Cloud, former Christie comedy player, and Grace Gordon, who has had parts in several dramatic productions.

Albert Austin will stage "The Two Twins."

Eddie Barry Now with Century Comedies

Eddie Barry, famous for his splendid comedy work with Christie, Educational Roach and other big companies, has returned to Century after an absence of nearly a year.

Barry is known as a veteran of the comedy field, and has a host of followers among lovers of clean comedy. He is nearly six feet in height, slim, virile, and lithe. He belongs to the new school of comedians who never smile.

His first picture for Century will be Brownie's picture now in the process of making under the direction of Jim Davis, who is the newest man to wield the Century megaphone.

Short Subject Programs Extended in Canada

Canadian exhibitors are rapidly following the example of the Cum-Bac theatre, Montreal, which introduced the all-short-subjects program into Canada.

The Wonderland theatre at Winnipeg is playing a short subjects program of eight reels including the Selig-Rork production, "The White Mouse," the Mermaid Comedy, "The Steeplechaser," and the Cameo Comedy, "Once Over." The balance of the program is made up of the Bruce Wilderness Tale, "Nights of Many Shadows," and Lyman H. Howe's "Ride on a Runaway Train."

Latest Hallroom Comedy a Satire

"Tin Knights in a Hallroom" Is Title of New C. B. C. Two Reeler

"TIN KNIGHTS IN A HALLROOM" is the title that has been given a new Hallroom Boys Comedy, one of the series of two-reelers which C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation is distributing to the State Right market.

It is announced that Jean Havez, in charge of comedy scenarios for C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation has planned to make each comedy a satire on some timely topic, story, or picture that is occupying popular attention, and has already lined up the first four.

His first picture, "Day By Day—In Every Way," a satire on the Coué craze.

"There is something about a satirical comedy that people enjoy," says Mr. Havez, "because it has a psychological reaction. People like to say 'I told you so—,' 'Why, I read about that in the newspapers' —and nothing hits their funny-bone quicker than a play on something they have seen or heard.

"Diversity of program is what has built up the motion picture business," says Mr. Havez. "A feature or two, a short comedy, a news or novelty reel—these are what the greater majority of the public want. "There is the greatest opportunity, right now, for producers of good two-reel comedies to cash in big, that the business has ever seen—because it is a case of the survival of the fittest. The Hallroom Boys Comedies have been growing better and better in their field for more than three and a half years—and we are going to do everything in our power to make them the Best."

David Warfield Appears in Starland Revue

THE opening of the Moscow Art Theatre in New York, a dramatic feast which has won the attention of all the Metropolis, has been recorded on the screen by Starland Revue. Willard Van der Veer, Starland cameraman and editor, secured "shots" of the most important players and scenes from the plays presented by the company under the direction of Morris Gest.

Mr. Van der Veer did not confine himself to filming the celebrities on the stage, but secured many views of famous personages who comprised the first-night audience. For the first time David Warfield was caught by the camera's eye.

These views of stage folk and stage plays in Starland Revues, are released through the Film Booking Offices of America.

Pathe News Screens Winter Work and Play

Brilliant night scenes amid the snow and ice picturing invigorating winter sports in the White Mountains, are flashed on the screen in Pathe News No. 6. Appropriate to the season also are pictures of the Winter days work of lumbermen in the snow-laden white pine forests of Northern Idaho.

At Manchester, N. H., the Winter Carnival is seen at its height, with winter vacations apparently more popular than in former years. At midnight, in the flashing light of great "flares" the Queen of the Carnival, kneeling in the snow, is crowned. There is a tournament of modern knights mounted on human steeds ski-shod. At Greenfield, Mass., feats on skis and skates furnish the camera with ideal action.

Vitagraph Announces New Urban Classic

The next Urban Popular Classic to be released by Vitagraph is "Roving Thomas in Canada." This inquisitive and comical cat arrives at Halifax and views the fine harbor and the century old landmarks of the city. Roving Thomas goes to Quebec from Halifax and some excellent scenes of the Falls of Montmorency, from which the French-Canadian city obtains its electric power are shown as well as of interesting views of the narrow, crooked streets of the old French settlement.

Educational Pictures Endorsed in Bulletin

"Casey Jones, Jr.," Educational-Mermaid Comedy, and "Be Yourself," Christie Comedy, both two reels, are listed in the current bulletin of the National Motion Picture League as indorsed for family showing.

The current issues of Kinograms, Educational's news reel, and the Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge subjects "Garden of Geysers" and "Hot Shots" are also included.

Production-Distribution Activities

Many Nominations for "Ben Hur" Role

THE plan to determine by vote of the public the most popular actor for the coveted role of "Ben-Hur" has developed into a national question. The results are being tabulated by Goldwyn, and will have a real influence in the choice.

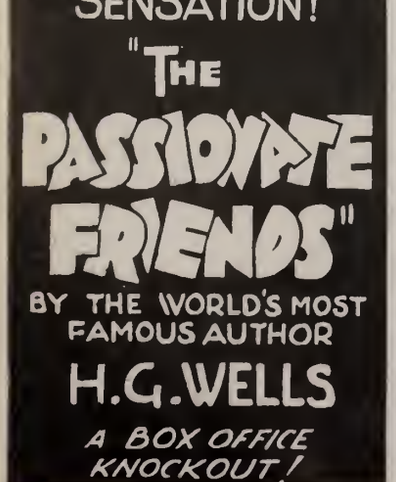
Conway Tearle is the latest screen idol to be nominated, and his "fans" are making up in enthusiasm what they lacked in an early start. William Desmond, Richard Dix, William Farnum, Gaston Glass, Wm. S. Hart, Jack Kerrigan, Bert Lytell, Thomas Meighan, Antonio Moreno, Ramon Navarro, Milton Sills, Forrest Stanley and Rodolph Valentino are strong contenders.

Robert B. McIntyre, Casting Director at Goldwyn Studios, is receiving the votes.

Four Page Photogravure for "Omar"

As part of the accessories on the Richard Walton Tully production, "Omar the Tentmaker," with Guy Bates Post as the star, First National has made up a four page rotogravure section for distribution by exhibitors to the newspapers in their locality. One syndicate in New York has already used the rotogravure as part of the weekly material sent to its twelve rotogravure clients.

For exhibitor use space has been left at the top of the first page for the imprint of the local newspaper using it. The four pages are handsomely done in sepia and show many of the important scenes in "Omar." The cast and a synopsis of the play is given on the back page.



"Fighting Blood" Highly Praised

Three Rounds of Witwer Series Commended at Trade Showing in New York

F. B. O. gave the New York trade a surprise and proved the accuracy of its managing director's, P. A. Powers', prophesy, when it screened the first three rounds of its new "Fighting Blood" stories for the trade and press on Tuesday, January 16th, at the Astor theatre. Six months ago, when Mr. Powers first announced the purchase of the screen rights to these H. C. Witwer stories which are appearing in Collier's Weekly, he made the broad statement that they would be made into the highest class short subject entertainment that the industry has ever seen.

Three hundred exhibitors, newspaper and trade paper critics appeared at the Astor theatre at 11:30 Tuesday morning to get their first glimpse at the long heralded "Fighting Blood" series, a story of youth and youth's battles and fun, and the comments heard in the lobby after the showing were universal in praise of the pictures, not only because of their rapid-fire prize ring sequences, but also because of their wholesome humor and wealth of romance.

The reviewers, by acclamation, welcomed their clean, sure-fire humor. The Motion Picture News said: "There is nothing offensive, on the contrary, these fight pictures carry a moral and embrace sufficient love interest and human interest touches to make them ideal screen offerings."

The Moving Picture World, commenting upon the same quality said: "From the title, one might come to the conclusion that they are pictures that are simply of the fighting sort. But this is not the case. They have a simple love story running throughout that makes an interesting and romantic foil for th strenuous episodes."

The Morning Telegraph states: "Comedy * * * which cannot fail to appeal to almost everyone, is generously distributed throughout these serial pictures."

In speaking of the box office power of these pictures, the reviewers made unqualified statements such as are seldom accorded any short subject. The Film Daily succinctly stated: "A brand new series that looks like ready money and lots of it in the box office" and concluded by prophecying that "The series should prove one of the best bets of the season for short stuff."

George Blaisdell in the Exhibitors Trade Review wrote: "It will not take a great many minutes of any one's time to tell the world that there's a new series of pictures coming along that is going to be well worth the while of any exhibitor to examine. He won't have to look at more than one of them to know that these pictures ar something out of the ordinary, and quite a way out of it at that."

The Motion Picture News announced that the nine forthcoming rounds are "something to look forward too." Enthusiastic praise was given to Mal St. Clair who is reponsible for the clever direction;

"Dollar Devils" Due January 28

Victor Schertzinger Special Next Attraction on Hodkinson Program

THE Victor Schertzinger special production "Dollar Devils" is the scheduled attraction for the Hodkinson program dated January 28th. Like "The Kingdom Within," the first of the Victor Schertzinger productions to be released by Hodkinson, this film release offers what the Hodkinson officials consider to be one of the most human, entertaining and interesting stories presented for public consumption, for sometime, with, however, an entirely different theme.

"Dollar Devils" is a story dealing with the harm of too much wealth. It shows the result upon a small town that has suddenly discovered oil, thus making every citizen in the town immensely wealthy. The climax, it is said, is particularly novel and unusual and the story is one that brings plenty of good laughs and an abundance of thrills.

According to those who have attended a pre-release showing of this feature, "Dollar Devils" is one of the best things Victor Schertzinger has ever done. The theme of the production is one that gives the director ample opportunity for plenty of human touches which have never been overlooked.

The cast is exceptionally strong, consisting of such well-known names as Joseph Dowling, Cullen Landis, Eva Novak, Miles McCarthy, May Wallace, Hallam Cooley, Lydia Knott and Ney Farrell. Ever since the "Miracle Man" Joseph Dowling has not been seen in a stronger and more appealing humorous role than he presents in "Dollar Devils" in which he plays the part of the unique Zannon Carthy, the old villager. Those who have seen his work admit it to be the best.

The photography was done by John S. Stumar and the continuity by Louis Stevens.

Catchy Slogan Adopted by Universal

UNIVERSAL has adopted a popular slogan for use in connection with its pictures. It will be used in advertising, exploitation and other public attention arresting methods and is expected to take its place along with such advertising catch phrases as "his master's voice," and similar slogans which have become household expressions.

It is: "Universal Pictures—The Pleasure is all Yours."

Voluntarily suggested by George Greenberg, a young New York City man after reading one of Mr. Carl Laemmle's Universal advertisements, the phrase immediately was chosen by the Universal executives as a tip-top slogan. The boy was suitably rewarded and immediate steps taken to make the slogan a live one wherever Universal pictures are shown.

Material and accessories will be put out which will help the exhibitor tie-up his showings of Universal pictures to the good-will slogan, and to cash in on the prestige of Universal Pictures.

Mary Anderson Free to Make Appearances

C. C. Burr has agreed to release Mary Anderson from a contract calling for her to make a series of short comedies, five of which have already been completed. Burr is said to have complied with a request of exhibitors in different parts of the country who are insisting upon personal appearances of the star in connection with her picture, "The Wilderness of Youth." Cordial relations continue between the actress and producer.

"Rupert of Hentzau" Progresses

Huge Selznick Production Will Soon Be in Hands of Cutters and Editors

INFORMATION from the Selznick company's West Coast studios from time to time indicates that highly satisfactory progress is being made on the production of Sir Anthony Hope's "Rupert of Hentzau," sequel to "The Prisoner of Zenda." The big photoplay is well along towards completion and will soon be in the hands of cutters and editors.

When "Rupert" was purchased directly from the titled English romantic author more than a year ago, President Myron Selznick said that it had been secured with the idea of making from it the biggest and best photoplay that Selznick resources could turn out. With the production almost completed there is every indication that Mr. Selznick has carried out his original intentions to the very letter.

Every step in the production has been taken with the greatest of care. Edward J. Montagne worked for months in the preparation of the scenario. Victor Heerman, chosen months ago to direct the production, had done an almost incredible amount of research work before the first scene was photographed. The best costumers on the case were engaged, the best scenic designers, and the ablest photographers were secured. And above everything else must be mentioned the lavishness with which the story was cast.

It is claimed—and but mildly disputed—that never before has a photoplay been made in which as many real notables participated. Elaine Hammerstein is the Queen Flavia, Bert Lytell the Rudolph, Lew Cody the Rupert. Claire Windsor, Bryant Washburn, Marjorie Daw, Adolphe Jean Menjou, Hobart Bosworth, Irving Cummings, Mitchell Lewis, Elmo Lincoln, Nigel De Brullier, Josephine Crowell, and Gertrude Astor are other members of the cast whose past performances entitles them to special recognition.

Women Endorse Will Rogers Vehicle

A STATEMENT has been received at the Hodkinson offices announcing that a joint committee on better films, consisting of the Illinois Council Parent Teachers Association; Illinois League of Women Voters, and Woman's City Club of Chicago have placed at the head of their list of photoplays recommended as wholesome recreation, the C. S. Clancy production, "The Headless Horseman" or "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," featuring Will Rogers in the role of Ichabod Crane, and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

It is also reported that Miss Mae Tinee of the Chicago Tribune who ranks as one of the leading critics of motion pictures, has placed "The Headless Horseman" among her list of the twelve great photoplays of the year.

Steam Screen Features Metro Production

A "steam screen" is a feature in a big scene in "Your Friend and Mine," by Willard Mack, a Metro-SL (Sawyer-Lubin) production directed by Clarence G. Badger.

The occasion in the picture was furnished by an entertainment in an artist's studio, showing East Indian magic, classical and allegorical costume dances, tableaux vivants and other novelties. A fire screen closed a devil dance given by Fred Ko'Vert, a solid sheet of flame covering the entire stage in the studio as Mr. Ko' Vert ended his weird performance.

Then came the steam screen. The number was "A Dance of the Winds," interpreted by three of Mr. Ko'Vert's fair pupils. The velvet curtains were drawn apart, showing the audience a wall of steam emanating from the floor immediately behind the footlights and preventing a view of the rear of the stage. Then, slowly, as if it were drawn up by invisible cords, the curtain of steam rose evenly toward the ceiling and evaporated, revealing the dancers.

"Your Friend and Mine" was adapted for the screen by Winifred Dunn. Included in the cast are Enid Bennett, Willard Mack, Rosemary Theby, J. Herbert Frank and Aileen Ray.

Charles Giblyn Home from Holland

Charles Giblyn, director of "The Hypocrites" starring Wyndham Standing arrived home last week. He has spent the past two months in Holland and just completed shooting the picture.

This film is from the famous play of Henry Arthur Jones which had a Broadway run. Producers Security will handle the releasing arrangements.

Medium Brands "Dr. Jack" Quack

Answers Query From Teaser Ads With Warning Against Rank Imposter

NEWSPAPER returns from half a score of important cities prove that when the Pathe Exploitation Department supplied all branch exchanges with its series of "Dr. H. L. Jack" teaser ads it builded better than it knew. These cunningly worded announcements of the approaching visit of the discoverer of "Nature's Best Remedy" who loved humanity too much to dread being thrown out of any Medical Society for "uncthical advertising" produced a sequel in Fort Worth, Texas, that packed the Palace theatre at all performances of the Lloyd comedy, and made a public laughter sensation.

While the "Dr. H. L. Jack" teaser ads were being displayed in Fort Worth newspapers, "Dr. Khiro," a so-called medium, gave a performance at the Auditorium. Someone in the audience asked him if he knew who "Dr. Jack" was, and if he was any good. The "professor" promptly replied with some indignation that "Dr. Jack" was a "quack doctor who was using patent medicine that was probably poison," and to have nothing to do with him.

On the following day "Dr. Jack's" local address, contained in the final teaser of the series, was found to be that of the Palace theatre, whose lobby had suddenly blossomed into a veritable Harold Lloyd—"Dr. Jack" picture gallery. And in the local papers was the theatre's display announcement, which made "Dr. Khiro" really useful for at least once in his career.

A week earlier the news columns of Cincinnati papers told how the publication of these same "Dr. H. L. Jack" teaser ads had set the Health Board to sleuthing after the "unethical" advertiser—until the final ad of the series led it to the address of the Strand theatre, and to the frankly expressed conviction of "Stung!" One article was headed: "Dr. Jack No Quack."

Install Radio On Warner Float

Evening Concerts in Kansas City Attract Throngs Which Interrupt Traffic

THE Warner Brothers transcontinental float, upon its arrival in Kansas City, installed a radio set on top of the seven life sized books from which were made the Warner classics of the screen for this season. According to a telegram from Frank A. Cassidy who is in charge of the float, the radio concerts in the evening on prominent street corners have caused thousands of people to swarm around the truck.

In spite of weather conditions encountered in the cities en route to Los Angeles, the float has been hailed by exhibitors as the greatest national publicity and exploitation stunt in the history of the industry, according to Warner Bros.

From all sections of the country through which the float has passed, the Warner offices are daily receiving an unusual number of telegrams from exhibitors lauding the efforts of the organization in its co-operation.

"The World's Applause" Current Release

WILLIAM DE MILLE, Paramount producer, departed temporarily from his custom of filming stage dramas when he made "The World's Applause," which is on the Paramount release schedule for January 21.

This is an original story by Clara Beranger, who has written the scenario of all of Mr. de Mille's recent photoplays. Bebe Daniels and Lewis Stone are the featured players in a cast which Mr. de Mille considers one of the best he has had in his long career as a producer.

The theme of Miss Beranger's story is a timely one and is said to have developed with the usual de Mille finesse.

Kathlyn Williams plays the part of the jealous wife and Adolphe Menjou that of the artist husband. Others in the cast are Brandon Hurst, Bernice Frank, Maym Kelso, George Kuwa and James Neill.

Universal Features in Big Denver Week

An almost unprecedented record for Universal showings was established last week in Denver, during the National Western Stock Show week, the biggest convention week of the Rocky Mountain region. Universal had feature pictures showing in six of Denver's eight first run houses, and in two of the five leading second run houses. Universal short subjects were being shown in one of the remaining first run houses, and also in another of the second runs.

Edward Armstrong, district manager for Universal in reporting the Denver showing, laid emphasis upon the fact that National Western Stock Show week, while being the big event of the year, and drawing thousands of people into Denver, yet supplies very stiff competition to the picture houses, and must be met by sure-fire pictures. Universal sales executives are keenly gratified that almost all of the pictures chosen to buck the Stock Week show were Universal successes. Eugene Gerbasse, manager of Universal's Denver exchange, has notified his home office that unusual business was reported by each of the theatres.

Progress Features Buys "Only a Shopgirl"

Progress Features, Inc. of San Francisco and Los Angeles this week completed negotiations with the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation whereby they will handle rights in their territory to "Only A Shopgirl." Progress will distribute the feature in California, Nevada, Arizona, and the Hawaiian Islands.

W. O. Edmunds of Progress Features, Inc., announces the planning of a strong campaign to exploit "Only a Shopgirl" in his territory.

Burr Announces Casts, Titles

Forthcoming Productions of Mastodon Films Have Attractive Appearance

C. C. BURR, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., has announced the titles, casts and other details of many of his organization's forthcoming productions, including both feature films and short subjects.

Following Mastodon's current release "Secrets of Paris" will come "The Last Hour" a screen version of Frank R. Adam's story "Blind Justice" which was originally published in Munsey's Magazine. It is an Edward Sloman production with a typical Burr cast headed by Milton Sills and Carmel Myers. Supporting these two are such well known players as Alec Francis, Jack Mower, Charles Clary, Walter Long, Pat O'Malley and Eric Mayne. Already the picture has been endorsed as one of the most absorbing crook plays ever seen on the screen. This is the opinion of several of the leading critics of the trade press.

Following "The Last Hour" will come the next of the series of Johnny Hine's melocomedies. Quite appropriately it is titled "Luck." The story is by Jackson Gregory. The cast supporting the peppery Johnny includes Violet Mersereau, Robert Edeson, Edmund Breese, Charlie Murray, Flora Finch, Polly Moran and Warner Richmond. "Luck" was made at the Glendale Long Island studios of the Burr organization.

"You Are Guilty" written and produced by Edgar Lewis, is next on the list of Mastodon features. The players who assume the prominent roles are James Kirkwood, Doris Kenyon, Edmund Breese, little Russell Griffin, and Mary Carr and Robert Edeson.

Coming All-Star comedies, which are distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, include "The Nuisance" and a burlesque upon a famous play which is now one of the outstanding successes of Broadway.

Interest Keen in Super Feature

Cosmopolitan Promises Lavish Production For "Enemies of Women"

RIVALLING the interest which was displayed in "When Knighthood Was in Flower," starring Marion Davies, prior to that epoch-making photoplay's record-breaking run on Broadway, is that evoked over the next Cosmopolitan super feature, "The Enemies of Women," by Vicente Blasco Ibanez, the celebrated Spanish author of "The Four Horsemen" and "Blood and Sand."

In bringing to the screen "The Enemies of Women," Cosmoplitan has filmed it with all of the artistry, perfection of detail and lavishness of production that featured the wonderful "Knighthood," it is claimed. Not only is "The Enemies of Women" embellished with what is said to be more natural scenic beauty than has ever before been seen in a motion picture, but the photoplay includes some of the most gorgeous interior scenes that have ever been fashioned for the camera. Joseph Urban, Cosmopolitan scenic artist who so flawlessly recreated the settings for "Knighthood" has employed all the same artistic finesse Many of the scenes are laid in Russia, and will undoubtedly add much to the present Russian vogue.

In order to achieve the acme of beauty for "The Enemies of Women," Cosmopolitan Productions upset all tradition by sending an entire company to Europe on location. During the trip abroad the company came into actual contact with Ibanez. So enthusiastic did the author become over the plans of production that he arranged to have scenes taken in the Casino at Monte Carlo and on the terrace of the Garden, the first time in seven years that world famous gaming resort had been filmed.

Doug's "Robin Hood" Real Art

Editorial Writer Praises Version as Challenge to Critics of Screen

"THE Los Angeles version of the Robin Hood legend is a challenge to the critics who have held that the natural limitations of motion picture drama are such that it can never rise to the plane of fine art," said an editorial in the Indianapolis News while "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" was showing recently at the Circle theatre in that city. As a further indorsement of Douglas Fairbanks' splendid production for United Artists release the editorial went on to say:

"In this production the dramatist has approached new possibilities in story-telling by the primitive use of pictures. He has overcome the two great obstacles of the picture dramatist—the lack of color and of the human voice—to an extent which a few years ago was thought to be impossible. The picture is an achievement in that it carries an implied promise that sometime money and feeling will be combined in such proportions as to produce a picture drama of the first order.

"The outstanding impression of the Douglas Fairbanks production of 'Robin Hood' is that a group of sincere men and women are earnestly striving to recreate the great stories of the world. This involves much study of the architecture, costumes, manners and spirit of an age long since departed.

Arrow Starts Work on New Serial

UPON his arrival on the coast, after covering the greater part of the country, Dr. Shallenberger, President of Arrow Film Corporation, immediately went into conference with Francis Ford, and the result of this conference was a contract whereby Mr. Ford was to make a fifteen episode serial, to be distributed by Arrow. Work was immediately begun on this production, and, in fact, the first episode is already completed. The picture stars Peggy O'Day, who is ably supported by Jack Perrin, Bill White, Francis Ford and other well-known serial players.

"Peg O' My Heart" Is Praised by Club

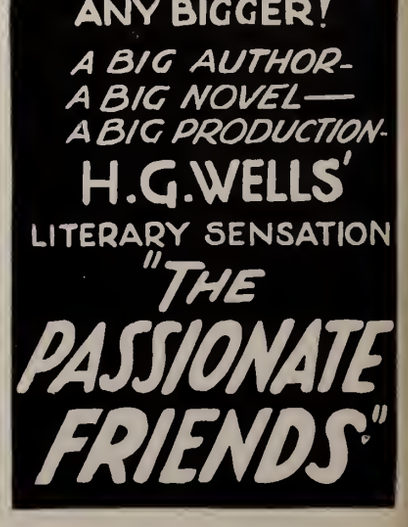
That Metro pictures stand for wholesomeness of subject and treatment, as well as for brilliance of production, is reflected in a letter written recently to L. A. Rozelle, manager of the company's Chicago exchange, by Mrs. Blanche Mason, of the Edgewater Drama Study Club.

The communication followed the private exhibition, before the members of this body, of Laurette Taylor in "Peg O' My Heart." Mrs. Mason's letter follows:

"Members and guests commented on the unusually clear photography, the strength of the entire cast, choice of scenic backgrounds and above all the wholesomeness of the picture.

"Personally, it seems to me it leaves a glow of happiness with the audience which is in marked contrast to the effect of many of the present-day films as well as plays. It was very generous of you to permit me the use of this film for my guest day of the drama club, and certainly made it one of the red-letter meetings."

"Peg O' My Heart" had its New York premiere at the Capitol theatre January 21. It is a picturization of J. Hartley Manners' stage play. The scenario was written by Mary O'Hara.



Fox Circuit to Show "Third Alarm"

HARLES ROSENZWEIG, manager of the New York Exchange of the Film Booking Offices of America, announced this week that "The Third Alarm," the Emory Johnson production of fire department life, will be screened throughout the entire Fox Circuit following its pre-release run at the Astor theatre, where it is now entering its fourth week.

The successful run of the production at the Astor has given the picture a tremendous impetus and indications are that every available print will be working steadily as soon as the picture is released in the Metropolitan territory, according to F. B. O.

"The Cheat" to Start This Week

According to present plans, Paramount's notable re-production of "The Cheat" will be started January 29, as a George Fitzmaurice production starring Pola Negri with Jack Holt featured and Charles de Roche in support. As is generally known, this subject has the record of being one of the most successful ever screened. It was originally produced in 1915 by Cecil B. DeMille and was written by Hector Turnbull, the present adaptation being the work of Ouida Bergere.

Everything possible will be done to make this one of the most dramatic and powerful photoplays in Paramount's big list of productions during the year.

King Productions for Producers Security

After studying the local market for some days, the Carton King Productions has turned over to Producers Security the handling of their pictures throughout the world. The company has already completed the first series of twelve two-reel comedy dramas and is making plans for enlarging production facilities by the addition of several added units.

Mr. King is starred in these productions. He was recently featured in a group of O. Henry subjects.

Three Playgoers Releases in Feb.

Features Are Said to Offer Wide Variety in Forms of Entertainment

PLAYGOERS PICTURES announces three releases for February. Each of these features is said to be a drama with characteristics that stamp it as almost unique, so that in the combination widely varied forms of entertainment are offered.

The London adventures of a penniless New York millionaire are revealed vividly in "A Pauper Millionaire," which is to be out February 11th. The man's valet misses the boat from New York, leaving his master helpless. On arrival in England the traveler is unable to obtain his own baggage, is without funds and can secure no aid because he has packed his wallet, containing all identification papers, in a suitcase. After a series of experiences that are amusing to everybody but the victim he gets a job as window-washer. A tumble from a ladder causes an injury and he is sent to a hospital, where he is nursed by the girl to whom his son had become engaged during a trip abroad some weeks before. Father has gone to England to "buy off" the girl, but when he sees her everything is lovely.

"A Clouded Name," set for release February 18th, is said to be marked by lots of action, romance, deep suspense and attractive scenic effects. It concerns a wealthy young heiress and a young man whose engagement had been broken when the boy's father, having been ruined financially, disappeared and the girl's mother had been found shot. Several years later the young couple meet again and, following a series of surprising experiences, the mystery in the situation is lifted and a reconcilation effected. Norma Shearer, a particularly pretty and attractive girl, is the heroine, Gladden James has the male lead and little Yvonne Logan has an appealing part. Austin O. Huhn directed the production.

"The Supreme Passion," set for release February 25th, is founded on Tom Moore's immortal poem, "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms." The featured players are Florence Dixon, known all over the world as "The Coca Cola Girl," and Robert Adams, who played throughout the Middle West as the star of "Clarence" in its stage production.

"A Friendly Husband" Acclaimed

Work of Lupino Lane Commended in His First Fox Feature Length Picture

NEW YORK trade paper reviewers have unanimously acclaimed "A Friendly Husband," the first five-reel comedy starring Lupino Lane, the English pantomimist, which will be released this month by Fox Film Corporation.

Lupino Lane, who signed up with William Fox following his sensational success in Morris Gest's spectacular production, "Afgar," completed three two-reel special comedies before he attempted a feature length photoplay. So voluminous was the praise accorded his work in this group of short subjects, that William Fox decided to supply the fun-maker with a longer vehicle.

Following are excerpts from some of the New York reviews:

The Morning Telegraph: "In this picture Lupino Lane should capture the American audience. He is a clown born and trained from the tips of his agile toes to his expressive face. A remarkable acrobat, he is nevertheless essentially human, guileless and friendly to everybody and willing to do anything to please his wife, in this well sustained bit of real humor. . . . As a comedian he is an artist, as a picture this is a winner."

The Motion Picture News: "Fox has given Lupino Lane a fair test as a comedian, and there is no question that the English dispenser of humor has made good. There is nothing of the slapstick artist about him. He ingratiates himself because he knows the value of repression. 'A Friendly Husband' will rouse the risibilities of any audience."

The Moving Picture World: "It is a chock full of laughs and should be welcomed by audiences everywhere. William Fox, noted as a real showman, has given another evidence of the fact by presenting Lupino Lane, as a star of a five reel comedy. 'A Friendly Husband' definitely labels Lane as one of the finest comedians on the screen."

The Exhibitors Herald: "Here is a comedy that should get over in any place where it is shown. Lane is a comedian of real worth and his ability to do this sort of thing is well displayed in this picture. He possesses every dequirement of expression and he is a cluever acrobat. The support given by the remainder of the cast is also good."

Newspaper Tie-Up on "Plunder" Endorsed

The Minneapolis Journal, which has the biggest circulation in the city, through its capable Service Department, has endorsed the Pearl White Patheserial, "Plunder," in signed letters addressed to approximately 1,200 "Livewire Showmen of Minneapolis Territory." This is the preliminary result, Pathe reports, of a "Plunder" tie-up with this newspaper.

In its letter to exhibitors the Journal's Service Department announced the tie-up, and said, in part:

"From all accounts 'Plunder' is destined to be the biggest and most successful Patheserial in which Pearl White has ever been featured. Might we suggest that the time to line up your booking on 'Plunder' is right now, when the public interest will be mightily aroused by the big campaign to be run in the Journal? Then you can tell your patrons that you, too, have secured 'Plunder'."

Ned Wayburn's Girls Rehearse Numbers

A new procedure in staging dance numbers for motion picture productions is being followed at the Paramount eastern studio. As is done in musical comedy, the "ladies of the ensemble" are rehearsed in advance of the actual shooting, and it is a common thing for visitors at the Long Island studio to find perhaps two dozen girls in workmanlike rehearsal togs "working out" a new dance.

With a director of the dance and a three-piece orchestra, they rehearse until they get the desired kick, snap and pep into their steps. At present, there are twenty-four girls from the Ned Wayburn school rehearsing a pirate's dance of the Bootleggers' Ball in Nassau, which is to be a feature of George Melford's Paramount production "You Can't Fool Your Wife," by Waldemar Young.

Novelty Violin Pins for "Second Fiddle"

An unusual and attractive idea which has been originated by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation in connection with the Film Guild Production, "Second Fiddle," featuring Glenn Hunter, which they are distributing, is a miniature violin.

The idea for this novelty was suggested by the title of the picture, "Second Fiddle," and it is believed to represent one of the most pretentious and effective exploitation ideas that have been created in a long time. A miniature violin has been reproduced which is made in the form of a pin which will be sent to every exhibitor in the country.

In back of this novelty pin is what is a proposal to organize "Second Fiddle" clubs. Rules and regulations have been prepared by the Hodkinson organization, telling just how this idea can be applied.

Niblo Start Belated Honeymoon

Having completed filming the great American play, "The Famous Mrs. Fair," as his first production for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces, Fred Niblo left for Mexico City this week with his wife, Enid Bennett, who has just finished portraying a leading role in Willard Mack's "Your Friend and Mine," a Metro-S. L. (Sawyer-Lubin) special, directed by Clarence G. Badger.

This is their first real honeymoon since their marriage four years ago, for they have not before been able to get away from their studios at the same time for anything longer than a week-end trip. According to present plans, the director and his wife will only be in the Mexican capital for three or four days, returning to Los Angeles within two weeks.

"The Famous Mrs. Fair," the great American play by James Forbes, is presented by Louis B. Mayer and will be released by Metro Pictures Corporation. Frances Marion wrote the scenario.

Publishers in Tieup on "The Christian"

Goldwyn has made a big tie-up for exploiting its Maurice Tourneur production of "The Christian," from Sir Hall Caine's novel, with Grossett & Dunlap, publishers, who issue cheaper priced reprints of popular novels.

Grossett & Dunlap are issuing a big new motion picture edition of "The Christian," illustrated with stills from the production, and with a jacket illustrated from film scenes and directly advertising the photoplay.

The publishers will arrange for window displays in book stores in cities where "The Christian" is showing at the time of the showing and for several days preceding.

They are also issuing attractive window cards, illustrating in color, several of the dramatic moments from Sir Hall's novel as picturized in Mr. Tourneur's screen version. There will be two or three varities of cards which will be used in the window displays of book dealers and placed in other prominent windows.

New Tieup On "Broadway Rose"

Merchants Cooperate in Effective Exploitation of Mae Murray Picture

THAT Robert Z. Leonard's presentation of Mae Murray in "Broadway Rose" is easily and effectively exploitable is seen in the number of unusual tieups which enterprising exhibitors have arranged for the picture, according to Metro.

An example of a cooperative stunt that produced a beautiful effect is the one arranged between the exhibitor operating the Granby Theatre, Norfolk, Va., and Grandy, a florist in that city. It consisted of a display of many tiny roses, with two framed paintings showing Miss Murray in the photoplay. This sign accompanied it:

"During this week this window will be filled with Ten Thousand Broadway Roses. These delicate little buds christened by Miss Mae Murray in honor of her great scenic production, 'Broadway Rose' have become a rage in New York. In order to introduce this beautiful flower in Norfolk we will present one each to the first 500 ladies attending each performance of 'Broadway Rose' at the Granby."

Another store tieup was shared in by one of the leading shoe stores in Norfolk. A pair of slippers worn by Miss Murray while making "Broadway Rose" was exhibited, with a sign announcing the following prizes: To the first lady whom the slippers fit most perfectly one pair of the best shoes from stock. To the next seven, passes to "Broadway Rose." The shoes were to be tried on during certain hours on a specified day.

A third instance of shop co-operation was with a music shop. Stills and photographs of the star were displayed. The song "Broadway Rose" as sung by a popular vocalist was advertised, and thus the merchant's purposes were advanced as well as those of the exhibitor. An attractive window, with roses and pictures formed the background.

Mae Murray in "Broadway Rose" is presented and directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Its author is Edmund Goulding. The photoplay was made by Tiffany Productions, Inc., of which M. H. Hoffman is Vice-President and General Manager. Metro Pictures Corporation is sole distributor.

Fox Accessories Are Elaborate

Extensive Exploitation and Advertising Material For Seven Specials

FOX FILM CORPORATION has prepared an elaborate array of accessories, such as press books, exploitation and advertising material, slides and cuts and mats, in connection with the release of their seven specials for the new year. The new superproductions are: "The Village Blacksmith," by Henry Longfellow: "A Friendly Husband," A Lupino Lane super-comedy; "The Custard Cup," with Mary Carr; "The Face On the Barroom Floor," "The Net," "Does It Pay?" and "The Town That Forgot God."

This material includes a great quantity of well written matter from the hands of men who are experts in their various fields. The posters, lobby displays, folders, cuts and mats, etc., were executed by the Fox staff of artists. The music scores were supervised by writers well known in the musical world. The splendid colored scenes that have been lavished upon the posters and lobby displays have already attracted wide attention and will claim and hold the eyes of the public.

For "The Village Blacksmith" there has been published a beautiful and well edited press book of sixteen pages, amply illustrated with clever advertising cuts and splendid half-tone scene cuts taken from stills of some of the picture's most thrilling episodes. The book further contains exploitation stunts—tips and suggestions for exhibitors; advertising ideas and timely aids for the showman, announcement stories, special news features, personality features, sketches of players and the cast of the principals.

The vari-colored posters are of 24, 6, 3 and 1 sheets; with the lobby displays are two art colored photographs, 22x28 inches.

The famous story of "The Face On The Barroom Floor" adorns the first page of the press book for the super-production of that name. Henry B. Walthall and Ruth Clifford play the leading roles. The book is well illustrated with half-tones, many of them from the "storm scene" that attracted such wide newspaper attention.

Fox Film Corporation has spent much money, time and care in the preparation of the many papers for these seven new super-productions and are certain that this material will be of exceptional help to all those for whom they were intended.

Daily Program Message on "Covered Wagon"

Exploitation on Paramount's forthcoming James Cruze production "The Covered Wagon," which should prove just about 100 per cent effective, is now being used at the New York Rivoli and Rialto theatres under the direction of Hugo Riesenfeld. It is in the form of a program advertisement for the picture, an extra two-page fold being added to the regular program of each house.

The outside, or last, page of the folder contains an illustration on "The Covered Wagon," of full-page size, while the inside page consists of reading matter descriptive of the production. Each succeeding week from now until the opening of the picture in New York the copy will be changed.

Boxing Champions in "April Showers"

Elaborate plans are under way at the Schulberg studios in Los Angeles for the filming of "April Showers," Hope Loring's story which will be made as a Tom Forman Production for release by Preferred Pictures through the Al scheduled to begin work on it January 22nd. The cast will follow B. P. Schulberg's policy of Lichtman Corporation. Forman is featuring a number of well-known players and will be headed by Kenneth Harlan and Colleen Moore.

Schulberg is to make public shortly an important announcement involving arrangements with several famous puglistic champions to appear in the production. Kenneth Harlan has spent all his leisure time for the past few weeks during the filming of "The Girl Who Came Back" in which he has recently completed work, in training with the well known boxer, Leach Cross. He also engaged in some bouts with Jack Dempsey during a recent trip which the latter made to California.

Goldwyn Selecting Cast for "McTeague"

Goldwyn production officials at the studios are selecting the cast for Eric von Stroheim's first Goldwyn picture, "McTeague," from Frank Norris' famous realistic novel. Several selections have now been made.

Jean Hersholt will play the leading heavy role, that of Marcus Schouler. He was last seen on the screen in Mary Pickford's new version of "Tess of the Storm Country," and in Marshall Neilan's first Goldwyn picture, "The Strangers' Banquet."

Sylvia Ashton has been engaged for the role of Mrs. Sieppe and Dale Fuller for the role of Maria. Miss Fuller is a discovery of von Stroheim's and has appeared in previous pictures by him.

Von Stroheim is still in San Francisco preparing the continuity for "McTeague" and picking out the locations. Frank Norris located his story in San Francisco.

Fans Name Stories for Marion Davies

Film fans are clamoring to see Marion Davies in stirring stories of romance and action ranging from the part of the Princess Yetive in "Graustark" to that of Alice in "Alice of Old Vincennes" according to Cosmopolitan. The Cleveland Plain-Dealer has just concluded a prize contest for the best list of books to make into film stories for Marion Davies. The idea was prompted by the showing in Cleveland of "When Knighthodo Was in Flower."

The prize winning list, submitted by Miss L. S. Paddock of Cleveland included the following: Lady Clown in "The Amateur Gentleman" by Jeffery Farnol; Dorothy Manners in "Richard Carvel" by Winston Churchill; Janice Meredith in "Janice Meredith" by Paul L. Ford; Sylvia Marshall in "The Bent Twig" by Dorothy Canfield and Alice in "Alice of Old Vincennes."

School Head Commends "Silas Marner"

Art made a valuable contribution to science when the Associated Exhibitors feature, "Silas Marner," was shown in the Kent, Ohio, Auditorium, under the auspices of the Board of Education, recently. Heretofore its principal value to the educational world has come from its use in classes of literature, but in Kent it served a further purpose.

The Associated Exhibitors branch manager in Cleveland has received the following letter from W. A. Walls, Superintendent of the Kent public schools:

"'Silas Marner' is one of the best films which we have ever shown since the opening of our Auditorium, and we succeeded in making a substantial amount to use in the purchase of a radio outfit for the high school. Our patrons were very much pleased with this picture."

Stirring Sea Scenes Due in "Fury"

Richard Barthelmess' new picture, "Fury," will present some stirring sea scenes, according to word from Associated First National offices. "Fury" is a story of the sea, old Limehouse, London, and Glasgow. Many of the stirring scenes occur on board a full rigged ship at sea. The ship was an old German square rigger—one of the last few of its kind now sailing the seven seas. The scenes were made around Nantucket Lightship.

Here is a tale of rugged, primitive men in scenes that tingle with ruthless battles for mastery—the mate against the captain, the captain against his son, the men against each other.

Henry King directed "Fury." It is an Inspiration picture and is among the February First National attractions.

Noted British Writer on Ince Staff

Talbot Mundy, the well-known British writer, author of "The King of Khyber Rifles," has joined the writing staff of the Thomas H. Ince Studios at Culver City, Calif. He has already started work on the story of a superfeature to be released on the Thomas H. Ince fall releasing schedule. The title "The Devil's Own" has been selected for the production.

In connection with the engagement of Mr. Mundy to write stories for Thomas H. Ince comes the announcement that the Bobbs Merrill Publishing Company has inaugurated a national campaign on six of Talbot Mundy's novels for which they hold all the rights.

Laemmle Would Cut Admissions

Lower Box Office Prices Mean Bigger Business, Says Universal Chief

"BOX office admission prices are too high in many instances."

This startling statement was made by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, as the result of a general film survey made during the last several months by Universal investigators.

Mr. Laemmle, interviewed just prior to his departure for Los Angeles, where he will personally direct Universal's production activities during the coming months, consented to make public the facts his survey has developed and the conclusion he draws from them.

"I don't want to put myself in the way of seeming to tell any man how to run his business," said the Universal chief, "but if my advice were asked by any exhibitor dissatisfied with his profits, the first thing I would say to him, would be 'Maybe your admission price is too high!'

"He might flinch at the statement, and he might cast it aside as utterly foolish. I know it sounds revolutionary, but just listen to this:

"The Central theatre in Detroit has multiplied its attendance by four through cutting its admission price in half. Formerly the admission was twenty cents. It was cut to ten cents. Immediately four times as many customers entered the theatre.

"This may be the thing for every exhibitor to do and it may not be. I don't pretend to know the individual problems of every exhibitor, but one thing I do know. That is that the exhibitor who is losing money or who is not making what he should, must hop to it and do something radical in order to improve his business.

"The Detroit theatre mentioned is a house of 551 seats. During a ten weeks' period a year ago it was doing about $450 a week at an admission of twenty cents. During a similar period recently it ran its business up to $900 a week with a ten cents admission price.

"I know of another theatre which increased its business $300 a week by cutting its admission prices, and of others which built up better business by similar means. I am not at liberty to give out the names of these houses."

Strauss' "Salome" Being Booked

George Wiley Announces Wide Demand For Showing of Big Production

A NUMBER of important circuits and first run houses throughout the country are completing negotiations for the showing of "Malcolm Strauss' Salome," the spectacular motion picture version of the famous love story, which is now ready for release through the independent market. Announcement of the wide demand for the production is made by George H. Wiley, Inc., which is handling the distribution of the picture.

In connection with bookings by circuits and first-run houses, arranegements are being entered into for personal appearances by Miss Diana Allen, formerly a Ziegfeld "Follies" star and dancer, who plays the role of Salome in the picture.

George H. Wiley, of the distributing firm, will start out shortly on a trip covering the Middle West and South, in the interests of "Malcolm Strauss' Salome." He will be gone a number of weeks, and during that time, will close some important territorial deals for the handling of the production, which have been waiting for his personal visit. He will stop at all the key cities on his route, and will co-operate with the independent exchangemen in each territory who handle "Malcolm Strauss' Salome," to put under way a concerted advertising and exploitation campaign. Trade papers, newspapers and magazines will all be used. The striking posters which have been prepared by the Ritchey Company have already attracted wide attention wherever shown.

In the cast, besides Miss Allen, are Vincent Coleman, Christine Winthrop and other distinguished players.

Garsson Approves Stage Play for Screen

Murray W. Garsson is the latest producer to take advantage of the opportunities offered by the innumerable stage plays which have never been translated into screen entertainments and he does not hesitate to acknowledge his faith in this type of material.

Mr. Garsson's special production "Success," is an adaptation from the noted stage play of the same name which had a successful run on Broadway a few years ago and toured the country.

"The reports of the manner in which the stage play 'Success' was received in cities outside of New York was the biggest thing in influencing me to adapt it for the screen," said Mr. Garsson.

Coast Critics Praise Arliss Picture

"There is no reason why the story of 'The Man Who Played God' with George Arliss, should not be of interest, for it has several themes, any one of which would be ample for the ordinary picture," said the critic for the Los Angeles Record when this United Artists release was shown recently at the California theatre to good box-office business. "George Arliss has a way of speaking with his hands, elbows, shoulders, feet and back, which makes him one of the most eloquent exponents of the silent drama."

"The Arliss charm works marvels in this picture and so infuses his scenes as to make them outstanding," said the reviewer for the Examiner. "The supporting cast make good dispositions of their respective parts.

"That master of effective pantomime, George Arliss, has made a somewhat conventional plot for the screen live in remarkable fashion in 'The Man Who Played God'" said the critic for the Evening Express. "Some of the photographic shots were most unusual and artistic, and the direction much above the ordinary."

Irving Lesser Closes Foreign Deals

Three foreign deals were closed this week by Irving Lesser, eastern manager of Principal Pictures Corporation. Mr. Lesser sold five Mounted Police Northwest plays starring and produced by Irving Cummings to the Educational Pictures, Ltd., of Canada, for the Dominion of Canada.

S. A. Newman, well-known distributor of high class pictures in London, this week arranged for the distribution of the Elinor Glyn special, produced by Principal Pictures Corporation, "The World's A Stage," starring Dorothy Phillips, for the British Empire.

Through Miss Rosenfield, a deal was closed with the Overseas Trading Company whereby that concern secured the distribution of "The World's A Stage" and "Environment" co-starring Milton Sills and Alice Lake, with an all-star cast, in the Scandinavion territory.

Former Follies Girl Signs with Fox

Peggy Shaw, prominent in the cast of the recently completed William Fox special, "The Net," has been signed to a new contract by the Fox forces by virtue of the good work she has done in numerous Fox productions during the past year. Upon the signing of the contract, the petite player entrained for Los Angeles with numerous trunks and grips.

"Third Alarm" Starts Fourth N. Y. Week

The crowds that greeted "The Third Alarm" on its premiere performance on January 8th at the Astor theatre, New York, show no signs of abating as the phenomenal Emory Johnson picture concludes the third week of its run. The F. B. O. special has been "building up" since its opening night, due largely to the tremendous word of mouth advertising that has been spreading its fame throughout the entire Metropolis, according to F. B. O.

This production is already being booked by the largest theatres throughout the country and newspaper comments from the various cities are in every case extremely favorable to the picture, it is claimed.

Baby Peggy Is Waiting New Director

Julius and Abe Stern are looking for a new director for Baby Peggy. The little Century Comedy star has had most of her pictures directed by Alf Goulding. The prolonged illness of the latter has necessitated a complete rest, so the Century Company executives will have to appoint a new director for the little girl.

In the meantime Peggy will go to San Francisco to make personal appearances at the theatres there, while new material is being bought in the way of stories and scenarios for her pictures.

Herman C. Raymaker's contract with Century has expired. During Goulding's illness he directed Baby Peggy in her two last productions, "The Little Flower Girl" and "Five After One" (Too Many Lovers).

Final Shots on "Famous Mrs. Fair"

Fred Niblo, this week, completed filming the great American play, "The Famous Mrs. Fair," as his first production for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces. Adapted by Frances Marion from the noted stage success by James Forbes, the picture has consumed close to six months in the making. Like past Niblo triumphs it is said to have been staged on an extensive scale, every effort being expended to make it the outstanding attraction of the new year.

Myrtle Stedman will be seen as Mrs. Fair, Huntly Gordon as Mr. Fair, Marguerite De La Motte as Sylvia, Cullen Landis as Alan, Carmel Myers as Angy Brice, Ward Crane as Dudley Gillette and Helen Ferguson as Peggy.

New Jones Vehicle Is "The Avalanche"

Charles Jones has a new picture called "The Avalanche." It was directed by Emmett J. Flynn, and is said to have a sensational effect that will put a new feather in this noted director's cap. Maurice B. Flynn and Ruth Clifford are prominent in the cast.

"Secrets of Paris" Selling Fast

Commonwealth Film Corp. Acquires New York and Northern N. J. Rights

With the sale of "Secrets of Paris" by C. C. Burr to Sam Zierler, of the Commonwealth Film Corp., of New York City, early this week, a rapid closing out of the domestic territory was effected on this picture. Within the next few days contracts for the remaining unsold territory will be closed, according to reports from the Burr offices. "Secrets of Paris" is expected to have a wide distribution in this country and abroad.

The Commonwealth Film Corp. will distribute "Secrets of Paris" in New York State and Northern New Jersey.

Other independent film exchanges which have closed contracts for the distribution of this picture are the Iron City Film Exchange of Pittsburgh, which will distribute over West Virginia and Western Pennsylvania; H. Lieber Company of Indianapolis, for the state of Indiana; Major Film Company of Boston, who will distribute through the six New England states; Metro Film Exchange of Philadelphia for Southern New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania; Skirboll Brothers of Cleveland for Ohio and Kentucky, and Supreme Film Company at Los Angeles for California, Arizona, Nevada and the Hawaii Islands.

William M. Vogel of New York City, has bought the entire foreign rights for "Secrets of Paris." Mr. Vogel is now in Europe relative to this picture and communications to Mr. Burr point to a rapid sale of the picture to several important European distributing agencies.

Elaborate Set in Fox Special

Village Built and Then Wrecked as Climax of "Town That Forgot God"

"The Town That Forgot God," the Fox special which completed a three-month engagement at the Astor theatre, New York, on January 7, and which will be released February 11, has definitely established itself as a super-attraction.

Critics of the New York newspapers have described the storm and flood scenes in this Fox feature as the most realistic and vivid ever presented on the screen, and as the crowning achievement in the way of spectacular water effects.

Harry Millarde, who attained fame as the director of "Over the Hill," has won new laurels for his magnificent direction of this difficult scene, which was likewise very dangerous for the people employed in the picture and the directors and cameramen who aided in making it. Everyone concerned was happy when it was over without loss of life or injury to anyone, although many people had narrow escapes in the great flood scene. To produce this tremendous climax, which shows an entire village swept away by a torrent of water, Fox Film Corporation went to great expense and nearly six months of labor.

To produce this tremendous climax, fifty-two buildings were erected in a valley in a remote section of New Jersey; these buildings including houses, lighted and furnished, concrete streets, a church, several halls, and various stores, the whole constituting a small town.

Twenty-one thousand cubic feet of concrete, 140,000 feet of lumber, and 210,000 shingles were used. A concrete dam, 21 feet in height, was erected in this valley, accumulating 4,320,000 gallons of water, which were let loose for the flood scene. More than three months were required to erect the set.

Equity Closes Territorial Sale

Southern N. J. and Eastern Pennsylvania Sold on "Has World Gone Mad"

It was announced in the office of Equity Pictures Corporation this week that their latest "Special" production, "Has The World Gone Mad" had been sold to Mr. Ben Amsterdam of the Masterpiece Film Attractions of Philadelphia for the territory of Southern New Jersey and Eastern Pennsylvania.

Mr. Amsterdam held an option on "Has The World Gone Mad" due to the fact that his contract on "What's Wrong With The Women" contained a clause whereby he was entitled to first preference on Daniel Carson Goodman's second production and also entitled to refuse it if it did not meet with his approval as a "Special" production. Consequently, when Mr. Amsterdam came to the Equity Office this week to exercise his option, he was told that the picture was not fully completed as far as titling and editing was concerned but that Sam Grand of Boston and Sam Zierler of New York had purchased it for their territories after seeing but three reels of it.

The picture was screened for him to the best advantage possible and although titles were missing, Mr. Amsterdam closed the deal for his territory.

Trade Paper Ad Used as Exhibitor Aid

The eight page advertisement printed in the motion picture trade papers on the test engagement of the John Stahl production "The Dangerous Age" in Paterson, N. J. is being sent out to exhibitors to aid them in their campaign in putting this picture over big.

All of the stunts employed in the Paterson engagement are carefully noted in this eight page advertisement. In it are shown crossroad signs, several tieups with newspapers, teaser ads used in the Paterson newspapers, copy of a booklet that is being supplied by First National as part of the accessories and other information valuable to showmen. There are enough tie-ups to interest three or four newspapers at once.

First National reports excellent bookings and play dates on "The Dangerous Age" and reports from exhibitors to First National and to the Louis B. Mayer Enterprises, show that it is drawing big houses wherever shown.

Nineteenth Anniversary Week for Fox

Hundreds of exhibitors are showing one hundred per cent programs of Fox entertainments this coming week to mark the nineteenth anniversary of William Fox as a producer of motion pictures. Louis Roesenbluh, in charge of the New York Exchange, is highly gratified by the spirit of cooperation shown by Fox distributors in making this anniversary one of such widespread importance, demonstrating to the Public that Fox Entertainments are not only Quality pictures but possess all the concomitants of amusement that theatre-goers look for when they buy tickets at the box offices.

Bosworth Film Released as "The Man Alone"

The Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., announces that its first of a series of features starring Hobart Bosworth will be released under the title of "The Man Alone," instead of "The Law of the Sea," as previously announced.

"The Man Alone" is a Gold Seal production. It was produced by the Motion Picture Utility Corporation of San Francisco. William H. Clifford directed from the continuity prepared by Clarence Badger.

Editor Enthuses Over "The Hottentot"

W. Ward Marsh, picture editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, was enthusiastic in his praise of Thomas H. Ince's latest First National release "The Hottentot." Under a two column headline reading "The Week's Caution: See MacLean in 'The Hottentot,' he wrote:

"When it comes to listing the best pictures for 1923, the annual habit, we feel pretty certain 'The Hottentot,' the Douglas MacLean picture in the Allen this week, is going to be in that group."

How to Divert Clientele to Theatres Not on Main Street

Continuation of Articles on Selection of Electric Signs and Marquee

By J. M. Shute, Illuminating Engineer

THE manager of a motion picture theatre in any other location than on a White Way is confronted with a problem in the choice of sign equipment almost as great as in the case of the larger theatre. Naturally, with the brightness of the surroundings lower, the sign for such a theatre can be less elaborate and hence cost less to erect and operate in order to prevent the advertising cost from being abnormally high. However, the same care and thought must be exercised in the selection of a display lest the advertising value be lost.

In the preceding article the influences of location and of building architecture on the type of sign as well as the effects obtainable from the sign itself were taken up at length. Thus it was shown that the class of patronage, attracted due to the location, influenced the choice. It also was pointed out that architectural beauty is of great importance for any sign and that the resultant combination of every building and sign must be visualized in order that the completed display may not prove to have a grotesqueness and appearance of unbalance, detrimental to the desired advertising value.

Theatres Not Located on the Main Streets of Cities

The manager finds that he must compete with the theatres on streets where the crowds are larger due to multiplicity of attractions, yet he is unable to rival the white way displays in splendor. How is he to divert the pleasure seeker to his attraction and yet be economical?

Various methods have been tried and found to be successful. One of the best for increasing the circulation of the theatre advertising is to operate aside from the usual theatre display a large sign located at some prominent point on the main street. Such a sign must be sufficiently large and bright to draw attention from the surrounding signs while the display on the theatre itself can be less elaborate due to the lower surrounding brightness. The Branford theatre of Newark, located off the main streets of the city, has obtained great success by following such a course. By locating the sign shown in Figure 1 at the intersection of the two principal streets a very decided increase in the advertising circulation has been obtained.

Brightness

For the theatre sign itself the manager may plan for lower wattage consumption without detracting from the advertising value of the sign, since the surrounding brightness is lower than that of the White Way. However, it must be remembered that brightness is the most important factor for drawing attention, and if too little importance is attached to this detail a dull and uninteresting display will result. One of the best means to make the sign less costly and at the same time allow the brightness to remain sufficiently high to gain attention is to reduce the size of the display. Thus the total number of light sources, rather than the amount of light per unit area can be decreased.

The apparent brightness of a sign in this location will be further increased if the entire sign is connected to a flasher so that it may be instantaneously turned on or off. This sudden flare of light in an area of comparatively low brightness will have a tendency to attract more attention than the same brightness used in a sign which is burning continuously.

Pictures

The use of pictures in the display has been shown to be of great importance. Naturally, in this case the picture must be smaller and more simple in pattern. Simplicity is an asset in this phase of lighting which gives the display more punch than can possibly be obtained from very elaborate detail unaccompanied by great size. The films usually are not shown at this type of theatre for periods of time longer than one week, and for this reason sign pictures descriptive of any particular film would be too expensive. Therefore, the design must embody a flexibility wide enough to cover all films which might be shown. This naturally leads to the use of display characteristic of the theatre itself, with a text which can be changed to suit the film being featured.

Motion and Border

A compensation for lack of a large picture display often is made by the use of an elaborate border consisting of various colors combined in different ways to give attractive motion effects. While the motion produced in the large White Way display often is an imitation of some real motion due to the size of the sign, in this case the motion will have no definite meaning. The object of such an effect is to draw the attention, thus the border will assume the greater part of the attracting power and the enclosed message will carry the selling power of the display.

The border has another effect on the sign besides that of increasing the attracting power. It increases the surrounding brightness, thus improving the legibility of the enclosed letters by lessening the halation. For the theatre sign of this type where long distance readability is less essential than with some other type, the lighting of the border is designed to be of a slightly lower intensity than that of the letters, usually by employing a large number of smaller lamps so necessary to carry out the desired motion. In this manner the surrounding brightness is increased sufficiently to improve the readibility of small letters and at the same time is not so powerful that it detracts from the selling power of the message.

An example of this type of border which has become quite common is one employing several lines of lamps, each of a different color. One line is lighted at a time and revolves about the sign. At definite intervals this color circuit is flashed off and another flashed on to revolve in a similar manner. Such a method modified slightly for each particular theatre has the advantages of attracting not only by a scintillating colored border but also by the periodic change from one color to another and yet at any given time has a comparatively low order of brightness. Figure 2 shows a good example of this type of sign.

Color Effects

Color effects should be used whenever possible in the border to assist the motion in attracting attention. Color always adds variety and interest to a display. However, in the selection of these colors care should be

Making the Most of Advertising

THE third of the series of articles on electric signs for motion picture theatres is herewith presented and contains perhaps even more valuable information and practical suggestions for the exhibitor than did the two excellent articles which preceded. It requires excellent judgment to select the suitable type and size of electric sign which will produce the greatest drawing attraction for a theatre. However, from the suggestions and rules which are laid down by J. M. Shute, author of this series of articles, it facilitates the task of selecting the proper sign for any particular theatre. Also the subject of marquees is treated in this article.

The fourth and last of this series will appear in next week's issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Fig. 1. A sign of this type located in a prominent position is of great value to a theatre located on a side street. The border runs continuously, the message flashes in clear lamps followed by the arrow brilliantly illuminted in red taken that the combination be such as to make the message stand out by contrast and not become overshadowed by the border itself. It has often been noticed that the letters of the text have been illuminated by colored lamps in such combinations that the letters themselves become indistinguishable. Thus, for example, the use of green lamps for the initial letter of each word and red lamps for the other letters should always be avoided since the visibility of the red is so much greater than that of the green that the words become unintelligible, due to the fact that the first letters of each is almost invisible. If, however, in the same message the green lamps were replaced by yellow lamps, the message could easily be read since red and yellow are of approximately the same visibility and yet the colors are easily distinguishable.

Conclusion

It can be seen from the foregoing that even though the manager of this type of theatre has fewer effects at his command to choose from ,due to the necessity for lower cost in electric advertising, he must use as great thought in combining them as the manager of the White Way theatre. He must do without the use of a large picture but can substitute for it an attractive border, combining color and motion effects in such a way as to obtain the desired attractiveness. Thus by exercising care and judgment he will find the completed sign will be attention compelling and will sell to the passerby the message displayed.

Theatres Located in Suburbs of Cities or in Small Towns

The managers of theatres in this class are confronted with problems much different from those affecting the preceding classes. In this case the theatre is often the only one in the locality and the manager is not called upon to rival a nearby competitor in advertising but to prevent possible patrons from passing by his attraction to go to the large city theatre. The character of patronage is also changed in this case from a crowd of people already on the street seeking diversion to a group of families making up the community.

The advertising appeal must be to the person in the home. To make this appeal stronger the advertising of each theatre must be adapted to its own particular surrounding. Thus one located in a wealthy residential suburb must appeal by its quiet dignity and appearance of refined richness, while another may need a more flashy type of advertising to draw the attention of its patrons.

Desirable Effects

For the majority of theatres in this class cost prohibits the use of anything but a simple display. There is no demand for a sign picture or any intricate flashing border to make the sign draw attention from others. Though simplicity is absolutely essential, the sign must have the appearance of balance in its proportions and be suited to the structure upon which it is located.

In any case the surrounding brightness is so much lower in this case than in those of the preceding types discussed that there will be little difficulty in obtaining a display sufficiently brilliant to attract attention. In some cases a slight amount of color judiciously applied will furnish added charm and interest to warrant its use. Because simplicity is necessary and high brightness is not required

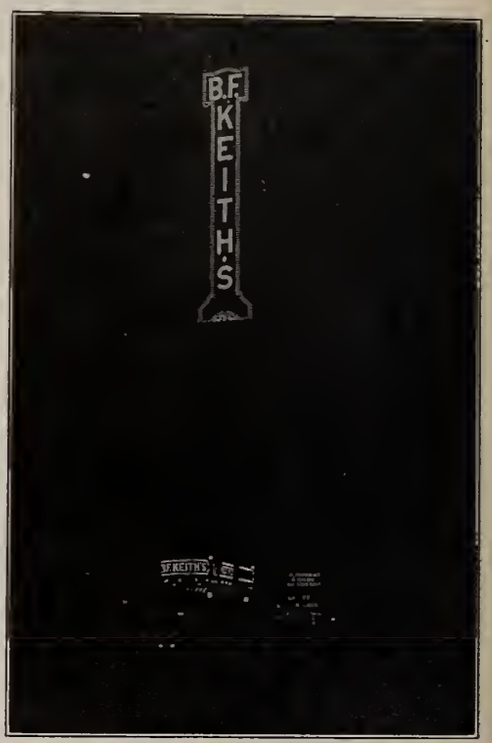

Fig. 2. The above sign, 70 feet high, is of great advertising value to a Cincinnati theatre. The double border is lighted by 50 watt concentrated filament lamps in daylight bulbs and the letters by 50 watt lamps in clear glass bulbs

Fig. 3. The suburban theatre finds a sign of this type lighted from the interior to be a business getter at a comparatively low cost. The letters are equipped with small glass lenses through which the light is projected very effective designs in enclosed signs may be thought out, resulting in much lower cost, not only initially but also in operating and maintaining the display due to the use of a few high wattage lamps rather than a large number of smaller ones.

Desirable Types

Very attractive displays consisting of letters and border outlined by small glass lenses or bull's-eyes made of either colored or clear glass have been used for this type of sign very effectively. The lighting effects are produced by lamps of a much larger size than can be employed for exposed signs located within the sign behind the lenses. Such signs need not be confined to the continuous burning type since a little care in the size and spacing of the lamps will allow the use of rather striking motion effects which will greatly enhance the attractiveness.

A theatre display of this type is shown in Figure 3. Its design is particularly well thought out and its brightness is well above

Interior of EASTMAN THEATRE from Stage
Rochester, N. Y.

Russell B. Smith, Engineer-Architect Seating by The American Seating Company

In America's Foremost Theatres

MERE splendor in outward appearance will not make a theatre chair. There must also be those less apparent but none the less essential qualities of correct construction, skilled workmanship and sound materials that make for dependable and satisfactory service over a long period of time. With so large and important an investment as seating for auditorium and theatre, years, not weeks and months, must be the measure of value.

Theatre owners and managers of longest experience know well that underneath the beauty and good taste of American Seating Company theatre chairs are present always those sterling qualities of enduring value and strength that make for lasting satisfaction and long wear.

that of the surroundings. Well designed, though inexpensive, displays of this type greatly aid the suburban theatre in attracting patrons from the surrounding homes. Without such a sign to draw their attention these same persons would spend considerable time in traveling to the nearest large community to pay a higher price to see the same film.

Another type of inexpensive sign which can be built up quite attractively for such service makes use of white opal glass in place of the lenses. Here the letter is one solid piece of glass in a metal frame and is raised somewhat above the background to allow better lighting effects. With both types each letter can be easily removed, thus greatly increasing the flexibility by allowing the message to be changed frequently. Figure 4 shows the sign display employed by one of the larger suburban theatres.

Conclusion

Although the manager of a small theatre has very few choices in the matter of possible effects due to his necessity to keep his advertising expenditure low, he can, by careful planning, work out an attractive display. If sufficient judgment is used, he will find that his simple sign has great influence in attracting patrons from the surrounding homes to his theatre. The selling power resulting from the expenditure involved in erecting and operating the sign will be sufficient to reward him for his choice of this type of advertising.

Theatre Marquee

The main purpose of the theatre marquee has been changed radically within the past few years. Its original object, a means of protection from the elements to patrons passing between the theatre and a conveyance drawn up at the curb, has become subordinated to its use as a support for electric advertising displays. Through careful planning the marquee has now become an aid to the theatre in attracting patrons.

Although the general shape of this paart of the theatre is practically standard, the marquee of any particular theatre may be decorated either very profusely or in a simple manner, depending to a great extent on the location of the theatre and the brilliancy of the surroundings. Thus the White Way theatre would naturally require a much more ornamental and brightly lighted marquee than the one marking the entrance of the small town theatre

Regardless of the location, the purpose of the electric display on the marquee is to announce to the passing the name of the theatre, and the name of the attraction presented within. The display is at a relatively short distance above the passerby and must be of a nature to attract and not repel. To retain this attractive power there must be nothing in the nature of the sign to annoy the observer. For this reason care must be exercised that glaring lights are avoided, since nothing can annoy and decrease the attracting power more than a display so brilliant that it is blinding to the eye. A good approach counts for a great deal and a would-be patron is often driven away from a theatre due to the use of too brilliant lighting near the entrance. The psychological effect is such as to create the belief that the interior will carry out to a great extent the principles embodied in the lighting of the exterior.

Desirable Effects.

The theatre located in a brightly lighted portion of a large city finds it necessary to display its text in letters lighted by exposed lamps, to employ a border around these letters and also in most cases some decorative scrolls in the form of stars with emanating rays, fountains, flags or other attention compelling objects. Color must be used not only to subdue the glaring brilliance of the lamps but to add richness to the display. Motion, to lend an appearance of reality to the decorative objects and to attract the attention of passersby, is essential to such a display. All of these desirable effects must be combined in such a manner as to insure attention from the surrounding brilliant attractions, and yet not be overdone to the extent of creating a blinding glare. (See Fig. 5.)

The smaller theatre, with less brilliant surroundings, must attract with even less brilliancy than the larger theatre. In this case exposed lamps of even the smaller sizes would cause a contrast with the surroundings so great as to distract and not attract. Therefore, the text which is most important must be made up of letters lighted from the interior. Letters of either the bullseye type (shown in Fig. 3) or of the white opal glass type (shown in Fig. 4) are most commonly used and give the best results for this type of marquee The letters are sufficiently brilliant to attract attention and at the same time produce no blinding glare detrimental to readability. Texts made up in this manner are easily changed, thus allowing a flexibility so necessary to prevent high advertising cost. The lamp cost is also decreased when letters of one of these types are employed due to the use of a few large lamps instead of a multiplicity of smaller ones.

The choice for lamps for use in signs is of great importance, since the ultimate result is either created or destroyed by this choice. For this reason the final article of this series will deal entirely with the proper lamp equipment required by the various types of signs which have been discussed.

This concludes the third article on electric signs for motion picture theatres, which has been written by J. M. Shute, illuminating engineer. The readers who have been following this series have found some exceedingly valuable information and practical aids on the choice of electric signs for the theatre.

[The fourth and final article of this series will appear in next week's issue.—Editor's Note.]

Gold Seal Machines Selling

A notice has been received that Gold Seal Automatic Ticket Machines have recently been installed in the Morningside theatre in New York; the Colonial, Strand, San Toy and Arcadia theatres in Reading, Pa.; the Albany, Regent and Arbor theatres in Albany, N. Y. The general report also acknowledges the fact that all indications show increasing business in this company.

Work Commenced on Crandall's $650,000 Tivoli in Washington

ON Monday, December 4, work preliminary to the construction of Crandall's new Tivoli Theatre, at Fourteenth Street and Park Road, Northwest, was begun in Washington and two days later announcement was made that Mr. Crandall had acquired control of the Garden Theatre on Ninth Street between D and E Streets, Northwest, to be known hereafter as Crandall's Central Theatre. Detailing and fabrication of the steel for Crandall's new Ambassador Theatre at Eighteenth Street and Columbia Road, N. W., are well under way and work on the [illegible] some new addition to the Crandall [illegible] theatre will be begun at once.

The completion of these operations will swell the number of Crandall houses in Washington to ten and the total circuit to [illegible]. The circuit comprises the Savoy, Ninth and E Streets, Grand, Colonial, York, Lincoln, Ambassador and Tivoli in Washington, the Grand in Cumberland, Md., and the Strand in Martinsburg, W. Va., and the American and Rialto in Roanoke, Va.

Beautiful and Commodious

Crandall's Tivoli will be one of the most beautiful and most commodious residential theatres in Washington and one of the most noteworthy structures of its kind in the United States. It will have a frontage of 2[illegible] feet on Fourteenth Street and [illegible] feet on Park Road with a total [illegible] with [illegible] of 2,500.

The entrance will be at the corner of the intersecting streets and the Fourteenth Street facade will be two-story shops and an equal number of various offices. Rothafel Inaugurates Use of Invention to Relieve Rigors of Rehearsals

LATE last Saturday night, for the first time in histrionic annals, a director sat far back in one of the largest theatres in the world and directed an entire program's rehearsal without once leaving his seat or raising his voice above its normal pitch.

In the Capitol theatre, by means of the amplifying apparatus which the Western Electric Company terms its Public Address System, Samuel L. Rothafel accomplished in but a few hours what heretofore has been a well nigh night-long task. Formerly the working out of the intricate and beautiful lighting effects characteristic of Capitol presentations entailed a great physical effort on the part of Mr. Rothafel, as well as a prolonged strain on his voice, for he had to walk from one part of the theatre to another and shout into a megaphone in order to make his instructions heard by the men in distant parts of the theatre.

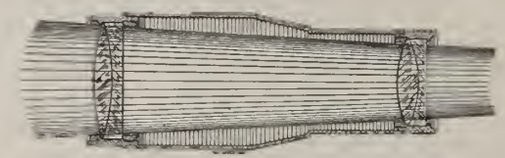
This is no longer necessary. The Public Address System makes his voice clearly audible to every person who looks to him for instructions,—no matter in what part of the theatre that person may be,—in the projection booth, the spot light room above the booth, at the switchboard behind stage or at the conductor's stand on stage.

A microphone so designed that every gradation of tone is faithfully reproduced, and so sensitive to the speaker's voice that it will pick up his words at a distance of ten feet, is placed on a table in the back of the house where Mr. Rothafel usually sits when directing rehearsals.

Comfortably seated within some feet of this transmitter Mr. Rothafel gives his directions in an ordinary conversational tone. They are transmitted to the Western Electric vacuum tube amplifier and thence projected to all parts of the stage and house by the loud speaking projectors. These projectors are not unsightly. When desired, it can be arranged to keep them out of sight altogether by concealing them in the house decorations.

In commenting upon the amplifiers which he had put to such a novel use, Mr. Rothafel said, "When the Western Electric Company's amplificationists told me that the man up in the projecting room and the man in the spotlight room could clearly and distinctly hear directions spoken in an ordinary conversational tone by a speaker sitting in the last row under the balcony, it seemed incredible. But it was very evident at the rehearsal that my voice was clearly audible to everyone no matter in what part of the theatre he was. That means, by use of the amplifier I can direct rehearsals much more easily and comfortably because I need not shout.

"The amplifying system seems to have eliminated the problem of acoustics, since it is apparently able to carry the voice very nearly, if indeed not perfectly, to any part of the theatre."



Cross-section of projection lens made by the Projection Optics Co.

New Lens Placed on Market

The Projection Optics Company, Inc., of Rochester, N. Y., has designed a new projection lens for which they make many claims. It is said that the construction of this new lens deviates radically from all the previous types heretofore known and has been evolved under the constant consultation and co-operation of some of the leading projectionists in the country.

The length of the lens is such that it permits the rear element to come as close as possible to the gate and therefore gather in the maximum amount of light rays. Special attention is also called to the claims for the superior color correction, to the perfect central definition and flatness of field. This lens is now being tried in several theatres.

Regards from British East Africa

About six months ago the editor of this department wrote Herford T. Cowling, the renowned world traveling cameraman, and has just received a reply to his letter. Cowling informs us that he is now chasing big game in British East Africa and writes:

Dear Mr. Abbott: Thanks for your letter of August 17th, just reached me here in Africa.

Herewith a few pictures "in action." Have been making some very fine pictures out here. Am on a trip around the world. Best luck. Sincerely, H. T. COWLING.

P. S.—The pictures show how one has to cover the camera and wait around water holes for animals. If you publish any please save me a copy.

THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS has been exceedingly fortunate in securing the exclusive rights for publishing in a series of articles in this department the book "Motion Picture Photography," by Carl Gregory and published by the New York Institute of Photography. Undoubtedly this book represents the finest work that has ever been written on motion picture photography in that it treats with accuracy and intelligence all the various phases of this part of motion pictures. Not only does the text contain the most valuable of information but is also written in a very interesting way. A few of the subjects which are treated in this book are "Fascination of Cinematography," "The Nature of Light," "The Motion Picture Camera," "Cinematograph Lenses," "Focusing the Camera," "How to Prepare Photographic Solutions," "Development of the Negative," "Cutting and Editing" and many other phases of this general type of work.

This series of articles which will take up in the course of time the greater part of this book will be started in this department in next week's issue of the NEWS.

California Theatre Co. Will Build

Edward A. Johnson, president of the California Theatre Company, announces that a half million dollar theatre and office building will be erected on upper State Street. The lot is 80 feet wide on State St. and 225 feet deep. The plans call for a theatre on the first two floors and offices on the upper six. The style of construction is Spanish Corinthian entirely in harmony with the traditions of Santa Barbara. Building will be reinforced concrete and steel and the construction most modern. The projection booth will be on the ground floor and assure perfect projection.

Marcus Loew

Marcus Loew is the head of the largest chain of motion picture and vaudeville theatres in the world. Born in New York, he started his commercial life as a printer; later he became a furrier, in which business his failure was merely a stepping-stone to Success. For at this point he turned to the "movies," opening up in a small store, where by turns he cashiered, and took tickets, after which he would close the door and run the projector.

From so humble a start, Marcus Loew has risen to a point where it is an actual fact that he is never quite sure as to how many theatres he owns. One or more may have been added to his chain by one of his executives while Loew is indulging in his favorite pastime, golf; and it is only by consulting his accountant that he can definitely know how many houses are on his circuit.

Naturally, Mr. Loew sees to it that his interests are conserved by efficient management. And when a new Loew theatre is opened, a GOLD SEAL Automatic Register is right in front. The new Loew's State, one of the most beautiful theatres in the world, has its GOLD SEAL equipment and so have over a hundred other Loew houses.

GOLD SEAL is the Mark of Perfection—and the GOLD SEAL Automatic ticket selling machine will give you the utmost in service, the lowest-cost upkeep, and never-failing operation. There are 25 Reasons Why a GOLD SEAL will make as well as save money for you. Write for them today.

National Anti-Misframe League Forum

AN interesting letter has been received from Wesley Trout, of Enid, Okla., who gives some ideas of his own on the proper manipulation of the various apparatuses that are used in the projection department. There are several points that are brought up in his letter which will probably help some of the projectionists in operating their equipment. The projectionist from Oklahoma says:

"The following advice on motors, generator sets, etc., will be of big help to projectionists in order to secure better results from their projection room equipment.

The Care and Operation of Motors

"Before starting a new motor or a generator fill the oil reservoirs with the best quality of clean dynamo oil; overflow plugs must always be kept OPEN. Remember that the oil should be withdrawn occasionally and fresh oil put in the oil reservoirs. The old oil may be filtered and used again.

Overheated Motor Bearings

"A hot bearing may be the result from one or more of the following causes: faulty lubrication, grit or other foreign matter in the motor bearings, insufficient lubrication; armature may not be centered with respect to pole pieces; side pull, which is due to magnetic pull on the armature. The projectionist should remember that only the very best of oil, free from sediment and grit should be used for the lubrication of motor bearings; the ordinary machine oil that is supplied with the projector will never do and should not be used under any condition; it is too thin for this class of work; all the oil cups should be kept clean and well filled, and remember that the oil rings should be watched to see that they carry the oil properly up to the motor bearings and the shaft.

Rough Motor Shaft

"A rough shaft may be caused by dirt, grit or overheating. The roughness, if not too excessive, can be taken out by the use of a little emery cloth, but the projectionist should take great care to remove all grit and filings when the job is done. Now if the roughness is too great that it cannot be taken out with the use of emery cloth, it will then be necessary to remove the armature, and have the shaft smoothed up in a lathe.

General Care of Generators

"Remember to keep the generator clean at all times. Keep the commutator clean (but do not use sandpaper or emery cloth on it). If the commutator becomes dirty, hold a small pad of coarse canvas or cheesecloth against its surface while the machine is running, and then when free of dirt wipe the surface with a clean piece of cheesecloth that is slightly moistened with pure vaseline. If this advice is followed you will have very little trouble with your commutator.

"Remember to not let the carbon brushes become too short, as this is the cause of much sparking. A new set should be installed when they become too short.

"Most all machines have ball-bearings, and they require a very small amount of lubrication. There is no use of flooding your bearings with oil.

"In the ordering of parts for your generator set you should remember to give the name, serial number and state make of machine. It is the best plan to order all your parts direct from the factory; this will insure you getting the proper parts and will cause you less trouble in the long run.

"Remember that motor generator sets should be installed in a clean, dry, well ventilated location and near as it is possible to the arc lamps which it is to operate. Inaccessible locations should be avoided, as such locations will result in the machine being neglected by the projectionist, allowed to become dirty and perhaps damaged.

"It is very important that the brushes make perfect contact with the commutator, and to secure good contact it is important that both brushes and commutator be kept very clean at all times.

"The lamp side of most all generator sets does not require fuses, as the generators are so constructed that they will protect themselves in case of an overload."

On a recent visit to Denison, Texas, I found screen results to be very pleasing at most all the theatres. At the Rialto I found brother Carl Newton projecting pictures with two late type Simplex projectors, with which he was projecting a clear, steady picture. During the showing of a feature, while I was in the theatre, the light was well attended, the picture was steady, plenty of amperage used to make the picture clear and brilliant. New intermittent sprockets and star and cam are kept on hand with plenty of other repair parts in case of a breakdown.

At the Arcade brother Lynn McHanson was in charge of the projection, and he was projecting very pleasing screen results with a Powers 6-A and an old model Simplex. The picture was fairly steady and the light was

Coming Soon

BEGINNING in two or three weeks this projection department of the NEWS is planning on running a series of articles dealing with electricity, optics, etc., which will prove both very interesting as well as exceedingly helpful to the projectionist. This series will be written in such a way that it will be understandable to everyone and will be presented in short write-ups each week, thus giving the readers plenty of time digest and thoroughly assimilate the knowledge therein contained.

It will be of interest to the projectionist to know that on another page of the Technical Department, beginning in the next issue will be run a series of extracts from the book on a condensed course in "Motion Picture Photography." This book was written by Carl Gregory who is undoubtedly one of the best informed men on motion picture photography. This book is published by the New York Institute of Photography. Through the courtesy of the publisher, the NEWS is to have the exclusive privilege of publishing any part of this book. This book not only contains information dealing with motion picture photography but also deals with such subjects as "The Nature of Light," "Optics," etc.

The editor strongly advises every projectionist to read both of the above mentioned series of articles both from the standpoint of interesting reading and also the valuable information that will be derived therefrom.

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Mr. Theatre Owner—Face The Facts

Statistics show that 90% of the Film Fires originate in the projector.
The owner carries Grave Responsibility for the Safety of his patrons against Fire and Panic and is forced to face serious loss even though covered by insurance.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters Says "Protectall" Affords Protection Against Film Fire

Insurance is only a partial cure of the results of fire at heavy cost

"Protectall" Prevents Fire and the Investment is Small

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." And yet this prevention costs many times less than the partial cure.

just fair. Pictures are run rather slower than they should have been. This is a small picture house, running from 12 p. m. to 11 p. m.

The Queen theatre is running pictures and using two Powers No. 6-A's, and brother H. Moore is getting fairly good screen results. There is room for some improvement. Mr. Moore is the business manager of Local No 280, I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O.

The Local is forging right to the front with new members and has now a very nice size membership for a small local. Brother W. T. Looney is the secretary and Albert Owens is the president. The Local meets once a month.

Dear Ed.:

Just a few lines to let you know that I am still alive and did not forget about you. I am sending $4.00 for the NEWS for two years. The NEWS is a good book.

Send me a supply of labels, please, for I am almost out of them. I am still working at the Orpheum theatre and having a good light and clear picture. The boss just got a new set of carbon jaws because by the time I would have 2,000 feet of film run through the old jaws would be red hot. So I am going to try and see how the new jaws work. The boss is talking about building a new theatre in the Spring.

Guess I'll hang up this time.

Truly,

ANDREW J. GMITTER, No. 1517,

Dear Editor:

I just received my button and membership card with my labels. You can guess how well pleased I was to get them and, believe me, I am using them for all there is in it and am getting better results out of the exchanges since I have joined the League. As I have to get busy I will close and will write more next time.

Here's hoping the N. A. M. L. success in the future.

Improvements on Aerial Photography

Vice Consul Dawson at Paris reports that the French laboratories in Milan, Italy, have perfected some invaluable improvements in aerial photography which is fine for the news reel boys. Plates are perfect in all details, being planimetric and altimetric, and are traced continuously and automatically by the operator. Photographs in series can be made as plates can be changed in five seconds during the flight, even with different magazines. Inaccessible places can be photographed from any height.—Knappen.

"Passionate Friends" Is Completed

George H. Davis, who has been busy completing the screen adaptation of H. G. Wells' "The Passionate Friends," announces the completion of this feature film, and it is now ready for release.

As far as records can disclose, "The Passionate Friends" is the first H. G. Wells' story filmed. The dynamic action, the Wellsesque treatment of the characters, makes the book admirably suitable for screen use, allowing for no additions or eliminations, it is claimed.

The method of distribution is still under consideration, several offers for outright sale having been received. Maximum distribution and an early release date figure as important factors in the deal for United States and Canadian rights.

Plum Center Comedy Is Completed

"Pop Tuttle's One Horse Play" is the title of a forthcoming Plum Center comedy produced by the Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation, which is making this series of two reelers for the Film Booking Offices of America. Dan Mason is starred under the direction of Robert Eddy.

This comedy shows Pop in the role of a theatrical producer in the village of Plum Center. Pop's offerings, presented at the Tuttle Opery House, consist of "Romeo and Juliet" and "Richard III." The picture will especially appeal to all those who have appeared in, or had a part in amateur theatricals of all sorts.

"Pop Tuttle's One Horse Play" is scheduled for early release on the F. B. O. short subject program.

Royalty at Showing of "Four Horsemen"

Queen Mary of England, Queen Maud of Norway, and the Princess Victoria witnessed recently at the Palace theatre in London an exhibition of the Rex Ingram production, "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," the Metro picture which is generally conceded to be one of the highest achievements of the screen.

Word of this was cabled this week to the Metro home offices in New York by English representatives of the firm.

Scene from "The Love Nest," Producers Security

This sanction and interest completes the triumph of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" in the British capital. From the time the Ingram photoplay first was shown it has been not only a tremendous popular success but an attraction attendance upon which was socially important, according to Metro.

"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" is based upon the great novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez.

Fox Director Completes 47th Production

"The Net," the super special feature, which Fox Film Corporation announces for release February 25, is the forty-seventh big production directed by J. Gordon Edwards, dean of motion picture directors.

Edwards, who has to his credit Theda Bara's "Salome," "The Queen of Sheba," "Nero," a current Fox special, and "The Shepherd King," which has not been released as yet, has imparted to "The Net," the results of his years of experience in the silent art. Spectacular scenes, lavish settings and gorgeous costumes characterize this 1923 picturization of the thrilling Broadway success.

Katherine Kavannaugh with Goldwyn

An association of long standing has been renewed by the addition to the Goldwyn scenario staff of Katherine Kavannaugh as a scenario writer and personal assistant to June Mathis, newly appointed editorial director of the Goldwyn studios.

WHEN you want personal assistance, or advice, or to have an important matter well handled, to whom do you go for help? To the busiest man you know. Strange to say, he always seems ready and able to give you the benefit of his undivided attention and experience.

ORGANIZATIONS are the same as individuals. Working at top speed every member is alert, competent and anxious to serve, with pride and enthusiasm in everything they do. Their capacity—individually and collectively—seems without limit. Nothing is too big or too small to inspire their close attention and competent handling. Successful organizations naturally attract and hold the best talent and secure the finest possible results from such talent.

STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES freely admit that they should be able to deliver the results that success inspires. Large and small producers who have tested the quality of Standard Service are liberal with their statements of approval. They agree that this very busy organization is delivering the highest quality of individual service and product.

OF A STORY--PACKED WITH DRAMA !!

A New Cycle of Pictures is Coming——

In fact, it's here—here with the release of "The Bishop of The Ozarks," the forerunner of a cycle of pictures which will sweep the country on a tidal wave of public demand—the first of the pictures dealing dramatically with phases of life in the places where oxen and covered wagons carry red-blooded men and women who fight for love and home against forces of ever-diminishing power.

Be a Leader—Not a Follower

Show the FIRST of this new cycle. Beat your competition to the big profits by booking this BIG, NEW, DIFFERENT drama— this unusually entertaining and powerful drama of a man's fight for home and recognition by his fellows and a beautiful girl's glorious struggle for the right to live and love.
Man, ride this one for a sure winner—it's a hundred-to-one shot with you on the long end of the bet, and the rest of the field still at the starting post. And the best time to act is NOW!!!

with a fine cast including

ROBERT FRAZER ~ GLADYS HULETTE ~ FRANK LOSEE

An Achievement Production

A production filled with the color, the glamour of Paris night life; the thrills of Apache vengeance.

A story of powerful romantic melodramatic quality that has played to fine business wherever presented in the larger key cities.

A cast with drawing power and popularity.

All the trade critics gave "AS A MAN LIVES" favorable reviews and the daily newspaper reviews—which represent the public's viewpoint better than a trade paper can—are even stronger in their approval.

15,000 Salesmen Are to Sell "Fun from the Press" Direct to the Public

STANDING ROOM ONLY sign would be hung out on every moving picture theatre in the country if other producers were in the unique position of The Literary Digest to send patrons into motion picture theatres.

This foremost American news magazine has a field force of more than 15,000 salesmen selling the publication in practically every town and city of the country.

This immense force is constantly reminding the millions of families upon whom they call every week to attend the motion picture houses in their neighborhood which show The Literary Digest short reel "Fun from the Press."

These salesmen are not only soliciting attendance for "Fun from the Press" but they go even further and recommend the theatre program in its entirety pointing out the fact that the managements of theatres which show this high class Literary Digest reel can quite confidently be relied upon to exercise the same judgment and discrimination in choosing the rest of their bill as they have exercised in choosing The Literary Digest subject.

Exhibitors know that "word-of-mouth" advertising is the most valuable that can be had. Here it is!

The constant weekly solicitation which these salesmen make to the many thousands of families they come in contact with is bound to show its effects through the box office windows.

This new selling plan has created a tremendous stir among exhibitors everywhere. As one exhibitor remarked, "thousands and thousands of neighborhood salesmen calling on families every day and every week urging them to go to the movies cannot help but be a boon to exhibitors, not only those showing "Fun from the Press," but to the entire industry."

It is sure to be the means of getting people who have gotten out of the moving picture habit or who have never gotten into it to attend the theatre.

WARNING—"Fun from the Press" is the only reel produced and sponsored by "The Literary Digest." Any use of the name in connection with any other reel is unauthorized and illegal.

Dear Mr. Hodkinson,

I don't know of any bit of news I have heard in recent months that was as interesting to me as the announcement that your organization is to distribute "Down to the Sea in Ships."

This production typifies to me the tremendous accomplishments that are possible to the independent creator; the inspired worker, unhampered, and free to roam the world that the screen might have new blood and new thought.

Knowing the goal towards which your organization has been working these many years I realize the significance which I feel you must attach to your opportunity of presenting this unusual production.

How frequently these days we hear the exhibitor and the public cry for "something new." And how often in the past you have told them that it is only through independent creation and independent marketing that the cry could be answered.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" sums up the argument.

Sincerely yours,

Robert Welsh

"Down to the Sea in Ships"
Elmer Clifton—Twelve Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHAT will be written in screen history as a masterpiece of its kind is offered in Elmer Clifton's "Down to the Sea in Ships" —a romance of the golden days of whaling. Taking more than a year to produce, it presents mute testimony that anything extraordinary in production cannot be achieved by working per schedule. Here is a picture which exudes the richest kind of atmosphere, local color, detail and romance. It is authentic because Clifton went up to the whaling city, New Bedford, and gained the cooperation of its people. The director has gotten away from the beaten path.

This romance of 1850 when the whaling industry was at its peak is unusual in its departure from the conventions. You might say that it is impossible to record the adventurous lives of the whalemen in an accurate manner. Yet Clifton has done it. He has not only brought forth a series of truly sensational scenes such as the sighting of the whales and the pursuit of them with the subsequent stirring episode when a mighty bull monster is harpooned, but he lifts the veil of romance which covers the Quakers and their faith. The characters with the exception of the protagonist are members of the Society of Friends. We are taken into the meetin' house and shown the Quakers carrying on their quaint customs. The marriage ceremony is one highly appealing episode.

While the picture brings forth the whaling industry of the fifties with its dramatic moments revolving around this vital enterprise of yesteryear, there is also interwoven a romance, the background of which is colored with a rich glamour. The relics and heirlooms of the dead past live again with all their picturesque atmosphere. It serves as an education as well as an entertainment. Everything, seemingly, has been done to make it complete with the color and detail of the period in which it is laid. Painstaking care is behind every touch—every incident. It's a heart story as well as a graphic one. And because it is so unusual in theme, characterization and production, it will be talked about as one of the sensations of the year. The photography is exceptional, and the acting is genuine.

Raymond McKee, Marguerite Courtot, Clara Bow and Patrick Hartigan contribute especially good performances. The realism, the glamour of the romantic day in which it laid, and the production values make it sure in its appeal. The title has a magnetic quality.

The Cast

Charles W. Morgan	William Walcott
Henry Morgan	William Cavanaugh
"Seuff" Smith	Leigh R. Smith
Patienee Morgan	Marguerite Courtot
Thomas Allen Dexter	Raymond McKee
Judy Peggs	Juliette Courtot
Nahoma	Clarice Vance
Town Crier	Curtis Pierce
"Dot" Morgan	Clara Bow
Jake Pinner	Patrick Hartigan
Samuel Siggs	J. Thornton Baston

Scenario by John L. E. Pell. Directed by Elmer Clifton. Photographed by Alexander G. Penrod.

The Story—Treats of the romantic and adventurous days of the whaling industry in New England, with a youth who wins the consent of his sweetheart's father to marriage by becoming a whaleman and accepting the Quaker faith.

Classification—Romance of whaling industry in 1850.

Production Highlights—The romance, atmosphere, photography, thrills attending the chase and harpooning of the whale, the Quaker scenes. The action. The human interest.

Exploitation Angles—Would advise featuring this in big way. Title is a winner. Suggests great opportunities for colorful lobby display and prologue.

Drawing Power—Should go big everywhere.

"Down to the Sea in Ships"

Elmer Clifton's New Production a Masterpiece in Its Line—Replete With Sensations and Human Interest

Reviewed by Roger Ferri

When the ten best productions of the current season are finally sorted out this Elmer Clifton offering should not be overlooked, for it is one of the most marvelously amazing attractions ever offered owners of motion picture theatres. In its class it stands alone and as an unquestionable masterpiece. Here is a production that is just that and more—a picture with a real heart. It is at the same time a great education and a remarkable entertainment vehicle. Its value goes beyond that of the theatre, for it will create talk and discussion that will live for a long, long time.

Cinematographically, "Down to the Sea in Ships" is that much sought different production exhibitors have prayed for. It is dramatic, sensational, romantic, comical and picturesque, dwelling on a story that is appealingly human.

It is big in everything. You don't have to take any risk when you grab this one, for it is that type of production that will appeal to everybody for it has everything in it—and most important it is in possession of heart-throbs that are gripping and leave a permanent impression that will prompt word-of-mouth boosting.

Elmer Clifton is deserving of much commendation for "Down to the Sea in Ships" for it is what this writer would gamble two to one in predicting that it will prove a huge box-office winner. It's a production that will justify the investment of several thousands of dollars in exploitation, for the picture will earn it all back 100 times.

It will be a wise distributing agency that will grab this one and a wiser exhibitor who will allow it to bring the silver to its box offices.

For sensations, "Down to the Sea in Ships" is the best yet. And these sensations result from every day hair-raising experiences of whalers. And they are not faked. This writer knows New Bedford and many a time was despatched there by a Boston newspaper to "cover" shipwrecks, etc., in that picturesque locality.

To enumerate the innumerable thrillers depicted in this attraction would mean the use of an entire page. Suffice, however, to say that this picture is so securely packed with dangerously bold feats in which whales unconsciously play an important role that it has any 15-episode serial, this writer has seen to date, washed off the board.

The cast is one of "names" that are well-known. William Walcott, as the keen, scrupulous and upright New England ship owner and whaler of the Quaker faith, is realistically clever. William Cavanaugh, as Henry Morgan; Miss Marguerite Courtot, as Patience Morgan; Raymond McKee, as Thomas Allen Dexter; Juliette Courtot, as Jndy Peggs, and the rest of the cast al do consistently good work and contrihute materially to the telling of an interesting story in a smooth and forcihle manner. To Mr. Clifton, however, must go a bulk of the credit, for it was his directorial work that produced such a creditable special. The photography, hy Alexander G. Penrod, could not have heen any hetter.

The Story

This story is the actual thrilling tale of a young couple who went through more exciting ineidents during their hrief careers for the sake of the great love they held for each other than any American story yet adapted to the screen. First it was religion that kept them apart and then it was business aetivities of the stern father who did not believe the young man worthy of his daughter. While the youth could and did brush aside the sectarianism he could not prove to the old gentleman the great code of the whaleman. Yet he overcame this great obstacle In the end while seemingly serving the purpose of the arch villain plotting away the wealth and property of the great Charles W. Morgan and his American shipping interests.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

December 29, 19 2.

Dear Mr. Hodkinson:-

I am glad to learn that "Down to the Sea in Ships" will be released through your organization and that you propose to get back of it in a big way. The picture deserves the very best support this industry can give it, and the box-office needs the welcome this outstanding picture will assuredly have from the broad public In my opinio. it is just the picture the public wants today and hopes for and isn't getting. No one can miss its deep true flavor of human life and daring. It rings true and big. I believe sincerely that the very salvation of the exhibiting business depends upon the production of just such genuine dramas as this. It goes without saying that we will be glad to help you in every possible way.

Sincerely,

W. A. Johnston

President.

Priscilla Dean Excels in Universal's Picture — "The Flame of Life"

With the explosion of the mine and the resultant panic, there bloomed a heroine to prove again that beautiful souls and golden hearts lurk behind coarse jackets. And out of the revelation grew a romance which broke down the walls of caste and ended as we all like to see a romance end.

Such a character is given to PRISCILLA DEAN in UNIVERSAL'S great picture, "The Flame of Life," which is the screen name for Frances Hodgson Burnett's world-famous novel, "That Lass o' Lowrie's." And, though the character calls for all of which this sterling actress is capable, she rises to the occasion superbly.

The action is laid in a mining town of Northern England, as you doubtless remember, and all the great facilities of UNIVERSAL CITY were necessarily brought into play to create the settings. It is a remarkable picture with a remarkable cast, and if you don't see it, you will miss one of the gems of the year.

With MISS DEAN in "The Flame of Life" are such excellent people as Robert Ellis, Wallace Beery, Kathryn McGuire, Beatrice Burnham, Fred Kohler, Emmet King, Frankie Lee, Grace Degarmo, Evelyn McCoy, Richard Daniels and Nancy Caswell, and the picture proves, as many another has done, that you can't see all that is best in pictures unless you see UNIVERSALS.

THE ISLE OF DOUBT

OVER big circuits, in important first run theatres and at neighborhood houses everywhere, "The Isle of Doubt" has brought forth the same expression: "An attractive feature that pleased our audiences."

Newspapers from all sections of the country have praised it as an offering which satisfies and which reflects the careful production of a spirited story by a capable cast.

Right from the start, the trade press agreed in recommending it. The Motion Picture News, for example, said, "This is a picture much above the average of those released by some of the veteran producers."

Exhibitors say that a paragraph of performance is worth more than an entire press book of promise. Here is a sample paragraph, taken from the news pages of the Moving Picture World, "Chicago—'The Isle of Doubt' did a wonderful business at the La Salle Theatre here, catering to neighborhood patronage."

All of which proves that quality counts in the long run. "The Isle of Doubt" is running stronger every week, backed by the reputation it has gained through the expressed opinions of exhibitors who know by experience that it is a proven-by-performance box office attraction.

Mr. E.W. Hammone
Pres. Educational Film Exchanges
370 Seventh Avenue
New York City

My Dear Mr. Hammone;

When I learned, after my arrival in America, of the great extent and influence of your cinema, reaching millions of your people every day, I thought to myself that it would be most wonderful thing if the screen could one day be employed to help me spread the message I am trying to carry to all mankind.

It was never my desire or intention to consent to appear in any picture which would be based upon fiction, but when Mr. Elmore Laffingwell, who has directed my publicity, told me that you would be willing to take to the people a two-reel educational picture, which would actually impart my message and explain my work, I was immediately impressed that it was my duty to take advantage of such an opportunity. I am aware of your extensive distribution facilities, and I thank you for the fine co-operation you have given in making arrangements to show the picture, "The Message of Emile Coue", which I sincerely hope will entertain your millions of patrons while still benefiting them by showing how self-mastery, through conscious auto-suggestion, can help every man, woman and child - everywhere.

The proceeds of this motion picture, Mr. Hammone, will go to establish a free clinic, or more properly speaking, institute, near my home in Nancy, France, where I have great difficulty now in handling the crowds that come to see me. It must be understood right now that I am not personally to be the beneficiary of whatever this picture earns; not one cent will come to me. The free institute so badly needed in my home town, will serve thousands of people in quest of help, and if you are to assist in making that a possibility, it ought to afford you much satisfaction.

Accept my sincere thanks, please, for the great kindness and consideration you have shown my message. You understand and seem to sympathize with me in what I am trying to do, and for the sake of the cause - the spreading of the message, I wish greatest success to the picture in which I appear, trying to explain from the screen to millions I cannot otherwise reach, just what I am explaining from the lecture platform wherever I go.

Faithfully yours-

E Coué

Gentlemen:

You have doubtless received a great many letters from grateful exhibitors in appreciation of the remarkable value of the Booking Guide. I wish to add my own thanks to the Motion Picture News for this worth while and truly valuable publication which is indeed a step forward and renders the Motion Picture News the last word in efficient service to the industry, particularly to the exhibitor.

As an index to an exhibitors file of the News, the Booking Guide is invaluable while the data and information it contains is something that every exhibitor can use to advantage, especially the new department of Box Office Reports in Percentages.

With the Booking Guide inhis office, the exhibitor has only to read the News for happenings in the industry, then file it away and use the Guide.

I shall await every issue with anticipation and accept it with thanks.

Very truly yours,

"The Hottentot" Proved It in Detroit Last Week— Zero, Too

Detroit, Jan. 24.

The sudden zero spell and the extreme weather changes did considerable damage to business at the picture houses last week, yet every house showed a profit. The biggest attraction was "The Hottentot," which seemed to pick up more business every day. No picture in a long while has created equal talk around. Being shown in another first-run house this week.

Estimates for last week:

Capitol—"The Hottentot." You don't need extra advertising and exploitation when you have the goods. Here is a picture with a title that means nothing, yet it drew almost as much business as which played recently to record receipts. John H. Kunsky won't play any picture in the Capitol over a week, yet "The Hottentot" was deserving of a longer run, so he moved it into the Madison for this week. Around $24,000 last week.

MIGHTY LAK'A ROSE

From the story by Curtis Benton

A drama of high society and low society

-and she played him "Mighty Lak'a Rose"

The successor to "Humoresque" "Over the Hill" and "The Miracle Man"

When a fellow loves a girl well enough to do three years in jail for her ♥ and then high society tries to take her away from him

that's drama

The story of why he went to jail for her and what happened while he was there

that's entertainment

It's being advertised in the Saturday Evening Post

It has the same mysterious power that, without a big star, made "Humoresque" and "Over the Hill" break records.

A story of high society but not snobs ❤ a tale of crooks but not crime · A production with de luxe settings contrasted strikingly with the abodes of the humble.

Above all

A drama of the heartstrings of humanity

MIGHTY LAK'A ROSE

What luck!

Grooves

ONCE upon a time (it was only last August), a certain picture came to New York—as many pictures do; and it was looked over by all the distributors—as many pictures are.

And it was unanimously disapproved of and consistently turned down—by all the leading distributors.

With this particular picture a sale was not urgent—as is generally and unfortunately the case with the occasional or independent producer. The last dollar hadn't been put into it and the producer was not standing helpless before a buyer and saying: "Please, gentlemen, take my picture."

In fact the picture was waiting for one particular man—one of the few showmen in the show business—to return to this country and take it up. But in the meantime it was thought not a bad idea to let everyone look at it and talk about it.

But the picture was talked down—not up, down and into retirement.

Today the picture is running at a New York theatre and turning them away. Everybody is talking about it. Some say it's the greatest motion picture; others, the greatest show in town, etc. At any rate it's a whooping success.

It's so good—that's the funny part about it—that all the distributor's customers—the picture houses of the country—can't get it, until it has been roadshowed.

This is not a criticism of distributors—their show sense and judgment. That's a ticklish matter. We have in mind a few exhibitors who would have grabbed the picture—or tried to. But, at any rate, it's far from simple to know just how pictures will go.

This picture is different—that's why, probably, distributors shied at it. There's no star, director or story. Some camera men shot it at the constant risk of their lives; and instead of being somebody's fiction, it is the overwhelming thrilling truth of God's great realities. But it is different; yes, quite so.

And we have a lot of sympathy with the distributors, because, if any one of them had taken over this picture he would have to make several thousand exhibitors believe that their public should see it even though it was—different. And that's another matter.

But it does seem as though something were radically wrong all along the line when such pictures can't get easily and quickly into the machinery of the business and to an eager public. It is difficult to explain—to a child for instance—that the distributors thought this picture was too bad for exhibitors because it was too good for them—so good it had to be roadshowed.

The public is surfeited with—just pictures, just movies, because the whole business, exhibitors included, is thinking of and planning and wanting and getting just pictures. Just pictures—stars, dramas, directors, gag situations, indoor stuff, outdoor stuff—all the ingredients that inevitably turn out a regular honest-to-God, garden variety of sixty per cent good picture. And the whole business is laid out in grooves to make and show—just pictures; in such grooves, in fact, that so great a picture as the one we speak of, or "Nanook," for instance, has a devil of a time to fit in anywhere.

Last week we were one of an audience that sat flabbily through a feature—rated a good one; and we too joined in the universal gasp of relief and delight when a Baby Peggy picture came on. It was so different.

The public is looking for something real; and the public hopes for something big from the motion picture.

A few new grooves won't hurt this business.

And a good start could be made with the exhibitor to get his mind rid of present day grooves. The distributors, in general, won't change, can't change, till he does.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

PUTTING over big deals has become so common in the picture business that when they are given an airing in the columns of publicity they create a one-day sensation and the public which is interested soon looks for another big scoop. Sol Lesser put over a big deal last week that will keep the boys talking for some time. The Lesser group have taken over the T & D California circuit, which carried with it an 80 per cent interest in the New York franchise of First National.

Lesser, Mike and Abe Gore and Adolph Ramish control the West Coast Theatres, which have developed rapidly under their management. These theatres will be amalgamated with the T & D, which means that Sol Lesser has become the boss on the Coast. The boys who use the table cloths to mark up profit and loss or to emphasize their million-dollar talk will have something to record when they mention the Lesser project. It is a deal involving millions—oh, several of them.

Sol Lesser's production activities are also going on apace. Principal Pictures Corporation, of which Sol, Irving Lesser and Michael Rosenberg are the guiding spirits, has some ambitious plans. Harold Bell Wright's stories and George M. Cohan's plays will carry the Principal trade-mark.

IT'S a great purpose which is guiding Dorothy Davenport Reid these days. Wally Reid's widow will carry on her battle against the drug menace through the screen. She expects to have the aid of leading figures in the picture industry toward making a feature which will arouse the public to the perils of dope. It will be her message to the world, and Wally's gift to the thousands in the grip of the drug evil. Mrs. Reid hopes that it will aid and inspire the founding of a Wallace Reid Memorial Home for Drug Addicts. There is no better medium than the screen for the expose of the drug menace.

WHAT'S this we hear about Theodore Roberts taking a flyer in vaudeville the middle of February? The screen can ill afford to lose the gifted character actor and it is hoped that he will soon return to the Kliegs. Roberts has not been on the stage since he became identified with pictures several years ago. It is possible that he wants to use his voice again. He will appear in a dramatic sketch with a small supporting cast. The act will have a try-out in St. Paul.

THE appearance in a recent issue of Photoplay magazine of an article over the signature of Rodolph Valentino, in which the actor presented his version of the controversy with Famous Players-Lasky, led us to remark editorially that Valentino had pursued a wise course in taking his case directly to the public. Rodolph evidently intends to continue the policy. On Friday of last week he appeared before an audience at the Y. W. C. A. in Yonkers, N. Y., and while there were other celebs on the program, including State Censorship Commissioner Joseph Levenson, the Yonkers Herald headlined the fact that Valentino's speech was the "big attraction" and adds that the ladies were there in such numbers that "hall and gallery were jammed to the doors."

WHEN the Olympic leaves New York harbor February the tenth the big boat will carry Adolph Zukor and S. R. Their itinerary includes Paris, Nice, Naples, Rome, Constantinople, Bucharest, Budapest, Vienna, Berlin, Copenhagen, Stockholm and Christiania. They will be accompanied on their trip by Clarence Bowden, former member of the Hoover Relief Commission, who is said to be well versed in European trade conditions.

CORINNE GRIFFITH will arrive in New York Sunday to select a vehicle for the first production of her own company to be released by Hodkinson. A SIZABLE portion of New York as it used to be back in the days of John Jacob Astor has been transferred or to be exact has been reproduced in Brooklyn.

Cosmopolitan Productions is making a picture version of "Little Old New York" with Marion Davies in the leading role and the only building big enough to house one of the scenes, that of lower Broadway, the Battery and Bowling Green, as it was a century ago, was the 23rd Regiment armory.

Here has been built a set that tells its own story of why a motion picture can cost a million dollars. Little old New York in every detail has been built in the armory drill room. Delmonico's restaurant, with its open front resembling a present-day lunch wagon, Bowling Green, with the iron fence surrounding the spot today, just as it was in 1810, the old city hall, the old court house and whipping post have all been included in what is claimed as the biggest set ever built.

The young maple trees are in full leaf, and slab stone walks with cobble stone gutters are there and the old-time fire wagon with its leather buckets have been built for the fire alarm scenes of the story.

The most extensive research work was necessary on the part of Miss Davies, Director Sidney Olcott, Joseph Urban, who designed the settings, and Luther Reed, who made the adaptation, in order to faithfully reproduce the correct atmosphere.

Miss Davies entertained about fifty magazine and newspaper scribes last Friday at a luncheon given at the armory. Prior to the luncheon the guests watched the filming of several scenes that required the services of a large cast of principals and a thousand extras, all of whom were costumed in the period of the story, 1810.

WILL ROGERS is busy these days appearing nightly in the Follies and doubling in speeches at banquets, a pastime which he has taken up seriously this winter. His presence at a banquet indicates that the sting is taken out of listening to a deal of dry chatter concerning "co-operation, co-ordination," etc. The Oklahoma humorist is always scheduled to appear on benefit programs. He had them laughing uproariously last Sunday night during the Actors' Fund Benefit at the Hippodrome. After talking about the Ruhr, Dr. Grant, bonuses and other current topics, he closed with some snappy remarks about the Ku Klux Klan. Says Will: "I'm no fool. I'm not goin' to say anything about the Ku Klux. I'm not goin' to have 'em after me." Called before the curtain, he said: "The Ku Klux is against all Jews, Catholics and colored people. They say they are 100 per cent perfect. Well, they won't get over in New York, working on a one per cent margin. Besides there aren't enough clean sheets to cover 'em."

THE prevalence of the all-star cast has resulted in a peculiar condition on the Coast, according to word from there. The demand for these multiple-luminary casts has caused salaries to double and treble, in some instances. At the same time, it is almost impossible to obtain the desired players for these casts, since they are booked weeks and months in advance. Some producers express a fear of high salary days similar to those when the star system was at its height. This situation is partly due to the fact that independent state rights producers have been greatly strengtnening and improving their casts.

"TILLERS of the Soil" is another interesting picture. Abel Ganz—producer of "J' Accuse," made it and then someone unmade it and then Myron Stearns made it back again by good re-editing. And now it has people guessing, of course. One expert said it was fine, artistically, but—etc.; whereupon an exhibitor who was present and who runs a chain of suburban houses said: "Give it to me; my roughneck audiences will eat it up." So there you are. Who does know? No one, of course, but the public. It would be nice if we had a small try-out theatre here in New York. Even if it didn't pay it would be less expensive than a school for distributors and other expert judges.

APPENDICITIS has stalked into the studios and taken three of our leading luminaries on location in hospitals. Viola Dana was stricken with the erstwhile fashionable ailment the other day and may be found in the Good Samaritan Hospital in Los Angeles. Margaret Courtot was successfully operated upon at a Newark hospital, while the latest bulletins from Roosevelt Hospital, New York, have it that Bebe Daniels is doing nicely. Bebe has been troubled for several months and although she has had no serious attacks she decided to part company with her appendix. Over in Lausanne, Switzerland, is Max Linder, who is in a hospital recovering from a fractured arm.

IT has taken two scenario writers to furnish the New York stage with two of its biggest hits this season. Which proves if anything that stories for stage and screen need not be treated so differently as some authors would have us believe. It seems to us that what any scenarist or playwright needs first of all is a STORY. The mechanics follow. The plot, the characterization, the situation and the climax must be interwoven into a fabric which sustains itself and the interest of the spectator.

Thomas Fallon dramatized "The Last Warning" from a magazine story and brought forth an exciting mystery melodrama. John Colton, who wrote "The Woman Who Walked Alone" for Dorothy Dalton, is co-author with Clemence Randolph of "Rain," the outstanding hit of the season—a play based upon a short story by W. Somerset Maugham. Try and get seats to it. All about a missionary of the South Seas who lost communion with the spiritual light in his contact with the flesh. The playwrights have fashioned a gripping document of human frailties.

GOLDWYN has corralled Victor Seastrom—which is a good thing for Goldwyn and Seastrom. The producers are fortunate in getting this gifted director whose Swedish Biograph pictures will be remembered as the last word in artistic expression—even though they weren't made for the box-office. Seastrom is fortunate in associating himself with an American company, where his ideas can be properly exploited—where he can put them over in studios equipped with every modern device. He doesn't need to take lessons from anyone when it comes to exploiting the human heart throb. Furthermore, he can act.

THE screen camera is making history again. Princeton University tradition and campus life will be recorded in motion picture film. The student body voted Tuesday in authorizing appointment of a committee to take 7,700 feet of film a year as a pictorial history of the activities and interests of every class. Each class will have a four-year reel record. A total of 1,475 feet of film already has been "shot," including pictures of the Yale-Princeton football game.

Do Exhibitors Want Tax Repealed?

No Interest in Bill to Abolish Low-Price Theatre Tax, Says Congresman

J. H. MICHAEL, chairman of the executive committee of the Western New York Motion Picture Theatre Owners, Inc., and manager of the Regent theatre, is in receipt of a letter from Representative Clarence MacGregor of the 41st district, New York, who recently introduced a bill in Congress calling for the abolition of the tax on low price theatre admissions, in which he sets forth an amazing situation—the non-interest of exhibitors of the state and country in a bill which would mean a saving of millions of dollars a year to the theatre men. Although Mr. MacGregor introduced the bill he got no encouragement, according to the letter; nor, it seems, was there any interest whatever on the part of exhibitors or exhibitor organizations. It is just this sort of innocuous desuetude that is going to help keep censorship in New York state, according to Mr. Michael, who points to the already widespread campaign on the part of women's clubs and others to keep the state motion-picture commission in Albany.

In commenting on the situation as regards the tax bill, Mr. MacGregor says that a month has passed and he has received outside of Mr. Michael's letter "just two letters on the bill and one request for a congressman in answer to a letter from a constituent." And in the face of this situation many exhibitors are complaining about the tax admissions.

Mr. MacGregor's letter to Mr. Michael follows:

"This session of Congress will end on March 4th and there will probably be no extra session. This means that Congress will reconvene in December.

"From now until Congress reconvenes would not be any too long a time to create a demand for the passage of the bill to remove the tax on low price theatre admissions.

"To illustrate the matter let me call attention to the fact that I introduced the bill December 13, 1922. It was carried in the press dispatches of the Associated Press pretty widely.

"A month has passed and I have received outside of your letter just two letters on the bill and one request for a Congressman in answer to a letter from a constituent.

"I recall when I first came down there was a demand for the removal of the tax on soda water and I assure you that I received from ten to fifteen letters a day on the matter and all other members were having the same experience. It took a little time but the Tax was removed.

"The fur dealers and jewelers are still working on their matter but they have nothing like as popular a thing as you have to work on."

It looks like it is time for the exhibitors of the country to get behind this measure 100 per cent. and create a demand for the passage of the bill or forever hold their peace when a "friend in Washington" tries to help them turn losing houses into profitable ones—for that is just what the war tax means in many cases.

M.P.T.O.A. Issues Separate Charters in Missouri

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America has issued separate charters to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri of which Mr. Joseph Mogler, of St. Louis, Mo., is president, and to the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Missouri, of which Mr. Charles T. Sears, of Nevada, Mo., is president.

This was done at the request of the Theatre Owners of the State at their recent convention at Excelsior Springs, Mo., where a resolution was submitted requesting same and unanimously adopted.

Forty-Five Week's Total in Carolina Music Suits

Organized exhibitor circles in North Carolina were greatly surprised to learn during the past week that a total of forty-five cases had been entered for suit against Carolina theatre owners for infringement of the music copyright laws by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

John H. Manning, Esq., of Raleigh is state representative for the music people and has been threatening suit for some six or eight months; however, the actual filing of this number of actions against exhibitors in the State leads one to believe that few exhibitors have paid the music license fee demanded by the Society.

Twenty-nine of the cases are filed in the United States Court for the Western Districts of North Carolina and sixteen suits in the Eastern Districts and will come up within the next few weeks for preliminary hearings. It is expected that the theatre owners will pool their interests in defending the actions against them.

Movie Censorship Bill Is Presented in Nebraska

The Nebraska state legislature has received a movie censorship bill, which was expected, according to an announcement made several weeks ago. Nebraska motion picture men are interested but not excited. Two years ago when a similar bill was presented to the legislature the movie interests succeeded in defeating the proposed measure.

J. E. Kirk and C. E. Williams, representing the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Nebraska, have been to Lincoln, the state capital, and will go again to keep in touch with the situation.

A. R. Pramer, president of the association, announced recently that the members of his organization will not go to any great length in an effort to defeat this legislation, but if the bill should be enacted, which is not probable, they will invoke the referendum and thus hold the act in abeyance until the voters of the state can express themselves. They are confident that on a state-wide referendum a censorship law would be defeated.

National Board of Review Holds Annual Luncheon

THE ANNUAL get-together luncheon of the National Board of Review was scheduled to be held Saturday, February 3, in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City. The National Committee for Better Films, affiliated with the National Board, was to join in the event.

The topic for the luncheon, "The Future of the Exceptional Photoplay," was to be discussed by a group of speakers, to include: Everett Dean Martin, until recently chairman of the National Board; Walter Prichard Eaton, essayist; Clayton Hamilton, author; Kenneth MacGowan, dramatic critic of the New York Globe and former director of Goldwyn's scenario department; Senator James J. Walker, majority leader of New York Senate; Rex Ingram, Reginald Warde and Ferdinand Pinney Earle. Madame Nazimova and Charles Bryant were also to be present.

Milwaukee F.I.L.M. Ass'n Holds Election

The F. I. L. M. Association of Milwaukee at a meeting on Friday elected Geo. Levine, local manager of the Universal exchange, president; Wm. A. Ashmun, of Pathe, vice president; Robert Hess, secretary, and Arthur H. Grey, of the Wisconsin Film Association, treasurer.

This organization, which has been in existence for a number of years, is composed of managers of the various film companies and works for complete co-operation between the distributing and exhibiting branches of the local industry. A "grievance" committee was appointed, and will act as a board of directors in amicably settling all complaints and making whatever adjustments are necessary.

The committee includes Charles Trampe, Mid-West Distributing Corporation; Arthur Grey, Wisconsin Film Association; Ray Smith, Ray Smith Co.; Max Stahl, Educational, and John Ludwig, John Ludwig Film Co. A committee will also co-operate with the Legislative Committee of the Wisconsin Exhibitors' Association in activities against proposed state legislature bills.

Frisco Manager Attempts to Halt Bold Thief

Manager I. E. Phelps, of the Tivoli theatre, San Francisco, last Friday night became a local hero through his courageous attempt to capture a thief who obtained two coin bags from the box office.

Manager Phelps was inside the house at the time of the theft. The thief asked for a ticket, and as he received it, put his arm through the window and seized two coin sacks. The cashier, Mrs. Marjorie McKenzie, seized another bag, containing $500, and began to scream, as the man darted away.

The crowd about the lobby was too dazed to move, and as Manager Phelps came from the house and saw the situation, he made after the thief. Despite his threats, he pursued him for four blocks, when the thief entered a waiting automobile and escaped.

It is said that Manager Phelps' prompt action saved the $500, as no one else had made a move toward the man. The police were notified and a description sent out.

Schenck Joins in West Coast Theatres Deal

Corporation Acquires Turner and Dahnken Circuit and First National Franchises

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK has purchased an equal interest with Sol Lesser, A. L. Gore, Michael Gore and Adolph Ramish in West Coast Theatres, Inc., according to a wire from Los Angeles. This announcement comes following the recent one to the effect that West Coast Theatres had purchased the Turner and Dahnken circuit of houses in and around San Francisco. The deal also involved the purchase of First National franchise for the state of New York, the First National franchise of Northern and Central California and a half interest in Educational Pictures of San Francisco, giving the firm approximately ninety theatres, the First National franchise for the California territory and a half interest in the California Educational exchanges. The deal is said to involve many millions of dollars.

With their minds busy with plans for the development of their enormously increased resources and responsibilities, Sol Lesser, A. L. Gore and Michael Gore returned recently to Los Angeles after completing this gigantic deal.

A. L. Gore asserts that this huge "turnover" of the T. & D. holdings is not so much a matter of theatre control as it is of theatrical service, and that the West Coast Theatres, Inc., in assuming this tremendous burden is fully conscious of the tremendous responsibilities attaching, in view of which plans are maturing that will fully meet these obligations, says Secretary Gore.

Sol Lesser, whose initiative brought about the "contacts" which eventuated in the deal, says that Mr. A. L. Gore has agreed to go to San Francisco and there remain with his wife until permanent adjustments have been made between the two branches of the big organization, and that ultimately it is proposed that Joseph Samuels will be the West Coast representative residing permanently in San Francisco. The chain is to be operated as an entirety and not as two—the amalgamation will be complete and the entire circuit handled from Los Angeles.

Mr. Gore will soon start for New York to make connections with theatrical enterprises and with experts in every line of dramatic and theatrical activities so that a steady supply of the highest class acts will be provided the West Coast circuit.

"Such a consolidation as this," points out Mr. Lesser, "is advantageous not only to the industry and to the artists but to the public as well. By controlling such a chain of theatres we can afford to buy the best talent the stage affords and to bring it to our patrons. The number of our houses permits us to offer artists and performers of all kinds a tour of at least thirty weeks, and at remunerative salaries. This brings to us the cream of acts and our patrons get the benefit. It is the same with art directors, ballet masters and the like. We can hire the best and keep them profitably busy staging acts for presentation over our circuit, thus bringing into the smaller towns acts of metropolitan quality and seldom otherwise seen outside the largest cities.

"We propose to have at the head of each of our producing departments the most distinguished experts available, and that is one reason for Mr. Gore's early departure for New York, where he will enter into contracts with these specialists. Los Angeles gets the benefit, too, by reason of its vastly extended artistic colony—we shall help to make this southern metropolis the center of the artistic life of the west if not indeed of the nation."

Before his New York trip, Mr. Gore goes to San Francisco, where he will register with Mrs. Gore at the Palace and remain in close touch with local conditions there and with his associates, Adolph Ramish, Sol Lesser and Michael Gore.

The party returning from San Francisco with possession of the T. & D. circuit securely in the hands of the West Coast Theatres consisted of Sol Lesser, A. L. Gore, Michael Gore and David Croft, the somewhat overworked auditor of the company, whose struggle has been with a multiplicity of figures and the complications of a gigantic deal.

We published this picture once, a year or so ago, with a caption asking the reader to identify the two characters. At that time Miss Negri was a newcomer to American audiences and Charlie, minus his crepe hair moustache, looked more like a stranger than he does nowadays. The photograph from which the cut was made was taken in Berlin, where it is safe to assume the romance described in another column began.

Charlie Chaplin and Pola Negri to Marry

CONFIRMING many rumors that have appeared in the public press, Charlie Chaplin and Pola Negri have announced their engagement.

Last September, when it was first rumored that Chaplin was to marry the Polish actress, it was said that there was a clause in her contract with the Famous Players-Lasky which prevented her from marrying for at least three months. This was later denied by her company. In December, however, it was said that after an interview the two stars had with Jesse L. Lasky they had been able to convince him that the contemplated marriage would in nowise interfere with Miss Negri's screen career.

Miss Negri, whose real name is Countess Appolonia Domskey, was divorced from her husband, a Polish noble, more than two years ago. As an actress she made her debut in Warsaw in 1913, and her rise was rapid.

Censorship Fight Waged in Beaumont, Texas

Theatre owners and managers of Beaumont, Texas, are now engaged in a fight to prevent local censorship of motion pictures. The city commission of Beaumont has been petitionel by the central council of the Beaumont parent-teacher association to establish a censorship commission, and the petition will be pressed by certain members of the organization, it is strongly indicated.

Mayor B. A. Steinhagen and City Manager George J. Roark are opposed to censorship on the ground that it is likely to fall prey to politics. They hold, further, that it has been a failure in Texas cities where it has been tried. During a recent appearance of a committee from the parent-teacher body before the Beaumont city commission Mayor Steinhagen pointed out what he alleged to be "the complete failure of censorship in the city of Houston, Texas," near Beaumont.

City officials will attempt to pacify the parent-teacher organization and to prevent general censorship.

Six Companies Incorporate During Last Week

The following motion picture companies were incorporated in New York State last week, the capitalization and incorporators being as follows: American Life Pictures, $1,500, S. C. Hodge, Edward Marshall and N. Lemon, New York; Maysny Amusement Company, $50,000, Charles Warner, Belle Robins and B. E. Boss, New York; Lee Moran Corporation, $5,000, E. Kraychie, Arthur Skillman, H. G. Liese, New York; Broadway and Forty-third Street Amusement Company, $5,000, T. F. Garrity, J. G. Griffin, G. Brock, New York; Hail and Farewell, Inc., $15,000, W. G. Lovatt, Alibel Corey, Sylvia Schwartzman; Talking Publicity Corporation, $5,000, Ruth Vogel, Etta London and L. I. Fink, all of New York.

Denies Harold Lloyd Will Sever Pathe Connections

WILLIAM R. Fraser, secretary and general manager of the Harold Lloyd Corporation, who is now on a visit to New York, has authorized a flat denial of the published statement that Harold Lloyd has made other releasing arrangements to take effect on the expiration of his present contract with Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Mr. Fraser's denial refers specifically to a paragraph printed in Variety on Jan. 25 under the heading "Williams has Harold Lloyd" and includes his official denial of all similar reports.

Meeting Advocates Clean Selling

St. Louis Exchange Managers and Salesmen Plan General Uplift Movement

A DECIDED step toward better selling methods in the St. Louis film territory; closer co-operation with the exhibitors and a general uplifting of the motion picture industry in this territory was taken Saturday, January 27, at a joint meeting of film exchange managers and salesmen held in the new headquarters of St. Louis Film Board of Trade.

The affair was in the nature of a luncheon given by the exchange directors for the men in the field. Floyd Lewis, president of the Film Board of Trade presided, while C. D. Hill, manager for W. W. Hodkinson, and Joseph Desberger, American Releasing Corporation manager, as the committee on arrangements, took care of all the details.

There were no set speeches. Everything was impromptu, everyone who wanted to getting up and saying his little speech.

The trend of all addresses was that motion pictures should be sold in the St. Louis trade territory strictly on their merits; that a salesman should not boost his own products by knocking some other exchange's product, and that above everything else he should not make any promise to an exhibitor that he did not intend to keep or was not in a position to fulfill. The salesmen were advised that immediately upon returning to the exchange office they should advise the management of the conditions under which films had been sold so that any promises they may have made the exhibitor could be taken care of.

Following the luncheon the salesmen held a meeting of their own and perfected a temporary organization. Tom McKean of F. B. O. was named temporary chairman, and Lester Bona of First National, temporary secretary. Permanent officers will be named next Saturday. This club will meet every fourth Saturday with the exchange managers for the discussion of mutual problems.

The tentative plans of the salesmen organization call for the drafting of a rigid set of rules, setting forth the ethics of the profession —the chief motto of which will be, "Sell your own pictures and don't unsell the other fellow's."

The courtesy of the St. Louis Film Board of Trade Headquarters has been extended to the salesmen and the city and road men are free to make use of the rooms at any time, availing themselves also of the club features, etc.

The salesmen will appoint a grievance committee which will hear complaints against members violating the rules of the organization.

Should this committee find itself unable to cope with any situation that may arise it shall meet with a similar committee from the St. Louis Film Board of Trade, and the joint committee will then take such steps as are necessary to straighten out the situation.

The exchange managers and salesmen are confident that the new salesmen club and the regular monthly get-together luncheons will place the business on a better basis than ever before.

Montreal Houses Show Big Attendance Advance

CONTINUED advances have been made by the moving picture theatres of Montreal, Quebec, according to figures compiled by A. Bienvenu, civic superintendent of privileges and licenses, for the three months of September, October and November last. The report for this quarter showed that 4,848,216 people had paid admissions to performances where the amusement tax had been charged.

The revenue derived from the amusement tax during the three months amounted to $176,765.05, half of which goes to the city for local charities and the remainder to the Provincial treasury for distribution under the Public Charities Act among Provincial institutions.

Inspector Bienvenu estimated that the total patronage at the local houses amounted to approximately 17,000,000 and for the previous year it was about 15,000,000.

Pastor Conference Plans Stricter Censorship

At the Fourth Annual State Pastors' Conference, held last week in Columbus, a program was outlined for strengthening motion picture censorship in Ohio, and for enforcing the Sunday observance statutes of the State.

This is an answer to the M. P. T. O. A. of Ohio, which is trying to abolish the present Sunday law, and which is also trying to establish an open minded system of censorship.

A resolution also adopted is aimed at the attempt of the M. P. T. O. A. of Ohio to demand protection of motion picture theatres which are suffering by reason of acute competition with churches and schools. The matter is being centered in Salem, O., where an exhibitor with a heavy investment, is about to go under because he cannot compete with the schools and churches which are showing complete picture programs at lower admission prices than he can afford. A test case in court is being made to determine whether it is legal for a non-tax paying institution to operate in direct competition with a tax paying institution. This is said to be the first time that the subject has been taken into court.

Sam Bullock, field representative for the M. P. T. O. A. of Ohio was present at the Pastors' Conference. Bullock made the statement that "in seeking the repeal of censorship and the establishment of Sunday movies, the exhibitors are only acting upon the wishes of the majority of the people. No exhibitor, even in the smallest town, will open his place on Sunday unless a majority of its citizens demand it."

Scenario Writer Wins Suit Against Producer

Judge Murray in the Third District Court rendered a decision in favor of Merle Johnson-against-Iroquois Productions, Inc., for $500.00 and costs, after both sides had submitted briefs. The case was tried on Jan. 23rd, and, Johnson, a scenario writer, who was featured by Wm. Fox as "The Mysterious Mr. X," testified that he had been hired by Caryl S. Fleming to retitle "The Valley of Lost Souls."

Fleming testified both that he understood that Johnson was working "gratis," and, that Agnes Egan Cobb had agreed to pay Johnson out of the proceeds of the picture.

Mrs. Cobb's testimony was a flat contradiction of Fleming.

Missouri Censorship Bill Would Be Costly

ST. LOUIS—Missouri will have a nice bill to foot yearly if the Committee of Fifty's censorship bill now before the state legislature becomes law. The minimum salary roll alone is $21,020, including $9,000 for the three commissioners. Travelling expenses, etc., and additional employes would bring that total to about $50,000 per annum.

Lyman Howe, Pioneer of Industry, Is Dead

Lyman H. Howe, president of The Lyman H. Howe Films Co., Inc., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., died on Tuesday morning, January 30, in a hospital at Brookline, Mass., where he has been ill since last June.

Mr. Howe was 68 years of age and was one of the very first of the pioneer exhibitors of motion pictures in this country. He started his amusement career with the exhibition of a miniature coal breaker at Glen Onoko Park in Pennsylvania and then around 1890, when the phonograph was still a novelty, went on the road giving phonograph concerts in theatres and elsewhere. In 1896, when the longest films obtainable measured about 50 feet, he added motion pictures to his entertainment, and Lyman H. Howe pictures have been on view every year from that time to the present, a period of 27 years.

His enterprise became elaborated into the entertainment known as "Lyman H. Howe's Travel Festival," which enjoyed a very long and successful career as a motion picture road show, appearing in auditoriums of all kinds from the New York Hippodrome to a small village church. Mr. Howe always kept his entertainments scrupulously clean and wholesome and his activities in the motion picture industry have been a credit to it.

The funeral and interment will take place at Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Clinton Square, Albany, Is Leased to Leland Owners

Announcement was made last Friday that the Clinton Square theatre of Albany, N. Y., owned and run for many years by Fred P. Elliott, had been leased for ten years to C. H. Buckley and J. E. Tarsches, owners of the Leland, four blocks distant. The deal is said to have involved about $200,000. Mr. Elliott's future plans are unknown at present. The new management will assume control on February 5.

Oscar Perrin will handle the Clinton Square theatre along with the Leland. Mr. Perrin assumed management of the Leland last July and has made a marked success. It is said that the owners of the Leland are seeking other houses in this part of the state, and that a deal has been virtually closed which will give them one theatre which will be devoted to the spoken drama.

Fire Destroys Theatre in Manchester

Fire last week damaged the Star theatre, a motion picture house of Manchester, N. H., to the extent of $40,000. The cause is unknown. The fire originated in the basement early in the morning and soon spread to the auditorium. A recently installed organ costing $15,000 was totally destroyed. The theatre is owned by Coulter Brothers.

Hays' Uniform Contract Now Completed

Long-Awaited Distributor-Exhibitor Document to Receive Formal Endorsement Today

THE long-awaited "uniform exhibition contract," which has been "in process" for the past several months, is expected to be formally inaugurated on Friday of this week, February 2, when representatives of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and those of various exhibitor organizations are scheduled to meet in New York to act on the contract already drafted and awaiting the final endorsement of the producer, distributor, and exhibitor committees.

It is known at the time of going to press that the associates of Will Hays in the M. P. P. D. A. are ready to ratify the contract presently written and it is also understood that the committee of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce will likewise accept the document in its present form. The action of the representatives of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America cannot be definitely forecasted at the present time as final word must be awaited from members distantly located to whom copies of the contract have been dispatched for their consideration. Courtland Smith, of the Hays organization, however, expressed the belief that the ratification of the M. P. P. D. A. and the T. O. C. C. would be followed shortly by the endorsement of the other exhibitor bodies as well.

The "uniform exhibition contract" represents an important contribution on the part of Mr. Hays and his associates to standardize the contractual relations between the producer and distributor interests on the one hand and the exhibitors on the other. Committees appointed by the producers and distributors association and by the various organized theatre-owners' bodies have been conferring for the past six months with a view to formulating a basic booking contract which would embody a uniform set of provisions. The form of contract now awaiting ratification is the result of these efforts and is declared by its sponsors to be by far the most equitable instrument of its kind that has yet been devised.

A synopsis of major provisions found in the new "exhibition contract" includes the following: (The numbers refer to sections of the contract)

1. Payment for pictures contracted is to be made by the exhibitor three days in advance of shipment. Photoplays released by the distributor after the period specified in the terms must be delivered to the exhibitor as though released within the specified period.

2. All costs of transportation of the prints and appurtenances from and to the exchange must be borne by the exhibitor. When the distributor directs shipments elsewhere than than to exchange the theatre-owner will ship "charges collect."

3. The loss, theft, or injury of prints while in exhibitor's jurisdiction must be settled for by theatre-owner at the rate of six cents per lineal foot. Prints received by the distributor in damaged condition shall be deemed to have been damaged by the exhibitor unless the latter on the day of receipt of such shall wire the distributor's exchange of such damage.

5. The delivery of prints "in time for exhibition at the exhibitor's theatre on the dates specified" is put squarely up to the distributor except under circumstances "not within the control of the distributor." These non-liability exceptions are definitely listed.

7. Default on the part of the exhibitor awards the distributor the option of terminating the contract or suspending delivery of additional pictures until such default cease and be remedied.

8. This section defines comprehensively the obligations incumbent on both distributor and exhibitor in advising of the availability of pictures for showing and the placing of exhibition dates. The section is submitted in full as follows:

"EIGHTH: The Distributor shall give the Exhibitor at least four (4) weeks' notice in writing of the date upon which each photoplay, the exhibition dates of which are not specified in this contract, will be available to the Exhibitor and shall at the same time notify the Exhibitor that the latter may select exhibition dates within the fortnight commencing with such date of availability. Within two (2) weeks after the mailing of such notice the Exhibitor shall notify the Distributor in writing of the exhibition date or dates (within such fortnight) selected by the Exhibitor. In the event of the failure of the Exhibitor so to do, the Distributor may, at any time after the expiration of said period of two (2) weeks from the date of the initial notice of availability sent by the Distributor, designate the exhibition date or dates of such photoplay by mailing notice in writing thereof to the Exhibitor at least three (3) weeks before the first exhibition date so designated; and the period of protection (if any) afforded the Exhibitor under this contract shall commence to run with the expiration of the fortnight described in the initial notice of availability.

"In the event that the exhibition date or dates selected by the Exhibitor as above provided are not open to the Exhibitor, the notice of availability theretofore sent the Exhibitor by the Distributor shall be null and void and the Distributor shall be obligated to mail a new notice of availability to the Exhibitor. Any exhibition dates selected by the Exhibitor (if open) or designated by the Distributor as above provided, or otherwise agreed upon between the Distributor and the Exhibitor, shall be for all purposes the exhibition dates of such photoplay as though originally specified in this contract.

"In case of a contract for a series of feature photoplays, five reels or more in length, and featuring a particular star or director, the Exhibitor shall not be required hereunder to exhibit more than one photoplay of such series every five (5) weeks."

(11) This section confers on the exhibitor the right to assign the contract to the purchaser of his interests in a theatre without the written consent of the distributor; the written acceptance of the assignee must be secured, however. Contracts not to be performed within one year are specifically excluded from this provision.

(12) In his advertising and publicity the exhibitor must adhere "to the form of announcement contained in the advertising matter furnished by the distributor."

(15) A minimum admission fee to be charged and dates when pictures contracted are to be shown is determined upon by the parties to the contract and agreed to.

(18) This section sets forth the manner of acceptance which will render the agreement an instrument with binding force on each party to the contract. The section is presented in full:

"EIGHTEENTH: No promises or representations have been made by either party to the other except as set forth herein. This agreement shall be deemed an application for a contract only and shall not become binding until accepted in writing by an officer of the Distributor and notice of acceptance sent to the Exhibitor as hereinafter provided. The deposit by the Distributor of the check or other consideration given by the Exhibitor at the time of application as payment on account of any sums payable hereunder shall not be deemed an acceptance hereof by the Distributor.

"Unless notice of acceptance of this application by the Distributor is sent to the Exhibitor by mail or telegraph within the following periods after the date of application, to-wit, seven (7) days if the Exhibitor's theatre is located in the City of New York, Essex, Hudson or Bergen Counties, New Jersey or Westchester County, New York, ten (10) days if said theatre is located elsewhere East of the Mississippi and twenty-five (25) days if located West of the Mississippi, said application shall be deemed withdrawn and the Distributor shall forthwith return any sums paid on account thereof by the Exhibitor.

"A copy of this application, signed by the Exhibitor, shall be left with the Exhibitor at the time of signing, and in the event of acceptance thereof as above provided a duplicate copy, signed by the Distributor, shall be forwarded to the Exhibitor."

(19) This section provides in detail for the submission to a Board of Arbitration of any controversy arising over the terms of this contract or the failure of either party to execute its provisions. It marks one of the most radical departures from the old-line contracts heretofore in use and requires a verbatim quotation because of its importance:

"NINETEENTH: The parties hereto agree that before either of them shall resort to any court to determine, enforce or protect the legal rights of either hereunder, each will submit to the Board of Arbitration established or constituted (pursuant to rules and regulations now on file in the office of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc.,

Fairbanks Misquoted in Anti-Hays Stories

THE Fairbanks publicity department, according to a wire from the coast, says Doug was misquoted in the statement attributed to him regarding Will Hays being the "hired man" of the picture industry.

The interview was given over the telephone to a Los Angeles Times reporter, Fairbanks has since issued a statement saying he does not wish his attitude toward Hays to be misconstrued and that the independent producers proposed association will work with Hays for the best possible results.

Great Throng at Grauman Opening

Crowds Storm New Metropolitan as Los Angeles House Shows Initial Program

PROBABLY the largest crowd that ever attended a theatre opening in Los Angeles was on hand for the official opening of Grauman's new Metropolitan last Sunday night. It is estimated that twenty-five thousand people were clamoring for seats when the doors were thrown open. According to dispatches from the coast city a solid mass of people filled the streets and blocked the intersection all four ways in their endeavor to secure admission to this finest of Grauman houses.

It was necessary to reinforce the extra police patrol with national guardsmen to keep some semblance of order. This was accomplished only after the theatre's plate glass doors and windows of the box office had been demolished.

In connection with the opening Pathe News reel accomplished a considerable feat. Before the opening performance was concluded they showed on the screen the crowds clamoring for admission. The cameraman left with the negative for the laboratory at 8.50, reached the laboratory at 9 o'clock, reached the theatre with the developed and printed film at 11.20 and projected the reel for the audience showing at 11.30.

Los Angeles newspapers commenting on the opening declared it one of the biggest events of the kind in the history of the city. The Los Angeles Times said: "The long waited occasion attracted more excitement than any similar event in the history of the city. It had been heralded for months and the culmination brought between twenty thousand and thirty thousand persons to the vicinity of the theatre. The opening was an ample demonstration of the fact that Sid Grauman has a theatre which is perhaps unrivalled in the country."

Celebrities of the highest rank mingled with the throngs. Many of them had the utmost difficulty in fighting their way through the crowds. Picture stars and city executives were out in large numbers and they seemed to thoroughly enjoy the ceremonies.

Concrete construction is not new, but concrete art as found in Grauman's newest building is. William Lee Woollett, the architect who has designed the building's wonderful interior has drawn from the beautiful of all ages and has blended Grecian, Roman, Egyptian, and Chinese into an art entirely American. No effort had been made to conceal the concrete but all its beauties as a building material have been brought forth with consummate skill.

The concrete had been permitted to flow naturally into great folds that resemble draperies in the decorations above the stage arc.

It is in such things as this that Mr. Woollett has taken a building material used since man first learned to build and revealed qualities in it that have been unsuspected for ages.

The massive pillars, eighty feet in height which rise at each side of the stage are impressive of strength. The infinite detail of the doiley ceiling with its attractive lighting facilities is a masterpiece of concrete construction of another kind.

Gold, pink and green predominate in the color scheme of the building. Here and there black is used to accent the coloring. Designs that are almost futuristic adorn the walls. Practically all of the designs are symbolical.

At the entrance of the theatre two symbolical figures are to be seen, one on either side. One is a weird figure of a snail with a goat's head.

It is a representative of "Earthbound." On the other side is a figure of a lion with mouth open.

The figure of a horse bearing the skull representative of tragedy adorns the top of one of the eight-foot pillars at the side of the stage.

Oklahoma Bill Provides Drastic Measures

THE following are excerpts from a drastic bill introduced in the Oklahoma State Senate January 23rd, which is sure to become a law, unless the Film Companies and Oklahoma Theatre Managers can head the bill off through the lobby route.

Section 1. It shall be unlawful to exhibit within the State, any film of any person of criminal reputation, or of general reputed immoral character, or who has been convicted of crime unless such characters are presented in their true light as criminals suffering or about to suffer punishment.

It shall be unlawful to exhibit, expose to view, or to transport from one place to another within the State, any moving picture film showing or puporting to show the sex relations in such manner as to suggest immoral practices, or immoral conduct, or to incite to lust, or wherein any church, priest, minister of the gospel, is portrayed or exhibited in a ludicrous or degrading light.

Any person, firm or corporation violating any provision of the above sections shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) nor more than One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00). Provided. each exhibition shall constitute a separate offense.

C. R. Wilson Business Manager of Missouri T. O.

C. R. Wilson, a member of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. Missouri, will act temporarily as business manager until that position has been filled, President Charles Sears announced this week. Mr. Wilson, whose home is in Liberty, Mo., a suburb of Kansas City, will be in charge of a service station, which will be established by the Missouri organization at Eighteenth street and Baltimore avenue, Kansas City.

A call for a meeting of the executive board will be issued by President Charles Sears next week. The resignation of Lawrence E. Goldman, secretary and council, who was forced to resign because of the pressure of outside duties, probably will be accepted at the meeting, but it is doubtful if a business manager is named, as Mr. Wilson has planned a three months' trip over the state to promote the interests of the M. P. T. O. M. The meeting in all probability will be in Kansas City.

Following the executive meeting, President Sears will go to Jefferson City, Mo., the state capital, to represent exhibitor interests during the legislative session in which reformers are working day and night to obtain the passage of a drastic censorship bill.

Series of Junior Programs Launched in Albany

THE SERIES of "Junior Movies" for 1923 for Albany, N. Y., was formally launched last Saturday morning at the Mark Strand theater, with Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the governor, among those present. From now on similar entertainments will be given each week for the children of this city. Next week's program will be given at the Leland.

The program each week will be arranged by Mrs. Frank W. Clark, acting in conjunction with the Mothers' club. Girl Scouts will act as ushers each week. Saturday's program included Wesley Barry's "Heroes of the Street."

N. Y. Commission Files Annual Report

Showing receipts of $155,000 and expenses of $83,000, the greater part of which went for salaries, the annual report of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, has just been presented to the Legislature. The report covers about 16 typewritten pages and is devoted in the main to argument justifying the continuance of censorship in this State.

No comment was forthcoming from the Governor in connection with the report. It is a well known fact that Governor Smith is opposed to motion picture censorship and will welcome the opportunity of signing any bill which is passed during the present session, wiping the law from the statutes of the Empire State.

The report shows among other things that the Commission examined 11,061 reels during the twelve months and that a total of 3,945 eliminations were made, these coming from 861 films, 2.516 films being approved without any eliminations whatever. There were 72 features condemned in their entirety. Licenses issued during the year numbered 3,377.

Lobbyists Tighten Lines in Indiana Fight

Neither of the state motion picture censorship bills pending in the House and Senate of the Indiana State Legislature have come to public hearing or been reported out of committee yet. Consequently lobbyists for and against were drawing their lines tight this week.

So far there has been no organized opposition on the part of the photoplay industry but it was understood protective steps quietly were being taken.

Two hundred ministers and laymen in Indianapolis adopted resolutions favoring censorship. The Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays continue to be the outstanding opponents of censorship.

Model Community Theatre Closed by Death

The Fairfield, Ct., Community theatre, built by the late Town Clerk Joseph I. Flint, considered a model business-playhouse structure for a town of that size has been indefinitely closed. Mr. Flint, a leader in the business and fraternal life of the town, died several months ago. Since his death, Mrs. Flint has been acting town clerk and has assumed management of his other interests. It is stated that the multitudinous duties are the cause of her decision to close the theatre, until some disposition of it is made by the estate.

New Suits Filed in Knickerbocker Disaster

Figures Reach Stupendous Amount On Last Day Supervisors Have to File

ALL District theatre patrons and picture theatre interests in Washington were startled this week when the big roster of individual cases connected with the estates of Knickerbocker theatre victims and survivors to recover damages from the Knickerbocker corporation and Harry Crandall, premier Capitol city exhibitor, was published The Crandall attorneys made a vigorous reply to the demands of one group of plaintiffs by showing where the case was not under the jurisdiction of the equity court division of the local courts, but was subject to trial elsewhere, and that the claim for an accounting was subject to review by the equity court.

The motion to dismiss the pending suits was filed by Attorneys Wilson J. Lambert and Rudolph H. Yeatman of counsel for the Knickerbocker corporation and Harry Crandall. "Equity," assert these lawyers, "has no jurisdiction upon application of a claimant for damages in an action effort to place a lien upon real estate that defendants may have owned, nor has it any jurisdiction to interfere with or disturb any transaction by the defendants with that property." This was the previously mentioned case of Mary Young, Wm. J. Forsyth, and Josephine T. Lyman. After the theatre counsel had summed up the limitations to all suits in equity, they requested the court to dismiss the motion of counsel for plaintiffs.

One of the most startling developments came Thursday morning when the city of Washington, legally The District of Columbia, was made a co-defendant in the suits of twenty-eight victims. As each plaintiff asked for $10,000 damages, this docket aggregated $280,000. Three suits in this group were on Friday's docket in Justice Hoehling's court. Wednesday's case as published Thursday morning, made the Knickerbocker Theatre Company, Harry M. Crandall, Reginald W. Geare, architect of the theatre building; John H. Ford, The Union Iron Works, and the D. C. as co-defendants. The significant thing about this wholsale suit is that although other suits had been filed it was the first time that the criminal responsibility and negligence or wilful incompetency of the architect, steel fabricator and the District Government were brought into the affair with the theatre management in the role of defendants. In the coroners' trial and other proceedings last spring, brought by district and Federal authorities, the various accused persons were absolved as the cases against them quashed. Now, as the anniversary of the horror returns, these cases are brought in the District Supreme Court, and other local courts.

The charge of responsibility laid against Crandall says "He should have seen to it that the building was safely constructed and have maintained it that no injury to the patrons would result therefrom."

Architect Geare is charged with being negligent in design and supervision of the building during the stages of construction; and Ford, the iron worker, is charged with failure to discharge his duties properly in "designing, fabricating and constructing the steel and iron work connected with the supports of the building." The Union Steel Company is also held responsible on this charge. The District is held responsible because it "negligently and carelessly supervised the structure and inspected the plans so that the building was insecure and unsafe."

Friday the Crandall attorneys, Wilton J. Lambert and Rudolph H. Yeatman, contended before Justice Hoehling that the declaration relied on by plaintiffs failed to show any act of negligence by the company, causing the collapse of the roof, thus bringing death and injuries to patrons caught in the roof and balcony debris. The law, not sympathy, should govern the trial, they said. "It is insufficient" they declared, "to make a general charge of negligence, without attempting to show in what the negligence alleged consisted. They asked the court to declare the allegations insufficient.

Acting for the plaintiffs, Attorney J. Morrill Chamberlain of Archer, Chamberlain and Smith said that the persons conducting a theatre or other place of amusement are held under the law to the "highest degree" of care and that the doctrine that the happening of the accident imports negligence is applicable. Under this view it is not necessary to show just what act of negligence brought about the fall of the roof, he claimed, "because the defendant knew better than any one else in what the alleged negligence consisted." He further cited the encyclopedia of law which holds the "owner of a place of entertainment is charged with an affirmative positive obligation to know that the premises are safe for the public use, and he impliedly warrants the premises to be reasonably safe for the purpose for which they are designed.

The precedent set by the District Supreme Court will no doubt be followed in the famous pending Liberty theatre case in Pittsburgh, where at a free kiddie matinee the new cement flooring collapsed and several youngsters were killed and maimed. The proprietor in the case mentioned is under indictment for manslaughter and accidental homicide, and his release or conviction will no doubt be determined by the disposition of the Washington case, now culminating on the eve of the anniversary of the fatal January 28th, last.

As Saturday was the last legal day in the year from last Jannary 28 in which survivors of those who died instantaneously, on or before midnight January 28th, 1922, twelve additional suits for damages were filed Saturday, January 27th, 1923. Altogether fifty-eight such suits, aggregating $580,000 have been filed. Four suits in which the requested damages total $175,000 bring the grand total to $755,000. Others who died later, or whose injuries took longer to heal, can of course file at a later date. Survivors have three years in which to file suits for personal injuries.

Certain charges conveyed in the cases now docketed gave misleading statements that were at variance with the fact. He did not get the property for a $10 consideration. He paid the sum of $177,500 to secure title. Six years prior to the auction the property sold for $59,000, and naturally he paid much more than he expected to in having to secure nearly $180,000 to purchase the site, last spring. This auction was in April, three months after the accident, and the corporation did not perfect its advertised dissolution till November 12, 1922, nearly six months after the tragedy. At the time no suits had been filed. Therefore the transfer was not fraudulently connived at as loosely asserted.

It was charged, he adds, "that I operated the theatre knowing of its weakness. With an investment of $250,000, I never overlooked expenditures therein that would add to the patron's comfort, and the stability of the structure. My family and the families of my associates were always in attendance at the theatre, and so far felt assured of the safety of the building that we had spent considerable money in new marble staircases, a few months prior to the mishap. We took pride in thus turning our patrons' money back into improvements for their comfort."

Pastor Urges Support for Clean Pictures

RECOMMENDATION that clergymen throughout the country lend their undivided support to motion picture producers who are endeavoring to present morally-clean films, was made at a recent session of Bridgeport Pastors' Association by Rev. Dr. C. C. Marshall, pastor of the First Methodist church in that city, one of the leading Protestant spiritual directors in both that city and the entire state. He spoke on the relation of the church to the moving picture screen and urged that the morally-clean films be pointed out to the respective congregations, so that they may not be misled in knowing those with merit from cinemas not recommended.

Famous Montreal Theatre Will Be Closed

The System theatre, Phillips Square, Montreal, Quebec, is to disappear from the moving picture theatre topography of that city next May, according to intimation offered by M. Poulos, one of the owners of the building, as it is planned to erect an office skyscraper on the site of the historic house.

The present lease of the theatre, which is held by the Canadian Universal Film Company, expires on May 4 next. and it will not be renewed. The Universal company secured the house five years ago in order to have a first run theatre in Montreal for its special releases. John T. Fiddes, who had been manager of the System, was appointed manager of the Capitol theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, on January 15 by the Famous Players Canadian Corporation of Toronto and no announcement has been made regarding the appointment of a successor to him at the System theatre.

The System has stood alone in the Canadian theatre field because it has been the only large moving picture house in the Dominion which had its screen at the front of the building, the audience facing the street. Those entering the System found themselves facing the audience as soon as they stepped into the body of the house, the entrance doors being placed on each side of the screen and orchestra pit. This plan of construction militated, to a certain extent, against the genuine success of the theatre.

Missouri Censorship Bill Presented

Committee of Fifty Submits Measure to Legislature Which Is Now in Session

DURING the past week the Committee of Fifty of St. Louis presented its censorship bill to the Missouri legislature at Jefferson City. The reformers claim that the measure has the backing of numerous Protestant and Catholic organizations throughout the state.

Its principal requirements are: Creation of commission of two men and one woman, each to be paid $3,000 a year, to review and censor all motion pictures produced or shown in Missouri.

That it shall be unlawful to sell, lease, lend, exhibit or use any film unless it has been reviewed and passed by the board.

Violation of this provision shall be a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of not to exceed $50 and imprisonment for not more than 30 days or both such fine and jail term. To break any other provision carries a maximum fine of $500 and a term of sixty days in jail.

The board shall examine all films and views and approve such as are "moral and proper" and shall disapprove such "as are sacriligious, obscene, indecent or immoral, or such as tend, in the judgment of the board to debase or corrupt morals." The words "approved by the Missouri State Board of Censors" upon each view shall be issued by the board and shall be printed on each film shown.

A fee of $2 for views of 1,200 feet or less and $1 for each duplicate print shall be charged. Any member or employe of the board may enter any place where a film is exhibited and may prevent the exhibition of a film not approved by the board. The board may examine any banner used for advertising purposes.

The board will also appoint a chief clerk, two stenographers, two clerks, two inspectors, two operators, two assistant operators and such other employes as the board and the governor shall agree on. Offices of the board shall be maintained in Jefferson City.

Pauline Frederick Loses Suit for Estate

In superior court at New London, Conn., last week, Pauline Frederick, stage and motion picture star, lost her fight, before a jury trial, to break the will of her father, the late Richard O. Libby of Norwich. The jury returned a verdict sustaining the will, within 45 minutes of leaving the court room. The trial had lasted several days and attracted wide attention.

The actress brought the suit under her married name of Mrs. Pauline Beal Rice Rutherford. She was not in court and did not testify. Her father died in Norwich, September 10, 1922, leaving to relatives of his second wife an estate valued at $35,000, and his actress daughter nothing. It was testified he had said she was making more in one week than his estate would be worth. Mrs. Rutherford, who contested on the grounds of mental incapacity, had refused to recognize her stepmother.

Complete Cast Named for "His Last Race"

Situations in "Scars of Jealousy," a First National release, presented by Thomas H. Ince, with Frank Keenan, Marguerite de La Motte, and Lloyd Hughes in the principal roles

CHARLES CHRISTIE left for New York, by way of New Orleans, early this week.

Irving Thalberg, for thirty months general manager of Universal City, tendered his resignation to Carl Laemmle this week, effective February 15th. On that date, Thalberg becomes vice-president and production manager of Louis B. Mayer Productions.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation has leased space at the Thomas H. Ince studios and is putting into production its first subject, from an original story by one of its students.

Louis B. Mayer has purchased the screen rights to "Climbing," a stage play, which John Stahl will produce.

Valentino Denies Contract in Vaudeville

Rodolph Valentino in a telegram to Fred L. Cornwell, owner of the Delmonte theatre, Saturday, January 27, denied dispatches sent out from New York which stated he had signed a $6,000 a week contract to appear in vaudeville.

Valentino's telegram read: "Rumor of my vaudeville engagement totally incorrect. If I could appear in theatres I would appear first at the Delmonte, true to my promise. Modification of order only allows dancing in large restaurants or hotels, but not on the stage."

It will be recalled that Valentino's only public appearance since his litigation with Famous Players was at the Delmonte several weeks ago when he defended his position relative to continuing his contract with Paramount. At that time he promised Cornwell to return to the Delmonte if the courts would permit.

Prominent New England Exhibitor Dead

Patrick S. McMahon, long prominent in the hotel and motion picture industry of southern New England, owner of three theatres at New Britain and Hartford, Conn., one of the pioneers in this line throughout this section, died at the Hotel Bronson in the former city last week, following a brief illness with pneumonia.

He was also prominent in hotel circles and credited with being a millionaire. He was born in New Britain, March 10, 1868, and early saw the advantages in motion pictures. He passed his early life as a factory hand, when 30 cents a day was considered excellent pay. His widow, four sons and two daughters survive.

Roscoe Arbuckle to Direct Comedies, Announced

STATEMENTS issued this week in Hollywood by Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle indicate that he has abandoned any intention of returning to the screen as a comedian, and would direct comedies in the future.

According to the statement, he will commence work immediately as a director with Reel Comedies, Inc.

In his statement he asserted that he was through with acting, and that he felt that directing was his "chance to make good in the right way."

F.B.O. Schedules Three Features for February

THE H. C. Witwer-Collier's Weekly "Fighting Blood" stories, which have been made into a series of twelve two-reel pictures by the Film Booking Offices of America, will be released to exhibitors this month. One episode, or "round" as they are to be called, will be issued every second week. The entire series is being directed by Mal St. Clair and George O'Hara is featured.

"The Bishop of the Ozarks," a dramatic story of a man's regeneration, heads the features to be released by F. B. O. during the month of February. The story is by ex-Congressman Milford W. Howard, who also plays the leading role. Finis Fox directed.

"Stormswept," a drama of the sea written by H. H. Van Loan, will complete the F. B. O. February feature program.. "Stormswept" is a Robert Thornby production, with a cast including Wallace and Noah Beery, Arline Pretty, Virginia Brown Faire and Jack Carlyle.

Landy to Handle Jackie Coogan Publicity

George Landy, well known on both coasts as a publicity man, has been appointed director of publicity for the Jackie Coogan productions that follow "Daddy" and "Toby Tyler" which were made for Associated First National.

While Jackie was producing pictures under Sol Lesser's management, Harry D. Wilson was in charge of all the Coogan publicity but when Jackie was signed to produce for Metro, Harry decided to remain with the Lessers and he will continue to give exhibitor service on "Daddy" and "Toby Tyler," the latter being a big circus story.

Landy went to the coast a couple of years ago and became director of publicity for Allen Holubar and Richard Walton Tully productions.

Hunter Buys Into Canadian Releasing Corporation

John L. Hunter, sales manager of American Releasing Corporation since its inception a year ago, has purchased an interest in Canadian Releasing Corporation, Ltd., the Dominion ally of American, and has taken up his residence in Toronto to manage the Ontario interests of the Canadian organization in association with J. P. O'Loghlin, managing director.

Mr. Hunter several years ago, while with First National, aided in developing that company's sub-franchise system, leaving them to join F. B. Warren, and became general manager of the Canadian Associated Producers' offices.

Frederic Gage, for the past year assistant sales manager of American Releasing, has now been appointed manager of sales.

Louis B. Mayer to Make "Climbing" for Screen

"Climbing," the Lee Hutty play now having its premiere at the Majestic theatre in Los Angeles, has been purchased for the screen by Louis B. Mayer, the prominent independent producer. It will be filmed with an all-star cast by John M. Stahl.

Universal's Releases for February

Frank Mayo, Gladys Walton, "Hoot" Gibson, and Rawlinson Films Listed

UNIVERSAL announces for release during the month of February the following four five-reel feature productions: "The First Degree," starring Frank Mayo, on the 5th; "The Love Letter," with Gladys Walton, on the 12th; "The Gentleman from America," starring "Hoot" Gibson, on the 19th; and "The Prisoner," with Herbert Rawlinson, set for the 26th.

"The First Degree" is a screen adaptation of a popular magazine story by George Pattullo. The story was put into continuity form by George Randolph Chester. Included in the cast engaged by Universal to support Frank Mayo in this feature are Sylvia Breamer, Philo McCullouch, George A. Williams and Harry Carter. The story concerns a man called before the grand jury to testify concerning some of his sheep which have been stolen, but who through ignorance of why he is called, rushes in and confesses to a crime on his own part. Although this idea has been used before in literature and on the screen, Universal is said to have given to it an entirely new treatment and one which does not let the interest lag.

Gladys Walton's February release, "The Love Letter," is a comedy-drama adapted by Hugh Hoffman from a story by Bradley King. King Baggot directed it. Edward Hearn plays opposite Miss Walton. He takes the part of a village blacksmith who falls in love with a smart city girl. Others in the cast are George Cooper, Fontaine LaRue, Alberta Lee, Walter Whitman, Florence D. Lee, Boyd Irwin, Jim Corey, Danny Hoy, Lucy Donohoe and Sadie Gordon.

"The Gentleman from America," Edward ("Hoot") Gibson's February release, is described as a rollicking picture of romance and adventure developed around the escapades of a couple of doughboys who go A. W. O. L. from their outfit in France and who end up "somewhere in Spain." It was written especially for Gibson by Raymond Schrock, scenario editor at Universal City, and was directed by Edward Sedgwick. Included in the cast which supports Gibson are Louis Lorraine (as leading woman), Carmen Phillips, Tom O'Brien, Frank Leigh, Jack Crane, Bob McKenzie, Albert Prisco and Rosa Rosonova.

"Although dealing with a couple of doughboys, it is not a war picture," declares Universal, "but is filled with the hilarious comedy, of the kind that will be appreciated by anyone who ever wore O. D. or was related to a soldier or whoever knew a soldier."

The last release of the month will be "The Prisoner," Universal's adaptation of George Barr McCutcheon's best seller, "Castle Craneycrow." Herbert Rawlinson is the star, and is supported by Eileen Percy and a strong cast. Jack Conway directed it. The picture was originally intended for Jewel release, but when Rawlinson was assigned to it, it was decided to keep it on the Universal attraction release schedule.

Well-Known Ingenues in D. W. Griffith Cast

The cast assembled for D. W. Griffith's forthcoming production, "The White Rose," will present three well-known screen ingenues in important roles in the persons of Mae Marsh, Carol Dempster and Jane Thomas. "The White Rose" company is now in Florida, where Mr. Griffith is making his headquarters at the Brunton studios in Miami.

Paramount Releases "Knighthood"

Marion Davies Vehicle Set for February 4th Leads Off "Super Thirty-Nine"

WITH the release of "When Knighthood Was in Flower" and "Dark Secrets" on February 4 Paramount introduces its "Super Thirty-Nine," the second half of its program of features for the current picture year.

In addition to its highly successful run in New York at the Criterion and Rivoli theatres, "When Knighthood Was in Flower" has played long engagements in Chicago, Boston, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Washington, and has been acclaimed by the critics of these cities as ranking among the outstanding achievements of the screen. Charles Major's romantic novel of the days of King Henry VIII was scenarized by Frances Marion, and the production was directed by Robert G. Vignola. The settings were designed by Joseph Urban. The cast includes Forrest Stanley, Lyn Harding, Pedro de Cordoba, Ruth Shepley, Ernest Glendenning, Arthur Forrest, Johnny Dooley, William Kent, Charles Gerrard, Arthur Donaldson, William Norris, Macey Harlam, William H. Powell, George Nash and Gustav von Seyffertitz.

In "Dark Secrets," Dorothy Dalton is the star. The story and scenario were written by Edmund Goulding, who adapted "Tol'able David" for the screen. Here scenes laid on a magnificent Long Island estate are seen in sharp contrast to those representing the colorful and glamorous life of Cairo. Victor Fleming directed the picture and Robert Ellis is Miss Dalton's leading man, with Jose Ruben prominent in the supporting cast.

The picture scheduled for February 11 is Gloria Swanson in "My American Wife," a Sam Wood production. This screen play is by Monte M. Katterjohn and was suggested by Hector Turnbull. Antonio Moreno makes his debut as a Paramount player in the leading male role, and prominent among the supporting players are Josef Swickard, Eric Mayne, Gene Corrado, Edith Chapman, Aileen Pringle and Walter Long.

Released the 18th are "Drums of Fate," starring Mary Miles Minter, and Jack Holt in "Nobody's Money." The Minter picture was directed by Charles Maigne and is an adaptation by Will M. Ritchey of the novel, "Sacrifice," by Stephen French Whitman. Maurice B. Flynn is Miss Minter's leading man and the cast also includes George Fawcett, Robert Cain, Casson Ferguson, Bertram Grassby and Noble Johnson.

In "Nobody's Money," Jack Holt is seen for the first time in a comedy role. The picture was adapted from William LeBaron's stage play by Beulah Marie Dix and was directed by Wallace Worsley. Wanda Hawley is Mr. Holt's leading woman and the cast also includes Harry Depp, Robert Schable, Walter McGrail, Julia Faye, Charles Clary, Will R. Walling and Clarence Burton.

George Melford's production of Joseph Hergesheimer's story of old Salem, "Java Head," is scheduled for the 25th. This picture, the exterior scenes of which were filmed at their exact locale in Salem, Mass., was three months in the making. Waldemare Young wrote the scenario and Leatrice Joy, Jacqueline Logan, Raymond Hatton, George Fawcett, and Albert Roscoe are the featured players.

"Bohemian Girl" to Open on B'way February 4

"The Bohemian Girl," the Harley Knoles production of Balfe's famous old opera, will have its first showing in this country at B. S. Moss's Cameo theatre Sunday, February 4. It is a spectacular production distributed by American Releasing Corporation. The cast is headed by Ivor Novello and Gladys Cooper, and includes Ellen Terry, Constance Collier, C. Audrey Smith, Henry Vibart and Gibb McLaughlin in the principal roles.

Drop in Price Won Bigger Receipts, Says Schade

Here's at least one instance of reduced prices resulting in increased receipts. The experiment was conducted by George J. Schade of the Schade theatre, Sandusky, Ohio. The Schade seats 725. Until January 10th the admission price at the Schade had been 35 cents. He announced that thereafter the admission price would be 25 cents except on Sunday, when the old price would be maintained. And the result in Mr. Schade's own words:

"My business picked up immediately, and I believe it will grow better week by week."

In analyzing the reasons for his improved business Mr. Schade points out the radical change in money standards since the "prosperous" days of the "silk-shirted" laboring man. He declares the ordinary worker instead of earning fifty cents to a dollar an hour as during the war period, is fortunate if he now gets thirty to forty cents an hour. And the box office that acknowledges the downward trend in wages is bound to prosper in the long run, according to Mr. Schade's theory. He observes:

"I've stood outside my box office lately and watched the heads of families buy tickets. He invested for himself and his wife and got thirty cents change out of a dollar. Yet, strange as it may seem, when I reduced my price to twenty-five cents the head of the family came and brought his wife and probably a couple of children. So that instead of getting seventy cents I got a dollar. Since we had plenty of seats we not only were not out because of the reduction but were really ahead thirty cents."

"Driven" to Be Released in March on "Jewel" List

A CHARLES BRABIN production titled "Driven," which presents Charles Emmett Mack in the featured role, will be released as a Universal Jewel attraction by Universal Pictures Corporation in March in place of "The Shock," starring Lon Chaney. The time of release of "The Shock" is still undetermined.

Besides Charles Emmett Mack the cast includes Elinor Fair, Emily Fitzroy, Burr McIntosh and George Bancroft. "Driven" represents Charles Brabin's first effort as an independent producer. The picture was adapted from "The Flower of the Flock," written by Jay Gelzer. Universal announces that the same exploitation assistance put behind a Jewel produced in Universal City will be given the Brabin subject.

"Driven" has been accorded "major mention" by the Exceptional Photoplays Committee of the National Board of Review. The picture will be given a special showing by the committee in the Town Hall, New York, on Monday evening, February 5.

Ordynski to Make Debut as Director

Richard Ordynski, famous as a former stage director of the Metropolitan Opera, who has been for several months at the Lasky studio studying the art and technique of the screen under Cecil B. DeMille, will make his debut as a Paramount director with "The Exciters," which will soon be put into production at the Long Island studio.

Mr. Ordynski is now in New York making preparations for the start of the picture in which Bebe Daniels and Antonio Moreno will be co-starred. The scenario has been written by Edmund Goulding, and the latter is now at work on the script of "Lawful Larceny," Allan Dwan's next Paramount production, in which Hope Hampton will have one of the featured roles.

Godsol Engages Noted Director

Victor Seastrom Has Won Fame with Production of Swedish Biograph Drama

F. J. GODSOL, president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, has brought Victor Seastrom, the great Swedish director, to America to make super-features for Goldwyn.

As the result of negotiations recently concluded, Mr. Seastrom arrived in New York last Thursday and made his headquarters at the Hotel Plaza, where he will remain until he leaves for the Goldwyn studios in Culver City, California.

During the past ten years Mr. Seastrom has won fame as the director of Swedish Biograph dramas.

In discussing his coming work Mr. Seastrom said that the most striking attribute of American-made pictures is their humanness, and that he hopes to develop this quality in his treatment of stories made in this country and dealing with American life.

Some of Mr. Seastrom's great successes are "Jerusalem," "Eyvind of the Hills," "Secrets of the Monastery," "The Surrounded House," "Fire on Board" and "The Stroke of Midnight."

Metro District Chiefs End Conference

District managers of the exchanges of Metro Pictures Corporation, who have been in conference with the home office sales heads, E. M. Saunders, general sales manager, and T. J. Connors, assistant sales manager, left New York this week for their several headquarters after the most enthusiastic meeting this branch of the company has ever held.

Those who were parties to the conference were, besides the officials of the home office of Metro: C. E. Kessnich, of Atlanta; E. A. Golden, of Boston; W. C. Bachmeyer, of Cincinnati; Harry Lustig, of Los Angeles, and S. A. Shirley, of Chicago.

The prime purpose of this convention of the members of the distributing forces of Metro was the just arrangement of releases with regard to all exhibitors.

"Fury" to Be Published in Book Form

Edmund Goulding who wrote the story of "Fury" for Richard Barthelmess' latest Inspiration picture, has put this tale of the sea in book form. It will appear about the time the picture is released by First National.

Metro Announces Changes of Personnel

Five transpositions of personnel among managers of the exchanges of Metro Pictures Corporation were announced this week at the home offices of the company in New York.

Arthur Lamb, manager of the Cincinnati office, has resigned to engage in another enterprise in California; C. R. Osborn, of Omaha, has been transferred to Cincinnati, and S. A. MacIntyre, until recently in Atlanta, has returned to take his former place as head of the Omaha branch. Mr. MacIntyre's position in Atlanta is now filled by J. J. Burke, for some time assistant to Leroy Bickel in Dallas.

These changes followed the conference of the district managers of the Metro distributing organization with the officials of the home offices.

18 First National Films Sold for India

Bruce Johnson, foreign manager of Associated First National, has concluded a contract with Madan Theatres, Ltd., of Calcutta, for eighteen First National Pictures, to be shown in the territory of India, Burma and Ceylon. The pictures are:

"Oliver Twist," "Smilin' Through," "Question of Honor," "One Clear Call," "Her Mad Bargain," "Playthings of Destiny," "Invisible Fear," "Child Thou Gavest Me," "Twin Beds," "Girl in the Taxi," "Sign on the Door," "Primitive Lover," "Lessons in Love," "Polly of the Follies," "Hurricane's Gal," "Love," "Honor and Behave," "Married Life" and "Bob Hampton of Placer."

"PauperMillionaire" Comedy Drama Due Feb. 11

The next Playgoers feature scheduled for release is "A Pauper Millionaire," which has been set for February 11th. Adapted from the novel by Austin Fryer, the picture is said to follow the story very closely and to present some genuinely humorous situations centering about the adventures of an American millionaire in London, who is temporarily reduced to a condition of poverty by a series of mishaps that deprive him of funds, baggage and all proofs of his identity.

Sidney Franklin Put Under Contract by Warners

SIDNEY FRANKLIN, who recently completed directing "Brass" for Warner Brothers, has been signed for a number of years to produce for the Warner organization under the direct supervision of Mr. Rapf, according to Harry M. Warner. Mrs. Franklin was also engaged for a similar period.

The exacting care and the unusual touches invested into the production of "Brass," are the factors that caused the Warner organization to secure the services of Mr. Franklin.

Mr. Franklin directed "East is West" with Constance Talmadge, and "Smilin' Thru" with Norma Talmadge, which is testimony of his faith and constant effort to make bigger and better pictures, according to Mr. Warner. Mrs. Franklin will assist Mr. Franklin in the preparation of scenarios, and act in an advisory capacity.

The number and names of the stories to be directed by Mr. Franklin have not as yet been announced.

Attractive scenes from Warner Brothers' picturization of Charles Norris's novel "Brass."

Kathleen Norris Novel Is Bought by Warner Bros.

"Lucretia Lombard," reputed to be one of the best sellers in the fiction field, and written by Kathlen Norris, was purchased last week by Warner Brothers. It will be produced by Harry Rapf and will be known as a Rapf production. Sada Cowan is adapting the novel for the screen.

Mr. Rapf, who is assisting Sidney Franklin in editing and titling the Charles G. Norris novel, "Brass," is expected to arrive East with the finished print within the next fortnight.

Leah Baird Production for March 11th Release

Associated Exhibitors has set for release March 11th the next in its series of productions featuring Leah Baird. The adaptation and story of this picture are from the well known play, "All Mine," by Dorian Neve, and the photoplay is now known under the working title of "When Civilization Failed."

Leah Baird is surrounded by a cast which includes Thomas Santschi, Walter McGrail, Richard Tucker, Alec. B. Francis, Robert Bolder and Ruth Mitchell.

"The parties hereto further agree to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision and award of such Board of Arbitration in any such arbitration proceeding, and agree and consent that any such decision or award shall be enforceable in or by any court of competent jurisdiction pursuant to the laws of such jurisdiction now or hereafter in force; and each party hereto hereby waives the right of trial by jury upon any issue arising under this contract, and agrees to accept as conclusive the findings of fact made by any such Board of Arbitration, and consents to the introduction of such findings in evidence in any judicial proceeding."

The provisions relating to arbitration are as follows: In the event that the Exhibitor fails or refuses to submit to arbitration any controversy over a contract containing an arbitration clause, or to comply with any decision of the board, or if any Exhibitor shall be found by the board to have been guilty of such a breach of contract as seems to justify the Distributor in requiring security, the Distributor may, at its option, demand payment by the Exhibitor of an additional sum not exceeding $500 and not less than $100 under each existing contract, to be retained by the Distributor until the complete performance of all such contracts and then applied, at the Distributor's option, against any sums due or damages determined by the board, the balance to be returned to the Exhibitor. If the Exhibitor fails to pay this sum within seven days, the Distributor may suspend service until paid or terminate the contract.

In the event that the Distributor refuses to submit to arbitration or to abide by the decision of the board, or if the board find him guilty of such breach of contract as shall in the opinion of the board justify the Exhibitor in refusing to deal with the Distributor, the Exhibitor may terminate this and any other existing contract with that Distributor by sending notice by registered mail within two weeks. In the meantime this Distributor shall not be entitled to redress from the board for claim against any Exhibitor until it shall have complied.

"The provisions of this contract relating to arbitration shall be construed according to the laws of the State of New York.

"The parties hereto agree that every existing contract between the parties hereto shall be and hereby is amended so as to include the foregoing section with the same force and effect as if originally incorporated therein."

"TWENTIETH: (Optional Clause.) If this contract designates certain photoplays by title, it shall be non-cancellable as to such photoplays. If it embraces a series of photoplays not designated by title it may be cancelled as to such series by either party after two photoplays of such series have been played and paid for, by notice in writing to the other party within ten (10) days after playing the second of said photoplays, such cancellation to take effect after ..... additional photoplays shall have been played and paid for."

Principal Pictures' Staff in New Studio Quarters

Sol Lesser and his staff, under the title Principal Pictures Corporation, have invaded their new studios, the former King Vidor plant on Santa Monica Boulevard, Hollywood.

Work will be started at once on the initial production which will be the screen adaptation of George M. Cohan's play, "The Meanest Man in the World." Casting for the players and directors and technical workers will start this week and, according to Lesser, actual "shooting" should be started within a ten-day period.

Pettijohn Launches Censor Fight in Missouri

C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, in St. Louis, Friday, January 26, fired the opening gun in the fight against motion picture censorship in Missouri, in an address before various women's organizations of St. Louis at the headquarters of the League of Women Voters, Century Building.

In his talk he thoroughly exposed the fallacy of the position of the reform element that are seeking to put through censorship in this state. The Committee of Fifty has already presented a censorship bill to the legislature at Jefferson City.

Starts on Tour for Hope Hampton Picture

F. G. Conklin, special representative of the Hope Hampton Productions, has left for a tour of the South and West in the interest of "The Light in the Dark," Miss Hampton's recent picture for First National release. He will visit the First National exchanges in this territory with regard to first run presentations.

"The Prisoner" with Herbert Rawlinson Ready

"The Prisoner," Universal's adaptation of Barr McCutcheon's romantic novel titled "Castle Craneycrow," has been completed. The first print reached the New York home office this week, and members of the Universal reviewing committee, after viewing the production, rated the picture as among the best of Universal's product. "The Prisoner" will be released on the list of Universal attractions and will consequently be available for screening within a few weeks. Release is planned for the last week in February.

Herbert Rawlinson is the star of "The Prisoner," and the supporting cast includes Eileen Percy (as the leading woman), June Elvidge, Bertram Grassby, Esther Ralston, George Cowle, Lillian Langdon, Hayford Hobbs, Lincoln Stedman, Bert Sprotte, Boris Karloff, Gertrude Short, Mario Carillo, Fred Kelsey, Millie Davenport and F. F. Guenste. Jack Conway directed the subject, with Benjamin Reynolds at the camera.

It was originally planned to produce "The Prisoner" in Europe with Harry Myers as the star and Edward Lammle as the director. A production staff was actually dispatched to Vienna, but lack of proper equipment and the difficulty of securing players approximating American screen standards are stated by Universal to have led to the abandonment of the project. Edward Lammle was also taken sick while abroad and was under hospital treatment for several months. This is also stated to have been a major reason for the rejection of the plan to film the subject in foreign settings.

Jos. Schenck Gets "Dulcy" for Constance Talmadge

Joseph M. Schenck has purchased the picture rights to the play "Duley," and will use it as Constance Talmadge's next First National release.

"Duley" is a comedy by George Kaufman and Marx Connelly. Lynn Fountainne scored a triumph in it on Broadway last season, and it is still said to be playing to capacity audiences on the road.

When Mr. Schenck was abroad he purchased the rights to the play "Madame Pompadour," which is a big hit in Paris. John Emerson and Anita Loos also had a screen comedy ready for Miss Talmadge, but when Mr. Schenck finally completed arrangements for "Duley" he decided to make it Miss Talmadge's next, and thereby take advantage of its popularity on the road.

Sidney Franklin will direct "Duley," and John Emerson and Anita Loos will adapt it.

"Poor Men's Wives" Opens at New York Criterion

"Poor Men's Wives" opened on Sunday, January 28th, at the Criterion theatre, New York, for an indefinite run. This production was made by Preferred Pictures and is to be released by the Al Lichtman Corporation.

The musical program was an elaborate one, arranged by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, and the orchestra was conducted by Josiah Zuro. There was an interesting prologue, especially staged for "Poor Men's Wives" by Dr. Riesenfeld, called "The Dance of the Moths." This was announced as a "musical and terpsichorean allegory of the great lesson of life," emphasized by "Poor Men's Wives."

Top-notch business, satisfactory picture. (West.)

The Pride of Palomar—
Interesting feature, well acted. Good box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Played to good crowds all week. (Middle West.)

Kick In—
The attendance for the week held up good with this one. (Middle West.)

An excellent adaptation of the stage play which held up in satisfactory manner for a four days' run. (East.)

Dark Secrets—

Ebb Tide—
Went across in grand style. Pleased patrons generally. (Middle West.)

Good picture; held up for two days. (West.)

Making a Man—

Missing Millions—
Just a mediocre picture; its value ruined by cutting of the censors. Business only fair. (East.)

Burning Sands—
This picture broke all records for showing. Crowds came early. More people were put into the theatre on Sunday than had ever been before. And business continued good during the week in spite of the fact that the critics called it "bunk." (Middle West.)

To Have and to Hold—
Going strong on fourth week. (West.)

When Knighthood Was in Flower—
Everybody delighted with improvement in Marion Davies. Most patrons conceded this to be the best picture we have ever played. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Dangerous Age—
One of the best pictures of the year. Had some interest for all ages, both sexes, and played to splendid week. (Middle West.)

Attracted more business as week progressed. Pictures attracted enthusiastic comment from some, but didn't seem to attract the young folk. (Middle West.)

Omar, the Tent Maker—
A real big picture. Guy Bates Post won new friends by his perfect work in this film. Excellent patronage. (Middle West.)

The Hottentot—

A good picture for a run. Doing well with it. (West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood—
Best picture in Doug's career. My patrons paid twice and three times to see it again. (West.)

This wonderful picture got away to only fair start, but by end of first week did great business. (Middle West.)

Tess o' the Storm Country—
Great picture; had fine run of four weeks at 50c. (Middle West.)

It went over big here. We thought it a very fine piece of work all the way through. Excellent business. (East.)

Picture previously reported. Business good on second run. (East.)

One Exciting Night—
Picture previously reported. Business excellent on third week of engagement. (East.)

Held up fairly well for the third week. Went strong for the first two weeks. Splendid audience attraction. (Middle West.)

METRO

Trifling Women—
Business just fair. Better than this time last year, but not so good as expected. (Middle West.)

Previously reported. Business held up better than expected on second run at house not usually used for second run pictures. (East.)

Youth to Youth—
The manager said that the business was wonderful. He is of an optimistic turn. Fair would probably be nearer the box office value. (Middle West.)

The Toll of the Sea—
Interesting because of its color photography, but did not meet with popular favor. Story not original enough. (East.)

A most exquisite production, and exquisitely acted. Too artistic to make a big hit with the masses, but a tremendous hit with discerning patrons. This picture attracted only those who are looking for the unusual. (Middle West.)

Quincy Adams Sawyer—
Not as good as advance notices led one to expect. Everyone disappointed. Business only fair.

Peg o' My Heart—
Laurette Taylor's first feature places her as a high class star and the picture carries fine amusement value. Business good. (Middle West.)

All the Brothers Were Valiant—
One of the best sea dramas we have had. A great audience film. Excellent business. (East.)

June Madness—

UNIVERSAL

The Ghost Patrol—
An average picture that drew the average attendance. (Middle West.)

Competition too strong at neighboring houses for this one to make any showing. Business off. (East.)

The Scarlet Car—
Better than the average thriller. Well done, both as to acting and direction. Did good business. (Middle West.)

The Power of a Lie—
Powerful drama. Proved good drawing card during week's run. (Middle West.)

Under Two Flags—
Great picture, played to capacity audiences.

A Dangerous Game—
Did well on a double feature bill. The other was "Kindled Courage." (West.)

Kindled Courage—
A good many came to see this, attracted by the title. Played "A Dangerous Game" along with it. Did good business. (West.)

SELZNICK

Pawned—
An excellent picture in every way. Good cast. Drew good crowds. (Middle West.)

Fair picture. Didn't do especially well for us. (Middle West.)

One Week of Love—
Business pretty good for entire week. Received favorable comment from audiences in general. Satisfactory. (Middle West.)

F. B. O. OF AMERICA

The Third Alarm—
Kept theatre open another week before closing for repairs, to run this. Did big business and everybody pleased. (West.)

Broke all house records. Has thrills, humor and drama. Should prove winner anywhere. (Middle West.)

FOX

Without Compromise—
William Farnum starts the year well in this one. Patrons liked it very much. Good receipts. (Middle West.)

Three Who Paid—
Of its kind it is very good. Plain western thrills and gun play, but it took strong. Good business. (East.)

My Friend, the Devil—
Lost on it. Little too gloomy. Too many people die in it. Good picture of its kind, however. (Middle West.)

The Bells of San Juan—
Good program picture. No more, no less. Did good business, but believe rest of program was more responsible than the feature. (West.)

Who Are My Parents?
This picture did not do as well as expected. People did come in but not so many of them as we hoped the title would attract. (Middle West.)

Monte Cristo—
This is a really big feature and has been well advertised. Name is big help. Stood them out every day during its first week. (Middle West.)

The Village Blacksmith—
A tremendous success. Couldn't take care of the crowds. Although picture varies from poem, patrons were delighted with it. (Middle West.)

PATHE

Dr. Jack—
Now in its second week and drawing as well as it did the first week. (Middle West.)

Lloyd gets better and better. Film enthusiastically received. Excellent. (East.)

Best picture for a run we have had in months. (West.)

VITAGRAPH

My Wild Irish Rose—
Has everything a picture should have. Proved one of the most popular offerings of current year. (Middle West.)

Good average picture which pleased our patrons. (Middle West.)

A Rogue's Romance—
It was surprising the way this production drew them to the box office. It looked like old times at this theatre. (East.)

A Girl's Desire—
No complaint to make on picture or on the business. (West.)

GOLDWYN

The Sin Flood—
Business was fairly good and maintained a satisfactory average in spite of series of rival attractions on the same week. Not a record breaker, but an unusual story and theme. (Middle West.)

Gimme—
Very nice little picture of a light nature. Nothing new, but well done and makes pleasant entertainment. Average business. (Middle West.)

The Christian—
Consider it a masterpiece. My patrons delighted and admitted it came up to expectations. (West.)

Broken Chains—

WARNER BROTHERS

Heroes of the Street—
Melodrama, but that is well worked out with humor and pathos. A very good picture anywhere. (East.)

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

The Woman Who Fooled Herself—
It was not well received. (Middle West.)

ALLIED P. & D.

Garrison's Finish—
Only a fair picture. Business also fair. (East.)

AMERICAN RELEASING

The Marriage Chance—
Due to personal appearance of actress, Alta Allen, and otherwise good bill, did a good week's business. (West.)

AL LICHTMAN

Thorns and Orange Blossoms—
A splendid audience picture. Has all the elements that appeal to the general public. Did very well all week, both matinees and evenings. (Middle West.)

Shadows—
Chaney scores another hit in "Shadows." Our audiences liked it and business was excellent. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Sure Fire Flint—
Sure fire laugh getter with added thrills which our patrons enjoyed. Business fair. (Middle West.)

Till We Meet Again—
Previously reported. Went well on second run. (East.)

Notoriety—
The S.R.O. sign was used each evening and came close to being tacked up on several afternoons.

What's Wrong with the Women—
Not so good, not so bad. Some liked it and some complained. Good idea in back of it, but that doesn't get the business. (East.)

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 725 S. WABASH AVE.

Around the Trade

LUBLINER & TRINZ have completed plans for the erection of a magnificent four thousand seat house at Belmont and Lincoln avenues, and according to General Manager Emil Stern, ground will be broken for this theatre within a few days. Walter Alschlager is the architect for the new house, which will be palatial in beauty of its design and the magnificence of its furnishings. Lubliner & Trinz already are operating seventeen houses in the city and the new house will add approximately two million dollars to the money already invested in L. & T. operated theatre properties.

Health Commissioner Bundeson has asked the co-operation of the motion picture theatre managers of Chicago to aid him in his fight to head off a threatened flu and pneumonia epidemic, and has requested them to see that persistent coughers and sneezers are ejected from the theatres.

J. B. Dibelka, who, for the past year, has been secretary of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners and editor of Filmland, the association's official organ, tendered his resignation from both positions at the last meeting of the board of directors. He will, however, continue to hold office until his successor is appointed. Mr. Dibelka converted his theatre into a dance hall some time ago and no longer is an active member of the film industry, but has retained his interest in organization affairs and has been willing to put in his time for the benefit of the theatre owners.

Douglas Fairbanks, in "Robin Hood," is playing to constantly increasing business at the Roosevelt theatre, and started its second week with fine crowds. It is predicted that the run of this feature at Balaban & Katz house will be longer than that of "Tess of the Storm Country" and "When Knighthood Was In Flower," which to date hold the run record of that house.

George D. Hopkinson, popular owner of the Hamlin theatre, on west Madison street, is back on the job after a lay-off of several days occasioned by illness.

An increase in the capital stock from ten thousand dollars to fifty thousand dollars is announced by the Illington Amusement Company, which operates the Illington theatre.

"Dr. Jack" is scheduled to open on February 24th at the Orpheum and will have an indefinite run at this house. It has proved one of the big hits of the season in some of the eastern cities, where it already has been shown.

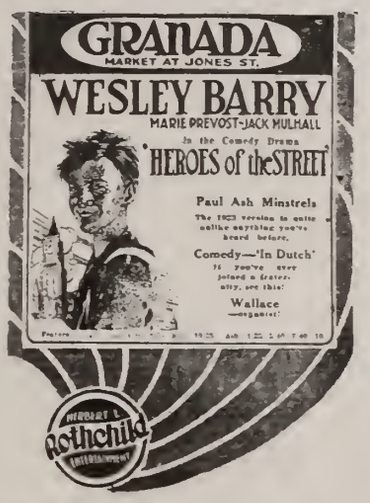
R. D. Taylor, of the Bourbon theatre, Bourbon, Indiana, is preparing to start work on a new front and improved interior for his theatre. Mr. Taylor has shown himself an up-to-date showman and always keeps his house modern and attractive to his patrons.

Louis Laemmle celebrated another birthday last Sunday and Herman Stern, exchange manager, took advantage of the occasion to engineer a big surprise party for Mr. Laemmle. Members of the departments and the entire sales staff, also a few friends outside the exchange, forty in all, silently entered the Laemmle home and gave Louis the surprise of his life. Everybody had a fine time and most of the boys got to the office in time for work Monday.

S. J. Gregory, of the S. J. Gregory Amusement Corporation, of Hammond, Indiana, has departed for three weeks' rest at Hot Springs, Arkansas.

Mr. and Mrs. Henoch, of the Stratford theatre, gave a dinner at the Congress Hotel in honor of General Manager of the Universal Corporation A. A. Schmidt and Mrs. Schmidt on Wednesday the 24th. Among the guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Herman Stern, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Laemmle, and Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Leserman, all of the Chicago Universal exchange.

J. Falette, of the Lyric and Star theatres, Lincoln, Illinois, visited Universal's Chicago exchange this week, to make plans for the big exploitation campaign on "The Flirt,"



Eye catching lay-out of "Heroes of the Street" ad used by the Granada theatre, San Francisco and was met at the exchange by E. C. Ketcham of Grosset & Dunlap, publishers of "The Flirt," the book on which the feature is built, who with the co-operation of Publicity Manager Walter Hill, of Universal's Chicago exchange, completed arrangements for the joint publicity campaign in Lincoln.

Among the Exchanges

N. H. FRIEND, of United Artists, has been in Chicago for the last two weeks and expects to leave for Los Angeles, in company with his brother, shortly.

M. Whitmoyer, formerly of First National sales staff, is now covering northern Indiana and Illinois for Celebrated.

Pearl White's continued popularity with theatre owners is best shown by the fact that her new serial, "Plunder," is now being shown at one hundred and fifteen neighborhood and outlying Chicago theatres, according to Manager Martin of Pathe.

Sid Decker, one of Universal's hustlers, reports from Rockford, Illinois, that the West Side Business Association of that city has purchased the Blackstone Hotel property, and that the old building is to be removed early in Spring, preparatory to the erection of a twenty-five hundred seat motion picture theatre.

Ted Schlanger, well known Universal salesman, has been appointed short subject manager of the Chicago exchange, according to an announcement just given out.

H. H. Hurn, district manager of Hodkinson, arrived in Chicago this week with a print of "Down to the Sea in Ships," which is heralded as one of the great pictures of the year, and Manager Simmons and the staff of the local exchange after seeing it screened are enthusiastic over the feature. Arrangements for release in this territory will be completed shortly.

Manager Manske, of American Releasing Corporation, has booked "What Fools Men Are" into the State-Lake for the week of February 25th, and this important picture will be released on the Lubliner & Trinz and Ascher circuits the week of March 4th. In the cast are Faire Binney, Lucy Fox and a number of other well known players.

H. A. Washburne has been transferred to the Indianapolis territory by Manager Fichenlaub of United Artists. Film row will miss genial Washburne, who is very popular with the boys.

Celebrated Players have acquired Col. Selig's spectacular serial, "The Jungle Goddess," for release in Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin. The serial, which is in fifteen episodes, is said to include some very thrilling adventures with animals and other incidents which will make the audiences sit up and take notice.

Fred Balidean, formerly manager of the Keystone and Panorama theatres, and at one time salesman for Mutual and Universal, is now associated with the American Releasing Corporation and will cover the territory made vacant by the resignation of J. J. Clark.

Manager R. W. Case of the Columbia theatre, Seattle, prepared this highly attractive lobby for "The Flirt." The cut-out at the left, with a spotlight on it, had flashing red and green light effects, and the fan was waved mechanically in the cut-out at the extreme right

Gets Unique Publicity Through Matinee on "The Flirt"

Seattle, Wash.—A stunt that attracted a great amount of desirable newspaper publicity was put over recently by Manager R. W. Case, of the Columbia theatre, here during the three week's run of "The Flirt," but can be used as an exploitation aid for any picture.

Mr. Case had tied up with the Seattle Post-Intelligencer in announcing a special morning matinee for children. The only requirement for admission was some article of food or clothing that could be turned over to the Associated Charities organization of this city.

The day of the matinee the street in front of the theatre was packed with children. Two tiny boys had come to the theatre dragging a large live hog on a chain. As the rest of the articles were piled in front of the theatre the hog was parked in the street and chained to a fire plug in front of the theatre.

As a result of this Manager Case was arrested by the Police Department for parking his hog within twenty-five feet of a fire hydrant. Next day the Post-Intelligencer carried a full column story of the matter, with pictures of Mr. Case's arrest and entrance, with the hog, into the police patrol in front of the theatre. The story went on to tell of his release by the police court judge because the owners of the hog could not be found and there was not enough evidence to convict him, especially since the idea was all for charity. The paper gave credit to the ranch that had donated the hog to the youngsters, and also went on in regard to the picture.

The whole stunt was put over by Mr. Case with ease, as the newspaper had already been tied up in regard to the matter of the distribution of the articles to charity, and the ranch that donated the hog was only too glad to do so for the sake of charity and a little publicity in the newspapers.

Newlyweds Admitted Free to "One Week of Love"

GALVESTON, Texas. — Manager Charles Sasseen of the Queen theatre used an extensive newspaper campaign several days in advance of "One Week of Love," including several special stories and classified ads on a stunt intended to interest all persons who were married on the dates the picture was to play.

Mr. Sasseen advertised that all persons who could show certificates, that they were married on the days the picture ran at the theatre, would be given free admissions to see "One Week of Love."

The stunt was a success, quite a large number of marriage certificates were brought to Mr. Sasseen as evidence, and free tickets were awarded to the holders of these licenses.

Novel Shadow Box Is Built for "Man Who Saw Tomorrow"

South Pittsburgh, Tenn.—Manager E. C. Ogg, of the Imperial theatre, was greatly aided in his exploitation of "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" by a novel shadow box in the lobby.

The bottom of the box contained a one-sheet, oiled and illuminated from the rear. Above this was a compartment containing a miniature parlor set, with chairs, sofa, table, rugs, etc., and pictures on the walls. Several figures cut from the lobby cards were placed about the set.

On the rear wall of the "parlor" hung a framed card with Thomas Meighan's picture and carrying the billing for the photoplay.

Cut-Outs Decorate House Front for "Silver Wings"

St. Paul, Minn.—An attractive lobby display for "Silver Wings" was prepared by the Tower theatre, utilizing life size cut-outs made from the 24-sheets. Three large cut figure heads of Mary Carr and the two sons in the picture were used over the marquee.

The fact that Mary Carr was the creator of the mother role in "Over the Hill," was prominently displayed in all advertising. Large banners were used over the doors and also over the marquee. Special lobby frames and layouts of scenes were also used.

Unusual "Dr. Jack" street ballyhoo used by the New Franklin theatre, Oakland, Cal. The man carried no sign, but merely inquired of passersby for the offices of Dr. Jack

Gown Designing Contest is New "Broadway Rose" Stunt

St. Paul, Minn.—The management of the New Astor theatre, in connection with the St. Paul Daily News, exploited "Broadway Rose" through a contest in which $50 in cash prizes and 100 theatre tickets were offered for the best design for a dancing costume for Mae Murray.

The newspaper's own statement of the stipulations of the contest covers fully the details of this exploitation:

"Wouldn't Mae Murray look lovely in a black velvet, such-and-such a costume? you have probably said to yourself if you're a film fan.

"Well, why not design one for Miss Murray. She is looking for ideas for new gowns and dancing costumes, and through the Daily News asks readers to help her.

"The Daily News, by arrangement with the New Astor theatre, where Miss Murray's 'Broadway Rose' is being shown this week, is offering $50 in prizes and 100 theatre tickets to the men and women who submit the smartest, most attractive and original designs for a gown or dancing costume for Miss Murray.

"Here are the main points in the contest:

"Designs should be submitted either in pen and ink or colors. Pencil sketches will not be considered.

"Besides the drawing, the design submitted must include a description of the gown as to color and material used."

Madge Bellamy Contest Used for "Lorna Doone"

ALLENTOWN, Pa.—The distinction of being first to use the Madge Bellamy guessing contest designed as an exploitation aid for "Lorna Doone" goes to Manager J. M. Fogelman of the Colonial theatre.

Prior to the release of "Lorna Doone" Miss Bellamy had posed in eight different costumes, representing eight different famous characters of varying periods of history, such as Cleopatra and Betsy Ross.

Cuts of these pictures were used by the Allentown Chronicle and Leader which found good circulation value in interesting its readers in such a contest, asking them to identify the various characters represented.

Many Co-operative Stunts Are Tied Up With "Kick In"

Macon, Ga.—Manager E. C. Kingman of the Rialto theatre used an extensive teaser campaign, followed by many co-operative stunts, for "Kick In."

Teasers were started on the screen ten days in advance. A few days later the outside teaser work was sprung. One thousand gummed stickers, with only the title in bold type, were stuck on automobile windshields, show windows and similar places.

Allowing a few days for the title alone to soak in, Mr. Kingman opened up with a lot of co-operative advertising that practically covered the city. Beginning three days in advance, the largest drug store in the city featured a "Kick In" sundae. A free pass was offered to the table boy or girl who sold the most of these, and they went like hot cakes.

The eight one-sheet stands of the Navy and Marine recruiting office were grabbed with signs telling men between 18 and 35 to KICK IN, join the Marines or Navy, and see the picture at the Rialto.

The tie-up with the Dempsey Hotel was for a special "Kick In Luncheon," which they served every day during the engagement. The menu explained that the dishes were favorites of Betty Compson and Bert Lytell. The dessert was cocoanut pudding a la Betty Compson.

Enters Harold Lloyd in Race Against Comic Strip

Birmingham, Ala.—Manager L. R. Towns, of the Strand theatre, put over the much coveted "something new" in exploiting "Dr. Jack," when he put over a unique stunt with the Birmingham News, about ten days before opening.

The Birmingham News runs daily the comic strip showing Barney Google and his race horse, Spark Plug. And this is the most popular of the comic strips run in Birmingham. So Mr. Towns conceived the idea of having the News put on a contest to determine who gets the most laughs, Harold Lloyd or Spark Plug, and why. The contest was called the "Great Laughter Handicap." Prizes of $15 and $10 were offered for the best letters of 100 words or less, picking the winner and the loser, respectively, and giving reasons for the choice. The winner of the "Handicap" was determined by the number of votes received, not by the arguments advanced in the letters.

The "Handicap" started on Wednesday before "Dr. Jack" opened at the Strand on Monday, and ran until the following Tuesday at 12:30 noon. The News played it up strong with daily articles under two-column heads, most of the articles appearing on the front page. These articles were written in an interesting manner, giving the positions of the entrants, advancing arguments for both sides.

George Rea, manager of the Colonial, Washington Court House, O., used his auto to ballyhoo "Ebb Tide," as shown here

When you think of one-reel comedies think of

Hal Roach Comedies

YOUR public does, for they are played in more theatres than any one reel comedies that have ever been made.

For nine years Hal Roach has been making these comedies. In the earlier releases Harold Lloyd himself was starred. Then came "Snub" Pollard; and now Paul Parrott.

You benefit by the wonderful past success of these comedies as well as by the earnest effort and rich experience which is applied to those of today.

When you buy commodities of any sort you want those which have proven their quality. You refuse to make risky experiments.

—Blaisdell in Trade Review.

"A Very Good Western Melodrama"

" 'The Drifter' is a very good Western melodrama . . . Plenty of hand-to-hand encounters, thrills, and an altogether satisfactory short subject." —Lillian Gale, in M. P News.

"Refreshing—Sure Fire"

" 'The Bar Cross War' is refreshing. It keeps one alert. A story of sufficient merit to hold interest, direction of a feature par and last reel a series of combats about as well done as the camera has ever photographed. . . . It is sure fire. — Lillian Gale, in M. P. News.

"High Standard of Interest and Suspense"

"The high standard of interest and suspense set in previous issues is maintained in 'His Enemy's Friend.' It is a production that should be welcomed by any audience."

Double-Truck Syndicate Story for "Hungry Hearts"

Cleveland, O.—Edward Carrier, Goldwynner here, aided by Eddie Bonns, manager of exploitation for Goldwyn, has succeeded in getting, through a newspaper syndicate, a double-truck Sunday newspaper magazine feature story across in eighty-four newspapers of the country on "Hungry Hearts."

On January 7 the two-page article appeared in the Cleveland News, the Atlanta Constitution, the Fort Worth Record, the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram, the Dayton News, the Springfield (O.) News, the Buffalo Courier, the Ohio State Journal of Columbus and the Post of Washington, D. C. Seventy-three other newspapers used the story on following Sundays in their magazine sections.

The story appeared in the Cleveland News on the day of the opening of "Hungry Hearts" at the Circle theatre.

"Hungry Hearts Speak the Wide World Over" was the title of the article spread across the two pages. A bank underneath the head read: "'We Can Get Plenty of Husbands. What We Want Are Single Men.' Is the Motto of a Strange Club Which Is Sweeping Over the World as War's Aftermath." The article is illustrated with drawings and with photographs of seven pretty girls who founded the Cleveland Chapter.

Bag of Salt Novelty Exploits "Omar the Tentmaker"

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Tiny bags of salt attached to tags were used as an advance exploitation novelty by the New York Mark Strand theatre for the run of "Omar the Tentmaker."

Salt, the beginning and end of all wishes on the desert, the charm against evil and the symbol of good fortune, was the tie-up used to link up the attractive novelty with "Omar."

The tag, on the face, announced the coming of the attraction. On the reverse side it outlined in 23 words the symbolic meaning of the gift of salt and then added that the receiver must accept this gift from a stranger and within three days pass it on to someone else to insure good fortune.

Sort of a personal lucky chain that was made more effective than the chain letter by the personal touch. The tag and bag of salt were red.

Ties Up with Newspaper Puts Rotos in 40,000 Homes

Memphis, Tenn.—Getting a four-page colored advertisement into the homes of 40,000 Sunday readers on the opening day of the presentation of the picture, with no cost outside of supplying the newspaper with the rotogravures, is the latest stunt put forth by G. E. Brown, direcor of advertising and publicity of the Consolidated Enterprises, Inc., of Memphis.

Brown tied up with the Commercial Appeal, which claims the largest circulation in the South, for the distribution of rotos on four Paramount releases biled for Loew's Palace.

The rotos, each appearing Sunday morning, the opening day of the picture, proved a sensation in Memphis.

Brown made the stunt interesting to the paper by overprinting each roto with advertising copy for his other productions during the month.

Many Exploitation Aids Used in "The Flirt" Campaign

Seattle, Wash.—A varied exploitation and publicity program planned to reach every element in the city was put over by Manager R. W. Case for "The Flirt" when that picture had its world premiere in this city recently.

One stunt that had known results was the sending of 5,000 chain letters to persons who were believed to be of a more or less superstitious nationality. Each letter asked the recipient to read it carefully, telephone its contents to three other persons, and then mail the letter on to another friend. The letter merely contained a brief message about the picture and dates of showing.

A "What Is a Flirt?" contest, run by the Seattle Union Record, which received several front page displays, was another item that came in for its share of result getting. Winners' letters on the subject were published in the paper and cash prizes and yearly passes were given by the theatre for the best definitions.

Over 5,000 "Columbiagrams," 3 x 4½ inches in size, printed in four-page booklet form, were distributed in office buildings, mail boxes and in apartments and homes in the suburbs of the city. The booklets featured some of the extracts from subtitles in the picture, and also a few pages from the diary that forms an important part of the story.

Waterfall "Tess" Lobby Made Over For "Brawn of North"

Asheville, N. C.—Manager John B. Carroll of the Imperial theatre got double service from a lobby display recently when he built it for "Tess of the Storm Country" and completely transformed it for "Brawn of the North."

For "Tess of the Storm Country" a waterfall set was built in the center of the lobby just in front of the box office. The backing was of heavy canvas painted to represent rocks. A hose connection from the basement discharged water at the top of the "falls" and a drain at the bottom conducted it back. Pine trees were massed around this central set and along the sides of the lobby. In front of the "falls" were placed several old stumps and broken trees, as though a storm had swept through.

For "Brawn of the North," which played the last three days of the same week, this display was converted into a novel "snow" lobby. The water falls was covered with mica and artificial icicles. The stumps and broken limbs were taken out and replaced with fresh pine trees. Then all the trees were covered with artificial snow and the floor around the base of the falls and under the trees on both sides was banked with cotton and mica. The effect was striking and realistic.

Compo Board Dog House Used in Strongheart Lobby

CHICAGO, Ill.—The management of the Harmony theatre obtained an excellent effect in its lobby for "Brawn of the North," with a compo Board dog house and a head of Strongheart cut out from the 24-sheet.

The head emerged only halfway from the house, which was painted in vivid colors with all the effects of a circus layout. To intensify the realism a sign was put over the doorway:

"Beware of Strongheart, the Wonder Dog, now playing inside in 'Brawn of the North.' Thrills—Romance—Action.

The lobby display was supplemented by the distribution of 1,000 balloons to children of the neighborhood advertising the canine star at the Harmony.

Newspaper Foots Bills For "East Is West" Contest

SHARON, PA.—The winking contest on "East Is West," first used by Jacob Fabian when the picture played the Regent theatre, Paterson, N. J., was sold to a newspaper as a circulation building idea when the attraction was booked for the Liberty.

The Sharon Herald footed the bill for the contest, including the prize awards, because of its faith in the idea to build reader interest. The only expense incurred by the exhibitor consisted of the slides used to advertise this exploitation in his theatre.

Animated Shadow Box Used as "Singed Wings" Display

FORT SMITH, Ark.—Manager Hugo Plath of the Palace theatre employed an attractive "Singed Wings" shadow box, the inside walls of which were covered with purple sateen. A cut-out of Bebe Daniels stood in the center of the shadow box. To one side of the shadow box was seen burning a candle from which a large moth suspended from a bulb by an invisible silk thread swung back and forth in front of the flame.

By means of an electric motor a buzzing sound was produced which created considerable attention and gave the effect of the flapping of the wings of the moth. The colors used for the lighting effect in the box were green and purple made to blend together.

Takes Advantage of Fire with "Eternal Flame" Banner

Anniston, Ala.—In putting "The Eternal Flame" over, Manager Roy C. Smart, of the Noble theatre, took advantage of a local fire to excellent advantage.

The historic old Anniston Inn, built by the founders of Anniston, was burned the week before this picture opened. Before the flames were entirely out, Mr. Smart had a banner, six feet wide by eighteen feet long, painted and hung under the old electric sign which was still hanging from the front wall of the ruin. The banner read:

"This huge building was consumed by flames in four hours, thirty minutes. 'The Eternal Flame' burns on forever. See it at the Noble Monday and Tuesday, with Norma Talmadge."

The burning of the historical old inn was of great local interest and practically everybody in town visited the ruins several times. They couldn't miss the banner and they could not fail to be impressed with the novelty of such advertising. So it was a topic of conversation for days.

Manager F. H. Fowler, Jr., of the Rialto theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn., decorated his lobby in this fashion for "My Friend the Devil." It was done in red. The boy in devil costume did fire-eating tricks in the lobby

Tasteful window display tying up with "Suzanna," obtained when that picture was playing at the Mission theatre, Los Angeles

"Knighthood" Well Exploited in Extensive Campaign

Jacksonville, Fla.—Manager Guy A. Kenimer of the Arcade theatre put over a thorough exploitation campaign for "When Knighthood was in Flower," embracing the following features, among others:

Window display arranged with Jacksonville's only book store, the first time this store has ever cooperated. Large window dressed with about sixty copies of special Marion Davies edition of the book, and with cards and stills from the picture.

Mailing list of about 1,500 carefully selected names was used. They were sent a letter endorsing and recommending the picture, together with a program and a herald.

One of the neatest and most attractive lobby displays ever featured at the Arcade was used. The entire lobby, front, side and back, was enclosed with compoboard painted to represent a stone castle. The opening in the front was a wide arch. There were arches along both sides and arches over the doors in the back leading into the theatre. Shields and crossed spears hung on the walls around the lobby and over the entrance arch.

Otherwise the lobby was entirely bare except for a cut-out of Marion Davies in boyish costume, and an artistic panel giving the billing of the picture, and flanked on each side by a tall, slender plant.

J. C. Wodetsky, manager of the Regent theatre, Kalamazoo, Mich., used this attractive lobby sign for "Singed Wings"

Old Derrick Put Up in Lobby for "The Hell Diggers"

TIMPSON, Texas.—M. K. Moore of the Victory theatre carried out an effective lobby display idea on "The Hell Diggers."

He had an oil derrick fourteen feet high built of 1x4 lumber. The derrick was placed in front of his theatre and several pieces of casing were set in the derrick to make it look business like. He also poured over the casing some black oil to make it still more business like. The entire display was labelled "Hell Diggers Oil Company." Wallace Reid, president, Paramount Well No. 1. This display several days in advance caused considerable talk.

Moore had a wild cat whistle, the kind that the fire trucks use. The mayor allowed him to use it on the opening night.

After setting off four big railroad fuse torches, he started his wild cat whistle. Of course the people thought that the town was on fire. Moore, himself, said it brought them all out.

Novelties Exploit "$5 Baby" and "Trifling Women"

Sandusky, O.—George Schade of the Schade theatre upheld his reputation for effective novelty advertising in his exploitation for "The Five Dollar Baby" and "Trifling Women."

"Trifling Women" inspired a thermometric stunt. A little tube, partly filled with a liquid of the hue of pink lemonade at the circus was glued to a slip of cardboard about the size of a check in a dairy lunch. The degrees of amorous affection were marked: Indifferent, Real Love, Jealous Love, Hate and Furious Love. At the top of the card was the inscription: "Trifling Women" Thermometer. Turn over for instructions. Following the instruction revealed this direction: See "Trifling Women," a drama of three kinds of love, with the date and so forth.

"The Five Dollar Baby" appeared in person on a card big enough to display a one-column advertising cut. A kewpie, no larger than a capsule, was pinned to the pasteboard.

Newspaper Finally Won Over By "Oliver Twist" Matinee

Springfield, Ill.—Manager W. G. Watts of the Princess theatre, after many attempts to break into the news columns of a local paper, which has rigid anti-publicity rules, finally succeeded and obtained most advantageous publicity for "Oliver Twist."

The stunt that enabled the Princess manager to purloin the valuable space was a special Saturday morning showing for the orphans of Springfield. The idea was sold to the Illinois State Journal by giving the paper full credit for staging the orphans' showing, the stories indicating that the party was being staged by the newspaper.

In addition, Mr. Watts worked the stunt into a big ballyhoo when he persuaded the local scout master to assemble the scouts as an honorary escort to the orphans. The orphans were brought on Saturday morning to a designated spot and there the boy scouts, in full regalia, met them and marched through the city in parade formation, led by the scouts' fife and drum corps. The scouts carried three fifteen-foot banners announcing the special showing. The parade, as expected, attracted a great deal of attention, which in addition to the newspaper publicity given to the stunt by the State Journal, made the double tie-up a highly effective one.

Racing Atmosphere Utilized in "Garrison's Finish" Stunts

Seattle, Wash.—As part of his extensive exploitation program for "Garrison's Finish" when it played at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre here recently, Publicity Manager Vic Gauntlett attired the cashiers and girl ushers of the house in elaborate jockey costumes.

The lobby decorations of the theatre featured the race scenes in the picture. A life-size cut-out of Jack Pickford as the jockey on his horse was placed on each side of the lobby immediately in front of a painted scene resembling a crowded racetrack. In transparent letters, illuminated from the rear and intermittently lighted by large colored lamps, the words "Garrison's Finish" appeared just in the background, behind the horse and jockey.

Window card and newspaper advertising also carried out the racing idea, much of it being put out in the shape of a large horseshoe, and all of it emphasizing the racetrack theme of the story.

Blank Book Stunt Utilized for "Trifling Women"

HAMILTON, O.—Managing Director Fred S. Meyer of the Palace theatre used the "What I Know About Women" booklet, with blank leaves, to excellent advantage in exploiting "Trifling Women," giving it an added angle of interest through an advance advertisement.

In conjunction with the exhibition of the picture, Mr. Meyer inserted this advertisement in the newspapers:

"1923's biggest seller will be off the press tomorrow, 'What I Know About Women.' by Harry Silver. Free copies may be obtained tomorrow at Radcliffe's, Berkowitz's. and Len and Schwartz's." These are drug stores and cigar stores.

The volume was a four-page leaflet. On the first page was an announcement of the picture. On the back page was the title, "What I Know About Women," a drawing of one of them in lingerie, and the direction. "Now turn to the inside pages." These were blank. Mr. Silver, the author, incidentally, is resident manager of the Palace. The leaflet was highly perfumed.

"Eternal Flame" Tie Up with Little Theatre League

RICHMOND, VA.—The Broadway theatre, of which Jack Reville is manager, obtained excellent publicity for "The Eternal Flame" through a private screening for the Little Theatre League, representative of civic leaders in all lines of activity, which resulted in an endorsement from the league.

Manager Reville's idea of interesting the Little Theatre League was only one of many exploitation angles. "The Eternal Flame" candle also shed its light and the Norma pearls glistened in the windows of several stores to help the Broadway theatre.

Ties Up with Candy Store on "Dr. Jack" Happy Bags

McALESTER, Okla.—Manager Earl Settle of the Palace theatre made particularly effective use of the happy bags furnished as an exploitation aid on "Dr. Jack," through a tie-up with a candy store.

Special announcements were made in all the newspaper ads to the effect that Dr. Jack's happy bags filled with candy would be given away to boys and girls attending the theatre Saturday. The candy was given to Mr. Settle free by a local confectionery store. Mr. Settle states that this was a splendid bit of exploitation as the children would carry the bags of candy home with them which was just another ad for the picture.

Simple Street Ballyhoo Used on "Rich Men's Wives"

Augusta, Ga.—A simple teaser ballyhoo that brought excellent results was used by Manager F. J. Miller of the Modjeska theatre in exploiting "Rich Men's Wives" for three days in advance.

From the Cadillac agency he borrowed a new Cadillac limousine in exchange for a slide on the screen. Two red and gold uniforms were borrowed from the Vanderbilt hotel, one for a chauffeur and one for a footman.

A fashionably dressed young lady sat inside with the curtains half drawn and was driven all over town. Stops were made at all important stores. The footman would alight, open the door and assist the young lady down. While she was in the store he would stand at attention by the door. When she returned he would help her in, close the door, resume his seat and the car would drive off.

The only advertising carried on the car was a small sign on each side reading, "Rich Men's Wives."

Rothafel Uses Unique Prologue to "Quincy Adams Sawyer"

New York, N. Y.—In connection with the presentation of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" at the Capitol theatre, S. L. Rothafel devised an unusual prologue, so simple in execution that almost any exhibitor could duplicate it. The setting consisted simply of a rural drop with a 24-sheet on the picture in the center of it. This 24-sheet was brilliantly lighted. An actor made up as a rural bill poster is shown in the act of finishing the pasting of the 24-sheet. Two country children are watching him. After finishing his work he lays down his paste-pot and brush and tells the synopsis of "Quincy Adam Sawyer" in a special song written by Martha Wilchinsk. The lyrics were as follows:

Slick up your galoshes and harness up the shay—
A wonderful show has come to town today!

Our hero's name is Quincy Adams Sawyer,
He always knew just what he was about;
He surely was a right smart lawyer,
And he didn't like the looks of Obadiah Strout.

Lindy Putnam was a brazen piece,
She tried to vamp Quincy, but he wouldn't fall;
For he loved blind Alice, the Deacon's niece,
And he couldn't see any other gal at all.

Slick up your galoshes and harness up the shay:
A wonderful show has come to town today!

Then Lindy and the wicked Obadiah
And the husky blacksmith, Abner Stiles, to boot—
They got together, aimin' to conspire,
But Quincy knew that there was dirty work a-foot!

They set blind Alice adrift on the water;
Did Quincy let her drown? By heck, not he!
He jumped in the river and out he bro't her,
And, Gosh! how he hugged her when he found she could see!

Then Lindy went right back to her mother
And promised she always would be good:
And Obadiah was fixed so he couldn't harm another,
And everything ended just the way it should!

So slick up your galoshes and harness up the shay,
A wonderful show has come to town today!

Display for "Cameron of the Royal Mounted" arranged by Manager H. B. Clarke, of the Strand theatre, Memphis, Tenn. Added interest was given by the saddle and harness

Iowa Hook-Up Results in New "Clarence" Nut Bar

DES MOINES, IOWA—When "Clarence" played at the Strand theatre, the Hutchinson Candy Co., one of the largest in this part of the country, tied up with it, printing up 25,000 wrappers which denominated a staple nut bar product as the "Clarence" Nut Bar.

John E. Kennebeck, Paramount exploiteer, secured the hook-up and used it immediately in Grinnell, Iowa, and other towns. Kennebeck also got up window cards and a standard display which were used in the windows of the dealers for a splendid flash for the title.

Effective Street Ballyhoo for "Deserted at the Altar"

Richmond Hill, L. I.—Manager David Schaefer, of the Richmond Hill theatre, in addition to filling his lobby with wedding decorations, used a simple and ingenious street ballyhoo for "Deserted at the Altar."

Mr. Schaefer had a couple dressed as bride and groom riding about town in an automobile with bells and tin cans attached to attract attention. He himself acted as cameraman. They stopped on every prominent corner, where the groom got out and started an argument with the bride, with the cameraman presumably shooting the scene. When a crowd had assembled, a shade was pulled down in the rear of the machine bearing the date, theatre and name of the picture.

Teaser Letter Mailed to Omaha Doctors on "Dr. Jack"

Omaha, Neb.—Nathan Frudenfeld, publicity man for the World Realty Company's string of four theatres here, put over an extensive advertising campaign for "Dr. Jack" at the Sun theatre. A "Dr. Jack" letterhead was printed, with a big cut of Harold Lloyd at the left, with address, office hours, etc., the copy reading:

"Dear Friend:

"I am about to establish offices at the above address to practice medicine in the newest and most advanced methods.

"Furthermore, I am going to advertise in the Omaha newspapers that I have 'Nature's Finest Remedy' for the cure of the sick, the near sick and healthy.

"I know it is unethical to advertise. I know I may be barred. I know I may incur the wrath of the American Medical Association.

"But I am willing to dare these obstacles to prove my cure-all.

"I am sure YOU will not condemn before you investigate. I only ask for a fair deal. I appeal to you to help me help humanity by telling your friends to see me and tell your patients to tell their friends that for their joy, health and happiness to call and see me between the hours of 11 a. m. and 11 p. m. at the above address January 6th, to 20th.

"Looking forward to being of real service to you and regretting very much that my future appointments only allow me the short stay of fifteen days in Omaha, I remain,

"Yours for 'Joy,'
"Dr. H. Jack."

"Broken Chains" Given Heavy Advertising Campign

South Bend, Ind.—Manager Reingold, of the Blackstone theatre, in conjunction with Walter D. Nealand, Goldwynner, put over a thorough exploitation campaign recently for "Broken Chains."

Big display signs, elaborately painted, were used, first for three days on both sides of interurban car which plied the streets continually, and later against the side walls of a burned building in the heart of the city. Extra newspaper advertising was done. A fine jewelry store window tied-up was arranged.

In the lobby, in addition to cut-outs, posters and stills, were frames with the Chicago criticism of "Broken Chains." Frames with the criticisms were also placed in the lobbies of the La Salle and the Oliver hotels and on street corners. Hand-painted cards were used at the news stands and were hung from the trolley span wires.

Potato Stunt Exploitation on "Love in the Dark"

DULUTH, Minn.—The Lyric theatre tied up with the Duluth Herald on "Love in the Dark," for a special morning performance for children, the price of admission to be a potato. The potatoes, five bushels of which were donated by Miss Dana, were distributed among the poor of Duluth.

The stunt was arranged in the following manner: H. N. Azine, manager of the Lyric announced in the columns of the Duluth Herald that a special showig of "Love in the Dark" would be held at his theatre, for children only, the admittance charge being one potato.

Grownups passing the theatre deposited their potatoes for the poor, although they were not admitted inside the Lyric. In all, seventy-five bushels of potatoes were received and distributed by Mayor Snively to needy families.

An interesting angle which added to the effectiveness of the stunt was the receipt of a telegram from Miss Dana, star of the picture, endorsing the "potato campaign," and authorizing Mr. Azine to donate five bushels in her name. The Herald reproduced the telegram and a cut of Miss Dana, with a story about the campaign and her interest intit.

"Oliver Twist" Is Exploited Through Dickens Contest

CALGARY, Alta.—Allen's Palace theatre conducted a Dickens Contest in connection with the presentation of "Oliver Twist."

Contestants were required to fill out a questionnaire in which they were to state how many of Charles Dickens' novels they had read; give opinions regarding his best work; state whether they had read "Oliver Twist" or not; give an estimate of how many people would reply that they had read "Oliver Twist," etc.

The prize for the best answer was a leather-bound copy of "Oliver Twist" while theatre passes made up various other prizes.

Lip Contest Gets Publicity for "Trifling Women"

MADISON, Wis.—A "Lip Contest" run by the Wisconsin State Journal was used by the Parkway theatre, Madison, to exploit Barbara La Marr's "Trifling Women," now being run at the Parkway.

A first prize of $50 was offered for the prettiest lips in Madison, and fifteen second prizes, consisting of two tickets each to the photoplay, were given. Three bachelors were chosen to judge the photographs which were sent in to the Journal.

Miss La Marr's photograph was run as the model for the contest, and the name of the play was run in all the daily publicity on the contest. The material published in the paper was written by the paper's feature writer and was signed "Lipstick."

Fashion Article by Actress Is "Strangers' Banquet" Aid

St. Paul, Minn.—Exploitation in St. Paul, preliminary to the run of "The Strangers' Banquet," took the form of an article on women's clothes and how they make American women the most beautiful in the world.

It took the form of a signed article, "Written Specially for the St. Paul News." The publicity for the picture was indirect, as it was mentioned but once in the article, but the name of Claire Windsor attached to it was of distinct exploitational value, as she has the leading role in the film. The article was prepared by William H. Branch, Minneapolis Goldwynner. It treated of the psychology of feminine clothes and their effect in bringing out the beauty and charm of the wearer.

The "text" for the discourse was the role which Miss Windsor plays in "The Strangers' Banquet."

Manager Perry Spencer of the Grand theatre, Brunswick, Ga., prepared this attractive lobby display for "Under Two Flags"

Pre-release Reviews of Features

"Look Your Best"

Goldwyn—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

TO EAT, to grow fat, to spoil one's career. To starve, to keep thin, to become a great artiste. That is the choice given Perla Quaranta, a little Italian girl portrayed by Colleen Moore, who is one day noticed dancing in the streets by Carlo Bruni, manager of a small theatrical troupe, and who is given the place of the chorus lady who has fallen to the temptation of too many sweets, with the result that the perfect 36 has developed into an imperfect 40 or so. Perla is a success in the act but as she goes from town to town, accepting invitations from Krug, a stage hand, to dine, she also begins to take on weight. Krug, maddened at her coldness, when he makes advances, weakens the wire that holds Perla aloft in a butterfly stunt and she falls to the stage. Krug thought he could tell the folks Perla's avoirdupois was to blame. Bruni, however, knocks Krug for a goal and gets thirty days for his gallantry. However, thirty days pass soon in some jails, and Bruni is soon out and starting a new ballet with Perla.

And so it goes. It isn't much of a picture and there is a fight between Perla's mother and father which takes up much footage and could be eliminated much to the improvement of the story. In fact, the dropping of these two characters throughout would not be missed in the least. To see a boisterous hurdy gurdy grinder jump from jail into a theatre box in a dress suit is not being done these days. There is a very artistic ballet scene toward the end of this picture.

This is not the best thing Rupert Hughes has written and adapted for the screen. Neither is it his best directed picture. Of course, one can't expect any company to continue releasing masterpieces all the time. We can't have a "Christian" every day. There have got to be some program pictures once in a while. This is one. It will serve its purpose and is suitable for second-class downtown houses, and there may be many who may find much humor in its fat and thin theme—especially those who are fighting either evil.

By Rupert Hughes. Directed by Rupert Hughes. Scenario by Rupert Hughes. Photographed by Norbert Brodin.

The Story—Deals with the horror in which some folks hold plain good old fat. A chorus girl having attained this terrible state, is fired and Perla, a daughter of Little Italy, is given her place in Bruni's "Butterfly Act." Perla made good and went on the road with the show. She also went out to dine with one Krug and began to put on flesh. Krug, a disappointed suitor, filed one of the wires which held Perla aloft in the butterfly stuff. During the act she crashed to the stage. Bruni beats up Krug and gets 30 days. Emerging from jail he starts a new ballet, engages Perla and the two rise to fame.

Production Highlights—Colleen Moore's characterization of the role of the little Italian girl. The crashing of Perla to the stage floor as a result of the villain weakening the wire which holds her.

Exploitation Angles—The title. The eat and grow thin or fat as you will theme offers a chance to tie up with the health department, Y. W. C. A. women's walking clubs, etc.

"The Man Who Waited"

Playgoers—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Eugene Carlton)

NO, YOU'RE wrong; it's not a love story, but a Western. There is a love story involved in the plot, as directors apparently have come to the unanimous conclusion that no Western is complete without a minor love plot. "The Man Who Waited" is one of those stereotyped productions to which no rural or neighborhood audience would object; yet, aside from a few new twists in detail, there, visually, is nothing in the picture that cannot be found along the well beaten paths of Western plots.

For some unknown reason a story which opens with the son of a murdered man roaming the wilds in an effort to avenge his father always gains a fair hold on the interest of the average neighborhood audience, and this fact has not been overlooked by Edward I. Luddy, who wrote the story and directed the production. Of course, the girl with whom the revenge-seeking son falls in love is the daughter of his father's slayer. To be otherwise would not be Western. Then, just to prove that she is a good fellow and possesses none of the traits of her father, the girl files a location claim to a gold bearing lode, discovered by her lover, and saves it from the grasp of plotters.

In physical thrills, good exterior shots of mountain ranges and swift action there is enough merit to classify the picture as a good Western. The lighting is good, while the continuity is unwavering.

The Cast

The Story—A son is seeking the slayer of his father, the slayer having blown up a mine. He discovers slayer, fighting with father's former partner, but slayer escapes. Son and father's former partner discover gold-bearing lode. Son falls in love with daughter of father's slayer, the daughter being foster daughter of people who also plotted blowing up of mine. Foster parents of girl discover location of gold-bearing lode of the son and seek to file location claim ahead of him, but the daughter beats them to it and saves the day for the son by filing a location claim.

Classification—Western melodrama involving a love story.

Production Highlights—Scene of Magee's ride down mountain slope to file claim and the rider's fall and scene when mine is blown up.

Exploitation—Daring ability of Frank Braidwood as a rider and data on mine explosion should be played up.

Drawing Power—Suitable for rural, neighborhood or smaller downtown houses.

Brush-American Releasing—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

RESEMBLING a serial in the adventurous action and an old-time melodrama concerning its theme, "A Million in Jewels" is the type of picture which has made the program house popular. J. P. McGowan, who wrote, directed and played the leading role of this effort, has not struck off anything new. He merely gives the audiences who will see this picture what they want—which is plenty of fast-moving incident—a little suspense, here and there, a few physical thrills, though not as many as one might expect with Helen Holmes in the cast, and a first-rate production which offers some good background against Morro Castle and Havana harbor.

The idea is the ancient and honorable battle of revenue officers and jewel smugglers. And to lend a romantic flavor and pep it up the ringleader of the crooks is played by the dashing Helen. The picture starts off showing the agent in the New York Custom House releasing a pair of hirelings in the employ of the smugglers. He knows that they will hasten to their employers. The next shot is in Havana waters, with the action presenting some mysterious goings on between the smugglers, signal waving, and what not. The hero allows himself to be imprisoned so as to throw the crooks off the track and bobs up on deck of a steamer where the villains are carrying on.

The punch of the plot involves an innocent girl whose candy secretes the jewels. The "revenuer" discovers the trick, but is frustrated. After being tossed into the sea and making his way to his superiors, he is suspended. The box of candy is brought through O. K. But the villainess exchanges it for a box of real chocolates. The hero gets on the job again, steals the jewels, explains his actions to the innocent girl who loves him and captures the crooks. After which he learns that the fair smuggler has loved him all the while though she gives up her life to save him.

The scenes are filled with first rate incident and manage to hold the attention even though one is familiar with the plot and how it will terminate. Perhaps some will notice that Elinor Faire hesitates in her scenes toward the climax as if waiting for the director to offer suggestions. She halts three or four times in making her escape. Fair entertainment.

The Cast

Helen Morgan.....Helen Holmes
Burke.....J. P. McGowan
Sylvia Ellis.....Elinor Faire
Jane Angle.....Nellie Parker Spaulding
George Beresford.....Charles Craig
William Abbott.....Leslie J. Casey
Morgan.....Herbert Pattee

Written and directed by J. P. McGowan. Produced by Brnsh. Released by American Releasing.

The Story—Burke, a revenue agent, is determined to capture the crafty smugglers of the crown jewels, who operate under Morgan, the "brains" behind the gang, although Helen Morgan is assigned to the task of outwitting the government. Burke has knowledge that the smugglers will enter through a southern port from Havana. After several difficulties in which he is frustrated time and again and suspended from the service he is successful.

Classification — Melodrama concerned with conflict between revenue forces and a band of smugglers, tinctured with romance.

Production Highlights—The good detail. The excellent staging.

Exploitation Angles—Title suggests a teaser campaign. Might co-operate with local editor to feature stories of smuggled jewels, etc. Play up McGowan and Helen Holmes.

Drawing Power—Best suited for second class downtown houses.

"Poor Men's Wives"

Preferred-Al Lichtman—6700 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS picture is a sort of sequel to the producers' "Rich Men's Wives," and from the subject matter involved it might be cut from the same cloth—the only difference being that the earlier release did not contrast the sordid side of life. It is an ambitious effort to make capital of a moral—that the every work-a-day family should be content to be humble and not strive to imitate the manners of the rich.

"Rich Men's Wives" showed a wealthy man turning his wife out of home for being over-friendly with a tango artist; "Poor Men's Wives" shows a hard-working, rough and ready taxi driver turning his wife out of doors for robbing him to pay for a gown which their children ruined—the gown having been sent on approval that it might be worn by the pleasure-loving wife at a lavish ball. A good deal of the picture is given up to moralizing and it often appears illogical. Yet in its favor are some effective touches emphasizing the craving of the poor, downtrodden wife to share the fortunes of the rich.

The authors have presented nothing new, nor has the director in his treatment of the theme, yet the picture maintains the interest because of the incident and color. Color? There is a rich amount of it in the ball episode, which is one of the best individual scenes which have come to the screen in some time. We might say that it doesn't exactly fit the story—we might say that it more properly belongs in "Rich Men's Wives"; nevertheless it points the way to a melodramatic conflict when the taxi-driver discovers that his wife has been there and misunderstands the situation enough to turn her out. The plot develops that the heroine and the wife of the rich bounder are chums. The latter envies the poor girl because she has complete possession of her husband, a man who delights in playing with feminine hearts. It is an effective scene which shows the poor wife's children ruining her dress, thus precipitating a more or less convincing climax and moral.

Barbara La Marr as the chauffeur's wife appears genuine except in a few fleeting moments when she is called upon to overact. David Butler is convincing as the husband, while Betty Francisco and Richard Tucker as the rich people are always in character. The picture is well staged and has a definite audience appeal.

The Cast

Laura Bedford, afterward Laura Maberne ..... Barbara La Marr
Jim Maberne ..... David Butler
Claribel ..... Betty Francisco
Richard Smith-Blanton ..... Richard Tucker
Apple Annie ..... ZaSu Pitts
The Heavenly Twins ..... Muriel McCormac
Mickie McBan

By Agnes Christine Johnston and Frank Dazey. Directed by Gasnier. Produced by Preferred. Released by Al Lichtman.

The Story—Laura marries taxi-driver; Claribel marries a wealthy man about town. The poor man's wife is happy with her husband and children until her friend arouses her envy with her luxuries. Laura gets a gown on approval from store to wear at lavish ball and her children ruin it. Unable to pay for it she steals from her husband's earnings and is ejected from home. The taxi-driver eventually learns of his wife's sincerity and forgives her.

Classification—Drama of triangle situations showing contrast between wealth and poverty. Moral emphasized.

Production Highlights.—The acting of the four principals. The ball scene. The climax when taxi-driver distrusts his wife. The incident pertaining to ruination of dress.

Exploitation Angles—The title suggests a campaign. Also a prologue might feature a dance suggestive of the moth and the flame. Also might present a fashion parade.

Drawing Power—A good audience picture for most any house.

"The Wolf's Fangs"

Producers Security—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE North country is the background here and according to the title one may expect to see considerable play with the knife. It does not disappoint in this respect, for French Canadians wage their battles with it. The plot is orthodox since it presents a villain known as the "Wolf." Eugene Walter started this fashion when he wrote the play of that name. So the Canuck after big game—whether the stakes are women or the animals which furnish expensive furs—is invariably called the "Wolf."

But this story uncovers a new twist. Actually the hero gets the worst of it for a time. He is captured by the villain and tied to a kitchen chair in the cabin. With him out of the way, the desperado is free to marry the girl. And the bonds are tied with the sanction of the priest. You will rub your eyes in seeing this surprise. The author has gotten away from the beaten track thus far in an attempt to be original. These tales must have conflict. Well, there is plenty of it. The action unfolds the triangle in another way, too. You will find the villain's wronged sweetheart and her devoted admirer on the job to frustrate the scamp. So the admirer kills him. Then the heroine, now a widow, effects the release of her lover and the same priest without arguing the pros and cons of the matter, unites them. There you have it in a nutshell.

It is a raw, crude melodrama, yet, because of its primitive action, it is going to make the red-blooded boys and girls sit up and take notice. Most of them will like Nancy Deaver's portrayal of the heroine and will be fairly satisfied with Wilfred Lytell as the hero. Life is supposed to blend with nature's vivid backgrounds in the North country. In this respect the picture is consistent.

The high spots of the feature are found in the atmospheric exteriors—and the fact that, for once, the hero takes the count. At that, the author may have come far nearer the truth than most people who enjoy triumphant virtue suspect. A stark-naked title adorning a stark-naked melodrama.

The Cast

Austin Rockford ..... Wilfred Lytell
Yvonne Beauvis ..... Nancy Deaver
Henry Beauvis ..... Charles Macey
Jules Lafleur ..... Walter D. Greene
Florette Racine ..... Manila Martin
Jacques Garnier ..... Berthold Crawford

By Marion Brooks. Directed by Oscar Apfel.

The Story—French Canadian villain known as the "Wolf" is determined to have the girl of his heart. He manages to capture the hero and keep him out of the way while he marries the girl with the sanction of the priest. However, the "Wolf's" discarded sweetheart and the latter's devoted lover upset the villain's plans. The suitor kills him whereupon the widow is made happy with the hero.

Classification—Melodrama of familiar plot laid in French Canada. Hero and villain in a battle for the girl.

Production Highlights—Nancy Deaver's appealing performance. The exteriors.

Exploitation Angles—Might put out a teaser campaign using the title and a drawing of a wolf's head for copy. Play it up as vital story of the North. Suggests atmospheric lobby display if you care to go in for it.

Drawing Power—Second and third class down town houses.

"Adam and Eva"

Cosmopolitan-Paramount—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

AFTER all, it's in the way you produce it. Here Cosmopolitan has taken an average story, spilled a fortune on its transplantation to the shadow stage, and still another fortune on gowns to adorn the star, Marion Davies; assembled a cast, each member of which is an ideal type for the part given and then as a climax engaged that master of scenic background, Joseph Urban, to put on the finishing touches. The result is highly satisfying.

Most folks are familiar with the story, which enjoyed a long and successful stage career. It is a tale that is rich in comedy appeal and Cosmopolitan is to be congratulated for having selected Tom Lewis for the role of James King, the Wall street broker whose family's extravagance almost brings about his ruin, who has a daughter expert in the spending of hard earned money, who puts an employe in his place to take care of his offspring, and then hies himself to South America to recuperate. While he's gone the employe reforms the whole family—by allowing the "news" to "leak out" that the old man is ruined, and forcing them all down on the farm—to work.

The story gives Marion Davies an opportunity to startle picture audiences with gowns, jewels and expensive motor cars. She takes full advantage of carte blanche on the money bags. T. Roy Barnes as the live wire employe who is given the role of "Father" during the old man's absence lends admirable support to the star.

The big feature of this production is its scenic mounting, both interior and exterior. There is one series of brilliant views showing a garden party which develops into a Venetian fete. The climax comes in a pageant that will bring the "Ah's" and "Oh's" of surprise from most audiences. Robert Vignola's good direction is in evidence at all times.

The Cast

Eva King ..... Marion Davies
James King ..... Tom Lewis
Adam Smith ..... T. Roy Barnes
Uncle Horace ..... William Norris
Lord Andrew Gordon ..... Percy Ames
Dr. Delamater ..... William Davidson

Adapted from the play by Guy Bolton and George Middleton. Directed by Robert Vignola. Scenario by Luther Reed. Photographed by Harold Wenstrom.

The Story—James King finds that his daughter and her useless friends are eating away the family fortune. He's disgusted as the bills bury him. He puts an employe in charge of everything and goes to South America. The employe finding that he is powerless to stop the flow of money outward, tells the guests at a brilliant garden fete that Dad is broke. It's a fib, but it has its effect. It all ends with the gang going to a farm, getting busy and making good and Eva finding her Adam in the employe.

Classification—Pure farce comedy that is not without its appeal because of its elaborate setting.

Production Highlights—The gorgeous gowns worn by Miss Davies. The humor which Tom Lewis draws out of the role of James King. T. Roy Barnes as "Father." The brilliant settings by Joseph Urban, especially the Venetian Garden scene. The snappy and well worded subtitles which add much to the enjoyment of the picture.

Exploitation Angles—Marion Davies has been widely heralded as the star of "When Knighthood Was in Flower." Therefore play up her name big in all advertising and theatre front displays. The title suggests tie-ups. So do Miss Davies' elaborate gowns. Photographs of them in connection with a fashion store display should be easy to put over.

Drawing Power—This one should be acceptable in first run houses in the larger cities and because of its light comedy should be well received.

"The Love Letter"

Universal—4426 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

BACK to the type of story in which Gladys Walton is at her best, the Universal star has in "The Love Letter" a picture which contains all the earmarks of success. It carries not only a line of action which offers adventure, but is embroidered with a neat little romance inspired through a mash note. What happens here could reasonably happen when hearts are young and adventure calls.

Gladys Walton can play the shop girl to the life—and not exaggerate the type. And she will intrigue you as a romantic worker in an overall shop who tucks away a mash note in a pair of overalls which eventually reach a young blacksmith in a small hamlet. The latter's friends send back a reply, the contents of which read: "I am worth a million dollars, and I want to get married quick." But the girl, inadvertently, shows the note to her tough and crooked sweetheart. He dominates her because she fears him and is forced to play the part of a "plant" in a bold robbery of a modiste shop.

There is some good incident exposed here and the atmosphere is first rate. The girl has her wits about her when the police get on the job and passes herself off as one of the dummy figures on display. The tough youth is sent up the river and our heroine packs her grip, puts on her Sunday dress and beats it for the blacksmith's village. She conquers him in no time and not being a bad girl there is no striving toward her redemption. A marriage is performed and the baby brings further happiness and everything is looking rosy until the shadow from the past appears. The toughie, having served his term, arrives to take her back with him. He has his "gat" in his coat pocket and the girl, knowing his desperate character, saves her husband by declaring her love for the crook. It is a bluff but it works, especially when the crook sees her bidding the baby good-bye. Having drawn the figure of a Madonna when he was a good church member, the appeal of the mother and the babe influences him to go straight.

There it is in a nutshell—not much originality, but packing a lot of human interest and lifelike touches—to say nothing of humorous moments. George Cooper is excellent as the crook.

The Cast

Mary Ann McKee.....Gladys Walton
Kate Smith.....Fontaine Le Rue
Red Mike.....George Cooper
Bill Carter.....Edward Hearne
Rev. Halloway.....Walt Whitman
Mrs. Holloway.....Alberta Lee
Mrs. Carter.....Lucy Donohue

By Bradley King. Scenario by Hugh Hoffman. Directed by King Baggot. Photographed by Victor Milner, Produced by Universal.

The Story—Girl in overall factory sends mash note in pair of overalls which eventually reach blacksmith in farming community. She is under the domination of a young crook and after helping him engineer a robbery for which he is caught and sent to prison, the girl leaves the city and goes to the blacksmith's town. She wins his love and marries him and is happy until the crook, released after serving his term, comes to take her back. She bluffs her way out and finds happiness with her husband and the crook goes straight.

Production Highlights—The atmosphere of the slums. The scene when the girl poses as a dummy model. The scene when she arrives in the small town. The climax when the crook would take her back with him.

Exploitation Angles—Story suggests a live campaign built around title and the idea of mash notes inspiring romance. Play up Gladys Walton as having an ideal picture for her talent here.

Drawing Power—Good for any second class and neighborhood house anywhere. Also suitable for small town houses.

"Money, Money, Money"

B. P. Schulberg-First National—5995 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

SMALL TOWN snobberies will doubtless be familiar to enough people in the country to insure a realistic appeal for this picture in many theatres. There are some beautiful sets, a fairly thrilling climax of an automobile ride through a storm and a few whimsical touches in the direction. As for Woodrow Wilson's favorite actress—well, she has lost nothing in the way of pulchritude.

With this said it must be added that "Money, Money, Money" is a relapse from the promises established by the star's recent pictures, "White Shoulders" and "The Woman Conquers." It is not that the newest release is without appeal, but rather that the other two features seemed at least to have brought Miss MacDonald out of the ranks of mediocrity into which she has slumped again in this offering. It will doubtless pass as a pleasing offering where the star is popular. However, it will not live up to expectations if unusual promises are made for it.

It is a program picture of average qualities—nothing more—presenting as it does average acting and an artificial story that misses fire more often than it strikes it. Miss MacDonald has been so accustomed to being screened in beautiful clothes that it is interesting to note that she can be almost, but not quite, as beautiful in the gowns of a retail merchant's daughter. The difference becomes noticeable when, as the inheritor of a small fortune, her father is able to dress her becomingly. Something of a play is made on doughnut making in developing the love story and this, together with the charm of the star, are the points of appeal to be made to the public. The attempts to inject comedy by showing the newly rich father making his faux pas in society do not belong. There is no subtlety attached to the development of it.

As a whole the story is obvious. The star manages to retain her poise so that after an all-night drive through a torrential downpour she is still immaculate to fly into her lover's arms in the morning.

The Cast

Priscilla Hobbs.....Katherine MacDonald
George C. Hobbs.....Carl Stockdale
Mrs. Hobbs.....Frances Raymond
Lennie Hobbs.....Paul Willis
Mr. Carter.....Herschel Mayall
Mrs. Carter.....Brenda Fowler
Caroline Carter.....Margaret Loomis
J. J. Grey.....Charles Clary
Reggie Grey.....Jack Dougherty

By Larry Evans. Scenario by Hope Loring. Directed by Tom Forman. Released by First National.

The Story—Treats of small town snobbery. The poor family becomes rich and the haughty aristocratic family which snubs them endeavors to make amends. A banker aids a manufacturer in getting a poor man's business at a reduction. He tries to put over a fake inheritance deal which turns out to be insignificant, but the tables are turned eventually when the banker's son marries the poor girl.

Classification—Society drama revealing conflict of wealth and poverty.

Production Highlights—The auto scene. The The climax. The beauty of the star.

Exploitation Angles—This title suggests a snappy teaser campaign. You might co-operate with banks, etc. Suggests ballyhoo stunts.

"Java Head"

Paramount—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

"OH, EAST is East, and West is West, and never the Twain shall meet," sang Kipling in his ballads, and on this theme have been constructed no end of film and stage plays, but to George Melford goes the honor of placing on the silver sheet a version off the beaten path, a masterful adaptation of Joseph Hergesheimer's Saturday Evening Post story. This production will create no end of comment. It is the climax of Melford's career as a director. It is the making of Leatrice Joy. It is a scenic delight, most of the feature having been staged in quaint old Salem, the New England coast and the historic locale of the book. It is a picture that boasts a cast of unusual excellence. We recall few productions wherein is set forth such a wealth of character paintings.

Leatrice Joy's unique portrayal is nothing less than a personal triumph for the star. Had she been a native princess she could not have been better. But it is only one of the fine bits of acting. Jacqueline Logan, Raymond Hatton, George Fawcett, Frederick Strong, Albert Roscoe and Rose Tapley give convincing performances.

The real Salem exteriors are a delight to the eye, as are the correct old New England interiors and costumes. The Chinese settings are elaborate, well staged and colorful. The great care given to detail is evident throughout. The picture shows an utter disregard for expense.

Of moments dramatic there is a full quota and these are recorded in a vivid manner. The climax showing the breaking down of Edward Dunsack's dope-crazed mind, the visit of Taou to Nettie's sickbed and her taking of her own life by swallowing an overdose of opium pellets just as the pipe derelict is about to attack her, sends the picture over with flying colors. The photography is flawless, the subtitles intelligently written and artistically mounted. The scenario by Waldemar Young is excellent and shows a deep reverence for the original story. "Java Head" will probably rank as one of the best things Paramount will offer this year. It should find a welcome where high class productions are appreciated.

"The Challenge"

American Releasing Corp.—5 Reels

(Reviewed by Eugene Carlton)

CONTRARY to the popular supposition conveyed by the title, "The Challenge" is a bloodless, fightless production that carries a good moral. There is a love story, to be sure, but there is no challenging between the lovers. In fact, all the challenging is done within the cerebral hemispheres of one man, the unlucky suitor who challenges his own conscience in the face of the weakness of his rival. The plot has been done before, but there are just enough new angles to the picture to wipe out the memory of any former theme.

The natural settings in the Adirondacks during the Winter add greatly to the attractiveness of the production, as well as bolster up the realism of the plot. When rival lovers are alone together in perilous mountains there usually is a series of hackneyed plotting against the life of the "other fellow," but although there is some of this element in "The Challenge," it is easy to overlook, as the real plot reveals the strong moral character of the loser for the heroine's hand.

When the scene is shifted back to New York the general trend of the production is over well beaten paths, a wealthy admirer of a poor artist's wife scheming to effect a separation by the same methods that already are worn ragged. But, in view of the fact that when this wealthy admirer obtains the opportunity he has sought, only to challenge his conscience and refuse to take advantage of a down-and-out rival, the weaker points of the production readily can be forgotten.

The Cast

Barbara Hastings.....Dolores Cassinelli
Stanley Roberts.....Rof La Rocque

The Story—Two men in love with girl, who is hostess of mountain resort, one a banker and the other an artist. The artist marries the girl, but after returning to New York the banker seeks to separate them by anonymously purchasing one of his pictures, causing the artist to spend money freely, thereby ruining himself. The banker buys the mountain resort and offers the girl her former position. She accepts but remains true to her husband, and the banker, realizing his mistake, sends artist to join his wife.

Classification—A love story, mixed with adventure.

Production Highlights—Beautiful scenes in Adirondacks and scene where banker decides against his own plotting desires.

Exploitation Angles—Lobby can be decorated to resemble the porch of a mountain resort. The scenic attraction of the production should be featured.

Drawing Power—A wide appeal. Should go good in large or small houses if properly exploited.

"What a Wife Learned"

Ince-First National—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

MARITAL misunderstanding forms the central idea of this picture which solves nothing. In fact, the story doesn't disclose a thing which would lead the wife to realize that she has learned a few points about marital fidelity. Furthermore the tale doesn't give the spectator any chance to use his imagination. And he will possibly condemn the husband in the case as utterly stupid.

The plot is arbitrarily developed and one knows for a certainty just how every scene and incident will be treated. Lacking the value of surprise one becomes more interested in the characterization. It must be said that John Bowers as the husband, Milton Sills as the other man and Marguerite De La Motte as the wife do all that is possible with their assignments.

The husband and wife carry on a few tiffs. She is eager for a career, yet she would search for happiness in matrimony. Her book is published and a dramatist sees possibilities in it for a play. As a result the young couple move to the city, where the wife may collaborate with the playwright. The husband takes up a menial position and lurks in the background until they disagree about going on to New York to see the play produced. So he returns to the West and tackles an engineering job. The scenes are mostly repetitious and the conflict between husband and wife soon taxes one's patience.

The triangle is faintly suggested when the dramatist accompanies the wife West. And here comes the melodramatic climax. They arrive just as the dam is swept away by a heavy storm. The husband, to provide his wife with happiness and thinking that she loves the playwright, risks his life to save the other, but fortunately both men are saved. After which the wife appreciates that a husband's love is more valuable than a career.

The story carries some hokum which runs true to form. For instance—the other man, out of gratitude for having his life saved, informs the husband that his wife loves him. Which accounts for hubby's stupidity in not realizing it before. The scenes are broadly planted for the most part—so that one knows just what to expect. The story is not convincing because of the weak situations which bring on the incompatibility of the husband and wife.

The Cast

Jim Russell.....John Bowers
Rudolph Martin.....Milton Sills
Sheila Dorne.....Marguerite De La Motte
Esther Russell.....Evelyn McCoy
Tracy McGrath.....Harry Todd
Maggie McGrath.....Aggie Herring

By Bradley King. Directed by John Griffith Wray. Produced by Thomas H. Ince. Released through First National.

The Story—Husband and wife misunderstand one another—the wife developing a career as novelist and playwright, while the husband follows her to the city where her story is to be dramatized. They drift apart and the husband turns to engineering projects. The wife returns to the West accompanied by the dramatist. The two men are caught when the dam breaks and the husband risks his life to save the other, thinking that it means his wife's happiness. She learns however, that she loves her husband. Both are saved.

Classification — Domestic drama which approaches a triangle without developing into one. Career versus married life furnishes theme.

Production Highlights—The mechanical side of picture, photography, staging being O. K. Good work of cast.

Exploitation Angles—Might start a campaign based upon theme showing that a wife cannot accept a career and be a good wife at the same time. Play up three leading players.

Drawing Powers—Suitable for neighborhood houses.

"The Man and the Moment"

Playgoers—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Eugene Carlton)

IN BEAUTIFUL exteriors of English landscapes "The Man and the Moment" is a treat, but that is all that can be said of the production as far as larger first run possibilities are concerned. A few minutes after the reel has been started the climax of the story is self evident and the suspense is woefully weak. In fact, there is no suspense. The continuity, on the whole, is smooth, but the plot, typical of Elinor Glyn's novels, is based on the physical passion theme, although anything offensive, diplomatically, has been "side-stepped."

A minor plot in conjunction with the picture might work wonders, but as it is the audience is confronted with a hasty marriage upon first meeting, for convenience's sake; then a parting, and the spectator is forced to sit through five reels, knowing well enough that the two principal characters will meet in the end, just as they do. All this valuable footage of film, however, consists of nothing more than a search by the husband for his wife, the discovery of her at last as the fiancee of a close friend of his, which is followed by a reunion of husband and wife after the friend discovers the relationship between the two. Twisted about in any other manner the story, with its wonderful settings, would command interest.

Some of the light and shadow effects are excellent, but the characters lend the impression of stiffness and appear unreal.

The Cast

Michael Aranstoun.....Hayford Hobbs
Sabine Dahlberg.....Minora Thew
Samuel Greenbank.....Charles Ashley
Henry Fordyce.....Charles Bane

From the novel of Elinor Glyn of the same title. Produced by Playgoers Pictures.

The Story—Meeting for first time, Michael Aranstoun and Sabine Dahlberg decide to marry for convenience sake and then part immediately. They do, and Michael spends several months searching for his wife, whom he finally finds as the fiancee of a close friend of his. The friend discovers that his fiancee is Michael's wife and brings them together, husband and wife being reunited and professing their love for each other.

Classification—Slow moving love story based upon the physical passion theme, but including many beautiful exterior scenes.

Production Highlights—Imposing castle scene looming in background, and landscape scenes.

Exploitation Angles—The fact that the picture is from the novel of Elinor Glyn of the same title should be featured.

Drawing Power—Suited best for the smaller house, where patrons are not too critical.

A. A. SCHMIDT, general manager for Universal, paid Cleveland one of his rare visits last week.

Al Kaufman has resigned as exploitation manager of the Cleveland Universal exchange. Kaufman is now putting on a vaudeville act in which motion pictures are made on the stage.

Harold Burtch, former manager of the Belvedere theatre, Niagara Falls, has been appointed exploitation expert to succeed Kaufman in the Northern Ohio territory.

C. L. Peavey, local Hodkinson manager, has just closed an interesting booking with the Loew interests, whereby "The Headless Horseman" will play the Metropolitan, Alhambra, Liberty and Malls theatres of Cleveland, for a day and date run beginning February 1st. The picture will also play at the Waldorf, Akron, at the same time.

R. I. Robinson has come out to Cleveland from New York to become associated with J. S. Jossey and E. C. Fielder of the Progress Pictures Company, an independent exchange which is specializing in the distribution of Arrow products.

Great Western Film Exchange has changed its name to Security Pictures Company. Fred Schram and Lee Chapman continue to operate the exchange.

Miss Billie Liebson, manager of the Cleveland exchange for American Releasing Corp., announces that "What Fools Men Are" is booked for an early February showing at Reade's Hippodrome.

C. E. Almy, local Metro manager, was out in the styx all week trying his hand at selling pictures.

Mark Goldman, Select's exchange manager here, has out-Couéd Coué with his new 1923 slogan that Select pictures are getting "bigger and better every day."

Nat Baruch, local Goldwyn manager, was in Toledo last week. And now it is officially announced that Manager Kumler of the Pantheon has booked "The Christian" for a two-week consecutive run starting February 18th.

Cleveland exchange representatives all picked on Canton this week. Among those seen in the lobby of one motion picture theatre were J. A. Koerpel and Nat Baruch of Goldwyn; Fontaine and Krause of Famous Players-Lasky; Fletcher of Metro; and Howard Stahler of a vaudeville booking agency. So far as is known, the manager of the house escaped without committing himself.

First National manager George Erdmann has a secret that he will share with everyone. It is that First National Week Feb. 4-10, will be celebrated in Toledo at three first run houses. The Valentino will play "The Voice From The Minaret." The Alhambra will play "The Hottentot."

Around Butte's Branch-Offices

CHARLES KOERNER, manager of the Butte Branch of Associated First National Pictures of the Northwest, left Butte the 23rd on a tour of inspection covering every town in the First National circuit, before he returns to Butte. The Butte office has been showing splendid business. The first week of February the American theatre has booked for exhibition "Lorna Doone" to run the first half of the week and "What a Wife Learned" the last half. The Rialto has at the same time "The Voice from the Minaret" the first half and another First National the last half. These two theatres are making the week a First National Red Letter Week in celebration of the fifth natal day of the First National. All through the state Mr. Koerner has emphasized his leadership in making this week one that redounds credit to the Butte office as well as to the entire range of the First National.

B. H. Dover, First National salesman, resigned his connection with the company to accept the management of the Judith theatre at Lewistown.

P. T. Cale, of the Pathe office, is off for a tour all along the High Line in Montana in the interest of Pathe, with a special objective, that of placing the new Pathe serial, "Plunder." Reports come in to the office that he is doing a fine business. He expects to be gone about a month.

Mr. Edward Armstrong, assistant general salesman of the Universal Film Exchange, on a tour of inspection of the Western Division, was a Butte visitor last week. He reported conditions improving in general throughout the Northwest and expressed pleasure in the satisfactory condition of the Butte office under the efficient management of J. W. Rue.

At the Universal Exchanges, the week of January 21st to 27th inclusive was designated by the employees as Edward Armstrong week. Edward Armstrong has just been appointed assistant general sales manager of the Universal Film Company with headquarters at San Francisco with jurisdiction over the eight Western offices including Butte, Denver, Salt Lake, Spokane, Seattle, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Portland.

Louis J. Frisch of the See-It theatre, Ashtabula Harbor, was in town this week, in spite of the bad roads.

C. E. Bockius of the Valentine, Canton, was lamped around the Film Exchange Building early in the week.

Dreamland theatre, Elyria, admitted children to a recent matinee for either two potatoes or two onions. Proceeds went to the Salvation Army.

The Spencer theatre, Washington Court House, has been purchased by John Oster, Jr., from Ed Burnett. The straight picture policy will be continued under the new management.

Because of involuntary petition in bankruptcy of the Dusenbury interests in Columbus, the Grand theatre was recently closed. This action will not affect the State theatre, which is also owned by the Dusenbury interests, according to Perl Miller, receiver.

Joe Kaiser, Jr., has taken over the Royal theatre, in Chillicothe, O.

Southwestern Notes

The Temple Theatre at Temple, Texas, owned by the city, has been leased to C. A. Doerr. Feature pictures and road shows will be the policy.

Seattle Briefs

Henry Damski, a member of S. K. Winelands' Strand theatre orchestra, recently received a 50 cash prize from the Jensen-von Herberg circuit as a result of a contest held for the past month at the circuit's Seattle houses. The contest was to sell theatre coupon books, containing $4.00 worth of tickets for $3.50. The tickets were good at any Jensen-von Herberg theatre. Each theatre, also, was in the competition, and as a result, the Strand sold over 700 books of coupons, to the Coliseum's 300 and the Liberty's 130. This brought an extra $100 to the Strand, which will be used in some way by the employees. Manager H. B. Wright received a $20 hat from the other managers as a result of his house's victory. Second prize in the individual contest went to Robert Murray, doorman at the Coliseum theatre, and third prize was awarded to R. D. Kincaid, doorman at the Strand. Damski, first prize winner, sold over 425 books of coupons during the month the contest ran.

"Fun From the Press," the Hodkinson short subject that has been playing at the Pantages theatre in this city for the last several months, left that house last week and will now be a weekly feature among the short reels at Manager Frank Steffy's Coliseum theatre, according to an announcement made by Mr. Steffy. The new reel is also being advertised by Mr. Steffy in the theatre's newspaper space.

"Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" will play at the Liberty theatre in this city when the local run begins, according to an announcement made by Manager Leroy V. Johnson recently. It is expected that the picture will be shown in Seattle beginning about the first or second week in February, unless other arrangements are made. Billboard and newspaper advertising and publicity have been carried on here for the past two weeks for the picture.

Omaha Slants

Omaha is to have a new million dollar temple of amusement dedicated to the motion picture, according to an announcement from the headquarters of A. H. Blank of Omaha and Des Moines, who has extensive interests in motion picture theatres and in distributing agencies. Two downtown sites are being considered. The seating capacity will be 3,000 and the design and equipment will be along the most approved lines.

Mr. Blank, who is known as a man of rare business acumen, has been operating in Omaha ten years. He controls the Strand and the Rialto theatres, two of the large downtown centers of screen patrons. He intends to continue these theatres in addition to the new one which will surpass any institution of its kind now in Omaha.

E. R. Coffin, exploitation man for the Omaha branch of First National has been promoted to a position which will take him to the United Studios at Hollywood. He will be identified with a production unit under Richard Walton Tully, these

"THE GRUBSTAKE," the latest Nell Shipman feature, being awaited at the local American Releasing Corporation exchange, was filmed in Spokane and Seattle, and much interest is being shown in the picture by exhibitors in this territory. For this reason Branch Manager Amacher is at the present time trying to complete arrangements whereby Miss Shipman will be enabled to appear in person with the picture in this territory, at least in Seattle and Spokane. No bookings are being made on the picture until the first print is received here.

E. L. Mann, manager of the Rialto theatre in Wenatchee, was a recent visitor on film row. While here he made arrangements with J. R. Beal, manager of the W. W. Hodkinson exchange, for the booking of "Slim Shoulders," "Bulldog Drummond" and a series of the Hodkinson two-reel all-star comedies. "Slim Shoulders" is now being shown around the territory, and in conjunction with the Irene Castle Fashion Promenade of six models and Mrs. Douglas Crane and Lewis Martin in the latest Castle dance creations, the picture is going over big with the exhibitors. "While Paris Sleeps" arrived in this city recently ,and was given its first showing to exhibitors last week by Mr. Beal.

"The Strangers' Banquet will be a feature attraction at Manager H. B. Wright's Strand theatre according to negotiations recently completed by the Jensen-von Herberg circuit and the local Goldwyn exchange The exact playing date has not yet been decided, but 24-sheets have already been posted announcing the coming of the picture.

A. McRae, formerly a salesman with the Seattle F. B. O. exchange, has joined the De Luxe Film Company's staff, and will handle the territory around Seattle for Al Rosenberg's office. The next Al Lichtman production to be released by Mr. Rosenberg will be "Shadows," which goes into the Coliseum theatre here about February 17. It opened the local territory at the Columbia theatre in Portland the latter part of January.

"The Glorious Adventure" has been booked with the Blue Mouse circuit for early showings in Seattle, Tacoma and Portland by Charles W. Hardin of the United Artists' exchange, it was announced last week. "The Three Must Get Theirs," another United Artist release, was expected to play the Seattle Blue Mouse the early part of February, probably in conjuection with the Tom Mix feature, "Just Tony," which was booked with the Hamrick theatre recently by G. F. Mavarre, manager of the Fox exchange.

News of the Canadian Exchanges

THE 19th Anniversary of the entry of William Fox into the moving picture field was celebrated by 12 leading theatres of Toronto, Ontario, during the week of January 29 by the presentation of exclusive Fox film programmes. A feature of the observance was the publication of a two-page combination spread in the Toronto Sunday World of January 28 for the respective announcements by the various houses.

The Pantages theatre presented "In Arabia" as its feature while the Strand and Madison theatres had "My Friend the Devil". Other theatres which took part included the Photodrome, Classic, Victoria, Kitchener, Orpheum, Moss Park, Temple, Model and King theatres.

Bill Gould has resigned as district manager of the Hodkinson company at Winnipeg, Manitoba, and has joined the staff of the Winnipeg office of the Associated First National.

C. A. Meade, Toronto, has been appointed district manager of Western Canada for the United Artists Corporation and has established his headquarters at Winnipeg, Manitoba. R. C. Wilson is the manager of the Winnipeg local office of United Artists.

Laval Photoplays, Limited, Montreal, a film producing company organized by Ernest Ouimet of Montreal, has announced that it has secured film rights for "Faust" and that arrangements have been made for the immediate making of this picture at a studio which has been leased in California. Mr. Ouimet was the president and general manager of the Specialty Film Import, Limited, Montreal, for many years, this company holding the distribution rights in Canada for Pathe releases until the Pathe franchise was secured about one year ago by Regal Films, Limited, Toronto.

The report regarding "Faust" is interesting in view of a recent announcement that the story of "Faust" would be filmed by Mary Pickford.

With Milwaukee's Branches

SAM SHURMAN is the newly appointed resident manager for Goldwyn in its new quarters at 506 Toy Bldg. Mr. Shurman is well known to the trade in Milwaukee and throughout the state, and was in this territory about a year ago before Goldwyn maintained offices here. He will have a full and complete shipping office, the new quarters being much larger; and shipments for upper Michigan and Wisconsin will be made from here.

Walter Neilan, Goldwyn exploitation manager, is in the city to work up the publicity for "Broken Chains," the Chicago Daily News $10,000 prize scenario, which is to be shown at the Merrill theatre the week of Feb. 10.

The Grand Theatre, Wausau, of which Clive Cone was the former owner, has been sold to local interests. Frank Welter, the new manager, owns controlling interest in the theatre.

News of The Carolinas

Good times are just around the corner in the Carolinas according to J. H. Shear of the Lee-Lash studios, who declares that much new business in equipping theatres with scenery is coming from this section.

Col. Henry B. Varner, of Lexington, has given contract for $5,500 worth of scenery for his new theatre to open by July 1, and which will seat 1,800 people. The new Municipal theatre at High Point, N. C., has bought in excess of $10,000 worth of scenery; the Strand and Norva, Norfolk, Va., and the Bijou, Richmond, will have complete new sets orders having already been given by Lake Wells. The DeLuxe Johnston City, Tenn., is also installing new scenic equipment.

The New Princess, one of the largest and fines theatres in North Carolina, has just been opened at Shelby. Enos and Zeb Bream are owners. It cost $100,000, seats 2,400 and has every modern luxury of the big town houses.

The following managerial changes have been announced by Southern Enterprises in their Carolina theatres: Ray Bell goes from the Imperial, Charlotte, to the Strand, Spartanburg, succeeding A. C. Cowles, who has been transferred to the home office; Claude Lee goes from the Auditorium, Asheville, back to the Imperial, Charlotte.

The Pack theatre, Asheville, will soon present in co-operation with the American Legion, a motion picture production, "The Slackers," made in the mountains around Asheville, all members of the cast being Asheville people. The Asheville Chamber of Commerce has purchased a print of the picture for exploiting the town.

Charles Simpson, Universal exploiteer, assisted the Imperial, Columbia, to put over "The Flirt" during the past week .

P. L. McCabe, of the Colonial, Tarboro, was seriously injured when his sedan overturned, during the past week.

Paul V. Phillips, of the Wilson, Wilson, N. C., spent several days on Charlotte's film row the past week.

Cincinnati Notes

Suit has been entered in United States District Court by Watterson, Berlin & Snyder Company, New York, music publishers, against Samuel Davis, Portsmouth, Ohio, proprietor of a motion picture theatre at New Boston, Ohio, seeking an injunction and $250, with costs and attorney's fees, as damages for the alleged violation on the part of the defendant of the complainant's copyright covering one of its music publications. It is alleged the composition was performed in Davis' theatre without license from the publishers.

Thieves who effected an entrance to the Hippodrome theatre, Covington, Ky., stole an entire day's receipts, amounting to $226. Charles Cronin, manager, discovered the theft the following morning.

Western New York News

Buffalo Film Row men this week learned of the appointment of William Fait, Jr., as the new manager of the Eastman theatre in Rochester and the return of Arthur Amm, former Buffalo exhibitor, to his duties as assistant manager. Mr. Amm has been acting as manager of the house since the resignation of Mr. Goulding several months ago. Mr. Fait comes from the Olympia theatre in Mexico City.

Invitations have been issued by Peterson & Woods for the opening of the new Palace theatre in Jamestown, N. Y. ,on Monday evening, Feb. 5. Howard Waugh will be managing director of the 1,800-seat house, the policy of which will be vaudeville and pictures.

James Wallingford, general manager of General Theatres Corporation, has taken over the management of the Ellen Terry theatre. John R. Stevens, manager of the Central Park, is confined to his home with a bad cold. The Circle has been closed for a week to undergo repairs and rejuvenation. It is rumored that the Central Park will soon be taken over by Joseph A. Schuchert, who has been subleasing the theatre to General.

Fred Hathaway, formerly with Harry Lux in Utica as publicity director, is now in charge of exploitation for the Buffalo Metro exchange.

George Hall, of the Capitol theatre, has gone South on a hunting trip. Wonder how it feels to be a millionaire exhibitor on a hunting trip in the South. Oh, boy, what a life this man leads.

G. H. Thompson, who has been handling publicity for the Regorson Corporation of Rochester, has resigned to return to the newspaper game.

The Mark-Strand ended its long and honorable career Wednesday night, Jan. 31, with a presentation of "I Am the Law." The historic structure, the first of the Mark-Strand chain, will now be used as a part of a bank and a store will undoubtedly take the place of its lobby.

Charlie Hayman, president of the Cataract Theatre Corporation of Niagara Falls, N. Y., is confined to his home with a bit o' grippe.

Washington Brevities

Summer movies and movie gardens are to have competition. Leon Tobriner, William A. Lee, and Earl P. Ready are to create an amusement park on the historic Washington estate of Commodore and Admiral Stephen Decatur, at 18th Street and Benning Road, northeast. Now it is to be an operating amusement park by the time of the assembly of the Shrine Convention. J. A. McGowan and Arthur Brosseau are putting up the project and the necessary sum to guarantee the sale. The agreed consideration is $100,000.

The Chevy Chase theatre, it is expected, will open the latter part of

Along Buffalo's Film Row

WITH a buffet luncheon, dance and screening of a Dorothy Phillips' feature, Bob Murphy, formerly with Filkins & Murphy, Merit distributors, opened his new Renown exchange in the Beyer film building, Pearl and Tupper street, Wednesday evening, January 31. Renown Pictures exchange is occupying the offices recently housing the Educational office which has been moved to the old Nu-Art quarters next door.

N. I. Filkins did two important things this week. He eliminated that fancy Van Dyke beard and announced that Merit will soon have its own exchange building, construction to begin just as quick as a suitable site can be procured.

J. S. MacHenry, who has been upstate legal representative for First National has been appointed Fox representative in Sydney, Australia. The appointment was made this week by W. R. Sheehan, general manager, who was in town. Jack Bruggy, home office, has been here looking over the inspection department. E. J. Hayes, living up to his reputation as style dictator of film row, has sprung the first spring suit on the celluloid community. It is a dapper bit of stuff, too.

Lionel Edel, brother of the late Harold Edel, walked right in and turned around and walked right out again—as it were. Lionel came to town last week as a salesman at the Warner Brothers' exchange. This week he resigned and returned to New York. He was succeeded by Max Rowley, formerly with United Artists.

Manager W. A. Anthony of Vitagraph put over a fine bit of publicity for "A Front Page Story," when he arranged to have this release screened at the annual evening meeting of the Greater Buffalo Advertising club in the Hotel Lafayette last Monday evening. Much free space in the newspapers attended the showing. Mr. Anthony has placed a number of big productions in Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse, all to be played during the company's 25th anniversary week.

P. N. Brinch, special representative of S. R. Kent, manager of distribution, was a visitor at the Paramount exchange over the week end. While here Mr. and Mrs. Brinch viewed the special three reel story of the recent Los Angeles convention.

It looks like Henry W. Kahn has got to buy a new top piece. The present lid is too small. Why? Oh, just because the local Metro exchange is at the head of the list for the entire country on the amount of business gathered in. T. J. Connors, assistant general sales manager, met Mr. Kahn in Rochester last Friday and accompanied him to Buffalo where he attended the general sales meeting at the Buffalo exchange. Mr. Kahn was also visited this week by Robert A. Landry of the Strand, Ogdensburg, who came to town to book a carload of features. Another visitor was Harry Gilbert of the Regent, Syracuse.

Charles N. Johnston, manager of the Fox exchange has started a new idea. He is giving exhibitors a chance to see the Fox product in advance of booking. He is holding screening parties every Wednesday and Thursday afternoons at the exchange, 496 Pearl street. A goodly number of exhibitors attended the first ones last week. Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager, was in town to visit his mother and his pet office, the Buffalo exchange, which is on the site of his old home here. Eddie McBride is now in his last probation week as a salesman and Mr. Johnston says he is making good. Congratulations, Ed.

T. W. Brady, Goldwyn manager, held a conference with his salesmen last Saturday afternoon. Among those who attended were Sherman Webster, Otto Siegel, E. M. Hopcraft, Clarence Snyder and others. Some of the new Goldwyn features were screened.

In the Washington Exchanges

AT the special meeting of the executive committee and film managers' meeting last Monday, January 22, The Washington F-I-L-M Board of Trade ratified the committee decision to engage a paid corresponding secretary and general representative to devote the bulk of his time to the Board. Maitland LaBelle, publisher of the Capital Film Review, the Washington trade regional, was unanimously elected to the position. The Film board feels that grievances of exhibitors and exchanges can now be promptly attended to as there will always be some one able to hear both sides and to present disputes to the board for review. The Board has its office in the regional suite on the ninth floor of the Mather building.

Earnest M. Ooge of Charlotte, N. C., and long connected with Washington's Film Row in the Mather building, having been in the sales organization of Manager Coffee's Empire films there, is now associated with J. C. Meltern in controlling the Washington territory—Wilmington, Del. to South Carolina—for the C. C. Burr product. Ooge expects to have offices in the Kirbey-Fox film building here. The Burr product such as "Sure Fire Flint," "Secrets of Drury Lane," etc. are already being placed.

Victor Leon, formerly Baltimore salesman for Metro Productions, is now a traveling special representative for Mack Sennett, Inc. He was a Washington film row visitor the past week and called on the Film Board secretary here.

Extensive interior decorations are going on in the new Washington offices of F. L. McNamee, manager of the F. B. O., here. Mac is on the road getting acquainted with his new trade.

Harry Brown, manager of Universal, is recovering from an attack of grippe that came along after the successful open house week of January 8th

February, at the latest. The manager, Emanuel J. Stutz, has secured the American Releasing Company's picture, "The Prince and the Pauper."

Recent out of town exhibitors to visit here were John Pryor of Richmond, Tom Soriero of Baltimore, and Charlie Somma of Richmond, who has acquired the old Rayo, now known as the Howard theatre.

The Plaza, a Notes theatre on 9th Street, is closed for extensive repairs. It is said that although the permit was for $1,000, upwards of $2,000 will be spent in making this cameo theatre into a practically new show-shop.

Aron Brylawski, senior, and his son, A Julian Brylawski, Jr., were on deck at their new property, 13th and E streets, last Thursday afternoon, for the ceremonial removal of the first bricks from the structures being demolished to make way for the massive new Cosmopolitan theatre, office building and general entertainment center they are to erect there.

Assistant Manager John J. Payette of the Crandall enterprises spent several days in Baltimore.

Although Mrs. Locher is still suffering from the grippe epidemic all the other Locher executives are back at their desks.

The feature of the musical prologue to "Skin Deep" at the Metropolitan the past week was Miss Evelyn C. Lewis, chosen as Miss Washington for the last fall carnival at Atlantic City. So popular was her picture which hung in the lobby that Manager Fallas Brouche of the Metropolitan has been worked overtime to maintain his nine points of the law to keep all the District collegiate Johnnies from adopting it as the bees waistcoat and decorative motif for the ol' frat.

After two first-runs last week of Milton Sills in "Skin Deep" and "Burning Sands," Manager Sparrows of the Strand offers a third first run of the ubiquitous Milton in "The Marriage Chance."

Reverend George J. Becker, of the American Sunday School Union, New York City, a member of the Hays committee and a pioneer in using film in church work was here last week for the film control conference and by his tact succeeded in modifying the reformers' stand.

Representative W. D. Upshaw of Atlanta, Georgia, in behalf of a committee of Knickerbocker victims arranged for two government airplanes to drop flowers over the city on Sunday, January 28th, the anniversary of the theatre collapse. The Navy planes, starting from the Naval Air Station, Anacostia, D. C., at 2:30, flew towards the Knickerbocker site. Then, circling slowly over Washington flowers were dropped from the planes as a silent tribute. Friends and families of the victims supplied the flowers.

Kansas City Slants

The Kansas City Star has commented upon the children's code bill, a proposed measure introduced at this session of the Kansas legislature which would require a guardian for children less than sixteen years old attending a theatre at night, as follows:

"The authors of the children's code commission in Kansas have presented an excellent program, generally speaking, to the legislature, but they have perhaps undertaken too much. With the usual inclination of those attempting social or civic reforms, they apparently have overlooked the prevailing conditions in the state at this time which have led the legislature to consider the economic side of legislation, rather than any undertaking to expand the functions of the government along lines that will create new duties and add increased costs to the administration.

"Two of the measures introduced under the general program of the Kansas code commission might well be ignored. One of them provides for a general welfare officer for the direction of welfare work in the state. Kansas has not felt the need of a state department of that character. Not, at least, to the degree of creating any special demand for it."

Nodaway County, Missouri, has adopted a new and profitable use for the motion picture. Visualized education, as it is to be known, not only has received the financial support of the Chamber of Commerce of Maryville Mo., but is supported by each school of the county and is said to be the first project of its kind in America. The first step in this project was last week, when a film, "And the Truth Shall Make You Free," 6,000 feet in length, was shown to more than 6,000 pupils and teachers at Maryville. The initial event was given a half column of space in Kansas City newspapers and widely advertised throughout the state.

The idea of the film, which is by, for and of Nodaway County and for the purpose of magnifying education in the county and show the educational advantages which exist, was originated by Leslie G. Somerville, superintendent of schools in that county.

"The schools should see themselves and motion pictures afford the very best way possible," said Mr. Somerville. "We are desirous of building up the best school system that is within our means."

While newsboys were selling papers telling of the death of Wallace Reid, Frank L. Newman's Royal theatre, at which "Thirty Days," one of Reid's latest pictures was showing, was playing to a capacity crowd. Followers and admirers of Reid thronged the house during the remainder of the week.

Women's organizations of Kansas City still are using the office of Will Hays as a target for telegrams pertaining to the National Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher associations, representing 22,000 members, and the Kansas City Council of Churches, forwarded a resolution this week opposing the reappearance of Arbuckle on the screen.

A new $250,000 motion picture theatre and clubhouse is planned by the Elks Lodge of Kansas City, Kan., the building to be an eight-story structure with the first three floors occupied by the theatre, which will have a seating capacity of 1,800. Other ne wtheatres and changes of management announced in the Kansas City territory this week are: Community theatre, Rockport, Mo., opened by the American Legion; Jefferson theatre, Springfield, Mo., purchased by S. E. Wilhoit; Palace theatre, Spring Hill., Kan., purchased by H. E. McCall from H. R. Payne.

A cut in price for the thousand balcony seats for week-night performances was announced this week by the Pantages theatre, Kansas City, a combination vaudeville and motion picture house. The reduction will be from 50 cents to 25 cents, including tax, Saturdays and Sundays not included.

Frank L. Newman made a profitable move this week when he booked Arthur W. Nealy, the "singing policeman" of St. Louis, who resigned his position rather than obey the police commissioner's order not to sing while on his beat, as a special attraction at his Royal theatre. Healy was good for several newspaper stories and a lively attendance resulted.

Around the Kansas City Branches

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, was in Kansas City last week on his way to California. The first words spoken by him upon his arrival were:

"The depression is over!"

In Mr. Laemmle's party were H. Zahner, his secretary, and Sam S. Van Runkle, who will direct a new series of 2-reel comedies for Universal.

Charles Raymond, in charge of Goldwyn exploitation in Omaha, Neb., has been assigned to the Kansas City office to succeed William Branch, who has been transferred to Minneapolis. Mr. Raymond, in addition to having charge of Kansas City exploitation, will be in charge of the St. Louis and Omaha territory.

Al Kahn, Kansas City, general manager of the Crescent Film Exchange, will travel through Kansas with the Warner Brothers coast to coast float, through arrangements with Frank Cassidy, in charge of the float, and give all the advertising and publicity possible to exhibitors who are under Warner Brothers contracts.

Harold Cass, former Fox salesman, now is in the territory for Associated Exhibitors, while G. I. Bradford, who has been selling Universal-Jewels and "The Leather Pushers" in the key towns, now is selling Universal product in Southeastern Kansas.

The latest series of Neal Hart features has been purchased by the Crescent Film Exchange, Al Kahn, general manager at Kansas City, has announced. Crescent will start releasing the productions February 1, releasing one each month.

Roy B. Churchill again is back in Kansas City as branch manager of the F. B. O. office. Mr. Churchill resigned several weeks ago to become branch manager of Goldwyn's Omaha office. Mr. Churchill will succeed "Curley" Calvert, who has been called to the home office in New York. Randolph Elliott, former F. B. O. key city salesman, who made the change to Goldwyn with Mr. Churchill, also is back at the Kansas City F. B. O. office.

St. Louis Film Row News

JACK WEIL is on the job again as St. Louis manager for Goldwyn. He was instatlled last Monday by Jimmy Grainger and District Manager Truog of Kansas City.

Charley Werner of Metro went to Rochester, Minn., during the week to consult specialists concerning his throat. After a careful examination the specialists informed Charley that an operation was not necessary and that it would be only a comparatively short time before it would be 100 per cent. perfect. Needless to say Charley was pleased to hear their verdict. He made the trip north to be absolutely certain.

Sam Werner of United Film Exchange plans to release "The Hope Diamond Mystery" serial shortly after the first of February.

J. B. Underwood of Enterprise announces his company has secured Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois rights to "The World's A Stage."

Burglars blew the safe of Famous Players-Lasky's St. Louis office January 22 escaping with $100 in cash and $57 in stamps.

F. M. Brockell, general manager for First National, and R. C. Seery, district manager, Chicago, were in town during last week.

St. Louis Jottings

Miss Eugenia Feiner, 2550 Hawthorne Boulevard, St. Louis, has won the Rural Weekly of St. Paul, Minn., motion picture opportunity contest. It is said she will receive $1,000 in cash, an opportunity to appear in "The Isle of Paradise" with Eugene O'Brien, and be paid $100 a week while working in the film. She plans to leave for Hollywood shortly in company with her mother. All their expenses are to be paid by the publication.

The second anniversary week of the Lyric theatre in East St. Louis was conducted in conjunction with Universal Week, January 21-27. Seven Universal features were shown as follows: "Top O' the Morning," "Don't Shoot," "Paid Back," "Caught Bluffing," "Broad Daylight," "The Girl Who Ran Wild," and "The Long Chance."

Arthur Robinson, owner of the Hickory theatre, St. Louis, has been completely exonerated of all blame in connection with the fire at the Hickory on January 7. Judge Anthony Hochdoerfer, judge of the Court of Criminal Correction, in releasing Robinson from his common law bond informed him that he thought that his arrest had been a mistake, as there was no evidence to indicate that he was responsible for the fire. Robinson informed the court that he did not carry any fire insurance. Firemen reported to the police that they found evidence indicating that the fire was of incendiary origin. The court also released Robinson's porter, who was also arrested. The police now believe that a neighborhood gang might have started the blaze to revenge themselves because Robinson barred them from his theatre.

Courtland Smith, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, spoke before the College Club of St. Louis at the Artists Guild Monday evening, January 29. His subject was "State Censorship of Motion Pictures."

Rev. Charles P. Foreman, president of the Ministerial Alliance of Louisiana, Mo., has officially denied that resolutions favoring state censorship passed at a mass meeting in Louisiana January 14 were intended as a rebuke to W. A. Boyd, owner-manager of the Star theatre there. In an open letter Rev. Foreman said that William Hays' order restoring "Fatty" Arbuckle to the films alone prompted the action, and that he believed Boyd was doing his best to give Louisiana a clean screen. Boyd is a member of Rev. Foreman's church.

Ross Dehny has purchased the Dreamland theatre, Roodhouse, Ill.

J. E. Huggins has sold his Shelbina, Mo., house to Carl Muff.

Morris Richman has disposed of his interest in several South St. Louis houses to Lehr Brothers.

W. C. Sears, Lyric theatre, Booneville, Mo., is convalescent following a severe cold that confined him to his bed for several days.

Exhibitors who visited St. Louis during the week included: F. M. Rich, Strand, Perry, Mo.; Wahl & Worcester, Kil Kare, Wood River, Ill.; R. E. Atkins, Elkville Ill.; C. E. Mertens, Playhouse, Shelbyville, Ill.; C. E. Brady, Broadway, Cape Girardeau, Mo., and Theodore C. Davis, Fourth Street, Moberly, Mo.

Eastern New York Items

Merit has added a new road man in the person of J. R. Millard who will handle the company's pictures throughout the Albany territory.

W. P. Allen, salesman for Universal, returned Saturday from a two weeks trip through Northern New York and has some interesting stories of the weather along the Canadian border.

There is a report in this city that Albany may again have the State convention of motion picture exhibitors, the date and place having been left open when last year's session concluded.

The Troy, costing $350,000 and one of the Strand group, is slated to open in Troy on February 22 with "Dr. Jack" as the attraction. There is talk that Uly Hill, manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, may become manager of the Troy house, rather than Eddie Weinberg, now handling the State in Schenectady.

George Roberts and William Berinstein of Albany have been spending several days in Newburgh looking over the house which the latter has just acquired in that city and which will be managed by Mr. Berinstein's son Harry, who has been handling the Palace in Troy of late.

Stanley Allen of the Allen in Chatham has just added a Powers machine to his equipment, securing it from the Independent Movie Supply company of Albany.

Lew Fisher has acquired the Empire in Port Henry and will assume possession at once.

The Universal Exchange in Albany is screening "The Flame of Life" these days.

Goldwyn does not intend to be overlooked in Albany, now that it has opened an exchange there. Painters were busy the past week on a huge sign that covered the sidewall of the building in Broadway.

Frank Bruner is smiling these days, Governor Smith having requested one of the "Our Gang" comedies from the Pathe exchange for the entertainment at the Executive Mansion the other night.

Chest Brothers have leased the Middleburgh theater from F. S. Sullivan and will open in the near future.

The Rose, in Troy, N. Y. owned and being built by a veteran showman, "Jake" Rosenthal, is rapidly nearing completion.

Albany and vicinity has been visited by some exceptionally heavy storms of late, with the result that the authorities have been inspecting theatre roofs and seeing that the weight of snow was removed.

There is a man named Kennedy, residing in Champlain, N. Y. who hits the Albany exchanges about once a year, and then for but a few hours. In addition to running the village movie, Mr. Kennedy is postmaster, collector of customs and the express agent.

At the American in Troy there have been but two split weeks in three years time, and Ben Apple is firm in his contention that a city of 75,000 population can stand straight week runs.

A soloist has been added to the program at the Lincoln in Troy.

Daniel Carr, formerly house manager of the Palace in Troy, has now accepted a similar position with the Griswold in the same city.

Miss Margaret Wolf, stenographer in the Universal Exchange in Albany, is ill with diphtheria.

Charles Walder, manager of Goldwyn's exchange in Albany, spent a day or so in New York last week.

Detroit Close-Ups

Joe Friedman, youthful manager of the Universal exchange, has been promoted by Carl Laemmle from his present position to that of supervisor of production at Universal City, Hollywood, Cal. Friedman's specialty in the western movie centre will be supervising the "program" pictures. Starting in 1914 as an exhibitor, Mr. Friedman has learned the business from the bottom up. He will leave Detroit on January 31. A. S. Mertz, former assistant manager, will succeed Friedman.

R. W. Eberhard, formerly manager of the Regent theatre, Detroit, a showman and former vaudeville performer of many years' experience, has been appointed manager of the Baldwin theatre, Royal Oak, succeeding Fred D. Beardsley, resigned. Mr. Eberhard expressed himself as greatly pleased with his new house, which is a new one, attractively decorated and with a seating capacity of about 1,400. A new policy of better pictures and reduced prices has been inaugurated.

The Gladwin Park theatre, East Jefferson and Parkview Avenues, Detroit, opened last week under the new management of "Dick" Lynch, former Keith vaudeville star, and Thomas Lynch, former Detroit alderman. This management of brothers have redecorated the house and with their policy of the best only they expect to make the Gladwin one of the city's high class houses.

Plans have been completed for the annual Motion Picture Day to be held February 14. It is expected that Sydney S. Cohn, president of the M. P. T. O. of America, will be present to represent the exhibitors. A joint meeting will be held during the afternoon and a banquet will be served in the evening at the Hotel Statler. Municipal and state officials will be present to address the film men.

Wesley Barry in his latest release, "Heroes of the Street," which opens January 28 at the Madison for a week's run, played host to the "newsies" who carry the Detroit Times, on Saturday morning, January 27, at an invitational preview. The Detroit Times selected this picture as a most appropriate one, as the young hero—played by Barry—begins his career as a "newsie." Seevral hundred Detroit newsboys were present.

Florida Flashes

Tampa is all dolled up for the big South Florida Fair and Gasparilla Carnival, which holds the boards from February 1st to the 10th. All of the theatres are nicely decorated, as well as most of the business houses. The city will be filled "as usual" and many visitors will have to take their naps in the chairs of the hotel lobbies. It is the big event of the year, and always means big business for the theatres.

Lawrence Sharpe, who handles the publicity for C. D. Cooley, manager of the Strand, Tampa, put over a record "daub," as he calls it, by getting up over 200 sheets in one location, on Franklin street, the main business street of the city, for the showing of "When Knighthood was in Flower."

Mrs. Florence M. Winston, owner of the Reliance theatre at Clermont, drove to Tampa this week in her new Ford coupe, which she has dolled up until it's as nifty as they make 'em. Mrs. Winston says that her business is fine and she is getting 'em all. Last Saturday night something went wrong with the juice plant up there and everything stopped, with her house full of people. It failed to put her out of business, however, as she sends a man right down to help fix up things, and held her audience until the lights came on.

C. W. Hewitt, of St. Petersburg, Fla., has just completed a block of stores on 9th street, in that city. He has decided to try out a picture show in one section, and if it proves successful, he will enlarge it by taking in another section. The theatre will be called "The Ninth Street Movie," and will be under the management of C. E. Lindall, who came down here from Bar Harbor, Maine, to spend the winter. Mr. Lindall is an old timer at the show business, he having operated houses in Maine and also conducted a theatrical supply house. He made the long journey down here in a "flivver house," giving picture shows en route.

Des Moines Bulletins

J. E. Boyle, probably Iowa's oldest exhibitor, manager of the Dreamland theatre at Dubuque, has been sick abed for the past eight weeks. Mrs. Boyd has been managing the theatre during his absence.

Mr. Wirtz of Sigourney has sold his motion picture house to Mr. St. John.

The Strand theatre at Shariton, burned about two weeks ago. Repairs started immediately and the theatre is now doing business again. A new screen was one of the changes made necessaray by the fire.

The film, "Kissed," starring Marie Prevost, caught on fire while being exhibited at the theatre at What Cheer, reports Mr. Sage, manager there, and caused considerable excitement among the audience.

L. G. West, of the Colonial theatre at Grinnell, was a visitor recently in Des Moines.

Mr. Jess Collins from Terry was also in DesMoines on business last week.

J. E. Boyle, manager of the Dreamland theatre at Dubuque, is still confined to his bed. Mrs. Boyle has been managing the affairs of the Dreamland theatre during Mr. Boyle's illness.

Dan Burgum, manager of the Garden theatre, Des Moines, is a little lonesome now that Mrs. Burgum and daughter Ruth have left him to bachelor quarters. Mrs. Burgum has been suffering from ill health for some time and the trip south is being made for her benefit. She will make her home with her sister in Los Angeles and the stay will be one of indefinite length. Mr. Burgum especially misses his daughter who was his particular pal and spent much of her time at the theatre with him.

Everything comes to him who waits, says Walter Davis, manager of the Rialto theatre, Des Moines, who spent a lot of time fixing up a sleigh bell device to attract attention to the Rialto theatre lobby—and then the snow melted. But he waited and it snowed again. And much comment was occasioned by his novel lobby device.

Things don't seem right around the Famous Players exchange. Hazel Douglas who is in Minnesota to help in settling up her father's estate has been away this last week and everyone misses her.

Jack Curry, of the accessory department, and Mr. Nichols, head of the Famous Players exchange, were out in the territory together this week. They visited Ottumwa, Jefferson, etc.

Mr. R. S. Shader, district manager for Pathe, visited the Des Moines exchange last week. He left Wednesday.

Springfield, Ill., Items

Business has picked up in Springfield the past two weeks. The big pictures have been drawing well and it seems like old times. Harold Lloyd had a wonderful eight days at the Gaiety in "Dr. Jack." Charles Ray played to capacity for seven days at the Lyric in "A Tailor Made Man." The Princess did well with Thomas Meighan in "Back Home and Broke." The smaller houses also report increased patronage.

Frank Sands, former manager at the Vaudette, is in St. John's hospital recovering from a serious operation. It will be some time before he can resume his duties.

The Princess and State Journal worked a cracking good stunt when they put on a special morning matinee for the orphans of the city. Jackie Coogan in "Oliver Twist" was the attraction. Several hundred boys and girls had a good time.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower" comes to the Princess the week of February 3. This is expected to be the big event of the year in local film circles.

Tom Mix in "In Arabia" cleaned up for the Strand. A nickel matinee Saturday morning, January 27, brought out 1,400 kids.

"The Third Alarm" was given a special showing at the Lyric for the benefit of the city firemen. They voted it a wonderful picture.

The Strand has booked "The Flirt," Universal's 1923 knockout.

"Orphans of the Storm" opened up big at the Lyric, starting January 27. This is a repeat engagement, the picture having been previously shown at the Chatterton last September.

Comedies, Short Subjects & Serials

"Plunder" 3rd Episode Heads Pathe List

"THE HIDDEN THING," is the title of the third episode of "Plunder," Pearl White Patheserial, which heads a program of eight subjects scheduled for release of Feb. 11.

The comedy product is "Jailed and Bailed," featuring Paul Parrott and Jobyna Ralston, while the Aesop's Film Fabled offering is called "The Gliders." There is also an interesting issue of Screen Snapshots, No. 19, which introduces a number of popular film stars.

Pathe Review No. 6 includes scenes depicting the Japanese art, or industry, of fishing with captive cormorants. Other novelties complete the reel.

This release program contains, in addition, Pathe News Nos. 14 and 15 and Topics of the Day No. 6.

"Ex-Kaiser in Exile" Soon To Be Released

According to Fred Hamlin, who is presenting the two reel film special "The Ex-Kaiser in Exile," and which will soon be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, states that this film is the first and probably will be the last one that will ever be taken.

After five years of effort in which every possible device and subterfuge known to resourceful motion picture and newspaper cameramen was tried, it has remained for the producers of this film to finally penetrate the secrets of the ex-Emperor's life in exile, behind the barbed wire twenty acre estate at Doorn, Holland.

In addition to nine different views of the former War Lord in some of which he is seen apparently within three or four feet of the camera, by means of the high powered lens, an intensely interesting and patriotic contrast has been secured by showing him in scenes depicting his former days of pomp and glory, coupled with a few scenes of stirring war action.

Educational Comedies Endorsed by N.M.P.L.

"Bumps," an Educational-Cameo Comedy, with Jimmie Adams, and "Second Childhood," an Educational-Christie Comedy, featuring Bobby Vernon, are listed in the current bulletin of the National Motion Picture League, and are indorsed for "family showing." The bulletin also lists the current issues of Kinograms, Educational's news reel.

Coue Completes Work in Special

Educational to Release "The Message of Emile Coue" Soon

PRODUCTION work on "The Message of Emile Coue," the two-reel Educational subject, in which M. Coue will give his message of self-healing to the world, and which will be distributed by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., is rapidly nearing completion at the studio of Motion Picture Arts, at New Rochelle, N. Y. All the scenes in which M. Coue appears have been finished, leaving only the minor scenes, which will be completed in a few days.

This is perhaps a record in motion picture production. As M. Coue's time was strictly limited it was necessary that every detail of production be worked out and timed in advance, and every precaution was taken by the producers to prevent lost motion. Six cameras photographed the scenes from different angles after preliminary rehearsals were pronounced satisfactory, in order that retakes due to defective photography would not be necessary.

The complete resources of the studio were placed at the disposal of the Coue company.

"I have never seen an actor on a motion picture set, no matter how minor an extra, who was less temperamental than M. Coue," declared the director, John L. McCutcheon. "Rehearsals were almost unnecessary, and he complied with all the demands we made on him with an obedience and tractability seldom seen in a studio even in the case of seasoned film veterans, and never before where a man was facing a camera for the first time."

M. Coue's statement is simple:

"I am not a miracle man. I have never cured anyone. I only show others how to cure themselves."

Educational is rushing work on special advertising and exploitation to accompany this two-reel special.

M. Coue expects to sail for Europe on Feb. 10, and it is hoped that production work on "The Message of Emile Coue" will be finished in time to give him the opportunity of seeing himself on the screen and inspecting his work before sailing.

Two Pathe Specials On Program

"Dr. Jack", Feature and "Fruits of Faith" at Stanley, Philadelphia

PLAYED at the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, with "Dr. Jack," Will Rogers' three reels of mingled humor and pathos called "Fruits of Faith" is declared to have fully justified the high opinions expressed in the action by the Stanley and other circuits in booking the Rogers picture as able to hold its own with Lloyd's latest feature comedy played on the same bill. This, in effect, is the unanimous verdict of reviewers in the Philadelphia newspapers.

The Stanley's program tie-up of two leading comedy stars of screen and stage, inspired such display headlines as "Lloyd and Rogers vie on Stanley bill—Harold humorous in 'Dr. Jack,' and Will human in short film"; "Lloyd and Rogers on double bill at Stanley"; "Harold Lloyd and Will Rogers in Delightful Offerings," etc. Following are paragraphs from these reviews, which are notable for their extended analysis as well as for their unstinted praise of both pictures:

Evening Bulletin: "With Harold Lloyd in 'Dr. Jack' and Will Rogers in 'Fruits of Faith,' the Stanley theatre has two films that appeal to a sense more fundamental than that of the mere 'comic.'"

Inquirer: "With his feature ('Dr. Jack') is a three-reel novelty, 'Fruits of Faith,' with Will Rogers. In his inimitable way, Rogers soon makes friends with his audience with a story which, in all probability, done by anyone else would have fallen as flat as Humpty Dumpty."

North American: "Harold Lloyd as 'Dr. Jack,' the sunshine physician, races at top speed through a hilarious farce. 'Fruits of Faith,' in which Will Rogers is the star, is a short film, but one of the most beautiful ever produced."

Record: "Harold Lloyd in 'Dr. Jack,' and Will Rogers in 'Fruits of Faith,' were the stellar attractions yesterday at the Stanley. . . . This is one of the most spirited of the Lloyd comedies and has more than the usual 'romantic' element. . . . Will Rogers appeared in a role of a tramp who was snatched from vagrancy by the wiles of a little child."

Music Cue Sheets for New Anchor Series

Arrangements with Olive Miller, a Los Angeles music composer, to write the music cue sheets for the series of two-reel features starring little Arthur Trimble have been made by the Anchor Film Distributors, Inc., which is releasing this

Two More Century for Early Release

TWO MORE Century Comedies have been completed for early release on the Universal program, "Smarty," formerly referred to as "Teacher's Pest," which is Buddy Messinger's second starring vehicle; "Sweet and Pretty," starring Brownie, the wonder dog, his first release for 1923.

Joe Moore, Eddie Barry and Lois Boyd appear in support of Brownie in "Sweet and Pretty," together with a bevy of Century Beauties, who justify the title.

Sadie Campbell, a former protege of Gus Edwards; Charles Hatton, who played the part of John Ridd as a boy in "Lorna Doone"; Fred Spencer and Blanche Payson support young Messinger in "Smarty."

Both directors are working on new stories, names as yet undecided, and will commence "shooting" within the next ten days.

Lee-Bradford Corp. to Star Shorty Hamilton

On a recent trip to Florida, Arthur A. Lee, President of the Lee-Bradford Corporation, closed a contract with R. E. Grabel, President of the Associated Authors, Inc., for a series of eight or possibly twelve two-reel comedies starring Shorty Hamilton and Muriel Kingston.

Hamilton needs no introduction. Muriel Kingston will be remembered as having been in the Toonerville Trolley Comedies.

The entire company is leaving for Orlando, Florida and will spend the balance of the winter there producing comedies, all to be taken from published stories by the well known author, Hapsburg Liebe. Over 500 stories of his have been published in various magazines, such as the Blue Book, Adventures, Smith's, All Story, Argosy and many other popular magazines.

The first two subjects will be ready to show to the trade the first part of March.

"Private, Keep Off" DeHaven Comedy Shown

Carter DeHaven's next two reel comedy for the Film Booking Offices of America, "Private—Keep Off," was pre-viewed recently at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles and the jovial Mr. and Mrs. DeHaven proved that they have lost none of their laugh-provoking powers. Their next comedy, already in production, is "Borrowed Trouble."

Christie Goes 4,500 Miles For Two Reeler

Every time Al Christie takes one of his comedy companies on location, it is farther and farther away from the Los Angeles headquarters. This time, they have returned from Honolulu and the famous beach of Waikiki, which served as location for a film of the new Christie type.

The new comedy is "A Hula Honeymoon," with Henry Murdock featured, and is one of twenty comedies which is Christie's entire output this year. Last year when Christie took his company to Truckee and filmed a satire called "Cold Feet" he found an unusual background with the result that he was said to have made the most successful comedy of the year.

"This Honolulu expedition is only a start," says Christie. "When I make my European vacation trip next May, I will take Neal Burns along to London and make the comedy of a London omnibus which struck me over there last Spring as a wonderful idea."

By all of which it would appear that the art of comedy is stepping out pretentiously with leaps and bounds.

Kinograms Depict Coue Delivering Message

The current issue of Kinograms, Educational's news reels, claim six exclusive features.

M. Coue, the famous disciple of auto-suggestion, is shown approving the script for "The Message of Emile Coue," the only motion picture in which this eminent lecturer will appear during his stay in America, and the first motion picture in which he has appeared.

Pictures showing the French occupation of Essen, Germany's famous industrial city, are shown. This item also shows interesting shots of the local German police keeping back the crowds while the French cavalry takes formal possession of the town.

Other exclusive scenes include interesting and timely news bits from many parts of the world.

"Wild Waters" First Fox Educational for February

THE FIRST of the six Fox Educational Entertainments to be released in February is "Wild Waters," which portrays Iguazu Falls, located at the juncture of three republics in South America, these countries being Brazil, Argentine and Paraguay.

The contour of Niagara includes 5,000 feet. Iguazu comprises 10,000. Niagara's largest drop is 180 feet; the greatest in the South American Falls is 213 feet. At high water, following torrential rains, twenty million cubic feet per minute flow over the falls as against eighteen million for Niagara. There are 275 cataracts, one of them alone capable of producing six million horsepower if harnessed to electric dynamos.

Five Joe Rock Comedies Finished

Billy Rhodes Supports Comedian in Series of Twelve for 1923 Release

JOE ROCK Productions of New York, will release a series of twelve two-reel comedies starring Joe Rock, with Billy Rhodes as his support. The first five of the series have already been completed and are now being released to exhibitors by independent exchanges throughout the country.

"Ali Baba," a parody on the famous "Arabian Nights" tale, is the first in the series of burlesques on the legendary myths; "Aladdin" is the second. The third two-reeler is "Little Red Robin Hood," a travesty on "Little Red Riding Hood." The fourth is "The Pill." The fifth, which is the last to be completed, is "The Cold Homestead."

The Apollo Exchange, New York, Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Chicago, Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Milwaukee, Federated Film Exchange of Baltmore, Federated Film Exchange of New England, Bond Photoplay Corporation of Albany and Buffalo, Standard Film Service Co. of Cleveland, Specialty Film Company of Dallas, the Lannon-Sheffield Exchange of Denver, Federated Film Distributors of Los Angeles and San Francisco, Masterpiece Film Attractions of Philadelphia, and the Greater Features Company, Salt Lake City, are now distributing the series.

Joe Rock's comedies mark an advanced step in comedy production, it is claimed. The settings and lavishness of a feature were bestowed on every one of his mirth-makers according to the producers. By the end of the year the additional seven Joe Rock comedies will have been released.

"A Spooky Romance" Is Finished

"A Spooky Romance" will be the title of Al Herman's first Century Comedy for 1923. This is the comedy in which Jack Cooper, Jack Earle the giant, Billy Engle, and Inez McDonnell all appear.

Jack Cooper who for nearly two years starred in Fox Comedies, has been given the featured role. On the strength of his work in this picture it is highly probable that Julius Stern will star Cooper.

Cooper comes from the old English school of comedy work—the English music hall—and has appeared in comedies for the last five years with Christies, Fox, Sennett, and others.

The story of "A Spooky Romance," centers around a flapper and her favored beau who try to get rid of another suitor through a series of spooky sequences calculated to chill the ardor of the bold rival.

New Plum Center Comedy Announced

"Pop Tuttle's Pole-Cat Plot" is the next Plum Center comedy on the short subject program of the Film Booking Offices of America. It will be released late in February.

This new comedy is counted by F. B. O. as one of the best of the Plum Center series, produced by the Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation of San Francisco. The entire series features Dan Mason in the role of "Pop Tuttle," with Wilna Hervey in the character of "Tillie, The Great Dane," Robert Eddy directs.

"Pop Tuttle's Pole-Cat Plot" tells of Pop's business difficulties and how he overcomes the obstacle of competition in his bus line enterprise.

Burr All-Star Comedies Cast on Location

The second troupe of players of the All-Star comedies produced by C. C. Burr, left for St. Augustine, Florida, several days ago to film the exteriors of another two reeler. The first troupe, under the direction of Dick Thorpe, has returned to the Glendale Studios, New York, to finish the interior scenes on still another comedy.

Production-Distribution Activities

"Passionate Friends" via State Rights

GEORGE H. DAVIS'S latest production, titled "The Passionate Friends," will be distributed via the state-rights market, according to an announcement received this week from the George H. Davis office in New York. The distribution of the new Davis subject has been handed over to the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation.

Universal Open House Week Is Success

An unusual success that far exceeded the expectations of Universal officials was met with in the Open ouse Week held in the Washington branch of the Universal Pictures Corporation the week of January 8th.

The enthusiasm of the salesmen and the other employees of the Washington office in backing up Managery Harry S. Brown's plans resulted in making of Open House Week an unqualified success and record-breaker. The whole sales staff remained in Washington during the entire week to greet visiting exhibitors and extend them every courtesy and attention. Fully 50 per cent. of the exhibitors in the territory took advantage of Open House Week and visited the office, while more than 25 per cent. sent their regrets stating that they were unable to come, according to Universal. In accordance with the announcement of the manager in his letter to exhibitors inviting them to attend Open House Week, the railroad fare was paid to every exhibitor, in cash, immediately upon his arrival in the office.

Several Home Office executives attended Open House Week. A. A. Schmidt, General Sales Manager of Universal, remained for several days. Jules Levy, District Manager of Universal, was also one of the visitors.

Burr Sales Chief in South on Contracts

Lester F. Scott, Jr., general sales representative for C. C. Burr, left Chicago last Saturday for the South to close several important contracts with leading southern independent exchanges for the distribution rights to "Secrets of Paris," the Whitman Bennett special which C. C. Burr is releasing.

Mr. Scott will return to the New York office after closing in the South and then will probably concentrate on the sale of the Edward Sloman production, "The Last Hour," which is ready for release "The Last Hour" features Milton Sills and Carmel Myers among a cast of well known players.

Eschmann Elated Over Contest

Pathe General Sales Manager Congratulates Field Force on Success

E. A. ESCHMANN, general sales manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., is highly elated over the success of the sales contest which ended December 30, and the winners of which were announced last week.

Mr. Eschmann prepared the following statement:

"The results of the sales contest which ended on Dec. 30, have impressed the Pathe Home Office more deeply than ever with the power for magnificent performance possessed by our thirty-four branch organizations. Home Office congratulations are extended to every member of the forces in the field who contributed in that achievement.

"Each sales contest in which we have participated has set a new record for business. It may be that this repeated record-breaking, under any and all conditions, has induced in us a sort of assurance that our branches can't fail—that their power of achievement is to be taken as a matter of course. The value of this asset in connection with Pathe's development of rich, but neglected, fields can hardly be overestimated.

"This selling contest also well served the interests of exhibitors who found themselves confronted with the problem of securing photoplay features of quality and demonstrated drawing power. In zones where certain Pathe standard features had not been played, our salesmen seized the opportunity of convincing showmen that these carefully produced photoplays presenting favorite stars in stories by celebrated authors would be welcomed by their patrons. The result was that out of a list of about thirty standard Pathe features between fifteen and twenty of them, which have been continuously before the public for two years or more, figured very largely in the contest returns—showing that a successful feature is as good or better than an untried new feature wherever it has not yet been played.

"Under the terms of the contest recently closed, the result throughout the exhibitor field has been of a constructive nature which, instead of producing a period of unfavorable reaction, will have a continuously stimulating effect from which our capable and enterprising field forces will gain their full share of advantage."

Cast Complete for "Hunchback"

Universal's Big 1923 Jewel Production Under Way with Stellar Lineup

WALLACE WORSLEY, director of Universal's big 1923 Jewel picture, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," has completed the large cast necessary for adapting Victor Hugo's celebrated novel to the screen, and production has started with a rush, Universal announces.

In addition to Lon Chaney, Patsy Ruth Miller, Norman Kerry and Raymond Hatton, the four leading players heretofore announced as engaged for featured roles in the big Universal production, the following have recently been added to the cast of principals: Kate Lester, Brandon Hurst, Ernest Torrence, Harry Van Meter, Winifred Bryson, Eulahe Hensen, and Nick de Ruiz.

Lon Chaney takes the role of the hunchback, Quasimodo; Miss Miller plays Esmeralda, the gypsy dancer; Norman Kerr is to be Capt. Phoebus, and Raymond Hatton will take the role of Gringroire, the poet.

Miss Lester will play the role of Madame Guandelaurier of the Hugo novel. Hurst will be Jehan, the evil brother of the archdeacon of Notre Dame. Torrence will be Clopin, the king of mendicants; Van Meter will be Mon Neufchatel, Miss Bryson will be Mlle. Fleurd de Lys and Miss Jensen will play the role of Marie.

The scenes depicting the Court of Miracles, that strange gathering place of 15th Century Paris, where beggars, cripples, pickpockets and other crooks assembled after nightfall to discard their wooden legs, uncover their "sightless" eyes and otherwise become normal, has called for the combined attention of the Universal scenario and casting departments.

Among the players who have been engaged to portray important characters in the Court of Miracles are John Cossar, Wilson Hummel, Jay Hunt, C. E. Collins, Walter Rodgers, Alfred Hollingsworth, Russell Powell, Albert Prisco, Andy MacClellan, Alfred Gronell, Harry Mann, Albert MacQuarrie, James Collins, Fred T. Walker and Fred Herzog, Pearl Tupper, Eva Lewis, Lou Salter, Jane Sherman, Helen Brunneau, Gladys Johnston, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Nick Shaid, John Impolito, Louis Miller, Roy Laidlaw and Harry DeVere.

Six Fox Educationals for February

FOX FILM CORPORATION announces the preparation for release during February of six educational reel and half-reel features.

They are: "Wild Waters," a half reel film showing the picturesque Iguazu Falls, which are on the border of three South American countries, Argentine, Brazil and Paraguay.

"School Days in Japan," another half-reeler, depicts the methods employed in the modern Japanese schools in the training of the new generations.

"An Alaska Honeymoon," a full reel, takes a newly married couple on a month's tour of the interesting site places of America's far north.

"Algeria," also a full reel, gives the audience an insight into the century-old customs and manufacturing habits of the north African country.

The names of two more educationals on the list will be announced later.

Rowland's Plans Growing For Production

Richard A. Rowland's production plans for Associated First National are extending rapidly. Since the announcement last week that Arthur H. Jacobs had contracted to produce a series of Frank Borzage Productions, independently for First National release, Mr. Rowland and Robert Lieber, President of Associated First National, have both received many messages of congratulation.

Frank Borzage has to his directorial credit many of the bigger pictures of the screen. His greatest was "Humoresque," a picture that could always be found in lists of "the best ten." His later pictures have been "Pride of Palomar," and "The N'th Commandment."

Arthur H. Jacobs, who has become well known in the trade during his eight years of production activities, left for the coast immediately after signing the contract, to get his organization in shape to begin production of Mr. Borzage's first story, "Terwilliger," written by Tristan Tulpin and originally published in the Metropolitan Magazine, afterward serially in many newspapers throughout the country.

Burr to Release Burlesque on "Hamlet"

A burlesque on "Hamlet" and with the title "So This Is Hamlet," will be the next All-Star comedy to be released by the C. C. Burr organization. This was prompted by the popularity of "Hamlet" on Broadway, it is stated.

Rathner Closes Deal Down South

What constitutes one of the most important sales negotiated by an independent distribution concern was closed this week by Harry Rathner, representing Principal Pictures Corporation, with the Enterprise Distributing Corporation, which releases to all the S. A. Lynch houses in the South. The sale involved the rights in the S. A. Lynch territory to "The World's a Stage" based on a story by Elinor Glyn and starring Dorothy Phillips.

The territory includes Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North and South Carolina, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, South Illinois and Tennessee, representing approximately 20 per cent. of the country. Mr. Rathner closed this deal in Atlanta last week.

Mr. Rathner will make a tour of the country, spending the current week conferring with exchangemen in the West. From there he will go to the Northwest, thence to California and back to New York. He will be back in New York late next month.

"Moulin Rouge" Has Big Liverpool Opening

From Liverpool, England, come particulars of unusual preparations for the opening of Pyramid's "Queen of The Moulin Rouge" at the Scala theatre, January 28, for an indefinite engagement.

There will be a "Moulin Rouge" carnival at the Adelphi Hotel, February 2, for the benefit of the Stanley Hospital, the feature of which will be a prize of fifty dollars for the lady adjudged to be the most faithful impersonation of Martha Mansfield as "Queen of The Moulin Rouge."

Cooperation of the London and North Western Railway has been obtained and a special train will be run early in the morning following the carnival to all suburban points.

Arrow Reports Sales on Deluxe Series

W. Ray Johnston, Vice-president of Arrow Film Corporation, reports that their new Arrowplays Deluxe series is rapidly being acquired by exchangemen throughout the country.

The latest big exchangeman to take one of the Arrowplays is Arthur C. Bromberg who has contracted for "The Streets of New York" for the entire Southeastern territory which includes North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Mr. Bromberg is president of Progress Pictures Inc., of Atlanta and has branch offices in Charlotte, North Carolina and New Orleans, La.

"Dangerous Age" Recommended

Reviewers in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles Praise Stahl's Production

HAVING met a successful reception in many first run houses throughout the country, John Stahl's "The Dangerous Age," a First National release, was shown at The Strand in New York this week and received the same high praise from the New York critics as it received in other big cities.

The New York World critic wrote: "Interesting. Mr. Stone, as usual, good and there is a girl, Edith Roberts who is likely to be heard of again right soon . . . of the type which cinema kings refer to as a—'good audience picture.'"

"Entertaining matrimonial story," N. Y. Times.

"We enjoyed every flicker of the picture . . . Interesting theme, well acted and perfectly directed. We cheerfully recommend it." Harriet Underhill in the New York Tribune.

"Interesting. Ingenuously timely." N. Y. American.

"It is one of the pictures that can be placed on the credit side of the industry." Louella Parsons in the N. Y. Telegraph.

"It is wonderfully well done." N. Y. Daily News.

Out in Los Angeles where the picture had an early run at the Kinema, the critics wrote:

"There is suspense, more than enough thrills and, above all, thoughtful and capable direction. The cast is excellent." Florence Lawrence in the Examiner.

"A real masterpiece, a genuine reflection of life on the screen at last. And to John Stahl more power. If the public doesn't take to 'The Dangerous Age' like a duck takes to water, I shall cease worrying about pictures and begin worrying about audiences." Grace Kingsley in the Times.

"A Forceful interpretation of a sound theme by a dramatis Personae that virtually live the portravel." Guy Price in the Herald.

"It is all so well told by Director Stahl that the story lives through the humanness of its characters." Charles Goss in the Express.

Chicago critics said:

"Full of good acting." Mae Tinee, Tribune.

"So vividly told, appealingly human and perfectly enacted that you feel as if you had been gazing into a crystal and having your future revealed to you." Chicago Herald and Examiner.

"An excellent picture . . . a real drama of married life." Rob Reel, Chicago Evening American.

"John Stahl has given to the cinematographic show world a production that can be ranked among the most logical and entertaining the current year has uncovered. 'The Dangerous Age' will go through the movie houses of this country like a cyclone, leaving in its wake a monumental series of new box office records."—Roger Ferri, in M. P. World.

"Garrison's Finish" Liked in S.F.

Critics Praise Work of Jack Pickford and Realistic Racing Scenes

JACK PICKFORD and his first independent film production, "Garrison's Finish," in which he plays the star role, registered a distinct hit when the picture was shown recently at the California theatre, San Francisco. The picture played to satisfactory box-office business and won quick and emphatic approval from critics and public, it is claimed.

"Jack Pickford's return to the screen is an unqualified success," said the reviewer for the Call in commenting on this Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation release. "He is splendidly cast in the name role in 'Garrison's Finish' and goes about his work in a thoroughly actor-like and convincing manner."

"There have been a good many pictures lately with horse racing providing the principal interest, but none of them can compare in real interest and excitement with 'Garrison's Finish,'" said the critic for the Examiner.

"'Garrison's Finish' is a good, fast-moving photoplay, well done by Jack Pickford, Madge Bellamy, and a strong supporting cast," said the reviewer for the Chronicle.

"An entertaining picture in every particular," was the opinion of the Bulletin's critic. "The outstanding features are the race track scenes, and there is every reason why they should be as exciting as a real race, for they were taken during the actual running of the great Kentucky Derby at Louisville, and at the running of the Metropolitan Handicap at New York."

"Plenty of new twists in this picture, and the novelty of the plot contributes much to its entertainment value," wrote the reviewer for the Daily News.

Campaign Planned for "Strauss' Salome"

Extensive advertising, publicity and exploitation campaigns are being arranged, many of them in cooperation with daily newspapers, in preparation for the release shortly of "Malcolm Strauss' Salome," the spectatcular picture which is being handled for the independent market through George H. Wiley, Inc.

Newspapers in the bigger cities throughout the country are being lined up in a number of contests interesting to their readers, and designated to help the sale of the big production, according to the Wiley offices.

A Salome Beauty and Resemblance Contest is to be begun, to find, in each city, a girl who most nearly meets the beauty and physical charm of Diana Allen, the famous Follies dancer who plays the role of Salome in the film. Various newspapers have shown decided interest in this contest, it is said.

Other tie-ups are being made with dancing schools and academies, whose pupils have been offered for prologues, prizes to be awarded to the best dancers.

Warners Complete Cast For "Main Street"

The addition of several screen players to the Warner Brothers' classic of the screen, "Main Street," being directed by Harry Beaumont under the supervision of Sam and Jack Warner, completed last week the full cast chosen to interpret the roles in the picturization of Sinclair Lewis' novel.

Florence Vidor and Monte Blue have been cast in the leading roles, and other prominent members of the cast include Harry Meyers, Louise Fazenda, Noah Beery, Alan Hale, Robert Gordon, Josephine Crowell, Otis Harlan, Gordon Griffith, Lon Poff, J. P. Lockney, Gilbert Clayton and Jack MacDonald.

Julien Josephson, who picturized F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel, "The Beautiful and Damned," adapted "Main Street" for the screen.

Ballin to Film Again at Goldwyn Studios

Hugo Ballin who has just completed at the Goldwyn studios, a big special production of Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," starring his wife, Mabel Ballin, has decided to make another production at those studios. He is considering several big stories and will soon make his decision from among those now under consideration. Mr. Ballin's production of "Vanity Fair" is now being edited and titled.

500 in First "Main Street" Scene

Five hundred people were used in the first scene filmed for the Warner Brothers classic of the screen, "Main Street," under the direction of Harry Beaumont, according to advices received from Sam and Jack L. Warner in charge of production activities at the coast studios. To the large cast of screen players engaged for the picture were added Otis Harlan, Gordon Griffith and Robert Gordon.

The first scene was filmed at Chatsworth, California, some twenty-five miles from Los Angeles, and it serves to introduce to the small town people living on the outskirts of Gopher Prairie the famed Carol and Dr. Kennicott, portrayed respectively by Florence Vidor and Monte Blue.

Other prominent members of the cast include Harry Meyers, Louise Fazenda, Noah Beery and Josephine Crowell. Julien Josephson is responsible for the scenario of "Main Street."

Benda Designs Posters For "Adam And Eva"

W. T. Benda, famous illustrator, made the posters for Marion Davies' new Cosmopolitan picture "Adam and Eva" which opens at the Rivoli theatre February 11. Mr. Benda is said to have used his brilliant imagination to create some very striking and effective designs to illustrate this sparkling screen comedy adapted to the films from the stage play by Guy Bolton and George Middleton. Marion Davies as "Eva" has an entirely different role from anything in which she has yet appeared.

The same quartet which caused "When Knighthood Was in Flower" to be hailed as a creen classic, also made "Adam and Eva": Marion Davies, star; Robert Vignola, director; Joseph Urban, scenic artist, and Luther Reed, scenario writer.

British Embassy Sees "The Hottentot"

Another First National attraction was screened at the British Embassy recently. It was Thomas H. Ince's "The Hottentot" and it was received joyously and with applause by Ambassador Geddes and his guests. The steeplechase caused as much excitement among the little group, it is said, as it has in the theatres throughout the country where big orchestras help the action along. Major General Bethell, who is the military attache and a great horseman, was especially delighted with the race and declared the photography of the jumps was remarkable.

Territorial Rights Are Sold on "Environment"

H. Lieber of Indianapolis and Gene Marcus of the Twentieth Century Film Exchange of Philadelphia have purchased territorial rights to "Environment" with Milton Sills and Alice Lake. Irving Lesser, eastern manager of Principal Pictures Corporation, closed these deals.

"Third Alarm" Ends Astor Run

Opening Night Crowd Sustained Through Four Weeks Showing On Broadway

FINISHING its final week at the Astor theatre to crowds as big as that which greeted it at the opening night "The Third Alarm" will complete its Broadway run of four weeks on Sunday evening, February 4th. The Emory Johnson production, presented by P. A. Powers, managing director of the Film Booking Offices of America, began its pre-release engagement at the Astor theatre on January 8th.

In the New York territory, Charles Rosenzweig, manager of the New York F. B. O. branch, announces that the picture has already received wider bookings than any F. B. O. production to release. The success of "In the Name of the Law," the first Emory Johnson production which did so much to popularize Ella Hall, Ralph Lewis and Johnnie Walker, as well as the big reception and tremendous word of mouth advertising which accrued to "The Third Alarm" since its opening at the Astor, are held as important factors by Rosenzweig in bringing about the avalanche of bookings. The picture has already been booked over the Fox circuit.

Throughout the country "The Third Alarm" has already started its career in the first run houses. Among the notable big openings was that at Grauman's Million Dollar theatre in Los Angeles, where the picture started its run on January 29th. It is possible that the engagement will be extended for a third week. Mr. Grauman reviewed the picture with Earl Wachter, of the F. B. O. Los Angeles exchange and lost no time in booking it for his big house. It is being presented with an elaborate prologue and interlogue which were written especially by Mr. Grauman.

An exploitation campaign of unusual scope stirred Los Angeles to its depths when "The Third Alarm" started at Grauman's, according to wired information received from the Coast. The campaign included liberal use of billboard space, three sheet cutouts all over town, street parades and a number of street stunts which brought "The Third Alarm" to the attention of the entire city.

Warner's Latest Print Arrives

"Little Church Around the Corner" Will Be Shown at New York Strand

THE complete print of the Warner Brothers latest classic of the screen, "Little Church Around the Corner," arrived last week from the Warner coast studios. Arrangements for the showing of the feature at the Strand theatre, New York, which has contracted for the entire series of Warner classics, are being made, and it is expected that a definite release date will be decided upon within the near future.

An unusual reception was accorded the production at a preview presentation held at the Wilshire theatre, Los Angeles, according to a report from Sam and Jack Warner. Many prominent members of the industry, in addition to the members of the cast, attended the presentation. One of the big punches in the film is declared to be the exact reproduction of a coal mine built at the Warner studios at a cost of over $25,000. In filming the mine scenes, thousands of extras were used, and the resulting mob effects are coupled with a series of thrilling situations.

The structure of the story is built upon the theme that there's a little church in every person's heart. This theme is interwoven in what is described as the greatest of all romantic melodramas, interpreted by a cast which includes Claire Windsor, Kenneth Harlan, Hobart Bosworth, Walter Long, Pauline Stark, Margaret Seddon, George Cooper, Alex Francis, Winter Hall, and Cyril Chadwick.

The production was directed by William Seiter, and the story was written by Olga Printzlau based on the stage play by Charles Blaney and the novel by Marion Russell.

Strong Cast For "Does It Pay?"

Hope Hampton Heads List in Recently Announced Fox Special Release

"DOES IT PAY?" the recently announced special added to the list of Fox Film Corporation's releases for this year has an all-star cast.

Among the names on the roster of performers are: Hope Hampton; Robert T. Haines, Marjorie Rambeau's principal support in "The Goldfish" during its New York run; Mary Thurman; Bunny Grauer, the featured young actor in "The Town That Forgot God"; Peggy Shaw, Florence Short, Marie Shotwell, and Charles Wellesley.

"Does It Pay?" is the cryptic title of a story that is destined to excite a great deal of curiosity, according to the Fox Film Corporation, the picture itself answering the question it propounds with convincing skill.

Powerful in theme, this production throws new and interesting light upon the price the transgressor pays for his breaking of the moral law. The story has the sharp clash of character that is the foundation of all real drama. It also calls for the employment of rich and impressive settings and actors of the highest grade.

Lesser Claims Sales Record for Week

What constitutes a record in the way of territorial sales is claimed this week by Principal Pictures Corporation. The deals as announced this week by Irving Lesser in New York follow:

Si Grievcr of Griever Exchange, Chicago, "Environment" and "The World's A Stage"; Drucker Film Corporation of Chicago, "Environment," "World's A Stage" and "Flesh and Blood"; H. Leiber Company of Indianapolis, "The World's A Stage"; Midwest Film Exchange of Milwaukee, Wis., "The World's A Stage" and "Environment"; Renown Pictures Exchanges of Albany and Buffalo, N. Y., "The World's A Stage" and "Environment"; A. H. Blank of Des Moines, "According to Hoyle" and "The Milky Way" both starring David Butler; Southern States Film Company of Atlanta and New Orleans, Dick Hatton series; Finklestein & Rubin Exchange of Minneapolis, five Irving Cummings Mounted Police Northwesterns; Navy Department, Bureau of Motion Pictures, "The World's A Stage," "Man From Hell's River," "Environment" and "Flesh and Blood."

Greiver Buys Rights To "Only A Shopgirl"

Greiver Productions of Chicago this week took over the rights for their territory on "Only a Shopgirl," according to negotiations completed with the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation. By the agreement, Greiver will handle the feature in the Northern Illinois and Indiana territory.

Si Greiver, head of Greiver Productions, purchased rights to the first of the C. B. C. series, "More To Be Pitied," when the series was first announced.

Mr. Greiver states that a big campaign will be launched to put over "Only a Shopgirl" in his territory. George F. Bromley, special Mid-Western representative for C. B. C., is co-operating with Mr. Greiver on this.

Exteriors of "The Net" Made in Florida

A number of the exteriors for "The Net", the Fox special production directed by J. Gordon Edwards, to be released February 25, were made in Miami, Florida. The principal scene of the Maravene Thompson story taken in Miami was the wedding of the heroine.

Laemmle Suggestion Is Cause of Comment

Comment was raised in film circles last week by Carl Laemmle's announcement that much of the business trouble of many exhibitors could be traced to high box office prices. The Universal chief, who advised every exhibitor to consider lowering his admission prices has been flooded during the past few days by communications pro and con.

Among the illuminating reports received by Mr. Laemmle from exhibitors who have tried the price reduction plan and have gone over the top with bigger business, as a result, one of the most striking was received from Max Marcus, manager of the U. S. theatre, Cleveland, O. He explained in great detail just how price cutting affected his business and how he now is enjoying a 100 per cent. increase in profits, and at the same time is able to show his patrons high class features at early dates.

Metro Pictures Are Commended

National Review Board Includes Several as Wholesome and Entertaining

In its last two lists of photoplays commendable both for their entertainment and wholesomeness, the National Board of Review includes the following: Laurette Taylor in "Peg O' My Heart," Reginald Barker's production of "Hearts Aflame," "All the Brothers Were Valiant," "Quincy Adams Sawyer," "The Toll of the Sea," Viola Dana in "Love in the Dark."

All these productions are distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation. Both the Louis B. Mayer-Metro production, "Hearts Aflame" and the Metro-SL special, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," are starred to indicate especial merit.

Laurette Taylor's photoplay, "Peg O' My Heart," marks the screen debut of this greatest American dramatic actress. The picture is taken from the great stage success by J. Hartley Manners, which has been performed more than 15,000 times. The scenario is by Mary O'Hara, the photography by George Barnes.

Reginald Barker's big picture, "Hearts Aflame," is based on Harold Titus's novel, "Timber," a drama of the regeneration of a millionaire's son in the north woods. It is presented by Louis B. Mayer. The scenario is by J. G. Hawks and L. G. Rigby. Mr. Barker directed the photoplay. Percy Hilburn was camera man.

Ben Ames Williams is author of "All the Brothers Were Valiant," an Irvin V. Willat production. Julian Josephson wrote the scenario and Robert Kurrie photographed the picture.

Rural melodrama and comedy are the main ingredients of Charles Felton Pidgin's famous story, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," made into a picture under the direction of Clarence G. Badger, the players being Blanche Sweet, John Bowers, Lon Chaney, Louise Fazenda, Elmo Lincoln, Barbara Le Marr, June Elvidge, Joseph Dowling, Claire McDowell, Edward Connelly, Victor Potel, Gale Henry, Hank Mann, Kate Lester, Billy Franey, Taylor Graves and Harry Depp. The adaptation and continuity were done by Bernard McConville.

New is the process by which "The Toll of the Sea" was made: the first natural color invention. It was done by the Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation, after seven years' experiment under the direction of Dr. Daniel F. Comstock and Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus. Frances Marion wrote the story from a legend of China, Chester M. Franklin directed the action, and the photographic direction was by J. A. Ball.

Viola Dana in "Love in the Dark" is the heroine of a story by John A. Moroso, adapted by J. G. Hawks. The picture, a Harry Beaumont production, was photographed by John Arnold.

Mayer States Production Plan

Stahl Product for First National; Niblo and Barker Films via Metro

LOUIS B. MAYER has completed his early 1923 plan of production and announces the immediate release of three distinct types of films through two different releasing concerns. First National will have the John M. Stahl productions, while Metro will distribute the Fred Niblo and Reginald Barker pictures.

Niblo is just completing "The Famous Mrs. Fair," in which Myrtle Stedman and a large cast of prominent players will be seen and which Metro will launch at the Capitol theatre early in March, with simultaneous release throughout the country. The "Famous Mrs. Fair" is from the play by James Forbes which ran more than a year at the Henry Miller theatre, New York, and seven months at the Blackstone theatre, Chicago. Mr. Niblo, upon finishing the cutting of this production, will start work at once on "Captain Applejack," Walter Hacket's successful legitimate comedy drama which is still running in Chicago and which was the marked stage success of last season in New York. A special cast is to be used in "Captain Applejack" and Niblo will come east to select same.

Reginald Barker, whose "Hearts Aflame" opens at the Rialto Sunday, February 4th, is at work on "The Law Bringer," said to be a more rugged tale than any of his recent films and to be more opulent in opportunity for big scenes and melodramatic situations than either "The Storm" or "Hearts Aflame." Metro will distribute the Barker series.

"The Law Bringer" is scheduled for release early in April, after which Barker will do "The Valley of Content," which will require at least six months to complete and upon which Mr. Mayer will lavish greater splendor that he ever has any previous film.

John M. Stahl, whose "The Dangerous Age" is current at the Strand this week, is at work on "Climbing," from the novel by Lee Hutty, and expects to complete same for First National release in March and will then begin work on "Love, Money and Women," an original story.

Mr. Mayer's New York office, under guidance of Paul Mooney, is actively engaged now on national and sub-local campaigns to synchronize with the various releases.

During the month starting January 28, when "The Dangerous Age" debuts at the Strand and ending with February 28, three Louis B. Mayer productions will be shown in three different Broadway houses, as "Hearts Aflame" follows the former on February 4 at the Rialto and "The Famous Mrs. Fair" is now booked for immediate showing at the Capitol.

Nell Shipman Off for North Country

Completing arrangements with American Releasing for the distribution of her latest picture, "The Grub-Stake," Nell Shipman and Bert Van Tuyle, managing director, left New York ten days ago for their camp at Priest Lake, Idaho, and are now in the northern country which they do not intend to leave for another year while other pictures are under way.

Interesting reports of their progress over the fifty-six miles of snow and ice lying between the railroad station and their camp have reached the East.

Transporting 14 tons of supplies was a matter more important to Nell Shipman and Van Tuyle than making the journey themselves for it meant an unusually long pull for six of the strongest of her sledge dogs, veterans of the frozen trails who also appear in "The Grub-Stake."

May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel in "Grumpy"

May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel, two of the best known featured players at the Paramount West Coast studio, are now cast together for the first time in their careers. Both have important featured roles in "Grumpy," William De Mille's production for Paramount, in which they share honors with Theodore Roberts, also featured.

Both Miss McAvoy and Mr. Nagel have been admirers of each other's work and have expressed time and again a desire to appear together in a picture. But until Mr. De Mille selected both for roles in "Grumpy" that wish has remained unfulfilled.

Review Board Praises "The Hero"

"The Hero", one of the latest Preferred Pictures released by the Al Lichtman Corporation, has received the unqualified endorsement of the motion picture critics and is reviewed in the current bulletin of the National Board of Review by the Board's Committee on Exceptional Photoplays as one of the outstanding films of the year.

Fox Boasts Superlative Cast in Special

Few pictures released during the past two years can boast of such a superlative cast of screen artists to portray the various difficult roles as in the Fox special production "The Town That Forgot God," which recently completed a three month run at the Astor theatre, New York, and which is scheduled for release on February 11th.

Heading the cast of eleven notables is Jane Thomas. "Bunny" Grauer, a talented lad in his early 'teens, is another artist who wins new laurels in this photoplay. Others in the cast include Warren Krech, Harry Benham, Grace Barton, Francis Healy, Edwin Dennison, James Devine, James Kenny, and A. E. Ely. Harry Millarde supervised the making of this production.

L. A. Critics Laud Nazimova In "Salome"

"If you 'never go to pictures because they are so commonplace,' take heart," says the critic for the Los Angeles Examiner in a review of Nazimova's "Salome," shown recently at the California theatre, Los Angeles, under an Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation release. "Nazimova's 'Salome' is unlike any photoplay you have ever seen. It is not even to be compared in technical and photographic art with any previous cinematic achievement.

"'Salome' is a vital production and merits the attention of every earnest and thoughtful person," said the critic for the Evening Express. "It is a startling departure from the ordinary cut-and-dried celluloid adventure."

Close Shave For "Thru The Skylight"

"Through the Skylight," the five-reel farce starring Henry Hull and Mary Thurman, for which Producers Security has the releasing arrangements, came near destruction last week. An incipient fire started in the laboratory and Val Woodig, one of the girls cutting the film, rushed back and seized the negative. A new sample copy had to be made.

Big First National Bookings

Second Anniversary Week Reported Biggest in Organization History

ASSOCIATED FIRST NATIONAL is highly pleased with the response of exhibitors to the campaign for the second Anniversary Week, Feb. 3 to 10. "Book First National Solid for Anniversary Week" has been so enthusiastically received by theatre men that, First National declares, the week will be the biggest in the history of the organization.

Floyd M. Brockell, manager of distribution, who is now on a trip through the United States and Canada, has made the Anniversary Week one of the important features of his journey through the key centers of picture distribution and the "pep" he has put into the sales organization has been gratifying to all First National officials.

To help the exhibitors who are holding First National Week to put the pictures over First National has issued an extensive array of exploitation aids. In additional to the usual accessories they have gotten up the following:

Cloth banners, nine feet by thirty inches, red brown letters on white with the First National trade mark in blue. These are designed for display under arches and around canopies.

Rotogravure one sheets, with pictures of First National stars in black and the wording in blue. These are for display in lobbies; slides in five colors; one, two and four column Anniversary Week Cuts.

The pictures that will get the biggest runs in both the United States and Canada are naturally the current releases, such as "The Voice from the Minaret," with Norma Talmadge; "The Dangerous Age," John M. Stahl's big picture of martial mix up; "Bellboy 13," with Douglas MacLean; "Mighty Lak a Rose," Edwin Carewe's initial independent picture for First National; "The Hottentot," also with Douglas MacLean; "Money, Money, Money," with Katherine MacDonald; "Omar the Tentmaker," with Guy Bates Post; "The Balloonatic," with Buster Keaton.

Some exhibitors are making, according to the booking, the "Anniversary Week" a Thomas H. Ince week, or a Norma Talmadge week or other First National producer or star, by booking the pictures of these solid for the week.

"One Exciting Night" Praised

Chicago Critics Unanimous in Lauding Griffith's New Mystery Picture

WITHOUT a dissenting opinion motion picture reviewers of the Chicago newspapers heaped praise on D. W. Griffith's new mystery picture, "One Exciting Night," a United Artists Corporation release. They praised the picture for its mystery, for its thrills and for its comedy; they praised the melodrama in it and they praised the "Griffith-like delicacy" of the love story. The picture played to big business at the Illinois theatre.

"Mr. Griffith's jazz baby—and some baby!" said Mae Tinee in the Tribune. "Spooky, sizzling plot! It is agog with mystery; prickly with thrills; brooded over by romance, and has a running lilt of comedy throughout."

"The acting is in a measure recruited from the drama of words. and it is very good. My favorite of the distinguished cast is the Romeo Washington of Porter Strong, who is the 'porterhouse' of the performance," wrote Ashton Stevens in the Herald and Examiner.

"Sure fire entertainment, and you'll love it," said Genevieve Harris, in the Post."

"It is 'The Bat,' 'The Cat and the Canary' and 'Bulldog Drummond' all rolled into one . . . and more besides," said Rob Reel in the American.

"Glimpses Of Moon" Finished

Elaborate Settings Mark Dwan's First Production for F.P.-Lasky

ALLAN DWAN has completed his first Paramount picture, "The Glimpses of the Moon," adapted from Edith Wharton's novel by E. Lloyd Sheldon, under his new contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

With Bebe Daniels, Nita Naldi, Rubye de Remer, David Powell, Maurice Costello and Charles Gerrard in the cast, and an exceedingly costly investiture, this picture is claimed to be one of the most effective and elaborate society dramas to be filmed at the Paramount Eastern studio.

The company's studio was taxed to its capacity for this production. More than three-quarters of a million dollar's worth of properties, consisting of costly jewelry, expensive hangings, rare oil paintings and antique furnishings are said to have been used to give the picture the rich flavor called for in Mrs. Wharton's novel. The settings alone for the production cost more than $100,000 to erect on the studio floor, and for exteriors the company spent three weeks in Miami, Florida, filming yacht and beach scenes.

Paramount says that the picture will also be a veritable fashion show,

Weber & North Distribute "The Curse"

"The Curse," a six-reel romantic melodrama adapted from Chas. E. Blaney's successful and popular stage-play, is being distributed by L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North in the independent market. It is officially presented by Export & Import Film Co., Inc., who control the world rights to the feature, and who transferred the domestic rights to Weber & North.

"The Curse" has a strong cast. Harry Morey is the male lead. George Fawcett is the villain; Edmund Breese takes the part of the stern father; Marquerite Clayton is the heroine and Miriam Batista, leading juvenile actress, plays the child part in "The Curse."

Weber & North have completed the press-sheet on "The Curse," which contains practical suggestions and high-powered advertising and exploitation material on the feature.

Tacoma Kiddies Parade "Dr. Jack" Hats

When Harold Lloyd and Mildred Davis had invited 1,000 Tacoma, Wash., kiddies to attend a performance of "Dr. Jack" at the Rialto theater, the management of that house got busy with a demonstration of real livewire showmanship.

The boy and girl guests of the hero and heroine of the picture were advised that a Pathe's Exploitation Department "Dr. Jack" top hat would sufficiently identify them, and that there was not the slightest objection to their wearing the same in a preliminary parade through the principal streets of the city.

As a consequence, the theatre's supply of "Dr. Jack" hats was completely exhausted, and the parade was witnessed by everybody in Tacoma except the bed-ridden and a few hard-boiled cynics.

Titles Taken From Old Time Songs in Vogue

There is a great vogue on now for pictures with titles taken from famous songs—"Mighty Lak a Rose," "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" "Old Kentucky Home" and now comes Producers Security with two features adapted from songs the most popular of their day: "Just a Song at Twilight," starring Richard Barthelmess, and "The Love Nest" starring Richard Travers and Jean Scott.

Francis Ford Serial Title Selected

Arrow Film Corporation announces that they have decided upon a title for the new Francis Ford serial featuring Peggy O'Day and Jack Perrin. It will be called "The Fighting Skipper" and will be released in fifteen episodes.

Already four territories have been sold. De Luxe Film Company of Philadelphia have contracted for "The Fighting Skipper" for Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware. Arthur C. Bromberg, president of Progress Pictures Company, Inc., has signed for the three big Southern territories—North and South Carolina going to Progress Pictures of Charlotte; Georgia, Florida and Alabama going to Progress Pictures of Atlanta and Louisiana and Mississippi to Progress Pictures of New Orleans.

Raymaker Gets New Contract from Stern

Herman Raymaker, whose contract had terminated with Century, received a new one from Julius Stern on his return to the coast and will direct Brownie's next picture.

Raymaker, who recently completed "The Flower Girl" and "Five After One," Baby Peggy's most recent productions which have not been released yet, will work on a story written by Audrey Ford, a well known Canadian authoress, which was recently purchased along with many others.

Jack Minz, a well known gag man, will be Raymaker's assistant. The cast will be composed of Eddie Barry, Joe Moore and Lois Boyd.

Mermaid is Selected to Augment Opening

"High Power," a two-reel Educational-Mermaid Comedy, featuring Lige Conley, has been chosen by Al Lichtman as the comedy subject to accompany the showing of "Poor Men's Wives," at the Criterion Theatre, New York.

Mr. Lichtman has leased the Criterion for a period of two weeks beginning January 28th for the premier showing of his feature, and has invited all exhibitors of the New York and Northern New Jersey territory to witness the showing.

Marion Davies Talks To Radio Fans

Marion Davies gave a talk over the radio Saturday night on "How to Make Up For the Movies." The fair star of Cosmopolitan Productions told how to apply powder or grease paint to achieve just the right effect for the camera. The message was picked up all over the country. It was broadcasted from Station W E A F, 24 Walker street, New York, which is one of the largest and most powerful in the country.

"Poor Men's Wives" Premiere

Preferred Pictures Production Well Received by Reviewers at Criterion

"POOR MEN'S WIVES," the Preferred Pictures production released by Al Lichtman, opened at the Criterion theatre, New York, on Sunday, January 28th. The reception accorded the Lichtman picture on its Broadway opening is reflected in the following opinions of the New York press critics:

Robert E. Sherwood in The Herald—"It is a picture in which women play the heroic roles and which therefore will make its greatest appeal to the ladies. The story is uncomplicated, obvious and direct. Gasnier directed the picture and handled it well."

J. O. Spearing in The Times—"The performance of Barbara La Marr as the Poor Man's Wife rings true."

Don Allen in The Evening World—"Poor Men's Wives," a Preferred Picture, looked to be just that yesterday, for thousands seemed to prefer it and jammed the Criterion for the evening showing. It is the latest directorial bit for Al Lichtman and reflects great credit on those concerned."

Evening Sun—"There are several highly dramatic situations and the picture is quite likely to appeal to all those who wish they were millionaires."

Evening Telegram—"That love and poverty, if properly applied, will triumph over poverty and riches, was never presented more forcibly to the public by way of the cinema than through "Poor Men's Wives," with Miss Barbara La Marr playing the leading role. It is a picture you cannot afford to miss."

Leo Pollock in the Evening Journal—"The feeling is that Gasnier has done an eminently fine job. The result is a creation that fans will richly relish. Barbara La Marr, for whom this scribe confesses a weakness, is the central character."

Harriete Underhill in The Tribune—"Barbara La Marr proves that she really can act. David Butler is convincing as Jim Maberne, the poor man who takes a wife. Richard Tucker is exceptionally good as the bad husband."

P. W. Gallico in The Daily News—"Mr. Gasnier's best work is done in the courtship of Jim and Laura. The scene on the roller coaster is delightful, the sensations registered are perfect."

Goldwyn Corraling Women Stars

Blanche Sweet, Corinne Griffith, and Marie Prevost Among Newly Signed

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION has been busy recently acquiring the services of several feminine motion picture stars to play the leading roles in forthcoming productions. Four women who have starred in productions by other concerns have been signed by Goldwyn within two or three weeks.

Blanche Sweet has been engaged to play the role of Tess in Marshall Neilan's production of "Tess of the D'Urberville's," adapted from Thomas Hardy's classic novel of that title. Miss Sweet has starred in many productions and has a big following.

Corinne Griffith will portray for Goldwyn the leading role in Elinor Glyn's "Six Days." Miss Griffith has starred in many of Vitagraph's most ambitious productions and is considered especially suitable for the lead in Miss Glyn's story. The picture will soon go into production.

Marie Prevost, famous as the most beautiful of the Mack Sennett bathing beauties, and more recently a Universal star, is under contract to play the leading role in the picture which Clarence G. Badger will produce from the sensational new mystery play by Edward E. Rose, "Red Lights."

Bessie Love, another well known film star, has been engaged for an important part in Marshall Neilan's second Goldwyn production, a story emanating from his own fertile imagination, "The Eternal Three." Claire Windsor, long a Goldwyn leading woman, has the principal feminine rôle in this production, however.

Gets Color For Exploitation

Hodkinson Promotion Chief Makes Special Trip to Whaling Grounds

IN order to acquaint himself with the atmosphere surrounding the subject of whaling and to acquire first-hand knowledge that may be used in the exploitation of the Hodkinson special production, "Down to the Sea in Ships," Harry MacDonald, chief of the sales promotion department of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, returned last week from an extensive trip to New Bedford, Mass., where the whaling industry still survives and which Elmer Clifton selected as the location for the filming of his production of the whaling industry.

Mr. MacDonald stated that he visited all of the places mentioned in the photoplay such as the Neponahansett Meeting House, the Whalemen's Bethel, the waterfront and the "Charles W. Morgan," the oldest whaling vessel afloat today.

He returned with quite an assortment of curios and things appertaining to the whaling industry which will be used extensively in the exploitation of this production.

Baby Peggy Scores in "Peg O' the Movies"

Baby Peggy, four year old star of Century Comedies, scored a triumph in the first release of her six new pictures at the Rivoli theatre, New York, insofar as critics who do not make a habit of mentioning the two reeler on the program, gave praise to the clever little girl.

Among Quinn Martin's remarks in the New York World were, "'Baby Peggy' is a wonderful little girl and a perfectly marvelous actress" and referred to the youthful star as "that sweet little lady of the films, 'Baby Peggy'—everybody ought to see her."

The Evening Mail critic said: "'Baby Peggy' appears in one of the cleverest comedies yet made for her." The Evening Telegram said: "In 'Peg o' the Movies' 'Baby Peggy' is the infant star who has as much fun as the audience."

Fox Ready With Clyde Cook in "The Artist"

"The Artist," the two-reel special comedy starring the versatile Clyde Cook, will be released February 4th, according to Fox Film Corporation.

The comedy is said to be one of the finest bits of screened humor in which the Australian fun-maker has appeared. In the role of a Parisian garret artist, Clyde Cook rambles through a long series of comic scenes in the painters' studios winding up by destroying art ware and sculpture in a most unique and laugh provoking manner.

The comedy is replete with odd and novel gags and affords the clever comedian an ideal vehicle. It was directed by Slim Summerville.

Editor Approves "One Exciting Night"

"The picture now at your playhouse—'One Exciting Night'—is a wonder," wrote Nelson M. Shipp, of the editorial department of the Macon Daily Telegraph when D. W. Griffith's mystery picture, a United Artists release, was being shown at J. A. Flournoy's Criterion theatre.

"I saw 'Broken Blossoms'; and I saw it again," went on Mr. Shipp in a letter to Mr. Flournoy, "and this later creation by Mr. Griffith is better than 'Broken Blossoms.' The same fine art; the unsurpassed gentleness and delicacy are there—gentleness of action and delicacy of thought in the general sweep of the picture. It is the best thing in humor and the most striking in mystery I have ever witnessed on the screen. Something distinctly new for the screen—even for the pioneer Griffith. It deserves what it has received—a good attendance."

"The Wise Cracker" Fox, For Release Feb. 4th

"The Wise Cracker," a new Sunshine Comedy, will be released by Fox Film Corporation on February 4th.

This latest Sunshine two-reeler presents Si Jenks in many amusing situations. Jenks won considerable praise for his excellent portrayal of the country hick in "The Village Blacksmith," a recently released Fox special.

INCANDESCENT LAMP PROJECTION

Incandescent Lamp Projection Is Now Perfected

Claims Eight Out of Ten Theatres Can Install New Flickerless Light

AFTER years of experimental and research work, incandescent lamp projection, it is claimed, has at last reached a stage of relative perfection, for it is now adaptable to thousands of motion picture theatres and is rapidly becoming universally popular throughout this country. A great amount of interest is being shown by managers and owners in investigating the possibilities of securing good economical projection through the use of Mazda lamps. Many claims are put forth for this new mode of projection, special emphasis being laid on the fact that it actually cuts current consumption and projection costs in a very material degree along with the assertion that the actual projection and quality of light shows an improvement over other modes of projection. It is claimed by the manufacturers of incandescent lamps who substantiate their statements through actual tests in theatres of all sizes that in many cases projection costs are cut as much as 50 per cent and that there is also a decided reduction in condenser breakage, etc., which, when everything is taken into account, soon sums up to the total cost of the new incandescent lamp projection equipment.

Advancement with Times

The incandescent lamp manufacturers feel that this new mode of projection marks an advancement in motion pictures which is in keeping with the other great steps of our time and put forth this idea in the following:

"With the creation and production of motion picture plays at their present high standards, under the able leadership of men like Will Hays; with the marvelous lighting and scenic effects that are parts of our modern days' pictures; with the wonderful skill in developing and printing films in modern laboratories, and with the practical perfection of projecting mechanism, we have today a very high stage of the art of making and producing motion pictures.

Vital Interest to Exhibitors

THIS and following pages, totalling sixteen in number, are devoted to incandescent lamp projection (more familiarly known as Mazda projection).

Mazda lamps have been in use for projection purposes in motion picture theatres for a number of years. However, up to the present, there have been certain limitations that have prevented this type of projection from becoming universally popular.

The manufacturers of Mazda lamps for picture projection now claim that this mode of projection is, relatively speaking, perfected so that it may now be adopted by 80 per cent of the theatres in this country.

The Editor of this department has seen many Mazda installations in representative theatres where good projection results were obtained and advises exhibitors to look into this method of projection for their individual houses.

The editorial matter contained in this section has for the greater part been supplied by the lamp companies themselves. This text puts forth the various advantages claimed for incandescent lamp projection.

"But with all this skill, with all this labor, and with all the applications of master minds that have made possible the bringing and projecting of a perfect film, there has been, for the majority of theatres at least, one element lacking. There has not been heretofore a positive perfect light source, and after all, no matter how perfect the film, how smoothly running the machine, perfect pictures cannot be obtained unless the heart of the projector, which is the light source, is in keeping.

"The march of progress has seen the uncertain labor of hand work pass away. We no longer knit cloth by hand; it is done by huge machines. We no longer crank our automobiles by hand, nor do we crank our motion picture projectors by hand. These are relics of days long since past. We have automatic devices everywhere. Mechanisms that when once adjusted go on hour after hour and day after day, performing their functions without the slightest variation. But until the present development of the Mazda lamp, this could not be truthfully said about the heart of the machine—the light source.

"The development of modern incandescent lamps for motion picture projection has behind it as romantic a history as hundreds of other appliances. It represents not some happy thought; nor an overnight invention; and not the thought of one or two men under the investment of only a few hundred dollars. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in this development. Among the best of engineering brains have spent years of experimentation. For what appears in the final result as a bit of glass, a metal base and some tungsten wire does not begin to tell the story of the almost insurmountable difficulties that had to be overcome before a lamp could be developed which could give forth such an intense bright white light and would stand the terrific heat without changing shape.

Constant, Steady Light

"The light is steady, flickerless and constant. Exhibitors seeing it for the first time are surprised to learn that it works equally well on alternating and direct current and that surges of current or changes in line voltage do not materially affect its operation. The screen illumination when Mazda lamps are used is such that it does not strain the eyes of the audience. The projection produces pictures that are clearly defined and yet soft and pleasing."

Briefly, the advantages claimed for this new light source are: Decreased cost of operation; operates fully as well on alternating current as direct current; gives an absolute steady and constant light; eliminates fumes; requires only a few minutes to check adjustment each day and produces a high quality picture with a minimum amount of eye strain.

ENDORSED BY EXHIBITORS—
The National MAZDA Motion Picture Lamp

The 900-watt, 30-ampere National MAZDA Motion Picture Lamp. Recommended for use with the G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector in theatres having main floor seating capacities up to 1,000, or picture widths up to 16 feet, or throws not exceeding 120 feet. It gives better results than an alternating current arc, and is the equal of the direct current arc up to 50 amperes.

The 600-watt, 20-ampere lamp is similar in construction, and is recommended for very small theatres, churches, lodges, schools, etc.

Gentlemen:

It will be of interest to you to know that the G-E Incandescent Lamp Equipment installed in our theatre has given even greater satisfaction than we expected.

The current saving has been remarkable and means a great saving in our operating cost. Our bills formerly averaged from $210 to $215 per month. The MAZDA Lamps have cut this down so they now average from $105 to $110 per month. We can easily figure on a saving of at least $1200 per year. This saving may sound unusually big to you, but it is actually the amount saved under the conditions in this theatre.

This fact alone would lead us to unhesitatingly recommend the outfit to any progressive exhibitor. Combined with these advantages we are now getting a much better projection than we were ever able to get with the 45 to 50 ampere d. c. arc which we had previously. In fact we now have as perfect a picture as can be found in Columbus. Very truly yours, THE NORTHERN THEATRE
(Signed) I. E. Wright, Manager

IN 2,000 theatres, located throughout the entire country, theatre owners have tried the National MAZDA Motion Picture lamp in the new G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector—and now give it their enthuiastic endorsement. This lamp embodies these advantages—

1. Projects a picture of correct tones.
2. Has no annoying flicker—light source is constant.
3. Enables front-seat patrons to really enjoy the picture.
4. Gives off no obnoxious fumes or gas.
5. Requires no adjustment after initial setting.
6. Saves from one-third to two-thirds in current consumption.
7. Projects a better picture.
8. Has won the endorsement of more than 2000 exhibitor users.
9. Has a rated average life of 100 hours.
10. Sells for only $6.75 list.

The perfection of the National MAZDA Motion Picture Lamp and the G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector represent the result of years of laboratory development and theatre tests. The Projector consists of a lamp, a regulator, and a combined bracket and base. With this equipment the MAZDA Motion Picture Lamp can be adopted to any projection machine made in the United States.

You, Mr. Theatre Owner, want to increase your attendance and reduce your operating cost—to increase your net profits. The new National MAZDA Motion Picture lamp will enable you to do just that. Write today for more complete information and for recommendations for installations in your theatre.

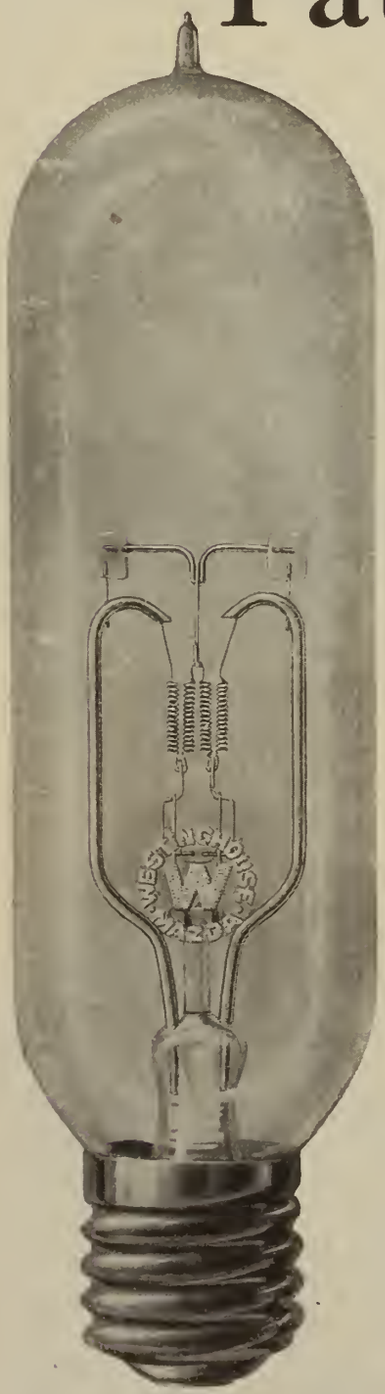
NATIONAL MAZDA LAMPS

Are You Giving Your Patrons the Best—



not only in the selection of your bookings, but also in the projection of them? Movie audiences are touchy—an uneven screen, a flickering light source—nothing escapes the sensitive eye of a movie fan.

Mazda Motion Picture Lamps demonstrate conclusively in actual service that better projection and more economy of operation result than with ordinary arc lamp equipment.

With alternating current the only electrical equipment required is a transformer, preferably of the automatic regulating type, designed to reduce the voltage to 28-32 volts at 30 amperes for the 900 watt lamp, or at 20 amperes for the 600 watt lamp. The actual saving in operation is 25% to 50% over the flickering and unsatisfactory alternating current arc lamp.

Excellent results with the 900 watt lamp are obtainable in theatres where the main floor seating capacity ranges up to 1000 and where the projection throw does not exceed 120 feet.

Westinghouse

Westinghouse MAZDA Motion Picture Lamps

Westinghouse Mazda Motion Picture Lamps maintain the same standard of perfection which characterizes other Westinghouse electrical apparatus, long familiar to motion picture exhibitors.

Recently these lamps have undergone changes in construction which give them increased ruggedness and which also augment the light output by twenty-five percent.

By the time they are ready for shipment they have undergone eighteen rigid inspections by experts in each stage of lamp construction.

Westinghouse Mazda Motion Picture Lamps are enclosed in corrugated wrappers and packed in single unit cartons. For the convenience of quantity purchasers they can be obtained in packages of six cartons each.

MAZDA LAMPS

Incandescent Lamp Projection Economical

Example of Actual Saving Permitted Through the Use of Mazda Lamps

THE claims for the economical operation of incandescent lamp projection are based on the fact that a 900-watt Mazda lamp is used as the light source. This lamp, if operated on direct current, is controlled through the use of a transformer which operates at a relatively high efficiency. The lamp itself operates at 30 amperes and approximately 30 volts, which rating is fulfilled from the special design transformers. In the case of direct current the lamp is operated either through resistances or through transformer and small motor generator.

Claims for Lamp

It is of interest to note the claims for this lamp through its economical advantages, and this feature is possibly best illustrated through some figures which were submitted by the lamp companies, which are as follows:

"The following facts and figures are given us by an exhibitor who figured out the relative cost of his present equipment and operating expenses as compared with incandescent lamp equipment and operating expenses. The figures have been checked over and have been found to be mathematically correct.

"'My theatre operates six hours a day. six days a week and 52 weeks a year.

"'We are using a 40 amp. arc supplied by a motor generator.

"'Multiplying six hours a day by six days a week and 52 weeks gave me a total of 1,872 hours a year.

"'Now my carbon cost I figured out to be about $.05 an hour, or $93.60 a year. Mazda lamps I figured would cost on an average of $.06 an hour, or a total of $112.32, so if I changed over it would cost me $18.72 more per year to buy lamps instead of carbons.

"'But, in checking back over my current bills and figuring out what proportion of these could be charged tothe arcs (and I checked this by finding the amperage and voltage of my arcs) I found I was paying a little over $.24 an hour for current. As I am paying $.08 a kilowatt hour for my current this is no small item. Multiplying this by the number of hours per year, 1,872, I found that it cost me $450.22 a year to operate my arcs.

"'With Mazda lamps it would cost me a little less than $.08 an hour to operate, so I multiplied this times 1,872 hours and found it would cost me $148.82 a year for current. This is a saving of $301.40 a year, or, if I subtract the extra cost of the lamp, a saving of $282.68 a year. I did not take into consideration the saving of condensors, carbon jars, lead wires. etc.

Method of Calculation

A general method which can be used for calculating the saving with incandescent lamps can be worked from the following simple formula:

"1. Find out the wattage you are using to operate the arc.

"2. If you run from a rheostat multiply the line voltage by the number of amperes you are using to operate the arc.

"3. If you are using a motor generator use the product of the number of volts delivered at the arc times the current of the arc plus about 20 per cent loss in the motor generator itself.

"With the Mazda lamp the total wattage will only be about 1,000 watts, which gives 900 watts to the lamp and allows 100 watts for losses."

Engineering Recommendations Gratis

THE Engineering Department of the National, Westinghouse and Edison Lamp Companies render a free service to exhibitors for recommendations and the advisability of installing incandescent lamp projection in their particular theatre. This service is not alone confined to the recommendations of the various products manufactured by these companies, but is also extended to cover such subjects as screens, theatre lighting, stage lighting, etc.

Very often complex problems confront an exhibitor, such as the screen best suited for his house or the advisability of installing colored lighting, and in such instances it will be found a decided advantage to have at hand a source from which engineering recommendations may be obtained.

These companies have maintained for years their engineering departments which have been devoted to experimentation and research, as well as recommendations in the endeavor to produce the most efficient and practical product in the lighting industry. Special bulletins prepared on incandescent lamp projection are published by the Westinghouse, National and Edison Lamp Companies, and in these bulletins will be found extremely valuable information which deals with the many other phases of theatre equipment.

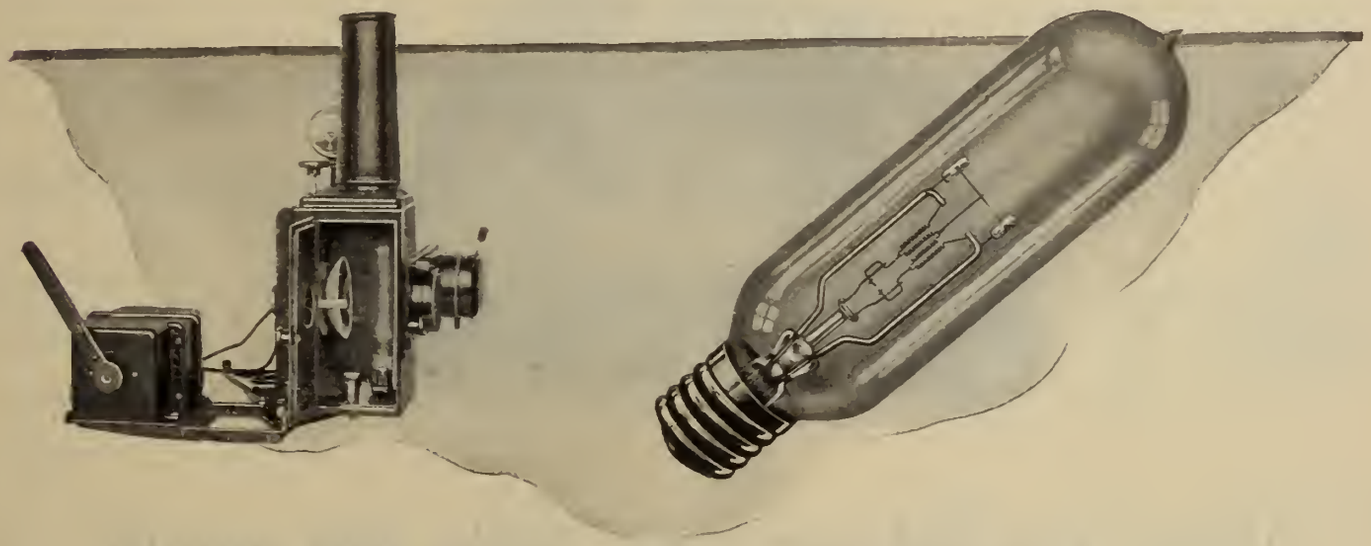
Mazda Lamps for motion picture projection mark another step forward in economy and ease of operation



Good Pictures on Alternating Current With the G-E Mazda Lamp Projector

The General Electric Company's Mazda Lamp Projector gives constant, even and steady illumination for motion pictures. It can be used successfully in theatres having a main floor seating capacity up to 1000, at a throw not exceeding 120 feet and with a picture not over 16 feet wide. It gives better results than an a. c. arc and is the equal of the d. c. arc up to 50 amperes.

It has other important advantages:

Adaptability: The G-E Mazda Lamp Projector can be attached to any projection machine made in the United States.

Economy: The 900-watt Mazda lamp and regulator consume but 1 kw. an hour as against 4 kw. an hour consumed by a 50-ampere d. c. arc. The cost of lamp renewals does not exceed the cost of carbons for the arc and there is a further saving in the absence of any carbon dust to injure the delicate moving parts of the projection machine.

Simplicity: The Mazda Lamp Projector requires no adjustments while operating.

Healthfulness: Being hermetically sealed the Mazda lamp gives off no fumes nor dust to contaminate the atmosphere of the projection room.

When you balance your books this month, —how much profit?

No one can continue in business indefinitely without making a profit. After you pay your rent, wages, upkeep, operating costs, film rentals, etc., and subtract this from your admissions, do you always find the figures pleasing—or not?

There are two ways to increase profits:—Either increase the number of your patrons or decrease operating costs. Fortunately, incandescent lamp projection makes both of these possible, especially if you install Edison MAZDA lamps and G. E. equipment—the ideal combination.

You get a real service with EDISON MAZDA LAMPS

The Edison Lamp Works maintains a staff of trained lamp engineers who know projection from A to Z. These engineers stand ready at all times to render you a free service; to advise you definitely as to whether or not incandescent lamp projection will prove profitable. In many cases they personally assist and inspect the installation of new equipment.

DISTRIBUTORS

If you do not have our new profitable proposition, get in touch with us at once.

Edison MAZDA lamps for motion projection are handled by live distributors all over the country. There is one near you who is ready to serve you at all times and who carries complete apparatus for incandescent lamp projection. If you do not know his name, or if your present distributor or supply house does not carry Edison MAZDA lamps, write to us and we will put you in touch with our distributor in your locality.

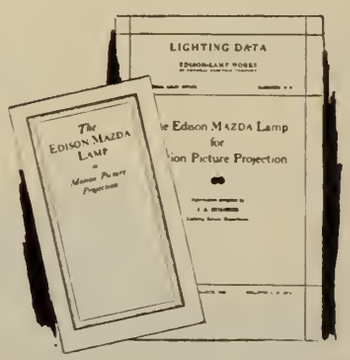
Here is the 900-watt Edison MAZDA lamp for projection. It comes in the familiar orange and blue carton, securely wrapped in a corrugated container, and then padded with several thicknesses of cotton. Edison MAZDA Lamps always arrive in perfect condition.



HOW TO USE THE TABLE

Suppose you have a motor generator, and you use 50 amperes, look opposite this figure in the column corresponding to the power rate you pay. If it is 8c a kw. hr., it costs you 40c an hr. for current and carbons. With Edison MAZDA lamps, the current and lamp cost, for the same results, is only 14c an hr.—a saving of 26c each hr. Multiply this by the number of hours open per year and get the total saving.

Mazda Lamps Not in Competition with High Power Arcs

MAZDA lamps for projection are not intended to compete with the very high-powered direct current arcs such as are used in the largest theatres of this country. The lamp manufacturers have been content with developing a lamp which would make good projection available for the majority of exhibitors, and this, according to recent demonstrations, under varying conditions and in different types of theatres has been accomplished.

When this equipment is properly installed and operated it will be found to give very good results, but it must be understood that it is not entirely foolproof, nor can an inexperienced projectionist get the best results. The projectionist who has had a great deal of experience in operating the arc will find that all his knowledge will stand him in good stead when operating incandescent lamp equipment. Just as the modern projection machine with its many different adjustments, regulations, devices, etc., requires a certain amount of technical knowledge on the part of the operator, so the Mazda lamp, due to its conservation of current consumption, requires an adequate knowledge of adjustment and operation to obtain the proper results.

To secure the best results with incandescent lamp projection it is necessary that all the adjustments which need to be made to get the greatest amount of light from the lamp be thoroughly understood. Intelligent operation is needed in using the Mazda lamp for projection purposes just the same as with the arc.

Incandescent Lamp Paojection Offers Exploitation

IT is pointed out by the lamp companies that incandescent lamp projection may be employed as an advertising feature for the motion picture theatre, for whenever the exhibitor installs a new equipment such as an organ, seats, or ventilating system, he of course takes advantage of the opportunity offered to advertise this fact as widely as possible.

Mazda projection, with the various claims for its advantages and also the fact that it is a relatively new development, can be employed in advertising the new feature for the theatre. Good projection has a decided drawing power in the same manner as does poor projection detract from the theatre's popularity. Relatively few exhibitors have taken advantage of the opportunity of advertising the fact that their house embodies first-rate projection.

The Mazda Lamp Companies put forth the contentions that all people know about Mazda lamps.

Simplex and General Electric Adaptors for Incandescent Lamp Projection

THERE are two common types of adaptors for incandescent lamp projection on the market today. One type is manufactured by the Precision Machine Company of New York City and the other by the General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y. The Simplex adaptor is illustrated in Fig. 1 and the G. E. adaptor in Fig. 2. These two types, while fundamentally the same, differ in some respects.

These adaptors consist, primarily, of a lamp house, especially designed and so constructed as to afford ample ventilation, thus removing the possibility of early lamp burnout, due to excessive heat.

For use on alternating current, either a hand regulated or an automatic transformer is provided to control the current flowing through the lamp. The current is registered by an ammeter furnished with the equipment. This is an important adjunct as the lamp should not be burned above 30 amperes.

The importance of correctly aligning the working parts of the incandescent lamp projector in such a manner that the centers of all the working elements are on one straight line cannot be overestimated.

This straight line is called the optic axis. When the working parts are so arranged on the optic axis the equipment is then operating at its maximum output and with best screen results. In spite of the fact that these adjustments must be accurate, they are quite easily made, once the relation of the various parts to each other are clearly understood.

The working elements referred to are, the light source, or filament of the lamp; the condenser; the mirror; the aperture, and the objective lens.

The light source consists essentially of four, helically coiled, sections of tungsten wire, arranged parallel to each other, like the teeth of a comb. These four sections form a square with one coil on each side, and the ends of the coils for the top and bottom.

The mirror adjustment for each adaptor is essentially the same. The purpose of the mirror is to add light to the screen and tends to produce an even illumination. The condenser forms an image of the filament coils at the aperture, and these coils are in turn projected on the screen by the objective lens. Thus, in order to smooth out the screen, the mirror is placed behind the lamp in order to form a secondary image at the aperture. This secondary image closes up the holes in the lamp image.

The lamp used with the adaptors is rated as a 900 watt, 30 ampere, 30 volt lamp in a T-20 bulb. The bulb designation means that it is a tubular bulb. This shape is used in order to make the black deposit, which is given off when an incandescent lamp burns, form at the top of the bulb where it will not absorb light which would otherwise be passed through the condenser. This blackening, however, is no indication that the lamp is failing. As a matter of fact, the lamp can, as a rule, be burned until the filament itself fails.

When operating the lamp full current should never be thrown on it at once, but should be gradually applied. This for the reason that the filament expands when heated, and if this expansion is caused to take place suddenly it is likely to make it buckle or warp. When the filament expands slowly the bridge-like arrangement at the bottom permits this to take place without distorting the filament. Care should also be exercised to prevent breaking the tips of the lamps as such breakage causes immediate failure due to air leaks.

When using the incandescent lamp projector it is highly advisable that a half-size (2¾") lens be used in place of the quarter-size (1⅞") lens, ordinarily used with the arc machines. This is so for the reason that the beam from the incandescent lamp projector is larger, or fatter, than the beam from an arc. Thus a larger diameter lens is needed to pick up the beam after it passes through the aperture, thus throwing more light to the screen.

Announcing——

New Cinephor Parabolic Condensing System for Mazda Lamp Projection.

This Cinephor Parabolic Condensing System increases illumination 50% by means of specially computed curves, and maintains an evenly illuminated field. Exhaustive tests have proved it to be the most efficient condensing system available; so it has been adopted by leading manufacturers of Mazda equipment.

Cinephor Projection Lenses are already well known. They possess all the elements necessary for the best results—flat field, sharp definition, strong contrasts between black and white, and brilliant illumination.

The Optically Corrected, Spherical Reflector is supplied with a special heat-resisting backing.

With the introduction of this new condenser, we are able to offer the only complete system for Mazda lamp projection now on the market.

Complete information and prices will be sent on request.

Dear Sirs:

We were surprised and delighted with the results of our projection which can only be due to your MINUSA MAZ-DA-LITE SCREEN.

Our distance from machine to your curtain is 81 feet, and in fact I was not expecting to get good results with an incandescent lamp at that distance, and was preparing to change for arc-lamp, but your screen has saved us that trouble.

In these countries, the electric current is very costly, therefore the Maz-da-lite equipment is to our advantage, and is easy to operate.

Choosing Correct Lamp for Motion Picture Theatre Signs

Important Points that Manager Must Consider to Secure Best Results

J. A. Shute, Illuminating Engineer

THE choice of lamp equipment for an electric sign determines to a great extent the effectiveness of the advertisement. Though the design has been given the most careful consideration, the lamping with wrong types, sizes or colors, will nullify the effectiveness of the display with the result that much attracting and selling power is lost and the expense of sign becomes unnecessarily high for its value.

What are the important points that the theatre manager must consider in choosing the right lamp for the theatre sign? These are listed below:

1. Reputable brand of lamp.
2. Durable types for sign lighting
3. Harmonious combinations.
   A. Size.
   B. Color.

If these points are given sufficient thought, and if good judgment is used the sign when lamped will not only carry its maximum load of advertising value, but will be operated and maintained at the lowest possible cost.

Reputable Brands of Lamps

There are on the market various grades of incandescent lamps as is the case with other commercial products. Since the theatre manager is interested in obtaining a certain effect in his electric advertising as economically as possible, his lamp purchases must be made from this standpoint. Thus brightness and uniform quality are essential; brightness to furnish attracting power and uniform quality to decrease renewal costs.

For these reasons the lamps selling for the lowest price may not be the most economical. Products of standard quality turn out to be the best in the long run. With lamps, as with other products, if the brand of a reputable manufacturer is purchased the greatest economy should result.

Durable Types for Sign Lighting

Even though the manager has escaped the pitfall of cheap, lowgrade lamps, all economy of sign operating can be lost by choosing types unsuited to the requirements at hand. Sign lamps are subjected to every possible climatic condition in their exposed locations; they are exposed to the shocks caused by activities in the building supporting the sign and are also subject to vibrations caused by wind pressure. It is therefore necessary that the sign lamp be durable in construction.

Experience has shown that the gas filled lamp gives the greater brilliancy, but also has shown that such a lamp is not best suited to exposed conditions. Such lamps, larger than the 100 watt size should not be used since they become so hot that moisture on the bulb will cause it to crack when lighted, almost immediately, causing a burnout. With the smaller sizes of this type less failures are experienced since the glass is not heated to so high a temperature, but it should be remembered that burn-outs with these smaller sizes of gas-filled lamps will be greater in wet weather than with vacuum lamps.

If the gas-filled type of lamp is used it is strongly recommended that the metal protecting cap (shown in Fig. 1 C and 1 D) now on the market be used, to lessen burn-outs. This cap is made of brass and fits the bulb closely to protect the hot glass from sudden chilling. It is readily attached and yet is not easily moved out of position or lost. Corrosion and the collection of dust and dirt, to decrease the lighting effects, are negligible and the cap is made as small as is consistent with adequate protection. When used in the average sign, it is not visible if the lamps are burning and can hardly be detected if they are not. Even with some such protection the manager must make allowance for a higher percentage of burnouts than if vacuum lamps are used. The caps will greatly lessen the injurious effects of a storm, but cannot be expected to give absolute protection. Practical experience has proven their worth to the extent that they should be used with all gas filled lamps (50, 75 and 100 watt sizes) in signs regardless whether these lamps are in clear or daylight bulbs.

The advent of the 25 and 50 watt concentrated filament vacuum lamps (shown in Fig. 1 B), especially adapted to the severe conditions to which a lamp is subjected in a sign, has greatly decreased the number of cases where gas filled lamps are desirable. The vacuum lamps of this type are very rugged and yet have the high end-on candlepower so desirable to produce the proper sign effects (See Fig. 1 A).

By spacing these lamps closer the same brilliancy with less failures and a much lower cost can be obtained as compared with an installation of gas filled lamps. (For proper lamp spacing see Fig. 1 E.) The manufacture of these lamps in daylight as well as clear glass bulbs makes them valuable assets to the sign lighting field, since the sign builder has found it possible to produce any desirable colored effect by coating the clear lamps with a color dip of the required shade. With the gas filled lamp such a process would be impossible since the extreme heat would immediately destroy the color.

The 5 and 10 watt sign lamps so long in general use are still employed in large numbers and are logical for most sign installations. Their brightness is low in comparison to the large lamps however (shown in Fig. 1 A). Makers of signs have desired lamps of approximately equal wattage which would produce more sparkle and brilliance. To meet this demand 10 and 15 watt concentrated filament vacuum lamps have been put on the market and have come into rather wide use. They also have a higher end-on candle power and are of rugged construction. The clear bulb lamps of these sizes are also used for obtaining color by the use of dips of the required shade.

With the above lamps available for use in electric signs, the theatre has very little use for other types or sizes. By proper combinations of the various sizes, any desired effect from the simplest message to the most elaborate picture sign can be lighted to obtain its maximum advertising value in the most economical manner.

Harmonious Combinations of Lamps

The position of any sign determines the size and type of lamps required in the same way that the location of a theatre determines the size of the sign to be used. To make a discussion of this point in the choice of lamps clearer, signs will be divided into five classes. The requirements of each class, in districts of high and low circulation and under conditions of high and low surrounding brightness, will be discussed separately.

THIS article on electric signs for motion picture theatres completes the series written by J. M. Shute, Illuminating Engineer.

There has never been presented for the exhibitor more expert and complete data on electrical advertising. As this mode of advertising offers excellent opportunities for exploitation of the theatre at a very reasonable investment, every exhibitor should make the most of his opportunity in this line.

In case further detailed information on this subject is required same will be gladly furnished by the author. Communications should be addressed in care of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Choosing Right Lamps for Signs

The five classes of signs are:

1. Large Exposed Lamp Signs over 75 feet from ground.
2. Exposed Lamp Signs from 25 to 75 feet from ground.
3. Exposed Lamp Signs less than 25 feet from ground.
4. Marquees.
5. Enclosed Lamp Signs.

Large Exposed Lamp Signs Over 75 Feet from Ground

The theatre requiring a sign of this type is one of the "White Way" located where competition is strong and surrounding signs are very bright. To compete properly in such a district of high circulation, the sign under consideration must be bright and produce novel lighting effects to draw attention.

The most important part of the message mus be lighted with as large as 75 watt gas filled lamps either in clear glass or daylight bulbs protected by metal caps. The nature of the display will determine whether a white brilliancy is necessary or not, in most cases the daylight bulb has greater attracting power. For less important parts of the message, or a portion of the decoration demanding high brightness, 50 watt lamps should be used. In most cases, there will be greater economy in employing the concentrated filament vacuum lamp instead of the gas filled lamp with the protecting cap. For the major portion of the decoration such as the border or picture, especially where color is necessary the 25 watt or even the 10 watt lamp is sufficiently large. Color is more impressive and adds greater charm to the picture when relatively low in brightness as compared to the lighting of the message. The lower brightness of this portion of the sign also has the tendency to make the display appear as one sign and not a series of small ones pushed together.

In the smaller city where circulation is lower the use of 50 watt lamps for the headline and 25 watt lamps for the less important parts of the message will furnish sufficient brilliancy to make the sign attract attention. For the decorations, the 10 watt lamp will be adequate to set off the text properly.

Exposed Lamp Signs from 25 to 75 Feet from the Ground.

The large majority of theatre signs belong to this group. There are not only the requirements of theatres in all sections of cities to be considered here, but also those of the theatres in smaller towns. Thus all conditions of surrounding illumination and advertising circulation must be met in recommending lamp equipment for this type of display.

For the brightest district having the highest circulation, the 50 watt gas filled lamp should be used for headlines, 25 watt lamps for the lesser features and 25 watt lamps either in diffusing bulbs or colored for the border. Where surrounding illumination is lower, 25 watt lamps are sufficiently large for the message and 10 watt lamps for other portions of the display. (See Fig. 2.)

In districts of lower circulation, the 25 watt lamp in clear or daylight bulbs will make the message sufficiently prominent and 10 or 15 watt lamps will adequately illuminate the border. Theatres in towns where illumination is lower will find a sign sufficiently attractive, if the message is lighted by 15 watt lamps in daylight bulbs and the border, by 10 watt lamps in color. (See Fig. 3.)

In lamping signs in this class, protection against glare becomes important and in the next classes even more so. The sign over 75 feet above the ground is far enough from the eye to prevent annoyance or discomfort from bright light sources of a high intensity. However, the nearer the sign under consideration is to the observer, the greater must be the protection from glare. Thus in the following classes, either smaller lamps or better methods of diffusion must be employed if the results are to be the best.

The underside of the marquee and the sign border and rays of the signs on the three faces, are lighted by 25 watt sign lamps in various colors, the words "State" by 25 watt daylight sign lamps the small letters by 10 watt lamps

MODJESKA THEATRE
AUGUSTA, GEORGIA

Buff unglazed Terra Cotta with polychrome details.

G. LLOYD PREACHER, Architect

"As VALUABLE as any ADVERTISEMENT that can be SECURED"

"I cannot recommend Terra Cotta too highly. It makes a substantial front as well as an attractive one. Its beauty is just as valuable as any advertisement that can be secured, for it denotes 'highest quality'."

SO writes the owner of the attractive motion-picture theatre shown above. He also states that Terra Cotta "cannot be equalled" as a building material for theatres, and that he positively would use "nothing else."

We are always proud to receive testimonials such as this one, for we know — and want other people to know—how effective Terra Cotta is for facing theatre fronts of all kinds. Terra Cotta will interpret any style of architecture, simple or elaborate. There is no limit to its variety of form or color. On the Modjeska Theatre it is a warm buff shade tinted here and there along the ornament with dashes of gay color. But the architect might have specified other colorings, and Terra Cotta would have interpreted them with equal beauty and permanence.

Terra Cotta never fades nor changes in color or texture. It never knows what time or weather has passed its way. Should dirt accumulate, it can easily be washed off with soap and water. The maintenance cost of Terra Cotta is negligible — the first cost agreeably moderate.

We shall be glad to tell you more about Terra Cotta, and why, with its three fundamental virtues of beauty, durability, and economy, it is specially suitable for building motion-picture theatres. Address National Terra Cotta Society, 19 West 44th Street, New York, N. Y.

The signs on the marquee are bordered by 10 watt sign lamps in color caps, which form a pleasing contrast to the letters lighter by 25 watt daylight sign lamps. The signs below the marquee are lighted by colored 10 watt sign lamps

Choosing Right Lamp for Signs

Exposed Lamp Signs Less Than 25 Feet From the Ground

For signs in this class lamps in clear glass bulbs larger than 25 watts should never be used even in the brightest districts. If greater brightness is desired the more important portions of the signs should be lighted by 50 watt diffusing bulb lamps and the remainder with 25 watt and 10 watt lamps, where either frosting or a colored coating is used to lessen the brilliancy. (See Fig. 4.)

In districts of lower circulation and less intense illumination, 10 watt clear lamps or 25 watt diffusing bulb lamps are sufficiently bright for headlines and 10 watt lamps with color coatings for decorations. Larger lamps will not only needlessly increase the advertising costs but will annoy passersby because of their high brightness and glare.

Marquees

The theatre marquee, relatively close to and in the direct line of vision, of the passersby, demands good diffusion along with its high brightness. It is an everyday occurrence to enter a motion picture theatre and be temporarily blinded due to having passed through an area of intense brilliancy and glare from hundreds of unshielded light sources. To make the theatre inviting, great care should be exercised that all possible sources of glare are eliminated.

For lighting the under surface of the marquee or signs located beneath this structure, lamps in clear glass bulbs should never be used. In size, even in the brightest surroundings, 25 watt lamps in diffusing or colored bulbs must be the upper limit, and the 10 watt lamps, in bulbs similarly finished, are preferably for most cases.

The signs on the outside of the marquee may be illuminated more brightly due to the greater distance from the eye. However, nothing larger than the 25 watt lamps in clear glass bulbs should be employed. If diffusing bulbs are used, 75 watt lamps may be employed in the extremely bright districts though for most cases the 50 watt lamp in diffusing bulb will be sufficiently large. (See Fig. 2.)

For bright portions of the decorations, in districts of high circulation 50 watt lamps in colored bulbs will give the best results in combination with 25 watt lamps for minor details. Theatres in districts less brightly illuminated will find that 25 watt and 10 watt lamps furnish adequate attracting powers for this portion of the marquee sign. (Shown in Figs. 3 and 4.)

Fig. 5—This theatre makes use of 9-inch enclosed lamp letters on its marquee sign. One 25 watt concentrated filament is placed behind the glass letter. The border is lighted by 10 watt sign lamps equipped with glass color caps

Color Effects

For colored lighting in any of the preceding classes of signs, care should be taken that the decoration appears as natural as possible. To obtain this result complementary colors must be used, as those which clash with each other detract from the appearance of the sign and greatly lessen its advertising value.

The methods of obtaining color are numerous. The purest and most durable colors are obtained from bulbs blown from colored glass, but unfortunately this method is the most expensive. Removable colored caps are extensivly used and give satisfactory results, not only as to effect but from the economic standpoint since they need not be discarded when the lamp burns out. This method has its disadvantages due to the fact that the caps are limited in size to the 10 watt lamp bulb and require the sign background to be painted in the same color to be most effective.

Theatre men find that color dips are most effective when all factors are considered. Although the coating is not permanent and the colors will fade materially, better effects result especially where the lamps are only in use a short period of time. If such a coating or spray can be developed which is lasting both in quality and color, the wide demand will soon pay the maker for his labor.

Enclosed Lamp Signs

The problem of lighting the enclosed lamp sign is entirely different from that met within the other classes discussed. Here the lamp is completely protected from the weather and the lamp size is therefore limited by the size of letter and desired illumination. It is essential that uniform lighting be produced to give the best results and to obtain the highest attracting power.

Lamp spacing is determined by the size of the letter and housing, and the interior finish. Too wide spacing gives spotty illumination and lamps placed too far inside make the outline indistinct. For the common six inch letter it is preferable to use two lamps for each letter while one lamp will suffice for letters which are smaller. For larger letters, the best method to determine the number of lamps required, is to divide the area of the rectangle in square inches enclosing the letter by 40 and use the nearest whole number.

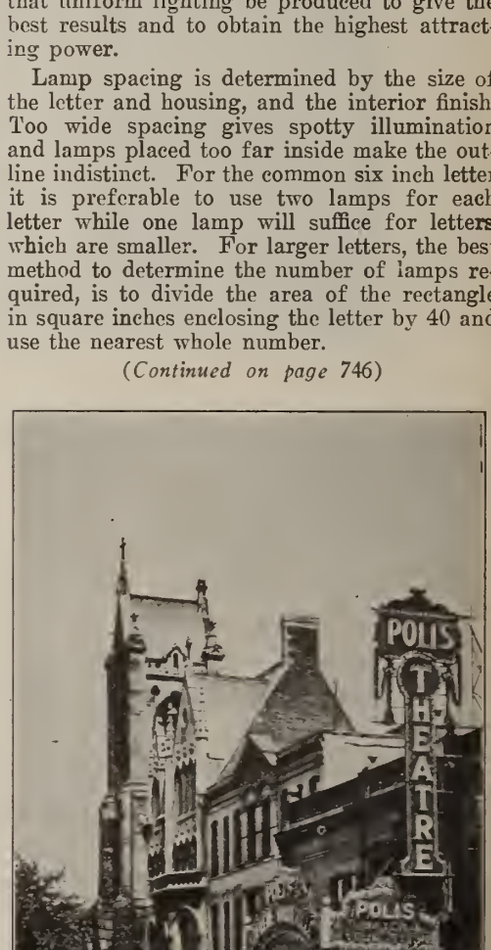

Fig. 4—The above Scranton theatre derives good advertising from these electric signs. The vertical sign is lighted by 25 watt daylight sign lamps in the letters, and 25 watt sign lamps in orange bulbs in the border. The large letters on the marquee are lighted by 15 watt sign lamps, the border and underside by 25 watt sign lamps in orange, and the small letters by 10 watt sign lamps

Fascination of Cinematography Makes Strong Universal Appeal

CHAPTER II

MOTION pictures cover a field that is almost universal, and the person who is skilled in taking pictures with the cinematograph camera, or interested in any of the pursuits intimately connected with its operation, practically has an unlimited field in which to exercise his creative energy.

Wanderlust, the desire to see strange countries and foreign peoples, is a longing which many possess, but few are able to staisfy. Many a man with a longing to travel and see the far stretches of the world has been able to pay all the expenses of his globe-trotting, and pocket a bonus, by taking along a motion-picture camera and bringing back to his less fortunate friends an interesting intimate reproduction of the sights and scenes which have held his interest during his journey.

The making of dramatic pictures covers a field of ever varying novelty that is the very antithesis of monotony.

There is scarcely a trade or profession in which cinematography has not important and direct relation to its improvement and expansion.

Pictures Shortened War

There is no doubt that by the aid of the motion picture, the duration of the great world war was very considerably shortened. In no other way could the tremendous amount of propaganda and information concerning the war situation have been made clear to the populace. The committee on public information, in conjunction with the government, sent out thousands upon thousands of feet of motion picture film, showing the activities of the government and of the army and navy. All of the allied war charities attribute their ability to raise tremendous sums for philanthropic purposes mainly to the agency of motion pictures. Thousands of men and women were engaged in making propaganda films of all kinds. The war loan committee, aided by the motion picture industry, made thousands of feet of film to stimulate the loan drives.

In educating and training our army and navy, the motion picture was of incalculable value. So remarkable have been the results achieved in the training of men by the use of motion pictures that it is freely and confidently predicted that tremendous and important as is the production of motion pictures for amusement and entertainment purposes, in a comparatively short time to come that use will be relegated to a position of insignificance in comparison with the tremendous production of motion pictures for educational and pedagogical purposes.

In the making of these pictures, thousands of craftsmen have yet to receive their training. The government of the United States, realizing the tremendous importance of motion pictures as an educational factor, is establishing a bureau in Washington for the production and distribution of educational pictures to be used by schools, churches, colleges, community organizations, and welfare units. The film manufacturers, who have hitherto been blind to the educational possibilities and the financial opportunities presented, are now eagerly seeking to make up for lost time and are hastening their preparations to supply the rapidly growing demand for this kind of picture.

"Educational" is a much abused word, which, in the past, generally meant to the exhibitor and show-man a scenic picture or an industrial picture of haphazard construction, which, more often than not, acted as a chaser to drive people from the theatre. Gradually producers of scenic, industrial and educational pictures came to realize that unless their product was made with the same care as, or even greater care than, that devoted to the production of dramatic pictures, they could not continue to exist. Today people of specialized training in nearly every profession are being employed in the studios and laboratories of producers of educational pictures in order to make them more interesting and instructive.

Thousands of manufacturers are using motion pictures to instruct and amuse their employes, and have found in them one of the most powerful antidotes for labor troubles and social unrest. In no other manner can the destructive conditions caused by labor troubles be so forcibly and favorably impressed upon the mind of the workers.

All of this is aside from the use of motion pictures for the advertisement and exploitation of the manufacturer's production. Here is another avenue for the disposal of the product. One of the greatest problems in connection with the demonstration of large and not easily portable pieces of machinery has been that the customer could not see these machines in operation. Today the manufacturer's salesman can carry a portable projection machine, less heavy and cumbersome than a well-packed suit-case, with a reel or reels of film, with which he can demonstrate upon the walls of his customer's office all of the possibilities of which the machine is capable, with far greater brevity, and often, with greater clarity than he could demonstrate the actual machine in operation. By means of close-up views, enlargements, and animated diagrams, he can show details and features that could not be demonstrated even by the operation of the machine itself.

For the production of pictures of this kind, thousands of camera and laboratory and technical workers must be trained. Authors of industrial scenarios, directors, who understand the intricacies of complicated machinery and of industrial and manufacturing processes; camera operators, who can photograph the things which the directors wish to show; title writers and film editors for placing the photographer's scenes in logical and interesting continuity; laboratory workers to turn out prints of the highest photographic quality, tinted and toned in attractive colors; all are needed for this rapidly growing industry.

The film reporter, gathering the topical news of the day with his motion picture camera, lives a strenuous but intensely interesting life. He must be ready at a moment's notice to take his grip and motion picture outfit and travel to any point on the globe to feed the insatiable appetite of the news-loving public for minute details of the latest event. In the larger cities the big theatres are slow indeed if they do not throw upon the screen on the same day that it happens any event of importance taking place within two or three hours' ride of the city.

Besides the news events, thousands of short subjects of more general interest have brought the Animated Screen Magazine into existence. In the same way that the animated newspaper satisfies the curiosity of the public for the latest news, the screen magazine treats all the latest topics of the day in much the same manner as the popular magazine. It has this advantage over the magazine, compelled to confine itself to cold type and still pictures; it can show operations, movements and animated diagrams in a few seconds' time that pages of print could not half so adequately explain.

Field for Amateur

It is obvious that this branch of the business must fall largely into the hands of the unattached or independent worker, who bears the same relation to the picture theatre as the outside correspondent to the newspaper. A firm engaged in supplying news films cannot hope to succeed without amateur assistance. No matter how carefully and widely it distributes its salaried photographers, numberless events of interest are constantly happening—shipwrecks, accidents, fires, sensational discoveries, movements of prominent persons, and the like, at places beyond the reach of the retained cinematographer. For film intelligence of these incidents the firm must rely upon the independent worker.

Curiously enough, in many cases the amateur not only executes his work better than his salaried rival, but often outclasses him in the very important respect that he is more enterprising. Acting on his own responsibility, he knows that by smartness alone can he make way against professionals. Only by being the first to seize the chance can he find a market for his wares. Thus when Bleriot crossed the English Channel in his aeroplane it was the camera of an amateur that caught the record of his flight for the picture theatres, although a corps of professionals were on the spot for the purpose. True, the successful film showed many defects. But defects matter little compared with the importance of getting the picture first or exclusively. Plenty of similar cases exist. The amateur has an excellent chance against the professional. His remuneration, too, is on a generous scale. The market is so wide and the competition so keen, especially in New York, the world's centre of the cinematographic industry, that the posses-

Extracts from Renowned Book

HEREWITH presented is the first of a series of extracts from the book, "Motion Picture Photography," which is a condensed course written by Carl Gregory and published by the New York Institute of Photography. In following issues there will be presented extracts from this book which will cover nearly the complete volume. These articles should be found extremely valuable to the readers of this section as they contain what is probably considered the best treatment of motion picture photography. The exclusive privilege of publishing this book has been granted the MOTION PICTURE NEWS by the New York Institute of Photography and complete copies of this volume may be secured from that institution.

About Lenses

There has been submitted to the Editor of this department a few suggestions relating to objective lenses, condensers, etc., which we feel will be of sufficient interest to the readers to publish.

"The question has often been raised of what would be the effect on the picture if the glasses in the objective lens were reversed, that is, putting the back cell in front and the front cell in the back? This will lengthen the E. F. of the projection lens and give a much smaller picture that cannot be accurately focused on account of the correct lens curvature being reversed. It is highly advisable that this procedure should never be tried.

"The combination of glass used in the front cell of a projection lens consists of a convex lens of crown glass and a concave lens of flint glass, which are cemented together and which, when properly ground and of the correct composition, that is the proportion of flint glass to that of crown glass, corrects the lens both for spherical and chromatic abberation.

Appearance of Blue Spot

"Let it be supposed that there appears a blue spot in a picture 9 x 12 feet with a throw of 120 feet and also two 7½ plano-convex condensers with an arc of 45 amperes. The procedure for removing this blue spot is as follows: As the diameter of the projection lens opening is not known and also it is unknown whether A. C. or D. C. current is used at the arc, the procedure cannot be definite. Generally speaking, however, by setting the arc from 3¼ to 3½ inches back from the condenser lens, having the condenser lenses spaced about 1-16 inch apart, thus by pulling back the lamp house the field will usually clear up, providing the lamp house was not previously placed too far back.

"Good light depends upon the correct condenser combination, plenty of amperage at the arc, correct size of carbons and correct set of carbons. Good results cannot be obtained unless a good grade of carbons and condensing lenses are used (it is also well to mention the fact that a good light on the screen cannot be obtained unless the optical system is correctly aligned, that is to say, the arc, center of the condensing lens, aperture and projection lens are on the same straight line, i.e., the optical axis.—Editor's note).

"The correct way to find the ground in the lamp house is to use a bell set. To test with the bell set put one terminal on the lamp frame with the carbons separated and the projection machine switch out. Then touch the other terminal to the carbon arms. If the bell rings on either end then the one causing the bell to ring is grounded. If it does not ring, the arc lamp or lamp house is okay. The best method to test is with the current on and the carbons separated, using a small test lamp. If the lamp lights when the terminals are touched to the upper arm and the lamp frame, then there is a ground on the lower arm, and vice versa.

New Series of Articles

AS WAS announced last week, the Editor of this department will start in next week's issue to run a series of articles on elementary electricity, optics, etc., which will take up the particular phases of these subjects which will be found of most use to the projection. Not every detail taken up in these articles will have a direct bearing on projection, but the material presented will give the fundamental information needed by men in this profession for an intelligent grasp of their work. Let it be again highly recommended that everyone devote time to each one of this series as it appears and fully understand the material therein presented as in many instances this will be necessary to understand articles which will follow.

Force Harmful

"Remember never to force or drive the sprocket on to the shaft. To do this will ruin both the shaft and the sprocket. After the sprocket is pushed on to the shaft sufficiently far, turn the sprocket so that the large diameter of the holes in the sprocket and those of the shaft are together. Gently drive the pins into the sprocket holes with sprocket laid upon a 'V' block and the unit is complete again. (In making delicate adjustments on projection machines, unless the projectionist is in a position to feel assured that he can secure excellent results, it is well to consult with the machine manufacturers themselves.—Editor's note.)

Picture Jump

"Due to excessive pull and undue strain upon the intermittent sprocket it may become loose on the shaft, which will cause a bad jump on the screen, although the star and cam may be perfectly locked without any discernible play between them. This usually can be traced to the fact that the pull exerted upon the sprocket has worn the edges of the taper pin holes away sufficiently to create a slight play between the sprocket and the pins which fasten same to the intermittent shaft. In this case, drive out old pins carefully with sprocket resting upon a 'V' block and with a proper-sized taper reamer ream the holes out very carefully (and only sufficiently to again bring the holes to their rounded proportion), redrive the pins, which will now set into the holes deeper, thus eliminating the end-play)."

Practical Projectionist for Inspector

The Motion Picture Operators' Union of Providence will ask the General Assembly for a bill legalizing the appointment of a practical operator as general film inspector. He will pass on applicants for operators, regulate the use of second and third run, and perform such other duties as will safeguard the theatre against possible fire hazard. Philips Sugarman has been elected president of the union and Thomas E. Shannon business agent.

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

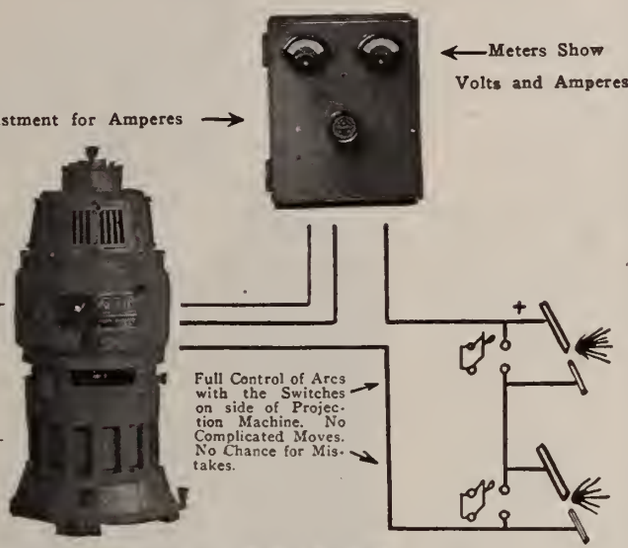
TransVerteR



All Arcs in Series Two or More
Any Two Simultaneously Same Amperes In Each Arc.

Gives a Perfect Dissolve

TransVerteR (double arc type), furnishes two perfect arcs in series simultaneously. Each is of the same amperage and light value.

In striking the second arc the one showing is not disturbed in the slightest degree. This gives a perfect dissolve. No ballast is used as automatic voltage is provided.

The projectionist, by a slight turn of a convenient control handle, can instantly increase or decrease the amperage generated and furnished to the arc, thus obtaining the light best adapted for the film being shown.

sor of a unique film can dictate his own terms and secure returns often twenty times as great as the first cost of the film he has used.

Aside from the wide field of entertainment to which most of the products of the motion camera are devoted it is daily broadening its scope in the field of scientific investigation. Technical laboratories are daily finding new and diverse problems in the solution of which the cine camera plays an important role.

Scientific research has received a mighty and tremendous impetus in this country, through the conditions arising from the great world conflict. We are just beginning to realize how dependent we have been in allowing foreign brains to solve for us the great bulk of the more complex industrial processes and the awakening finds us determned and able to take and retain the leadership in this important task.

Efficiency means the elimination of waste—one of our greatest wastes is time waste; every excess movement wastes a precious interval of time; the cine camera has become a detective, sleuthing out the thieving excess motion which steals valuable time.

Improved Efficiency

Frank Galbraith, a noted efficiency engineer, has, by the use of motion pictures, succeeded in eliminating false and useless motions to such an extent that various factory operations have been speeded up so the output has been increased as much as three and four hundred per centum. Marvelous as it may seem, the worker was able to turn out this increased amount of work with much less fatigue than when he had done a less amount under the haphazard regime.

When the motion camera is used for time studies, a split-second clock is generally placed in the picture and photographed at the same time, thus giving an accurate record of the time interval between each frame or picture on the celluloid tape.

Percy Haughton, the Harvard football coach, has adopted the motion picture camera for revealing the faulty and unnecessary motions of players on the football field. Every fraction of a second gained on the athletic field is a big boost toward victory.

Corrects Muscular Action

A picture released about a year ago by one of the large companies excited much comment and illustrated how motion pictures may prove of great service in correcting faulty muscular action. The picture showed an athlete in various simple gymnastic feats such as walking, running, jumping and shot-putting, taken simultaneously with two cameras. One camera took the action at the ordinary rate of sixteen pictures per second, while the other camera made one hundred exposures to the second; the normal and the ultra-speed pictures were projected one after the other at the normal rate of projection, thus prolonging or amplifying the ultra film to nearly six times the duration of the normal motion. It was very weird and interesting; the ease and deliberation of the prolonged action gave time for the study of every movement and the play of every muscle. One could not help but marvel at the co-ordination of the work of the muscles. The figure of the athlete seemed like a diver immersed in crystal clear water, the buoyancy of which floated him through the graceful attitudes of his movemenhts.

As ordinarily shown, motion pictures are taken and projected at the rate of sixteen pictures per second, but for the scientific investigator the rate of speed may very from as high as 30,000 to the second in the study of high speed phenomena to as low as one exposure per hour or even one exposure per day, as used in studies in the change of structural materials, or the growth of a plant. All of these may be projected at normal speed for screen study or each frame may be subjected to individual scrutiny under the magnifying glass in special cases, as in seeking to eliminate lost motions in machine assembly, etc.

Reduced to normal projection speed, bullets swim across the screen like leisurely fish and bursting shells separate like a group of mosquito wrigglers. Many high speed processes, such as the flow of steam; air and gases; combustion and explosions; automobile engines; the action of governors; the synchronism of electric generators; the flow of water in turbines and water wheels; the action of steel and wood-working machinery; and machine tools, etc., may be photographed at high speed and slowed down in projection so that they may be studied with the greatest accuracy.

"Bill" Kunzmann Leaves for Coast

The editor of this department is in receipt of a letter from William C. Kunzmann, familiarly known as "Bill," of the National Carbon Company, who expresses his regret at being required to leave the east, but feels that the trip which he is now taking to the Coast will have its silver lining in that he expects to spend a few months with the "shining stars" in Hollywood. Undoubtedly Bill will have a bunch of wild and interesting tales to relate when he again hits the east coast.

Warner Bros. Equip Studios

Warner Brothers recently completed a deal involving a figure of upward of $40,000 with Rosenberg & Sons, Los Angeles, for a complete new electrical equipment for their coast studios, according to Harry M. Warner. The acquisition of four and a half acres of ground as additional property to the Warner studios necessitated the equipment. The total acreage now owned by the concern is nine and a half acres. On the ground will be built one of the finest and best equipped studios in the industry.

Under the direction of F. N. Murphy, chief electrical engineer for the Warner Brothers, Rosenberg & Sons are building a huge 150-kilowatt generator mounted on a nine-ton Hercules trailer, which will be used on location. This is said to be the largest portable power plant that has ever been constructed. The Warners also purchased a complete power house equipment, including switchboards, generators, motors and a transformer capable of 33,000 volts high tension.

Little Stories of

Successful Exhibitors No. 4

H. J. Schad

When Mr. and Mrs. Schad, the parents of H. J., planned his future, H. J. was all cut out for a corner druggist. Mr. Schad was born in Tamaqua, Pa. where he graduated from High School, later earning his degree of Doctor of Pharmacy in Philadelphia.

But in 1907 Schad the Druggist became Schad the Exhibitor and with the late C. L. Carr opened the Victor, a massive, big theatre with all of one hundred and forty-two (142) seats. Now, after a short 15 years, Mr. Schad is head of the Carr & Schad chain of seven of the most beautiful theatres in Pennsylvania. All seven are located in the city of Reading and their seating capacity range from 600 to 2,000 each.

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware just elected H. J. Schad president because, to use their own words, "Doc Schad is a square-shooter of broad vision, high ideals and lofty business principles and is a credit to the industry."

What has the 15 years' experience of Mr. Schad taught him about selling tickets? Here is Mr. Schad's answer:

"The use of GOLD SEAL ticket registers are absolutely essential to the proper handling of the ticket sales in all my theatres and I would not consider operating a house without one of these wonderful machines."

As stated, the size of lamp depends on available space and desired intensity. For theatres located in bright districts 75 watt gas filled lamps will furnish sufficient illumination while 25 watt lamps are adequate for districts of lower circulation. The use of daylight bulbs is strongly recommended, especially with letters of the white opal-glass type to prevent the yellow appearance and produce instead a glittering white letter. (See Fig. 5.)

Conclusion

Little has been said in these articles of new sensational devices in sign lighting, devices yet little used or untried in practice. Advice along such a line is futile since the possibilities are many. The future may bring huge signs which fade in and out in place of flashers, the use of running letters may be more widely employed or other original and novel lighting tricks may be used to further advance the advertising value to be gained from electric signs.

Managers of motion picture theatres, by careful judgment in selecting sign equipment and lamps, can be of great assistance in stimulating the sign industry to more distant goals than ever dreamed of. By only accepting the best, and ever increasing the demand for bigger features, the sign lighting field in the next ten years will be as far ahead of the present state of the art as it is today ahead of sign field ten years ago.

Erects $10,000 Glass Partition

Important improvements have been made in the Miles theatre, Scranton, which has just been rechristened the Capitol, by the owners, the M. E. Comerford Amusement Company. One of the most striking changes is the erection of a $10,000 plate glass partition dividing in half the large lobby of the theatre. Four rows of upholstered seats have been installed in the front of the balcony, which can be reserved in advance of performances. New screens and a new projection machine booth have been put in. Jack Jones is the house manager.—Berghaus.

Construction Resumed On Loew Project

The long delayed Loew theatre project at Eighth street and Washington avenue, St. Louis, is showing signs of life again. St. Louis contractors who submitted bids on the structure a year ago have been asked for new estimates. The new house would duplicate the Metropolitan theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., and would seat about 4,400. The cost has been estimated at $1,000,000. Marcus Loew is expected in St. Louis at the end of this week.—Barrett.

Studio and Player Brevities

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

At Universal City

Carl Laemmle arrived Friday.

Additional players selected for "The Hunchback" include Eva Gordon, Kate Lester, Harry Van Meter, Gladys Johnston and Nick de Ruiz.

Universal has purchased a story, "Help, Help," by Rupert Julian, for which a continuity is being written by Arthur Statter, to be supervised by Charles Kenyon. Screen rights have also been purchased to "The Way of the Strong" by Octavius Roy Cohen.

Laura LaPlante, who for two years has played leads in serials is to play opposite Hoot Gibson in "Katy Didd," written and to be directed by Edward Sedgwick.

Jack Conway will next direct "The Six Fifty" from the Kate McLaurn play, the scenario prepared by Doris Schroeder.

Carl Wilson is titling "Nobody's Bride," starring Herbert Rawlinson.

Here and There

Jess Robbins has engaged Barbara Bedford to play opposite Edward Horton in the next production, which as yet is not titled, although the cast is being assembled.

Caldwell Productions announce a story titled "Deacon of Hollywood," which will be filmed upon the completion of "Knighthood in Hollywood," now being made at the Fine Arts Studios.

John Ince and Joseph Birnberg are here to produce independent subjects.

Lloyd Ingraham, directing "Going Up" now being made at the Hollywood studios, has added Arthur Hull to the cast in support of Douglas MacLean.

Lambert Hillyer has made the last scenes for the Sacramento Pictures Corporation subject titled "Temporary Marriage," an all-star cast production.

Maurice Tourneur has made the last scenes for "The Isle of Lost Ships," and has engaged Walter Anthony to prepare titles. Both directors, Tourneur and Holubar, are trying to secure new stories.

Richard Jones (Sennett) this week began filming the first Phyllis Haver subject, "The Extra Girl." Ralph Graves plays opposite Anna Hernandez, in the mother character role.

B. P. Sculberg announces that James Corrigan has been replaced by Matt Gallagher in the cast for the Tom Forman production, "April Showers," which was started last week at the Schulberg studios. Kenneth Harlan and Colleen Moore head the players, who also include Myrtle Vane, Priscilla Bonner, Harriet Hammond and Tom McGuire. The story is by Hope Loring and her husband, Louis D. Lighten.

Victor Herman has just been signed to direct Constance Talmadge productions starting April 1. Mr. Herman's first picture for Miss Talmadge will be a story by John Emerson and Anita Loos, as yet unnamed. It will be a costume story dealing with the life of Napoleon, in which Constance is to have the role of a little milliner. Loos returned to New York this week from Hollywood.

Joseph M. Schenck has just purchased "Dulcy," the comedy by George Kaufman and Marc Connelly, as the next starring vehicle for Constance Talmadge. Sidney Franklin has been engaged to direct "Dulcy," and work will be started on this feature production early in February. The adaptation will be made by John Emerson and Anita Loos.

Gasnier has begun work on "Mothers-in-Law," a Preferred Pictures Production. Those who will appear are Gaston Glass, Edith Yorke, Joseph Swickard, Crawford Kent, and Vola Vale.

Irving Cummings will produce the screen version of "East Side, West Side," the well-known Broadway stage success, the screen rights to which Principal purchased two weeks ago. Production on this picture will be at the Principal studios in Hollywood.

"The Meanest Man in the World," with Bert Lytell and Eileen Percy, went into production at the Principal Pictures Corporation studios in Hollywood, late this week.

Edgar Lewis has finished "You Are Guilty," starring James Kirkwood and Doris Kenyon, and will begin within the next few days on "Oh, Ye Fools." Mr. Lewis wrote this story for the screen and will handle the megaphone.

Thomas H. Ince has made announcement that "Wives Who Fail," a feature drama, will be one of the first released on his fall production program. An all star cast will be directed by John Griffith Wray.

Actual shooting of "The Two Twins," Bull Montana's latest comedy for Metro release, has been completed and is now being cut and edited.

Phil Goldstone announces that Jack Natteford will do the continuity on his next special, entitled "David Crockett."

With the engagement of Dagmar Godowsky for the part of Mazie, the casting of the Selznick version of Robert Chambers' novel, "The Common Law," is complete.

Phil Rosen has severed his connection with Paramount and joined Phil Goldstone. His first production will be Richard Talmadge in "Honor Bound."

Christie Comedy Bits

Mack Swain has been added to the Jack White organization, and will appear in Educational-Mermaid Comedies under White's supervision. Billy Armstrong and Bobbie Dunn, also well known comedians, have also joined the Mermaid ranks.

Kathleen Clifford has been engaged by Al Christie and will have an important role in the next Educational-Christie Comedy to go into production.

F.B.O. Production Notes

Harry Carey returned last week from the Mojave, where he spent a week "shooting" desert scenes for his forthcoming attraction, "The Man from the Desert," adapted by Wyndham Gittens from Wyndham Martin's story of the same name. Carey is supported by Marguerite Clayton.

Chester Bennett will soon start production at the Film Booking Offices studios on "Divorce," a powerful domestic drama, starring Jane Novak. The story was written by Andrew Bennison.

On the Goldwyn Lot

Corinne Griffith has been engaged for the leading role in Elinor Glynn's "Six Days," continuity by Violet Clark. Production will begin early in February.

Victor Bateman has been added to Marshall Neilan's "The Eternal Three" cast.

Jean Hersholt will play in "McTeague."

Gerald Pring and Inez Gray are additional members of the Rupert Hughes "Souls for Sale" company.

The cast for "Red Lights," under the direction of Clarence Badger, includes Johnnie Walker, Alice Lake, Lionel Belmore, Frank Elliott, George Reed, Victory Bateman, Dagmar Godowsky, Raymond Griffith and William Worthington.

Claude Gillingwater, Alec Francis and Brindley Shaw will play title roles in "Three Wise Fools," under the direction of King Vidor.

Eric von Stroheim will start production on Frank Norris's "McTeague," the middle of February. He is still in San Francisco completing the continuity and getting locations.

Rupert Hughes has been meeting with some delay in the production of his "Souls for Sale," due to accidents to members of the cast. Frank Mayo, who has one of the leading masculine roles, is suffering from a bad attack of Klieg eyes. Mae Busch was struck by an automobile while crossing Hollywood Boulevard and is still confined to her home. Carmelita Geraghty, who was hurt while practising ballet steps for a cabaret scene in "Souls for Sale," has returned to the company.

With Paramount Units

The cast to support Walter Hiers and Jacqueline Logan in "Seventy-Five Cents an Hour," under the direction of Joseph Henabery, includes Ricardo Cortez, Farrel McDonald, Helen Dunbar, Robert Dudley, Guy Oliver, Clarence Burton, Cullen Tate.

George Fitzmaurice has begun filming "The Cheat," with Pola Negri, Jack Holt and Charles de Roche.

Victor Fleming is completing the Dorothy Dalton subject, "The Law of the Lawless," this week.

Sam Wood is taking the final scenes from Gloria Swanson's "Frodigal Daughters."

The subjects in the editing rooms are "The Covered Wagon," "Bella Donna," "Grumpy," "Tiger's Claw," "Racing Hearts," "Trail of the Lonesome Pine" and "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime."

Alice Brady and her company of Paramount players with Henry Kolker, director, and his technical staff have returned to New York from the frozen North, where they have been for a month filming snow scenes for "The Snow Bride," a French-Canadian story by Sonya LeVien and Julie Herne.

One of the first motion picture directors in this country has an acting part in Allan Dwan's production of "The Glimpses of the Moon," which is nearing completion at the Paramount Eastern studio. He is Charles Kent, who directed Vitagraph pictures for ten years.

Around Metro Studios

George Archainbaud has been engaged to direct Clara Kimball Young in "Cordelia, the Magnificent," which is at present being cast.

Ernest Luz, musical director of Loew, Incorporated and Metro, is spending a short time at the studio.

Upon the completion of "Within the Law," the Talmadge companies will again produce at United Studios, as conditions at Metro will then be extremely crowded.

Robert Z. Leonard is beginning "The French Doll," starring Mae Murray. The principals are Rod LaRocque, Willard Louis, Orville Caldwell, Rose Dione, Barnard Randall and Paul Cazeneuve. The continuity was prepared by Frances Marion, and production will be at Goldwyn studio.

The advance guard of the Rex Ingram organization which will produce "Scaramouche," the director's next Metro picture, have arrived in Hollywood. They are John F. Seitz, who has photographed the Rex Ingram productions; and Tom Storey, laboratory expert. The director himself is still in New York, engaged in the final work of editing "Where the Pavement Ends."

Frank Beresford has started work on the scenario of "Cordelia the Magnificent," which will be Clara Kimball Young's next photoplay to be produced by Harry Garson. Metro will release it.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"No Wedding Bells"
(Semon-Vitagraph—Two Reels)

AN introductory title would indicate that a drama of the underworld is about to follow. On the contrary, a comedy of "under the side-walk" immediately gets under way and in a lavish interior depicting a palatial "hang out" for Chinamen. There, it is announced, unsuspecting intruders often become victims of sudden accidents.

The leader of the band has discovered a potion he guarantees will render any young, vivacious and beautiful young lady unconscious and requests a victim upon whom to experiment. One "Chink" who states he is a butler also alleges the daughter of his employer to be a worthy subject, so he agrees to kidnap and bring the girl to the rendezvous. The girl is splendidly portrayed by Lucille Carlyle.

Her "boy friend" (Larry Semon) calls at the home. When told to secure papa's consent to their engagement, he enters the room where her father and a friend are playing chess. "Papa" is about to win his first game, after trying many years, when the intruder upsets the board, and general chaos follows. This offers opportunity for the abduction.

The rest of the comedy, humorous situations, etc., hinge upon the comedian's efforts to rescue the girl. The action is lively and spirited along with splendid sub-titles. The cast is adequate, the direction and photography above the average, and while more or less of slap-stick variety, Semon steps on the safe side whenever a situation approaches vulgarity, resulting in comical screen entertainment of merit.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Dog Sense"
(Cameo-Educational—One Reel)

THE featured canine player in this comedy is an animal blessed with unusual intelligence, including a knowledge of what to do when a runaway infant escapes from an orphan asylum; how to start and finish an argument with cats and how to mount the back of a saddle horse. In the latter instance the dog starts on a run from a fair distance, fails to make it, returns and tries from a little greater distance and so on until the last run from afar develops sufficient speed to enable him to make the jump successfully.

The suggestion of plot concerns a runaway child, who wanders into the home of a young man engaged in trying to interest a girl in becoming his wife. The girl mistakes the child's identity. All ends well, but during the reel some novel situations are introduced, illustrating "dog sense" to an almost unbelievable degree. A reel that is sure to please all ages, sizes and kinds of patrons, especially appealing to lovers of animals. Splendid direction by Fred Hibbard deserves mention.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Hunting Grounds of Hiawatha"
(Urban Classics—Vitagraph—One Reel)

A SPLENDID scenic with a thread of a story about an Indian hunter.

It introduces beauties of the far west, showing the hunter after game, and is a refreshing screen travel over the gorgeous country besides the "sky blue waters." Particularly well adapted for the entertainment of students and lovers of nature studies.—LILLIAN GALE.

A scene in the Hal Roach comedy "Mr. Hyppo," with Paul Parrott in the title role.

"Pest of the Storm Country"
(Educational—Two Reels)

WHILE not a great deal like the feature "Tess of the Storm Country," insofar as story is concerned, this is a travesty upon the Mary Pickford starring vehicle, with Louise Fazenda in the role of the girl who lives on the rockbound coast, her associates rough fishermen and farmyard annimals.

There is the persistent rain, such as occurs in the feature, the storm, etc., but the relation of the two stories is not close enough to identify the latter as a travesty upon the feature, except for the title and the downpour of rain.

Louise Fazenda delivers a clever burlesque upon Mary Pickford, and scores as a comedienne, while the balance of the cast is composed of splendid types for satire. There is a good deal of fun, much of which is aided by the use of humorous sub-titles.

Most of the action takes place in water soaked interiors, where the beds float in the water and turn over with the occupants.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Fatal Photo"
(Burr All-Star-Hodkinson—Two Reels)

THIS comedy stands midway between polite comedy and slapstick, having elements of both. A thread of story runs throughout, around which the various gags are planted.

Mary Anderson, Raymond McKee and Charles Murray handle the majority of these situations, in typical fashion, Murray supplying the bulk of the comedy. The story concerns a photograph of himself, taken in his bachelor days with a bathing girl siren, which is rather compromising, and the action centers about Murray's efforts to regain this photo.

McKee, as the youthful suitor of Murray's daughter, played by Miss Anderson, gains possession of the photo, and holds it over the father's head. There is a restaurant sequence, with a pair of trained oysters, that should be good for a generous number of laughs. The remainder of the material is rather conventional though it probably will be found satisfactory by the average audience.—L. C. MOEN.

"Dwellers of the Deep"
(Urban Classics—Vitagraph—One Reel)

A DESCRIPTION of odd and varied species of fish, illustrating their characteristics and habits, markings and haunts. A splendid offering for educational purposes or to entertainingly "pad" a program. Very pleasing in arrangement and unusual in photographic value.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Oregon Trail"
(Chapter Play in 18 Chapters—Universal—Two Reels Each)

OPENING with a three-reel episode, made necessary by the number of facts which must be "planted," "The Oregon Trail" starts off as a worthy specimen of the historical chapter plays being put out by Universal. Directed by Edward Laemmle, with Art Acord as the star, the first episode is well crammed with action, interspersed with historical material that combines education and entertainment in just about the right proportions.

Acord appears in a typical pioneer characterization, which gives him ample opportunity for riding, shooting, fighting and other vigorous action, and Louise Lorraine is an attractive leading woman.

There is a really noteworthy Indian dance in this episode, which is genuinely realistic and authentic.

Among the historical material introduced is the decision by Washington and Jefferson to purchase the Louisiana territory, Napoleon selling it, Eli Whitney at work on the cotton gin, Lewis and Clark starting on their famous expedition and Oregon Indians seeking the White Man's Bible at St. Louis.

The introduction of this educational material, however, does not interfere with the presentation of a liberal quantity of thrills, action and romance. This serial looks an if it had excellent possibilities from every angle—L. C. MOEN.

"Mud and Sand"
(Metro—Two Reels)

EVERY now and then there comes to the screen a young man who "carries on" idiotically, who appears—casually observed—a mere clowning fool, but who, more thoughtfully considered, shows himself that rarest of all artists, a true buffon, gifted with the power of bringing laughter which is strangely close to tears. Such a man is Charlie Chaplin; and such a man Stan Laurel is by way of becoming fast.

In "Mud and Sand," Laurel as Don Rudolph Vaselino is hardly short of exquisite. His perfect parody of that other actor in that other play of which this production is a burlesque is almost grotesquely near to the original. Laurel shows his mastery of the art of clowning; and shows, too, how near to laughter may be tears.

"Mud and Sand" is one of the great short comedies. Even the most ardent admirer of that other actor will find it delightful.—STUART GIBSON.

"A Small-Town Derby"
(Universal—Two Reels)

THIS is a comedy of the more or less usual pattern, rather distinguished, however, by the "acting" of Maude, a very small and mild-looking mule. She plays really the most important part in the film, and her work is productive of plenty of hearty laughter. Toward the end of the film there is considerable hubbub about a race, and Maude is entered as a literal dark horse and forlorn hope. She wins after a series of scenes of what is undoubtedly the most remarkable horse-race ever filmed. "A Small Town Derby" ought to please spectators of all ages.—STUART GIBSON.

THE FIRST YEAR

A YEAR ago this month a dream came true. The founders of STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES saw in reality the plant they had long envisioned. Through years in the motion picture industry these men had worked under the unavoidable handicaps to be found in any growing business. But they always looked forward to the time when they would have every possible facility for helping makers of motion pictures achieve the fullest expression of their artistry on the screen. A desire for greater helpfulness inspired the building of STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES.

THE plant of which these men had dreamed was completed twelve months ago. It remained for them to make the most of its unequaled facilities. Their measure of success may be found in the pictures that have gone through the plant from camera to screen. Many of the year's biggest and best productions are in this list. The growing confidence of the entire industry in this organization and the increasing number of the West's foremost producers who recognize the superiority of STANDARD daily service and of STANDARD PRINTS are indications of the further success that is to come.

Absolutely The Only New Thing In Motion Pictures This Year!

From exhibitors—from audiences—from critics—from picture experts—comes this comment, again and again, after viewing that great photoplay sensation

D. W. Griffith's "One Exciting Night"

Here is a picture that has EVERYTHING any exhibitor can ask.

It satisfies box-office demands and also pleases immensely any type of audience.

In all sections of the country it has set new attendance records in theatre after theatre.

It is that "something new" in pictures that exhibitors everywhere are seeking.

Miss Louella Parsons Says In The Morning Telegraph

"Here is something entirely new—the first picture of its kind I have ever seen.

"D. W. Griffith has never made such an enjoyable picture.

"Never in the history of pictures has there been anything so full of thrills, suspense and everything that makes for one hundred per cent. interest."

More Money From Philadephia and a Record in Cleveland!

D. W. Griffith's "One Exciting Night," his latest picture sensation, did such a smashing box-office business at the Stanton Theatre, Philadelphia, that it brought this letter from Frank W. Buhler, managing director, to Albert Grey, general manager of the Griffith organization:—

"Enclosed find check to cover additional rental on "One Exciting Night."

"We have extended the engagement of this picture owing to its great popularity in Philadelphia.

"'One Exciting Night' is a picture that appeals to all classes. It has an element of comedy, an element of drama and keeps the spectator interested every minute of the showing.

Big Box-Office Returns and a New Record in Cleveland!

Breaking all house records at popular prices at the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, Mr. Griffith's "One Exciting Night" played to $18,113.80 the first week of the engagement. The second week brought $13,679.89.

As a result of the splendid box-office and audience value of the picture, N. M. Schenck, of the Loew organization, sent the following letter to Albert Grey:—

"Thought you might like to know that 'One Exciting Night,' which completed a two weeks' run at the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland, has done remarkable business.

"The audiences received it enthusiastically, and I feel sure that it will go equally well anywhere."

The Strand Theatre of New York
For Two Weeks Broke the Record
Made With "Way Down East" and
Also With "Orphans of the Storm"

And REMEMBER! "Way Down East" in stage and screen theatres, has played to twice as much business as any other two pictures ever made!

And this record was made during the most unfavorable weather in years.

$15,000 greater than "Way Down East"!

$8,000 greater than "Orphans of the Storm"!

Read What Joseph Plunkett Says

"Dear Mr. Abrams—I am glad to write you that D. W. Griffith's 'ONE EXCITING NIGHT' did bigger business for us than either 'Way Down East' or 'Orphans of the Storm.' We were compelled to stop the sale of seats many times during the engagement of the picture. It certainly is a great audience attraction, which was plainly shown by the way our audiences received it."

Now Read What "Variety" Had to Say

"Strand—'ONE EXCITING NIGHT!' (Griffith-United Artists.) Seats 2,900. Scale; 30-50-85. Was held over for second week and broke the house record on the business done by both 'Way Down East' and 'Orphans of the Storm,' previous Griffith's that played two weeks at the house. Got close to $29,000 on the week."

"Variety's" report for the first week at the Strand stated that "ONE EXCITING NIGHT" grossed "better than $31,000," adding that it was being held over.

"Suzanna" Ranks as The One Outstanding Film of the Month

Under the title "Picture of the Month" in the current issue of Screenland Mack Sennett's new comedy drama, "Suzanna," is given the place of honor.

"This page is dedicated to the man and woman for whom the program picture holds no appeal," says the announcement. "In this space the ONE OUTSTANDING SCREEN DRAMA OF THE MONTH is presented to their discriminating attention, as proof that the cinema can and occasionally does express real dramatic ideals."

"Warm sunshine beating on the old 'dobe walls; dashing caballeros strumming their guitars 'neath a dark-eyed senorita's lattice; brown-frocked padres in the mission garden; Old Spain under blue California skies; and winsome, lovable little Mabel Normand — that is 'Suzanna.'"

"Down to the Sea in Ships"

Elmer Clifton's New Production a Masterpiece in Its Line—Replete With Sensations and Human Interest

Reviewed by Roger Ferri

WHEN the ten best productions of the current season are finally sorted out this Elmer Clifton offering should not be overlooked, for it is one of the most marvelously amazing attractions ever offered owners of motion picture theatres. In its class it stands alone and as an unquestionable masterpiece. Here is a production that is just that and more—a picture with a real heart. It is at the same time a great education and a remarkable entertainment vehicle. Its value goes beyond that of the theatre, for it will create talk and discussion that will live for a long, long time.

Cinematographically, "Down To the Sea in Ships" is that much sought different production exhibitors have prayed for. It is dramatic, sensational, romantic, comical and picturesque, dwelling on a story that is appealingly human.

It is big in everything. You don't have to take any risk when you grab this one, for it is that type of production that will appeal to everybody for it has everything in it—and most important it is in possession of heart-throbs that are gripping and leave a permanent impression that will prompt word-of-mouth boosting.

Elmer Clifton is deserving of much commendation for "Down To the Sea in Ships" for it is what this writer would gamble two to one in predicting that it will prove a huge box office winner. It's a production that will justify the investment of several thousands of dollars in exploitation, for the picture will earn it all back 100 times.

It will be a wise distributing agency that will grab this one and a wiser exhibitor who will allow it to bring the silver to its box offices.

For sensations, "Down To the Sea in Ships" is the best yet. And these sensations result from every day hair-raising experiences of whalers. And they are not faked. This writer knows New Bedford and many a time was dispatched there by a Boston newspaper to "cover" shipwrecks, etc., in that picturesque locality.

To enumerate the innumerable thrillers depicted in this attraction would mean the use of an entire page. Suffice, however, to say that this picture is so securely packed with dangerously bold feats in which whales unconsciously play an important role, that it has any 15-episode serial, this writer has seen to date, washed off the board.

ELMER CLIFTON'S

'DOWN TO THE

When

Audiences the World Over Stand Aghast at the Daring of this Picture

NEVER before has a photo-dramatic production made its bid for public approval backed by the weight of critical enthusiasm that has greeted "Down to the Sea in Ships."

"One of the most interesting pictures ever produced. . . . It combines pretty nearly the best in everything, acting, photography, direction and cast."—Philadelphia North American.

It is a picture that will do more in a single season to restore confidence and public interest in the motion picture theatre than any other force at work within the industry.

"In this picture, the screen has gained one of its few veritable classics. It is visual literature, hauntingly beautiful. A truly great film."—Boston Advertiser.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" has been launched with one of the biggest advertising and exploitation campaigns ever put behind a picture. Magazines and newspapers all over the country will be used to arouse interest in this super-production. The opening gun in the campaign is a full page in the Saturday Evening Post (circulation 2,250,000), on March 10th. This will be followed by intensive advertising designed to reach every community of any size in the United States.

"One of the real surprises of the screen season. . . . one worthy of a place among the finest of the year. . . . there have been no more thrilling escapades ever caught by the camera . . . a film that will blaze the trail for the new type of pictures that are bound to come."—Detroit News.

The exploitation possibilities of "Down to the Sea in Ships" are endless in their variety and effect. It is so utterly out of the beaten path, so daring in its conception, so masterly in its handling, that the exhibitor is confronted not with the problem of filling his theatre, but with the immediate necessity of securing "Down to the Sea in Ships" early enough and for a long enough run to satisfy the enormous public demand that is already aroused for "the master-production of the new year."

"Probably one of the most beautiful photoplays ever made . . . The enthusiasm grew by leaps and bounds."—Boston Globe.

MORE than one hundred of the leading newspapers of the country have devoted full page feature-stories to this extraordinary picture. It is being fictionized in one of the principal "fan" magazines of the industry, and fifty other periodicals, including national magazines, gravure sections, house organs and syndicate services are hailing "Down to the Sea in Ships" as the greatest stride forward in recent motion picture history.

Worth Millions—

and stranded on a park bench. Unlimited resources behind him, and not a penny in his pocket. His credit worthless, his identity lost, his explanation a joke.

Such is the amazing adventure of pompous John Pye Smith, millionaire. Serious to him, but uproariously amusing to every audience. By a perfectly reasonable series of mishaps, this man of millions loses his valet, his baggage, his beard, his pocket money—even his clothes.

Audiences are plunged deeper and deeper into sympathy for the luckless rich man, yet hilariously amused at the experience of a millionaire mingling with down-and-outers as he waits his turn for a hand-out at a charity bread line.

A hand-picked cast and directed with adroit skill to get all the laughs and sighs.

Affording all kinds of exploitation stunts and guaranteed to please them after you get them in.

"What the Picture Did For Me"

When Knighthood Was in Flower, with Marion Davies.—I scraped up all the loose change I could get hold of and booked this picture for the first three days of 1923. I borrowed a few extra dollars from my wife for extra advertising matter. She kicked on letting me have it, and said I should have taken the money I paid for the picture and bought a new Ford. I had the picture pretty well advertised, and on New Years night I went down to the show "all set" for the usual costume flop. Like most of the small town exhibitors I had but very little faith in costume pictures. The show was scheduled to start at 7:45 p. m. About dark they started to come, the lame, the halt, the rich and the poor—in automobiles, vehicles and on foot. They seemed to come from every direction, and most all of them at once. At 7:15 the standing room was all sold and we were turning them away. In my ten years as an exhibitor I have never shown a picture that give the general satisfaction that this one did. I had nothing but praise from all who saw it. Mr. Exhibitor, if you want a picture that will give your house more prestige than it has ever had, I advise you to get this one. It's worth every cent you pay for it, if you don't make a dime on it. The attendance held up each night and for one matinee.—R. W. Hickman, Lyric theatre, Greenville, Ill.—Neighborhood patronage.

"Her most novel and entertaining picture"

The Ehibitors Herald Says:

"The happy combination of a good story, beautiful star, and capable direction make for success of 'Money, Money, Money.' It is beautifully produced, very well acted and should appeal to every lover of good, clean screen entertainment. One of Katherine MacDonald's most entertaining and novel pictures. Advertise it as a story with a Main Street setting."

"The Woman Conquers"

The story of a society girl's battle for life and love in the snow wastes of the far North, the kind that every audience will thrill to. This is one of the American Beauty's very best pictures, artistic and entertaining. Story by Violet Clark. Directed by Tom Forman.

"White Shoulders"

Here is a picture made from a story that millions have read and thrilled to in The Saturday Evening Post, that of a beautiful Southern girl placed on the auction block of marriage by her own mother. Written by the famous author, George Kibbe Turner. Directed by Tom Forman.

"Stranger Than Fiction"

A picture filled with thrills, in which a society girl is caught in the toils of a crook, kidnapped in an aeroplane, escaping to another machine after a dare-devil battle 5,000 feet in the air. Story by Charles Richman and Albert Shelby Le Vino. Directed by J. A. Barry.

"The Woman's Side"

An up-to-the-minute drama of woman's new sphere in the realm of politics and how a girl battled against crooked organization methods for power and the honor of her father. Filled with love, romance and tense dramatic situations. Story and direction by J. A. Barry.

"Domestic Relations"

A tensely dramatic story of a man who drove a woman from his life, but could not drive her from his heart. A picture that will make both men and women wonder, as it is a slice from their own lives. Story and scenario by Violet Clark. Direction by Chet Withey.

"Her Social Value"

A drama with the ring of the human note—today a salesgirl—tomorrow the wife of a society man. Here's a theme that will hold every audience, especially the women. From the original story by B. P. Fineman and J. A. Barry. Scenario by Gerald Duffy and Jerome Storm. Direction by Jerome Storm.

"You dont have to marry him. There's me." from "White Shoulders".

"They're plotting to rob you." from "The Woman Conquers"

"Give me that gun" from "The Woman's Side".

"Turn over the jewels or you won't leave here alive" from "Stranger than Fiction".

Then her husband stepped in - from "Domestic Relations"

He heard his rival whisper a secret to his wife - from "Her Social Value".

Copyright, 1922

A Pair of Kings (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Larry always gets the dough. He brings the crowds and laughs, too. Absolutely the best on the market.—Roy L. Dowling, Ozark theatre, Ozark, Ala.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph).—If you are not playing the Semon Comedies you sure owe it to yourself to play them, as there are no better comedies made. I have booked all of them. After you play one you will play them all.——A. E. Berlin, Jr., Lyric theatre, Rock Falls, Ill.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph).—Not one but all of these a tonic for a sick box office if you give these to your people. The king of slapstick comedies, well made, fast and laughs in all of them.—Bowen & Charles Theatre Circuit, Vader, Wash.

The Fall Guy (V), with Larry Semon.—If your patrons like slapstick, give them all the Semons. This one brought the house down. Play these with features, and how they eat 'em up.—R. A. Botts, Grand theatre, Carrington, N. D.

The Bell Hop (Vita.), with Larry Semon.—A great comedy.—G. W. Summers, Royal theatre, Unionville, Mo.

The Grocery Clerk (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—One of the best comedies ever made. A laugh in every foot.—A. G. Miller, Miller theatre, Atkinson, Neb.

The Agent (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A comedy that is a scream from beginning to end, and the barrel stuff is the best thing done in comedy for some time. There is action to who tied the pup and keeps the audience in an uproar. W. H. Brenner, Cozy theatre, Winchester, Ind.

The Hick (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—I never heard people laugh as heartily as they did over this one. And how could they help it? Many came back to see it the second night. Exploit it good. It will meet your highest expectations.—Mrs. W. H. Helfer, Itasca theatre, Alice, Tex.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph).—The exhibitor who fails to play these comedies is sure overlooking a good bet. Have played them all and not a bad one yet.—E. O. Ford, Broadway theatre, Brooklyn, Ia.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Oh, Boy, what a comedy. Just one explosion after another. It's Semon's best. Am paying too much for him, though.—C. R. Sullivan, Fair theatre, Amarillo, Tex.

The Saw Mill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A very good comedy. Larry is all right.—N. O. Foster, Elite theatre, Otsego, Mich.

Dew Drop Inn (V.), with Larry Semon.—Best of the Larry Semon comedies I have run. Semon has brought me business. When I don't have Semon I have from seven to ten children. When I do have him I get from forty to sixty.—A. Names, Strand theatre, McCracken, Kan.

The Star Boarder (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Semon comedies draw better than serials. Pack the house with every Semon comedy. Brother, book Semon for big box office receipts.—M. L. Steinberg, Dreamland theatre, Norris, Okla.

The Sawmill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—If you need a good slapstick comedy, you cannot find a better. In fact, you can pick Semon comedies with your eyes closed; they are all good. Also Vitagraph is to be complimented on the way they sell them.—J. J. Kudlacek, Swan theatre, Swanton, Neb.

Golf (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A good comedy. It will please the public as it is different from ordinary comedies.—Walter Gerrib, Eagle theatre, Westville, Ill.

The Grocery Clerk (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A howling success in the way of a two reel comedy. One thing happens right after another and you'll laugh at them all.—W. P. Perry, Rialto theatre, Cheyenne Wells, Colo.

The Show (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—One of his best. Lots of new stuff in this one. Play this one strong. They will eat it up. You can't play it too strong. Tell them that you got a real comedy coming.—William Thacher, Royal theatre, Salina, Kan.

The Hick (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Larry sure delivers the laughs. Have run a number of his comedies and have not had a poor one. We consider these the best comedies on the market, because they sure get the laughs.—H. G. Stettmund, Jr., Odeon theatre, Chandler, Okla.

Larry Semon Comedies (V.).—Good consistent comedies that always give the best of satisfaction.—Custer Carland, Victoria theatre, Frankfort, Mich.

Golf (V.), with Larry Semon.—If you are not playing Semon comedies you are losing money. This one is a knockout.—J. W. Crouch, Elite theatre, St. Paul, Neb.

The Sawmill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Semon's greatest comedy, and I have run them all.—Harry Threde, Scenic theatre, Holstein, Ia.

Semon Comedies (V.).—Just half through with a series of ten Semon comedies. Consider them the best comedies for the money I ever booked.—L. W. Smith, Fraternity theatre, Henry, S. Dak.

The Sawmill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Semon always good for here. Went over like a house afire.—S. R. Peake, Pastime theatre, Maquoketa, Ia.

The Agent (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A dandy comedy, and pulled a good crowd. Patrons were more than satisfied.—N. Calbeck, Auditorium theatre, Nappanee, Ind.

The Grocery Clerk, with Larry Semon.—This is my first Semon. I have been afraid of them on account of the price in a small town, but believe me they are worth it. Every inch a laugh.—R. S. Moore, Gem theatre, Snyder, Okla.

The Bell Hop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A good comedy with many good stunts. One of his best.—E. S. Sutter, Columbia theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

The Bell Hop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—When we have a rather flat program we always wish we had a Semon booked with it. These are getting better with each release. How they roared and laughed and then asked when the next one would be here.—J. W. Joerger and H. M. Maloney, O. K. theatre, Enterprise, Ore.

The Bell Hop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Boys, here is a comedian that draws and pleases. His comedies are the best rough and tumble I have ever seen. They are 100 per cent pure. The Bell Hop is extremely funny.—W. E. Elkin, Temple theatre, Aberdeen, Miss.

The Rent Collector (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Excellent. One of the greatest comedies ever produced. They won't only laugh, they will scream.—J. N. Schwartwalder, Universal theatre, Auburn, N. Y.

Solid Concrete (V.), with Larry Semon.—100 per cent entertainment. Kept my audience in an uproar from start to finish. If you are not running Semon comedies, you are standing in your own light.—D. A. White, Cozy theatre, Checotah, Okla.

The Saw Mill (V.), with Larry Semon.—A riot from start to finish. Larry's the slap-stick king.—W. Ray Erne, Rialto theatre, Charlotte, Mich.

A Pair of Kings (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—Larry is always good, as we used to say about the stuff sold in our younger days, "but some are better than others," and the same with Larry. Play it, it will please.—D. Filizola, Empress theatre, Fort Scott, Kan.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph).—Consistently the best comedies to be had.—M. L. Guier, Auditorium theatre, Slater, Mo.

Larry Semon Comedies (Vitagraph).—Any exhibitor can see them and be better off for doing so.—Frank E. Lee, Lee's theatre, Three Oaks, Mich.

The Show (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—The best comedy of his career, and one of the best ever produced. Contains as many thrills as the average serial.—W. W. White, Jefferson theatre, Jefferson City, Tenn.

The Bell Hop (Vitagraph) with Larry Semon.—Larry is a genuine "big league" comedy star with our audiences. We have played every Larry Semon comedy that Vitagraph has ever released. In fact, we used the first, second and third groups twice. This one contains one of the most thrilling stunts of any previous Semon comedy, and it fairly took the capacity audience right up out of their seats. Fact is, Larry's comedies get better with every one he makes.—Harry M. Palmer, Liberty theatre, Washington, Ind.

The Bell Hop (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—A sure riot of fun. Best Semon comedy run to date. Semon in a class by himself.—A. H. McLaughlin, Criterion theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Semon Comedies (V.)—Good slapstick comedies. To get a good laugh book Semon Comedies. Well liked here.—L. A. White, Majestic theatre, Sherwood, N. D.

Solid Concrete (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—We have used ten of Semon's latest comedies. Have found them all good laugh producers. Try them with a mixed program.—J. S. Wasserman, Rialto theatre, Pecos, Tex.

The Saw Mill (Vitagraph), with Larry Semon.—This is the best Semon comedy to date. Have run eight of his comedies and all were good. He sure gets the laughs. Book them.—A. A. Neese, Beatrice theatre, Haw River, N. C.

When You Book a "Book Title" Picture Remember the Bookseller in Your Town

Nowadays as most big photoplays are made from big books, a link-up should be established between Publisher, Exhibitor and Bookseller.

Cast your eye over the cuts of books shown on this page which represent some of the big titles we publish.

Also add to the list:

Rupert of Hentzau Truxton King The Christian
The Custard Cup The Leather Pushers

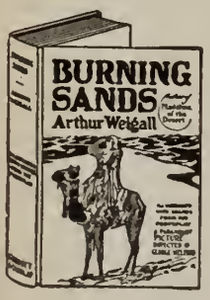
These books are handsomely bound and illustrated, and retail at 75 cents each

LET THE BOOKSELLER KNOW YOUR PICTURE DATES.

LINK UP YOUR PICTURE PUBLICITY WITH YOUR LOCAL BOOKSELLER.



Perhaps you have tried it before with indifferent success. However, don't be discouraged by that. Booksellers are now strong for the scheme.

Go to see your local bookseller today. He has just received a broadside from us calling his attention again to this big idea. There are many things you can talk over together and put into effect that will be of mutual interest and profit.

Perhaps you won't get all the booksellers in the town to co-operate with you all the time, but you will get some of them to co-operate most of the time, and, on the whole, it will be worth your while.

As a matter of good business, the bookseller will want to feature your "showing" with his books, as some of the biggest stores in the country are doing every day.

When in doubt, write us

McLEAN BREAKS RECORD.

Chicago Pro Skates 75 Yards In 0:07 4-5 In Trial at Pittsfield.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Jan. 27.—Bobby McLean of Chicago, professional, broke the world's record for skating seventy-five yards here this afternoon, going the distance in 7 4-5 seconds. The trial was against time. The former record of 8 1-5 seconds was made by Morris Wood, amateur, at Verona Lake, N. J., Jan. 24, 1903.

Bobby McLean, Champ Ice Skater, Becomes Movie Picture Star

Bobby McLean, world's champion speed and fancy ice skater, has signed a contract to appear in a motion picture entitled "The Art of Skating." This picture is now being filmed by All-Nations Features, Inc., at Saranac Lake.

McLean in Fast Exhibition.

Bobbie McLean, Chicago professional skater, reeled off an exhibition 200-yard dash in eighteen seconds flat. This was three-fifths of a second slower than the world's mark established by John S. Johnson in 1893, but the former record, statistics show, was made with a flying start and on a straight track.

Tomorrow Kaskey and Gorman will continue their battle for supremacy in the 440-yard dash and the 3-mile event. Gorman's proved ability in the distance event, together with the game fight he has been making in the sprints, places him as the possible favorite. But it will be a real battle between the two fliers.

Here are reunited the screen's greatest lovers, for Eugene O'Brien plays opposite Miss Talmadge, heading an exceptional supporting cast.

The picture has been produced with all the care and lavishness of the Joseph M. Schenck productions, and was personally directed by that master artist, Frank Lloyd. The story is known to millions, being adapted by Frances Marion from Robert Hichens' famous novel and stage success. Photographed by Antonio Gaudio and Norbert Brodin, it is a treat to the eye.

So Many Inquiries

Have reached us recently from those interested in the construction of new theatres and others in refitting and remodelling during the summer months that we feel that the time is ripe for a special section thoroughly covering the financing, planning, construction and furnishing of the theatre.

To properly present this material we have secured the cooperation of one of America's leading motion picture theatre architects to personally supervise the preparation of this section.

We will run this material in one of the early March issues of MOTION PICTURE NEWS and will make it so important to the industry at large that those interested in building or equipping theatres cannot afford to overlook it.

Make your space reservations as early as possible.

William J. Sullivan, Rialto theatre, Butte, Mont., wired to Mr. Ince as follows:

"In all my experience in putting on entertainment I have yet to find one picture that has gone over as big as 'The Hottentot.' The steeplechase was so exciting that our repair man had to stay after the show putting back the arms on the chairs in the theatre. People really stood on their seats and cheered. Patrons thought the picture was so good I lost many admissions because they would not leave until they had seen the picture twice and we could not empty the house fast enough to take care of the crowds. Comment from press and public is 'The Hottentot' is the finest and most entertaining picture ever shown here."

The New Contract

A STANDARD contract for the leasing of motion pictures has finally been realized. Knowing little of the problems of either a lessor or lessee we will not presume to pass judgment on how equitable the document is, but since it has been drawn and ratified by representative exhibitors on one side and representatives of the producer and distributor on the other, we accept it as a satisfactory if not perfect instrument and confine our comment to a far more important phase of the proposition—the ways and means by which the new contract has been evolved and what such a procedure means to the entire industry.

* * *

For the first time in the history of motion pictures, men who, in point of view, have been held to be fundamentally opposed, met around a conference table and stayed there until they threshed out their differences and until they settled a question of importance.

It has taken seven months to do this and we know the task was not an easy one.

But the great thing that has been accomplished is—unity; or, at least a long forward step toward unity; unity between two branches of this industry which generally are at war.

Without a doubt major credit for this great forward step belongs to Will H. Hays. It was Mr. Hays who convinced the various producers and distributors who make up the membership of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, that existing contracts could be improved to the benefit of all branches of the industry. It was he who made possible the conferences and brought them—by acting as guide, counselor and friend, to a successful termination.

The new contract as a mere instrument for the transaction of business would be just as effective and quite as equitable if it had been drawn by the distributor without consultation with the exhibitor. Perhaps some day it might have been provided as a natural course of events.

But how much better—more satisfactory—in its direct results is the method that has been pursued.

The standard contract contains many provisions that appear to be advantageous to the exhibitor.

The producer agrees to assume responsibility for the acts of his employees and all arbitrary penalties in favor of the distributor have been eliminated. Lack of such articles of agreement in contracts of the past have always been productive of friction.

The provision for fixing play dates has also been altered to such an extent and to such good purpose that it would appear that " play dates will now become pay dates " and vice versa.

How the new contract will work out remains to be seen. But at least it has been proven that distributors and exhibitors can confer around a table; and, tackling one of the worst causes of dissension, arrive at a solution to which they subscribe.

And that means that other matter can be taken up in the same sensible way; and even if a happy solution is not reached at least greater understanding will result.

And this understanding will hasten along the stabilization of the industry.

VOL. XXVII FEBRUARY 17, 1923 No. 7

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

WILLIAM DUDLEY PELLEY of New York, magazine writer and novelist, whose stories are finding their way to the screen, has joined forces with H. H. Van Loan, who is engaged in the publishing business with R. T. Thornby and Lindsay McKenna under the monicker of H. H. Van Loan, Inc., Security Building, Hollywood, but who is never too busy to turn out original scripts and adaptations.

H. H. has just completed the adaptation of Pelley's story, "The Fog," which will carry the Metro trademark. Both writers will preserve their individuality and carry on their activities separately. Wherever collaboration is attempted, the work will be so designated.

Mr. Van Loan is the author of "How I Did It," an authoritative document of how to write and market scripts—the contents being crammed with interesting sidelights of how he put himself and his ideas over.

MOTION picture "still" photographs are the latest to receive definite recognition in the field of higher arts. Recently a "still" from a photoplay was hung in a prominent place in the Buffalo Museum of Natural Science and now one is to achieve a similar honor at the University of Pennsylvania.

In both cases the photographs were made by Edward S. Curtis, the famous photographer of Indians who was especially commissioned by Cecil B. DeMille to take a set of art portraits in the huge forest setting which is a feature of "Adam's Rib."

A BON VOYAGE luncheon was given Friday by the executives of Paramount for Adolph Zukor and S. R. Kent, who sailed the following day on a two months' business trip to Europe.

ANNA AIKEN PATTERSON, editor and publisher of Weekly Film Review, in a signed statement over an article headed "Information Versus Invective" has something to say to Bishop Warren A. Candler, who has raised his voice against the industry in the South. His denunciation appeared in the Atlanta Journal under the caption, "They Cannot Be Cleansed."

The editor's indictment expresses the idea that the Bishop's invectives are supported on nothing but authoritative misinformation. We agree with Anna Aiken Patterson that no one should condemn the screen because a few have brought discredit upon the name.

Everyone who starts indicting the industry should first see that he is without sin and second that his house is in order.

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS' "Alice Adams," by Booth Tarkington, wins the asterisk in the latest bulletin issued by the National Board of Review. The novel has been accepted everywhere as the author's masterpiece and won the Columbia prize for the best piece of fiction written during 1921. If the picture carries out the fidelity of the book, it should be a humdinger as a realistic slice of the age-old impulse—keeping up appearances.

AN interesting item of how an enterprising film salesman has taken the gentry of a small hamlet into the land of Make-Believe is recorded in the exploits of Harry Kirshbaum, Universal representative of Kansas City. Through his initiative Harwood, Mo., a small town of 300, has adopted an idea which would prove profitable for film salesmen in the territory to duplicate. Virtually no form of entertainment could Harwood boast of—that is, until Mr. Kirshbaum drove into town one day in his humble Henry. In about two hours plans had been perfected whereby the merchants of Harwood would give a Saturday matinee, consisting of a two-reel drama and a one-reel comedy, free. A five-reel feature was added to the night performance, for which ten cents admittance is charged.

Because of interest in civic affairs by the superintendent of the local telephone company, the only exploitation methods necessary consist of a call in all directions over the phone. And the best part of the whole affair, as far as the merchants of the town are concerned, is that these performances have attracted fully fifty per cent. more people to the town each Saturday.

IF any of you have wondered what became of Louise Huff, who starred not so long ago under the World Film banner, we will tell you that she is using her voice and talent in Rachel Crothers's new play, "Mary, the 3rd," which opened in New York the other night.

While speaking of "come-backs"—we'll say that Warren Kerrigan is returning to the screen after a long absence. Look for him in "The Covered Wagon." There is one erstwhile star of stage and screen who seems to have gone into permanent retirement and her name is Marguerite Clark. Pearl White is to retire for a time—in a French convent. They comes and they goes, as O. Henry would have it.

IT wasn't due to the press agent's fault that Jackie Coogan arrived in New York ahead of schedule. The high-salaried, eight-year-old Jackie came in on a train, the signals of which were crossed. Hence the army of 10,000 fans and Bill Edwards were missing. Tears were seen to glisten in young John's brown orbs. Why not—when he thought of the ovations accorded the "Tiger" and the little doctor of auto-suggestion? It was three hours later that the blunder was rectified and Jackie made his triumphant re-entry—after slipping through the gates and hopping off a later train. Children predominated in the army of 10,000, which included a band, and they were rewarded when Jackie, on the shoulders of a friend, doffed his velvet cap.

The juvenile star who bounded into fame and fortune after his appearance in "The Kid," has several important matters to attend to before he departs for the Coast—among which are addresses to be made before the Boy Scouts and a few luncheon and dinner engagements with producers, impresarios, interviewers, and several of his young professional friends.

Jackie should have the time of his life in New York. Look at all the snow (they don't have any out in Los Angeles)! The theatres are going full blast; the ships are arriving and departing in the harbor; the Stock Exchange is always busy (it should interest him now); the red ball is up in the Park, indicating thick ice for skating; and Mayor Hylan

THE LITERARY DIGEST in its February 17th issue has something to say about screen censorship. In an article headed Screen Dealings With Dickens And Hugo, it reproduces the indictment of censorship which appeared in the London Outlook over the signature of Clinnell Wilkinson, and this writer ventilates the English aspects of the same questions about the screen that have been agitating us, and he seems to arrive at conclusions somewhat similar to those printed here about the criminal stupidity instead of the criminal morality of the film.

The Literary Digest quoting Mr. Wilkinson says: "Literature leaves the Court without a stain on its character. 'Oliver Twist' may be printed in cheap editions and sold to all and sundry, but a cinematographic representation of Fagin's thieves' kitchen has been banned for everybody under sixteen years of age.

The writer dwells upon the theatre, which he calls the real flaw in the argument, for plays are produced year after year having to do with sex and crime. Yet virtue always triumphs on the cinema, as it always did in the old-fashioned melodrama and penny dreadful.

Mr. Wilkinson admits that it is not easy to argue the question of the film dealing with the relation of the sexes. He makes a plea for greater frankness in these matters. He sums up by saying "that they (the films) should be supposed to be any more capable than the penny dreadful and the melodrama of making saints or sinners is a theory that still remains to be proved." He argues that "The whole agitation against the cinema is unreasonable, but it would be silly to expect reason from the modern Puritan."

AN editorial faux pas has been committed by the editor of the Franklin Journal, Farmington, Maine. The ethics of journalism are sound in that editorial opinions must be consistent with the news matter which accompanies them. It may be that the Franklin Journal shatters the conventions in this respect; it may be that the news item which clashed with the editorial comment in the issue of January 23rd was put in through an oversight; it may be that the editor writes what he thinks and the copy desk can take care of itself—but whatever the reason the paper surely contradicts itself.

Here's the paragraph in the editorial column: "Wallace Reid, the hero of Filmdom, died at the Hollywood Sanitarium, Jan. 18th, as a result of a fight to break away from the drug habit. If anyone can point to a worse collection of inebriates and social degenerates than seems to crop out in Filmdom, where is it?"

The answer to the editor's question is found in a paragraph on the following page:

Here it is: "According to the report of Sheriff W. B. Small, Commitments to the County jail for the past year numbered 46, of which 18 were for burglary, 9 for vagrancy, 3 for murder, 3 for assault, 2 for search and seizure, 2 illegal transportation of liquor and one each for adultery, polygamy, arson, intoxication, offering liquor for sale, manufacturing liquor and illegal possession of liquor, more than half the prisoners being from outside the County. In 1921 the commitments numbered 49; in 1920, 42. Not for 70 years has there been a year without more than one commitment for intoxication."

Harry Crandall Gets Legal Setback

Court Decision Means Knickerbocker Corp. Must Defend All Disaster Suits

HARRY M. CRANDALL and the Knickerbocker Theatre Corporation met a serious legal setback last Friday when Justice Hoehling of the District of Columbia Supreme Court overruled the demurrer filed by Crandall counsel, in which the claim was made that the declarations of David Lyman and Mary E. Forsyth in their suits against the company for damages for injuries sustained did not cover specific acts of negligence on the part of the company. The Judge held that the theatre corporation must defend the whole gamut of suits now on the docket, as well as of those whose time to file is still unexpired.

The court holds that the accident presumes negligence, and plaintiffs are not required to point out the exact cause of the disaster. The court does not presume to determine the exact measure of the duty and responsibility of the company as owner or proprietor of the place, and declares that the defendant company will not be deprived of its right of proper legal defense by reason of the mere "interposition and application of the decision and doctrine."

The Judge further stressed the importance of the matter and said that much time and money could be saved by having a ruling by the Court of Appeals before jury trials are held. Counsel for the theatre will have ample time to apply to the appellate tribunal for a special appeal on this point of law, "while not an insurer of safety to his patrons, the purveyor of amusement is," said Judge Hoehling, "charged with certain obligations to them. He is charged with an affirmative obligation to know that the premises are safe for the public use. He impliedly warrants their safety for the purposes for which they are designed and used. Having paid the fee, the public have a right to assume that they are in a reasonably safe auditorium to witness the entertainment advertised."

Contention of counsel for plaintiff that neither they nor other patrons should furnish alleged facts to define specific acts of negligence (on the grounds that they could not have such knowledge) was likewise sustained by the court.

Late Wire Briefs from the West Coast by Wire

THE engagement of Harold Lloyd and Mildred Davis has been announced. The wedding is expected shortly.

R. H. Cochrane of Universal arrived this week on the coast.

Carl Laemmle announces that Jules Bernheim, for past two years business manager of Universal City, will continue in this capacity with broadened executive authority and have a direction of production under him. This elevates Bernheim to position held by Irving Thalberg, resigned to go with Louis B. Mayer as vice-president at a salary reported at $100,000.

Arthur Jacobs and Frank Borzage have returned from New York and will first produce "Terwilliger," a recent magazine story.

The first Palmer Photoplay Corporation production is to be "Out of the Night," from a story by Ethel Styles Middleton, Pittsburg student, according to announcement by Roy Manker, president. Joseph DeGrasse is directing it at the Ince studios with a cast including Lloyd Hughes, George Hackathorne, Philo McCullough, Lucille Ricksen, Myrtle Stedman, Claire McDowell, Muriel McCormick and Jackie Darrell.

The Prizma west coast laboratories, destroyed in the Fine Arts studios fire recently, have been moved to the Downing Laboratories, most of the equipment having been saved.

Big Organization Would Control S. F. Houses

Definite developments in a big move now afoot to consolidate several of the largest residential motion picture houses of San Francisco into one big organization has just come to light, when it was announced that the Meyer and Hyman interests, owners of a group of local picture houses headed by the Coliseum, a 2,000 residential seated house, have acquired the Haight theatre in association with William Godfrey and Harry Sack. Godfrey and Sack were the owners and retain the management.

This particular move involves more than $175,000 in additional equipment and real estate. "The Haight deal is but one of our plans," Hyman declares. "With Godfrey and Sack now aligning their holdings with the Meyer and Hyman interests, we are about to venture in other San Francisco districts. Although we have not mentioned this before, our interests are closely identified with those of Gore Bros., Adolph Ramish, and Sol Lesser, who just purchased the T. & D. circuit which includes the well known downtown Tivoli theatre and twenty-four other theatres in the key cities of California."

National Body Asks Hays to Define Duties

A semi-public organization of national influence, known as the Institute of Government, has asked Will Hays, through its president, H. H. Lund, to define his (Hays') precise position and power as an arbitrator for the motion picture world, and to indicate what assurance exists in the present scheme of control of film productions which will tend to build up public confidence in the moral standard of motion picture producers and players.

The Institute, when it meets at the Willard Hotel, Washington, the week of Feb. 19, expects to devote some time to the movie industry as regards "the educational and patriotic aspects of the motion picture."

Billy Brandt will be a candidate for the presidency of the T. O. C. C. at the election to be held toward the end of February, according to his own announcement. He was a former president for several terms and has always been an active worker in the organization. He was defeated for the office last year by William Landau, and his friends have urged him to again become a candidate for the office this year.

Federal Admission Taxes Show Increase

ACCORDING to figures made public by the Bureau of Internal Revenue at Washington admission taxes in December showed a decided increase over those for November and also for December of the preceding year.

The admission taxes for December were $6,825,249.80 against $5,484,790.03 in November, an increase of $1,340,459. The amount also showed an increase of $135,546 over the $6,689,702.83 collected during December, 1921.

Collections from the seating tax on theatres during December amounted to $35,207.24, as compared with $49,245.96 in November 1922 and $34,991.16 in December, 1921.

Albany Women to Support Governor's Plan

Mrs. Russell Headley, president of the Albany Woman's Club, a powerful organization in the Capital district, in discussing action taken last Saturday by the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, endorsing continued motion picture censorship in this state, declared today that the Albany organization would be in favor of any plan of Governor Smith's which would serve the purpose of taking censorship out of politics and placing it under the control of the State Department of Education.

Mrs. Charles W. Nash, state agent of the D. A. R., in New York state, said today that while the question of motion picture censorship had not as yet come up for official action by her organization, she was of the opinion that the general sentiment among her members was for a better plan of censorship than the one now given.

Kansas Reform Measures Fail to Develop

While Missouri exhibitors are beginning to show concern over the result of the 1923 legislative program, brother exhibitors in Kansas are confronted with little to worry about. The children's code bill, requiring chaperons for all children attending theatres at night, has received the condemnation of many of the leading newspapers of the state and the proposed bill is making slow headway in the legislature, now being in the hands of a committee.

The radical reform measures which were anticipated at the outset, have failed to materialize and the showmen of the Sunflower state are beginning to breath easy. However, the M. P. T. O. of Kansas is still maintaining a temporary office in the National hotel at Topeka, the state capital, with C. E. Cook, business manager of the organization in charge.

Nobleman Made Director of Canadian Corp.

Sir William Wiseman, Bart, a British diplomat, financier, soldier and a member of the English nobility, has been elected a director of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, which operates many large moving picture theatres in the chief centres of Canada.

Sir William was elected at a meeting of the company's directorate at Toronto on February 1 in succession to E. E. Shauer of New York, representing Kuhn, Loeb & Company, Sir William being identified with the same company.

Standard Contract Goes Into Effect

Committee of Exhibitors and Producers Frames Equitable Instrument for Leasing of Pictures

AFTER seven months of what may be properly termed "cutting and trying" on the part of a committee representing the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York, the national M. P. T. O. organization and the various firms who are members of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, a uniform contract for the leasing of motion picture films has been drafted and accepted as a satisfactory, if not perfect, instrument.

This contract, the main provisions of which were published in MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week, will go into effect immediately and will supersede all existing forms of contracts now in use by the several producers and distributors who make up the membership of the M. P. P. and D. of America, and will, in all probabilities, be accepted by most of the other individual firms who do not belong to the Hays organization.

The final work of perfecting the contract was accomplished last Friday afternoon at the Hays offices, 516 Fifth avenue, New York where the members of the committees from the T. O. C. C., the state organization of the M. P. T. O., met with Will H. Hays and several attorneys for the various producers interested.

At this meeting a slight change in the wording of the contract as published last week was made. This change applied to section 19 of that document relative to the board of arbitration. The section as amended guarantees the exhibitors a fifty-fifty representation on the arbitration board and strikes out the references to the Film Club or Film Board of Trade and refers to the rules and regulations of the M. P. P. and D. of America (on file in the New York office) for procedure in any cases submitted for arbitration.

The formal acceptance of the contract was the occasion of considerable juilication and some speech making in which the part Mr. Hays has played in the consummation of the project, begun so long ago, came in for much praise.

Also the various members of the committee expressed their beliefs that the contract is an equitable one and hailed it as a most important document, from which both the distributing and exhibiting end of the business will reap mutual profit.

Neither the committee from the M. P. T. O. of America (national organization) or President Sidney S. Cohen was present. Mr. Cohen telephoned to Mr. Hays that his committee had not had time to study the changes in the last draft of the contract, and therefore was not in a position to express either approval or disapproval at that time.

The contract, therefore, went into effect without the official M. P. T. O. ratification.

The process of drafting the standard contract and the difficulties encountered in wording it to fit the needs of the various interests were briefly outlined to the trade press at the Friday meeting. The document was drawn by the attorneys representing the producers and distributing corporations and submitted to the exhibitor committee for approval. On objection to a section or a part thereof, the matter was threshed out as a committee of the whole. Since there are twenty clauses in the contract, all of vital importance, the amount of "cutting and trying" necessary to fit the whole to the various views of both sides was a matter that required innumerable conferences and consumed a great amount of time.

The part which Mr. Hays played in the work was to act as intermediary. The tact, patience and diplomacy which he displayed throughout the proceedings was testified to by all concerned. Among those who paid tribute to Mr. Hays in this connection was Senator James J. Walker, attorney for the exhibitor organizations.

There seems little doubt that the new contract very largely is the direct result of Mr. Hays' efforts to establish better business relations between exhibitors and producers than has been in vogue. He was termed by those present as "the spark plug" of the whole series of meetings.

In addition to the provisions of the contract published a memorandum reading as follows is to be printed at the end of the form:

"While a salesman has every right to trade among respective customers to obtain the best offer possible for his produet, after he has selected a particular Exhibitor whose offer he believes to be the best, and takes a written application from such Exhibitor, he should forward the same to the home office and make no further effort to sell the same service to any other Exhibitor until the application so forwarded has been formally rejected or accepted.

"No paid advertising should be inserted in any feature picture, comedy, scenic or news reel."

This rider is self-explanatory and promises to work a further reform in the business relations of the exhibitor-distributor.

A summary of the new contract is properly divided into two parts, in which clauses advantageous to the exhibitor and distributor (or producer), respectively, are compared with the usual contract in vogue up to the present time.

The changes from old contracts that are apparently advantageous to the exhibitor are:

The photoplays to be delivered under the contract are specifically described and identified either by name or by the star who is to appear in them, and the distributor expressly agrees to deliver and the exhibitor to accept all such photoplays, whether released within the contract period or at a later date.

The period by which payment for each picture is to precede exhibition has been shortened from seven days to three days in advance of the date of shipment from the exchange.

The contract makes it clear that proper delivery of a print by an exhibitor to a common carrier for shipment to the exchange shall constitute the return of the print by the exhibitor, and that in "routing" prints the exhibitor is not responsible for transportation charges to the next exhibitor.

The varying amounts required by different distributors as compensation for loss, destruction or injury to film have been uniformly fixed at six cents per foot, which figure represents a substantial reduction of the amounts heretofore required by most distributors.

The distributor expressly assumes responsibility for neglect or default on the part of its employees in connection with the delivery of prints in time for the scheduled showing.

The distributor expressly agrees not to authorize or license the exhibition of any photoplay in violation of any protection or "run" clause in the contract.

The events in which the distributor may terminate the contract or suspend service for default by the exhibitor have been limited to failure of the exhibitor to play or pay for a picture and "bicycling" by the exhibitor. In addition, the exhibitor has been given the right to terminate the contract in the event of the intentional violation by the distributor of any protection or run clause or the distributor's intentional default in delivering any picture to the exhibitor. Thus, each party has the right to terminate the contract only for a material breach of the contract by the other party.

All arbitrary penalties and other provisions of a penal nature in favor of the distributor have been eliminated.

The provision for fixing play dates has been so altered as to give the exhibitor ample notice and opportunity to select his own play dates, and only in case of his failure to do so is the distributor given the right to fix arbitrary play dates on three weeks' notice. Further, this clause only becomes operative if the exhibitor has failed or neglected to come to the exchange and agree with the booker upon mutually acceptable play dates. In no event can the exhibitor be required to show more than one photoplay of any "star series" every five weeks.

The contract will specify what photoplays included therein are re-issued or re-named pictures.

The exhibitor is exempted from liability for failure to perform the contract due to various causes beyond his control.

The provision of former contracts permitting the distributor to assign the contract has been eliminated. On the other hand, the exhibitor has been given the express privilege to assign the contract without the distributor's consent upon the sale of his theatre.

All time limitations upon the right of the exhibitor to file claims and commence actions under the contract have been eliminated, excepting only claims for receipt of the film in a damaged condition.

A definite time limit for acceptance of the exhibitor's application has been adopted, and unless the distributor accepts within the specified period, the application shall be deemed withdrawn and the distributor shall forthwith repay any sums paid on account by the exhib-

Carolina Exhibitors Will Fight Music Suits

COL. HENRY B. VARNER, secretary of the North Carolina M. P. T. O., has held a preliminary meeting with leading exhibitors of North Carolina against whom suits have been entered by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, to outline plans for defending the forty-six suits which have been entered against Carolina theatre owners for infringement of copyright, and in a statement declares that the suits will be fought to a finish. Six attorneys have been engaged to handle the defense.

Standard Contract Goes Into Effect

itor; and a copy of the application is to be left with the exhibitor at the time of signing.

The benefits of the new contract from the distributor's point of view may be summed up in a single phrase: The arbitraton clause. As will appear from the foregoing, the distributors have been willing to make substantial concessions to the exhibitors for the sake of securing their consent to an arbitration clause which it is hoped will prove fair and effective in protecting and enforcing the rights of both parties to the contract.

While arbitration of disputes between distributors and exhibitors has been in effective operation for some time past in New York City and various other localities, the new contract for the first time embodies a provision for such arbitration as an essential part of the agreement of the parties.

It has been the aim of those who prepared this arbitration clause to make it mutual in its operation, and hence a protection alike to the distributor and the exhibitor who desires to live up to his contract and require the other party to do likewise. The arbitration boards are to be organized in each locality by the local film clubs or board of trade under rules and regulations which have been submitted to the exhibitor organizations and which provide for absolutely equal representation of distributors and exhibitors on each board. The parties agree to submit all disputes under the contract to arbitration and to abide by the result. In the event of the failure or refusal of the exhibitor to do so, each distributor may (but is not obliged to) demand from such exhibitor security not exceeding $500 under each contract with the exhibitor, and in the event of the exhibitor's failure to furnish such security, each distributor may (but is not obliged to) terminate the contract or suspend service thereunder. Conversely, in the event of the distributor's failure or refusal to submit to arbitration or abide by the result thereof, the exhibitor may terminate all contracts with the distributor and in addition the distributor is deprived of access to the board of arbitration to enforce its claims against any exhibitor until it shall have complied with such award.

The Theatre Owners of New York were represented at Friday's meeting by President Charles L. O'Reilly of New York, Samuel I. Berman of Brooklyn and Joseph Quittner of Middletown. Senator Walker was present as legal adviser for both the New York Theatre Owners and the T. O. C. C. The T. O. C. C. committee consisted of Bernard Edelhertz, William Brandt, Leo Brecher and Louis F. Blumenthal.

Saul F. Rogers of the Fox Film Corporation and Karl Kirchway of F. P. Lasky, together with Mr. Hays, represented the M. P. P. and D. of America.

Mr. Edelhertz, chairman of the contract committee for the T. O. C. C., has issued the following statement concerning the new contract.

"As I have stated on many previous occasions, it is my profound belief that this uniform contract marks one of the most important chapters in the history of the motion picture industry. For the first time the commercial relations between the exhibitor and distributor will be based upon mutual obligations. I believe that a great deal of the ill feeling that existed in the industry up to now was due to the fact that the commercial relations between exhibitor and distributor were based upon a contract which failed to mention a single remedy for the exhibitor in the event of a violation of a contract on the part of the distributor.

"It is perhaps proper to state at this time that the uniform contract committee representing the exhibitors has at no time proceeded upon the theory that it would accomplish 100% perfection; that would not be possible in the first attempt, and the committee realizes that fact, but with all that, we believe that a long step has been taken in the right direction from which greater benefits and greater accomplishments on the part of the exhibitor are still to come.

"For several months the committee has labored conscientiously, attending a great number of conferences held at the office of the Hays organization, and a great number of conferences amongst themselves, for the purpose of working out and preparing the numerous details involved in the preparation and modification in the various clauses submitted for consideration. At all times the conferences proceeded in a friendly spirit and a great deal of credit for smoothing out and ironing out the many differences of opinion, is justly due to Gen. Will Hays, who, by his tactful influence, always managed to avert any act which might have tended to disrupt the friendly co-operation of both committees.

"It will take perhaps a little time before the industry will actually begin to reap the benefits of this document, but of one thing I am certain now, and that is that immediately upon the adoption of this contract a new era will begin in the motion picture industry, so far as the commercial relations are concerned, between the exhibitor and the distributor."

New Companies File to Enter Industry

Motion picture theatre companies incorporated in New York State last week were: Good Pictures, $20,000, Arthur Ellery, A. E. Cobb and M. H. Ring, New York City; United Producers Films, Inc., $750,000, R. A. Schwartz, H. G. Kosch and Mildred Gerst, New York City; Gate Amusement Corporation, $8,000, H. M. Brill, Alex Weiss and Joseph Goldstein, Brooklyn; Middle East Films Corporation, $1,500,000, M. A. Schlesinger, Maurice Schlesinger, New York City, Adolph Birgel, Hollis, L. I.; Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., $5,000, S. P. Friedman, A. C. Thomas and H. S. Bareford, all of New York City; Shore Road Amusement Company, $250,000, H. E. and E. H. Pulch, J. B. Berger, New York City; Wilkes Theatre Corporation, $5,000, F. X. McKenna, T. E. and G. M. Donovan, New York City.

Texas Exhibitors Defy Sunday Law

Orders to close the eight photoplay theatres of Beaumont, Texas, were given their proprietors and managers when they opened their doors at noon on Sunday, February 4. Constables working from a justice's court served notice upon the motion picture houses. They were not closed, however, their managers making bond for appearance in court.

City and county courts took no hand in the enforcing of the Texas blue law, in fact refusing to take part in the drive.

Roth Severs Connection with Rothchild

EUGENE H. ROTH announces in a wire from San Francisco that he has severed his connections with Herbert L. Rothchild Enterprises after twelve years of service. Mr. Roth launched the Portola theatre in San Francisco, the nucleus of the Rothchild organization and speaks in the highest terms of the harmony that has always existed.

In his wire Mr. Roth says he has no definite plans for the future, except the giving of more personal attention to his picture, "Hunting Big Game in Africa." He expects to be in New York shortly.

Seattle Orpheum Theatre Sold for $400,000

Announcement was made in Seattle this week of the sale of the Orpheum theatre to Louis B. Lurie, a real estate broker of San Francisco and Los Angeles, at a price said to be $400,000. It is believed in Coast theatrical circles that the purchase was made for the Ackerman and Harris interests, as the lease on the present Ackerman and Harris house, the Palace Hip, expires in a short time.

The theatre was built several years ago, and has been used as the home of the Orpheum vaudeville circuit, musical comedy organizations and a motion picture house. At the present time it is occupied by the Cosmopolitan Players, a local stock company. According to Mr. Lurie, approximately $150,000 will be spent on the house within the next four months putting it in first class condition again. It is considered one of the finest all-around theatrical and motion picture houses on the Pacific Coast.

M.P.T.O.A. Pleads Relief from Music Tax

The M. P. T. O. A. has forwarded a letter to each member of the Patents Committee of the United States Senate and House of Representatives as well as to exhibitor leaders throughout the country relative to definite moves being made by the M. P. T. O. A. in regard to the music license tax situation.

The letter to the Government officials calls attention to the alleged combination of publishing houses and writers of music, which by pooling their copyrights makes it possible for them to dictate terms and conditions under which amusement places may use their music. The letter pleads that Congress never intended that copyrights should be so pooled as to create the power to oppress, and urges early relief.

The letter to exhibitors urges them to communicate with their Congressmen and Senators in protest of the tax and the methods alleged to be employed by the Music Society.

Deny City Will Run Own Picture House

R. W. Rigsby, city manager of Durham, N. C., has issued a statement counteracting newspaper articles which have stated that the city of Durham would enter into the motion picture exhibiting game to combat "the high cost of movies" in that city. It is stated that the city Auditorium is under lease to William F. Freeland who has merely received authority from the city administration to convert it into a motion picture theatre.

Club Plan Offered as "Protection" Antidote

Prominent Film Attorney Proposes Remedy to Aid in Relieving First Run Situation

SUPPLEMENTING his statement of two weeks ago, in which he offered a plan for a credit system for the motion picture industry, William Marston Seabury, well known film attorney, this week put forth a plan for the organization of film buying clubs of a type designed to remedy, at least partially, the present first run, booking combination and theatre circuit situation.

The particular condition at which Mr. Seabury's plan is aimed is that of "protection," under which the house or circuit buying first run on a picture obtains assurance that no other theatre in that city will be able to obtain it for a stated period after the showing. In some cases, it is reported, circuits are asking as much as four and six months' protection.

Mr. Seabury's statement is as follows:

"The 'protection' referred to is merely an incident of the operation of first run theatres, the booking combinations and the theatre circuits of which the first run houses are an important part.

"And the stronger the first run control and domination is, the more unreasonable the term of the so-called 'protection' clause becomes.

"The object of this is not to discuss all of the ways in which these conditions may be corrected, but to discuss one way in which the injury which results to the independent producer from the control of first run houses by the booking combinations and the theatre circuits may be alleviated and in many instances successfully overcome.

"The antidote is not more booking combinations or more theatre circuits, although this method of combatting the conditions described will doubtless be attempted in many parts of the country.

"Certain principles upon which the booking combinations and theatre circuits are based, as they are now conducted, must be entirely eliminated before any enterprise possessing any of their attributes may safely be resorted to as a form of fighting fire with fire.

"While the name 'club' or 'syndicate' suggests collective buying, the plan outlined herein is not collective in this sense, but is purely individualistic.

"True, it does not become operative until the individual commitments of the members aggregate a fixed sum, but this fact does not convert an individual project into a collective one.

"The chief characteristics of the booking combinations and theatre circuits involve the imposition of a booking fee for the service or function of booking and interjects a separate legal entity between the producer or the distributor, as the producer's agent, and the exhibitor.

"This is generally accomplished by the blanket booking contract which lends itself so admirably to all sorts of vicious and undesirable practices which inevitably result from booking combinations and theatre circuits.

"These characteristics and the effects and consequences which they produce are the weak and unsound and frequently the illegal points of the booking combinations and theatre circuits as they now exist.

"In the plan proposed the objectionable features of the booking combinations and the theatre circuits as now conducted have been eliminated and the effort has been made to afford the independent producer the opportunity to obtain substantially the same results through a film buying club or syndicate that he may now attain through existing first-run channels if he is fortunate enough to negotiate a satisfactory contract with the theatres.

"The buying club is not at all a substitute for the existing methods of distribution.

"It is designed to supplement existing methods by affording a practical means of combatting existing conditions and of supplying an effective alternative to the producer, who is unable to make a favorable contract for the first run exhibition of his picture under existing conditions.

"The formation of the clubs should be undertaken by a national distributor.

"The producer who has or contemplates having a steady volume of product should insist that the clubs be formed under his name and not under the name of the distributor.

"There should be at least twenty-four clubs, one in at least each of the twenty-four key cities of the country.

"One picture at a time should be used as a basis for the formation of each club.

"The distributor, as the licensee of the producer, should grant to each club a charter which would grant to each member a twenty-day exclusive pre-release franchise to exhibit a specified picture in carefully defined territory with a restricted sub-rental or sub-franchise privilege and a twenty-day protection clause.

"The certificate of membership would constitute the contract between the member and the distributor.

"This certificate should define the term, the duties and the obligations of club membership.

"The distributor's branch manager should act as secretary for each club.

"The exchange office should be the office of the club.

"No membership fee or booking charge of any kind or character should be permitted, and the bookings of each member or franchise holder and every sub-rental or sub-franchise booking should be made directly from the distributor to the exhibitor.

"Each member must pay his franchise fee to the distributor, and the franchise should issue to each club and to the several members so soon as the membership quota in each key city is complete and fully paid in.

"One of the objects of the club should be to save salesmanship expense and to bring about a real co-operation between a group of prominent exhibitors in each territory and the sales force of the distributor in the marketing of the distributor's pictures.

"Salesmanship expense can be saved and curtailed by making it advantageous for every club member to use his best efforts to rent the picture to other exhibitors not only during the pre-release period but thereafter.

"The benefit which the producer and the distributor derives from the club is the quick return similar to that which results from transactions with the first run houses, the booking combinations and the circuits.

"The benefit which the club members derive from the club is that each gets a first run exhibition of the picture which he would not otherwise be able to get, and in addition each enjoys a sub-rental or sub-franchise privilege for a period of twenty days, by means of which he can undoubtedly more than repay his entire initial payment.

"By keeping the pre-release period short, namely twenty days, and by making a comparatively brief protection clause, the future earning of the picture is not impaired by its pre-release, and such national advertising campaign as may accompany the pre-exhibition of the picture helps the producer, the distributor and the club members and largely increases the subsequent bookings of the picture.

"The quota placed on each picture ought to approximate a sum from which its negative cost, the cost of prints and advertising should be paid out of about sixty per cent of the pre-release gross, and this should be apportioned among the branch offices of the distributor according to the usual percentage table.

"Suppose a pre-release quota of $200,000 was fixed.

"New York would have to raise eleven per cent of it, or $22,000.

"This would require a club of thirty-four exhibitors at $650 each, which would yield $22,100.

"The Chicago club would be about the same.

"Los Angeles, Seattle, Denver, New Orleans and Des Moines are each approximately a two per cent territory ,and each would have to raise $4,000.

"A club of only twenty members at $200 each is all that is needed to accomplish this result.

"About four good division managers would be required to instruct the branch managers throughout the country how to organize these clubs.

"The plan must, of course, be supplemented with appropriate advertising.

"The clubs would soon develop a great publicity value to the producer, provided the producer's name were a prominent part of the club's title, and in time the sphere of activity and influence of each club, in each locality, would increase greatly. The clubs would keep the name of the producer constantly before all of the exhibitors and if the quota for each picture was fixed at a sum which would enable the club members to make money by sub-renting their franchise, considerable rivalry could be developed among the exhibitors in each locality for membership in the clubs, and it is not at all improbable that under proper and skillful management and direction these clubs could become a highly important part of the marketing of each first-class picture.

"The cost of prints in excess of the number usually required and other expenses incident to the plan should be charged indirectly to the club member and should be figured as part of the franchise quota for each key city. The cost of the prints could be minimized by releasing New York and Chicago simultaneously and the other cities after the pre-release campaign in New York and Chicago is finished."

Pettijohn Discusses Bills Pending in Iowa

C. C. Pettijohn, chief assistant to Will Hays, responded to a wire from F. L. Davie, manager of the Universal exchange, Des Moines, and arrived here Wednesday to pass on the censorship and ten per cent. tax bills which are up for consideration at the state house. These bills have progressed far enough to be recommended to the legislature.

Mr. Pettijohn called a meeting of all the exchange managers and a number of the Des Moines exhibitors at the Hotel Fort Des Moines Wednesday at noon

Mr. Pettijohn returned East leaving the film men divided in their opinion of the outcome of the bills. The film exchange men feel that neither bill will pass and most assuredly not the censorship bill. The exhibitors express themselves as inclined to believe that both will go through. Exchange heads say that the exhibitors are always inclined to look upon the dark side of things but that should the net per cent. tax bill go through it would mean the closing of between 150 and 200 theatres in Iowa. These are theatres in smaller towns.

Women Win Sunday Opening in Jersey Town

Nearly two hundred women of West New York, N. J., went to the bat for Sunday pictures last week and succeeded in keeping the four houses of that town open, after an order had previously gone out from the chief of police that they be closed.

Rev. S. P. Braeckman, acting for the ministers, addressed a letter to Chief Hangley Friday requesting that the theatres be closed Sunday. The order was promptly issued to that effect. Three delegations of women waited upon the chief the next day and a hurried meeting with the Mayor and Town Council was held and the closing order rescinded. Several of the women were members of churches whose ministers were instrumental in effecting the Sunday closing order.

Treasury Department Tax Ruling Awaited

Independent producers and distributors are awaiting with interest the result of the 5 per cent tax ruling now said to be under advisement by the Treasury Department. The Government will determine whether it is within its right to collect the tax under Section 906 of the Revenue Act of 1919.

The Hays organization filed a brief with Washington officials some weeks ago on behalf of several of its members who may be included in the ruling. Other independents have taken the same action.

It is said the Government has filed judgments against several companies, which, with all independents, are awaiting the verdict of the Treasury Department.

Operators' Bills Before N. Y. Legislature

TWO bills of interest to motion picture operators and the manufacturers of projection machines, were introduced in the New York state legislature last week by Assemblyman Steingut, of New York. Both bills are largely technical in character.

Capital on Increase in N. Y. Companies

A COMPARISON in the number of motion picture companies, with capitalization, incorporated during the past month in New York State, with the same month a year ago, indicates a more prosperous condition in the industry, with a greater attractiveness to capital. Last month there were 35 companies incorporated, with a total capitalization of $2,558,500 as compared with 31 companies a year ago, with a capitalization of $953,500.

Ontario Tax Receipts Show Slight Decrease

Amusement tax returns for the large cities of Ontario during 1922, reported by Hon Peter Smith, Ontario Provincial Treasurer, on February 2, indicate that the volume of box office receipts at theatres fell off in a number of centres during the year. This was due, partly at least, to reductions in admission prices, it is believed.

Of the large cities, Ottawa showed a substantial increase over the previous year, however, 1922 being a record year for the Canadian Capital.

The tax totals for various cities follow:—Toronto—1922, $599,743; 1921, $630,033; 1920 $602,749. Hamilton—1922, $112,724; 1921, $127,393; 1920, $125,919. Ottawa—1922, $75,129; 1921, 70,238; 1920. $67,245. Windsor—1922, $17,572; 1921, $20,472; 1920, $22,354.

Censorship Fight Waxes Hot in Missouri

A coincidental fight for and against censorship occurred in Kansas City and Jefferson City, Mo., Tuesday night. At a large public meeting at the Women's City Club, Kansas City, prominent ministers, with Charles C. Pettijohn as their guest, dealt a blow to political censorship, while in Jefferson City, R. V. P. Schneiderhahn, representing the committee of fifty sponsoring the Missouri Censorship Bill, launched the fight of the reformers in a talk before the house committee on criminal jurisprudence.

After outlining the weak and unjust phases of censorship, Mr. Pettijohn turned the meeting over to the ministers and club women, who attended in large numbers. Most outstanding in the attack on censorship was the talk of Dr. H. H. Mayer of Kansas City, prominent Jewish rabbi.

Missouri Bill Discussed Before Committee

Discussion of the Committee of Fifty's motion picture censorship bill was held before the House Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence at Jefferson City, Mo., January 30. Little interest was shown in the measure, save by the reform element from Kansas City and St. Louis.

Representative Charles Goodnight, who conducts a motion picture house at De Soto, Mo., was the only speaker in opposition. He told of his experience with censorship in Kansas, where he operates several houses. He informed the committee that he had found in Kansas anyone who wanted to slip something by the censors didn't have much trouble making proper arrangements.

Drastic Bill Proposed in Michigan

Hard would be the winters, and the summers, too, for the picture stars and their producers in the State of Michigan should the bill introduced by Senator George M. Condon, of Detroit, be enacted into law by the present legislature.

The measure would create a censorship board, to be known as "The Michigan Board of Review."

Briefly, but using the language of the bill itself, all pictures would be tabooed which would emphasize sex appeal, picturize white slavery and commercialized vice, illicit love, nakedness, particularly in bedroom and bathroom scenes, and inciting dances, prolonged demonstrations of passionate love, underworld vice and crime, drunkenness and gambling, suggestions for methods of committing crimes, ridicule of public officials, things offensive to religious beliefs, bloodshed and violence, vulgar gestures and things suggestive, and salacious titles and advertising matter.

Exchange Men Object to Elimination Sheets

The leading exchange men and members of the Washington F-I-L-M Board of Trade have respectively requested the Virginia State Board of Film Censors to discontinue the present practice of sending out at intervals, what is styled an official bulletin of the Board, to exhibitors in Virginia and exchanges in Washington, D. C., and Charlotte, N. C. With this bulletin the Virginia censors have sent a list of all film passed and permits issued and sometimes an "Elimination Sheet," containing a list of films rejected or held up pending the removal of specified sections objected to.

In many cases the exchange manager finds he can't sell a film because his prospect says, "I can't run that picture. The Virginia Board sent an elimination sheet saying the film was all cut to pieces and rejected." Previously in each of these cases the exchange man had conferred with the censors, secured a modification and made the cuts insisted upon.

World's Champion Skater to Appear in Picture

Bobby McLean, holder of numerous world's records for skating, is to be seen in "King of the Ice," a special two-reel production centering about his championship skating, according to an announcement this week by C. B. Schilling, manager of All Nations Features, Inc., which has just completed the picture.

Robert Tansey, maker of "The Race of the Age," the unusually successful short subject dealing with Man o' War, has had charge of the production of "King of the Ice." It is being offered to state rights distributors.

The picture, according to Mr. Schilling, is not merely an exhibition of championship skating, but contains elements of comedy and romance. Bobby McLean, the star, has appeared extensively on the stage and is declared to be an excellent camera subject.

On Sunday, February 11, McLean will attempt to lower all world's skating records at Saranac Lake, N. Y., which is expected to result in extensive publicity.

All Nations Features, Inc., is now working on a series of twelve special one-reel dramas, details concerning which will be announced later.

Warner Bros. to Feature Golf Champ in Series

GENE SARAZEN, the American open golf champion, has been engaged by the Warner Brothers to be featured in a series of seven one reel productions which will be produced at the Warner coast studios under the supervision of Harry Rapf, according to Harry M. Warner. The series will combine comedy and golf instruction, it is stated.

Work is expected to begin on the first of the seven releases following the return of Mr. Sarazen from Miami, Florida, within the next fortnight. Mr. Warner believes that this series will be very popular in that they will give the thousands of golf enthusiasts throughout the country an opportunity to learn the salient features of the game via the screen rather than through the medium of the printed page.

Christie Appointed to L. A. Realty Board

Charles H. Christie, vice president of the film company of his name and president of the Christie Realty Company, has been made a vice president of the Los Angeles Realty Board, thus giving recognition on the latter board to Hollywood, which is probably the most active center around Los Angeles in realty trading and improvement.

Mr. Christie is one of the film men most actively interested in civic affairs and is also one of the officers of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, as well as president of the Motion Picture Producers' Association, which is now the center of public interest in Los Angeles as producers of the gigantic Motion Picture and Historical Exposition this coming summer, commemorative of the Hundredth Anniversary of the Monroe Doctrine.

Metro Names February Releases

Jazzmania, Famous Mrs. Fair, Crinoline and Romance, Woman of Bronze

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION will release four feature productions during February. They are:

Robert Z. Leonard's presentation of Mae Murray in "Jazzmania"; the Fred Niblo production of James Forbes's American play, "The Famous Mrs. Fair"—a Metro-Louis B. Mayer attraction; Viola Dana in "Crinoline and Romance"; and Clara Kimball Young in "The Woman of Bronze."

February 5th is the date set for distribution of Miss Dana's new picture. A week later will come "Jazzmania," with a similar period intervening between this Tiffany production and release of "The Famous Mrs. Fair." The Clara Kimball Young feature will follow on February 26th.

The drama in "Jazzmania" is that involving the fortunes of Queen Ninon, of the mythical country of Jazzmania, and in the handling of it, Robert Z. Leonard, who presents the picture, has gilded it with a brilliant gaiety, states Metro. The settings were executed by Cedric Gibbons. Oliver T. Marsh photographed "Jazzmania." It is a story by Edmund Goulding.

Louis B. Mayer will present his first attraction through Metro with the appearance of the Fred Niblo production, "The Famous Mrs. Fair," the American play by James Forbes, in which Henry Miller and Blanche Bates scored a season or so ago in New York. It has to do with a wife who allows a sudden celebrity to cause her to forget her home. Mr. Niblo has not been content merely with the working out of a thesis; he has interwoven into the story a bold pattern of exciting dramatic incident. Francis Marion wrote the scenario. The cast includes Myrtle Stedman, Huntly Gordon, Marguerite De La Motte, Cullen Landis, Ward Crane, Carmel Myers and Helen Ferguson.

The girl grandma was and the girl her granddaughter is are contrasted by Viola Dana in "Crinoline and Romance." As Miss Emmy Lou, the heroine, the little Metro star fares forth from a home where Civil War chivalry still obtains, into a set of young people who see life through a fog of cocktails and jazz. The picture was directed by Harry Beaumont. Bernard McConville, adapter of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," wrote both the story and scenario of "Crinoline and Romance." John Arnold photographed it.

Harry Garson has provided a third drama for Clara Kimball Young in "The Woman of Bronze," Henry Kistaemaecher's novel in French, which was dramatized for the American stage, and then, in turn, translated to the screen. The principal part is that of a sculptor's wife, played by Miss Young, who fights to hold a temperamental husband from the lure of a young model. Paul Kester's stage version has been scenarized by Hope Loring and Louis Lighton, and the direction is the work of King Vidor. The photographer is William O'Connell. The cast includes John Bowers, Katherine McGuire, Edwin Stevens, Lloyd Whitlock and Edward Kimball. The picture is presented by Harry Garson.

"Green Goddess" Bought by Distinctive for Screen

"The Green Goddess," William Archer's melodrama in which George Arliss has been making a triumphal tour of the country, has been bought by Distinctive Pictures Corporation for production as a motion picture. Arthur S. Friend, president of Distinctive, also announces that he has acquired the picture rights to a new Clarence Budington Kelland romance, "Barred Doors," which will appear serially in Collier's in March.

Both pictures will be made in the new Distinctive-Biograph Studios in New York City.

Universal Chiefs in Production Conference

R. H. Cochrane Goes to Coast for Parley with Laemmle on Late 1923 and 1924 Product

MR. R. H. COCHRANE, vice president of the Universal Pictures Corporation, has gone to Universal City, Cal., to confer with Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of the corporation, concerning Universal's 1924 product. For the first time in a number of years, it is stated, Universal is so far advanced in production the company's output a year and more hence can be taken up in detail and definitely planned.

Upon the eve of his departure, Mr. Cochrane let it be known that Universal already has lined up six big pictures for 1924. This constitutes one-half of the Universal-Jewel product for the year, under the present system of releasing one super-picture a month.

The Universal vice-president took with him options and offers on certain other big stories and plays which are likely to be chosen for the remaining pictures in the 1924 Jewel schedule. It is understood that this selection will occupy the immediate attention of Mr. Laemmle and Mr. Cochrane.

The list of six 1924 Jewels already selected was made public. The most important, perhaps, is "The Acquittal," the stage success from the pen of Rita Weiman, produced by Cohan & Harris a season ago or so, and in which Crystal Hearne was starred. It is planned to use "The Acquittal" as a starring vehicle for Priscilla Dean. As "The Acquittal" already has been turned over to the scenario staff at Universal City for adaptation to the screen, it is likely that Miss Dean will begin work on this picture as soon as she completes "Drifting," the William A. Brady stage success, which she is now translating to the screen for Universal's Jewel release in August.

Another of the projected Jewels is "Naughty Marietta," which in all probabilities will be assigned an early release date in 1924. This musical comedy, written by Rida Johnson Young and Victor Herbert, and in which Emma Trentini won her original fame, will serve as a starring vehicle for Virginia Valli.

The third stage success in the list is "The Pretty Sister of Jose," which originally was a novel by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, and which later was dramatized as a starring vehicle for Miss Maude Adams. Universal will use this story as a vehicle for Miss Valli also.

Another play of equal reputation is "The Co-Respondent," written by Rita Weiman and Alice Leal Pollock, which Universal has just acquired for filming. It may be used as a vehicle for Miss Valli.

The fifth play to be picturized at Universal City for the coming year will be "The Burglar," one of Augustus Thomas' first dramatic works. It was adapted from "Edith's Burglar," a story by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett. Thomas originally wrote a one-act play from the story. Its success actually determined his career as a playwright. He later expanded it to four acts, after which it was produced with Maurice Barrymore in the title role.

The 1924 list also includes "The Vehement Flame," one of the best sellers of 1922. The novel is from the pen of Margaret Deland. It is not known at this time whether it will be used as a starring vehicle for one of the present Universal stars, or whether outside players of prominence will be engaged for its production.

Another reason for Mr. Cochrane's visit to the Coast is the decisions to be made by Mr. Laemmle and him in conference with production officials at the big studio plant, concerning Universal's late 1923 five-reel attractions.

Mr. Cochrane is taking with him to the Coast a complete understanding of the territorial conditions bearing upon Universal's five-reel feature schedule. Mr. Joseph Friedman, newly appointed general sales manager for Universal attractions, outlined the entire feature situation to him just before his departure.

It is highly probable that a successor to Irving G. Thalberg, who recently resigned as director general of Universal City, will be announced during Mr. Cochrane's stay at the Coast.

Will Rogers Is Signed for Hal Roach-Pathe Series

WILL ROGERS has signed a contract to appear in a series of comedies which will be produced under the auspices of Hal Roach and released by Pathe. There will be thirteen two-reelers to be released at the rate of one a month.

Rogers, who is at present appearing in Ziegfeld's "Follies" in New York, will remain with the "Follies" company until the completion of its run in New York and then go West to begin work at the Hal Roach studios. Says Rogers concerning his new contract with the Hal Roach-Pathe organizations:

"I am going out and make five reel features, in two reels. In my experience I have found that most all audiences go to sleep at about the third reel during the showing of the average feature. Well, this time I am going to beat them to it and make them keep awake by giving them two reels of laughs.

"Yes, these two-reelers are going to be funny, even if I have to use some Harold Llovd cut-outs to do it."

Edna Purviance Star in Chaplin Production

FOLLOWING the receipt of its copyright registration in play form, Charles Chaplin yesterday announced that the title of his first serious motion picture production would be "Public Opinion."

The production which is already well under way and which has temporarily been called "Destiny," will be in ten reels and though written and directed by Chaplin himself, it will star Edna Purviance in the leading role and will be released through United Artists.

"Public Opinion" marks a new departure in most every element that goes to make up motion pictures. In story structure, in acting and in theme the production promises to be revolutionary and Chaplin himself is very emphatic in saying that it is by far his most important contribution to the screen.

In speaking of the picture Chaplin says: "There will be no armies, no huge sets and no elaborate mechanical effects, but through it all will run a poignant note of human suffering, joy, tragedy and humor. There have been a number of queries as to whether I intend to act in the picture or not. I am not going to act in it, not from any policy, but because in the story as I truthfully see it, there is no place for my character."

Playing opposite Edna Purviance, who is being launched on her starring career, is Adolphe Menjou while other important members of the cast include Carl Miller, Lydia Knott, Harry Northrup and Malvina Polo.

Warners Will Feature Dog Actor in Production

Warner Brothers are to produce a "dog star" feature. The story, laid in the Canadian Northwest, was written by Chester M. Franklin and Fred Kennedy Myton, and will be filmed at the Warner Brothers studios on the West Coast under the working title of "Wolf Fangs." Chester M. Franklin will direct the subject.

The featured canine actor is Rintintin ("Rawntawntawn"), a German police dog which won considerable notice in France during the war owing to the fact that he escaped injury in a German air-raid on a French town that wrought havoc among the inhabitants. The dog has already appeared in "My Dad," "The Man from Hell's River," "Wildfire." and others.

Harry Carey's New Vehicle Based on Two Stories

Harry Carey's next screen appearance will be in a combination of two stories, "The Man from the Desert," by Wyndham Martyn, and "Lubly Ge-Ge," by Eugene Manlove Rhodes. Wyndham Gittens, head of the continuity staff at the Film Booking Offices studios, who has taken the two stories in hand is weaving the plots together.

"The Man of the Desert" appeared recently in "Action Stories," a popular magazine, while "Lubly Ge-Ge" is an original story by Rhodes, who also wrote Carey's previous play, "Good Men and True." The composite story will have the title, "The Man of the Desert," and will be directed by Val Paul.

Fox Preparing for Accessories on Pathe Subjects

New prints, posters and accessories are being prepared for productions based on literary masterpieces which were made in the past by the Fox Film Corporation. The preparation of new accessories on these subjects is said by the Fox Film home office in New York to have been made necessary by the demand for these pictures on the part of exhibitors, educational institutions, and civic and social institutions. The subjects include "Evangeline," "A Tale of Two Cities," "Les Miserables," "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," "Treasure Island," "The Babes in the Woods," "Jack and the Beanstock," "If I Were King" and "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp."

"Adam and Eva" Opens on B'way February 11th

Marion Davies will appear at the Rivoli Theatre beginning February 11th in "Adam and Eva," a screen version of the well known stage comedy. Miss Davies plays the part of "Eva" and T. Roy Barnes plays "Adam."

Griffith Company in South for Exterior Scenes

D. W. Griffith left Tuesday of last week on a filming expedition through five Southern states to get exterior scenes for his next production, "The White Rose." Forty-seven locations have been selected for the outdoor scenes the story of "The White Rose" demands.

This is the first time in three years that Griffith has closed his Mamaroneck studios for an extended time, as he expects to remain in the South for three months.

The company which Griffith takes includes Mae Marsh, Ivor Novello, Carol Dempster, Neil Hamilton, Porter Strong; Lucille La Verne, Joseph Burke and Charles Mack.

Bert Lytell Is Signed by Principal Pictures

Bert Lytell has been signed by Principal Pictures Corporation for the titular role in George M. Cohan's "The Meanest Man in the World," which that concern will produce and release in the independent market.

Another popular star engaged by Principal for "The Meanest Man in the World" is Eileen Percy. Incidentally this screen version of the famous stage play will be the first picture that will be made by Principal Pictures Corporation at its new studios on the West Coast.

Frank Lloyd to Direct New Norma Talmadge Vehicle

Joseph H. Schenck has signed Frank Lloyd to direct the next Norma Talmadge picture, "Ashes of Vengeance." Lloyd is now directing Miss Talmadge in "Within the Law."

"Ashes of Vengeance" was purchased in London during Mr. Schenck's recent trip abroad. It was written by H. B. Somerville and is a romance of old France during the reign of Charles IX. This production will be started immediately after the completion of "Within the Law," which is being made on the coast.

Roy Crawford Leaves For Topeka, Kan.

Roy Crawford, vice-president and treasurer of Associated Exhibitors, left the last of last week for Topeka, Kan., his former home, expecting to be away from New York about ten days.

Whitman Bennett to Co-Star Bushman and Bayne

WHITMAN BENNETT announces the organization of F. X. B. Pictures, Inc., of which he is vice-president and general-manager, created especially for the purpose of producing, exploiting and releasing a series of photoplays with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne as the stars.

The first of these productions is now in work at the Whitman Bennett Studio in Yonkers and should be ready for first-run releases—in conjunction with a specially devised sketch—not later than the middle of March. The story is briefly described as an elaborate modern melodrama, founded on a domestic situation but also containing a mystery element.

Shauer Returns From Havana Conference

E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, returned on February 1st from a ten days' business trip to Havana, Cuba, where he conferred with officials of the Caribbean Film Company concerning plans for the distribution and exploitation of Paramount pictures during the coming year. Contracts were signed for the continuation of Paramount representation in Cuba, Porto Rico, Hayti and Santo Domingo, and plans perfected for increased exploitation for Paramount pictures.

B'klyn Books "Robin Hood" for Local First-Run

The question of which theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., would get the "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" first-run was settled last week when Managing Director Edward L. Hyman, of the Brooklyn Mark Strand, announced that this United Artists feature had been booked for an early first-run. A trailer announcing this fact was shown starting February 4, during the run of "The Dangerous Age."

Clarence Badger to Direct "Red Lights"

Goldwyn has engaged Clarence Badger to direct the picturization of Edward E. Rose's new mystery play, "Red Lights," formerly called "The Rear Car." This play has had a long run in Los Angeles and is now being presented in the East.

Carey Wilson, of Goldwyn's editorial department, is making the screen adaptation of the play.

June Elvidge Engaged for Role in C.B.C. Feature

June Elvidge has been engaged for an important role in the east that will support Bryant Washburn in C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation's production "Temptation."

"Little Church Around the Corner" for Broadway

The first public showing of the Warner Brothers classic of the screen, "Little Church Around the Corner," will be given at the Strand theatre, New York, during the week of March 11.

The photoplay was written by Olga Printzlau, based on the stage play by Charles Blaney and the novel by Marion Russell. It was directed by William A. Seiter.

Among the cast headed by Claire Windsor are Kenneth Harlan, Walter Long, Margaret Seddon, Pauline Stark, Hobart Bosworth, George Cooper, Winter Hall, Alex Francis and Cyril Chadwick.

Hiers Is Back at Studio from Honeymoon

Walter Hiers, back at the Lasky studio from his honeymoon in the East, has started work in his second Paramount starring picture, "Seventy-five Cents an Hour," an original story by Frank Condon which has been adapted for the screen by Grant Carpenter. Joseph Henabery is the director.

Jacqueline Logan, who enacted the leading feminine role in Hiers' first picture, "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime," will again be featured as leading woman. Ricardo Cortez will play the heavy role, his first big part under his contract with Paramount. Others in the supporting cast are Charles Ogle, Lucile Ward, Robert Dudley, Guy Oliver, Clarence Burton and Cullen Tate.

Preferred Product to Be Shown at Army Posts

Preferred Pictures, distributed by the Al Lichtman Corporation, will be shown in all motion picture houses conducted by the United States Army, according to an announcement just made by Al Lichtman. Mr. Lichtman recently completed an arrangement with F. H. Martel, director of bookings for the United States Army Motion Picture Service, by which each Preferred Picture will be shown in the army houses after the showing in the regular theatre in the respective zones of army posts.

Victor Herman to Direct Constance Talmadge

Victor Herman has been signed by Joseph M. Schenck to direct Constance Talmadge in the picture following "Duley" which Sidney Franklin is now working on the coast for First National release. John Emerson and Anita Loos will write the picture that Herman will direct. It will be a story dealing with the life of Napoleon and Constance will have the role of a little milliner. No name has been selected as yet for this picture.

Wampas Elects New Officers for Coming Year

OFFICERS elected by the Wampas, the western Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, at the annual election on Monday night of this week were: Joe Jackson, Goldwyn, president; Harry Wilson, Principal, vice-president; Howard Strickling, Metro, secretary; Pat Dowling, Christie, treasurer; Jerome Beatty, Sam Cohn, Ray Davidson, Garrett Graham, Mark Larkin, directors.

American Competition Felt Keenly in France

American competition is increasingly felt in the French motion picture industry, and prior to the irritation occasioned by the Ruhr occupation German producers were finding a ready market for a portion of their output in the French market, according to advices to the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache Jones at Paris. This competition has developed to such an extent that the Comite Intersyndicale de l'industrie Cinematographie Francaise and its members have addressed to all the representatives in Parliament vigorous protests against this development; embodying therein suggestions for avoiding what they feel to be a serious menace to the prosperity of the local industry.

In these protests they point out that at the present time France is far behind both the United States and Germany in production. They admit that this condition is, to a certain degree, to be expected as permanent, due to the limitation on the French market, France having only about 2,500 houses where pictures are shown; whereas, according to the society's compilation, the United States has somewhat over 17,000 such exhibition places and Germany 8,000, but they nevertheless believe that the present inequality would be lessened if a more liberal policy were adopted by the Government.

Fred and Fanny Hatton Do Script for Cosmopolitan

Frederick and Fanny Hatton, authors of the plays, "The Great Lover," "Upstairs and Down," "Years of Discretion" and "Lombardi, Ltd.," are making a screen adaptation of the short story, "Cain and Mabel," for Cosmopolitan Productions. "Cain and Mabel" originally appeared in Hearst's Magazine, and was written by H. C. Witwer. It will be produced by Cosmopolitan with an all-star cast.

Propose New Tax to Make Up Censor Deficit

Governor E. Lee Trinkle, of Virginia, announced to Virginia newspaper men last week that he will ask the Virginia assembly at the forthcoming special session he recently called, to provide for the deficit recently shown in the report of Chairman Evan Chesterman of the Motion Picture Censor Board of Virginia, by the imposition of an additional charge of fifty cents a reel for inspection and licensing of film. The existing charge is understood to be one dollar a reel.

This action is necessary, as expenses cannot be met from the present collections.

Woman Legislator Puts Over Sunday Bill

According to newspaper reports from Memphis a woman legislator outgeneraled the opposition in putting over a bill to close Sunday picture shows. Representative John Shea is quoted as saying that Miss Marion Griffin "double-crossed" the delegation.

Shea's version of the affair is that Miss Griffin, after promising the delegation that she would not attempt to introduce the bill for twenty days, took advantage of the absence of all opposition from the house with the exception of Representative Jeter, who, with her, favored the passage of the bill, and put the measure through. Shea returned just in time to hear Miss Griffin conclude her speech for the bill, and with two delegates for it and one against, the vote showed the majority of Memphians opposed to Sunday opening.

Famous Players Canadian Shows Big Increase

An increase in profits of no less than 85 per cent. for the first period of the 1922-23 season over the corresponding period of the previous year was secured by Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, which operates the chain of Capitol moving picture theatres in Canada from Montreal to Victoria. This was shown in a statement which was presented at a meeting of directors at Toronto on February 1.

Profits amounting to $175,743.80, before allowance for depreciation and income taxes, were indicated in the financial statement presented for the three months ending November 25, 1922. After the acceptance of this report, the directors declared a dividend of 2 per cent. on the first preference stock of the company for the quarter payable on March 1 to shareholders of record February 10.

American Releasing to Get Hugh Dierker Subject

Scheduled for distribution by American Releasing, Hugh Dierker's new picture, "The Other Side," is now under way in Los Angeles with a cast comprising Pat O'Malley, Fritzi Brunette, David Butler, Harmon McGregor, Peter Burke, Charles Clary, Herbert Standing, Edward Kimball and Helen Lynch.

"The Other Side" is described as a domestic drama of spiritual unfoldment.

Pathe Denies Rumor of New Owners

Bernhard Benson, vice president of Pathe and a partner in the firm of Merrill, Lynch & Co., characterized the published statement in a recent issue of Variety to the effect that "a possible change of ownership of the Pathe organization was in prospect" as entirely unfounded and absolutely contrary to fact.

Reid Estate is Estimated at $50,000

The estate of Wallace Reid, who passed away last week, amounts to approximately $50,000, according to dispatches from the coast. Letters of administration on the estate were filed by Dorothy Davenport Reid. Property listed with the application was estimated at approximately the figure mentioned.

Hobart Bosworth Signed by Goldwyn for Five Years

ANOTHER big motion picture star, Hobart Bosworth, has been placed under a five year contract by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. He has just been signed to appear in some big Goldwyn productions now being made or in preparation.

The actor will be featured in the Goldwyn photoplays in which he appears. Under the terms of his contract he will be permitted to continue making his own independent starring productions, at the Goldwyn studios, on the condition that Goldwyn has an option on releasing them.

The first of the Bosworth independent productions will be "The Blood Ship" from Norman Springer's novel of that title.. He had just completed four independent productions before appearing in Marshall Neilan's "Strangers' Banquet."

Agnes Ayres Replaces Bebe Daniels in "Exciters"

Owing to the fact that Bebe Daniels, who was operated upon for appendicitis recently, will be confined to the hospital for at least four weeks more, the Paramount production department announces that Agnes Ayres will replace Miss Daniels as co-star with Antonio Moreno in "The Exciters," which Richard Ordynski will direct at the Long Island studio.

As soon as Miss Daniels has entirely recovered from her illness she will assume the stellar role in "Contrahand," the Clarence Budington Kelland story, which was originally assigned to Miss Ayres.

Miss Ayres and Mr. Moreno are expected from the coast in a few days to start work in "The Exciters."

Scenes showing Baby Peggy in "Carmen, Jr.," Century comedy, a Universal release.

Scenes from the Fox production, "Does It Pay?" with Hope Hampton and a specially selected cast.

Valentino Contract May Be Adjusted

Paramount Reported Ready to Listen to Overtures Star May Have to Make

A STATEMENT appearing in last Sunday's New York World and purporting to quote an unnamed "official" of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, conveys the impression that the Paramount organization is in a receptive state of mind with respect to any overtures that Rodolph Valentino may care to make in adjustment of their differences. When Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, was asked to comment upon the New York World article he declared that the statement embodied in the interview with the unknown "official" was substantially correct. What action, if any, Valentino will take is not known at time of going to press. Arthur Butler Graham, attorney for Valentino, when asked early in the week for his comment on the World article, characterized it as "Famous Players propaganda."

The interview with the Famous Players-Lasky "official" is quoted by the New York World as follows:

"We stand ready now, as always, to give Mr. Valentino the most artistic pictures it is possible to make. We are still holding Alan Dwan, who is ready to do 'The Spanish Cavalier,' the script for which was prepared at Mr. Valentino's request by Miss June Mathis. His pictures would have the best production resources that the industry affords, he could have the best scenario writers and directors available, and you may be sure we would give him every possible co-operation. As to his compensation, we always have been and are now prepared to discuss and readjust his contract commensurate with his present-day popularity, as we have from time to time done with other artists. All we ask in return is his honest co-operation."

The New York World also intimated that Famous Players-Lasky was contemplating court action with a view to enjoin Valentino from dancing in Detroit. Mr. Zukor, after stating that the paragraph quoted above reflected substantially Paramount's stand with respect to the Valentino controversy, was further requested to comment upon the World's report of possible injunction proceedings on the part of Paramount against Valentino's dancing act in Detroit. Mr. Zukor said he had no comment to make on this phase of the controversy, as this was a detail of the company's legal department which had not been called to his attention. Mr. Graham, Valentino's counsel, when queried about the report of likely injunction action against his client, replied that the dispute was not based on matters of compensation and that he would welcome any attempt to penalize Valentino for contempt of court as the World article suggested might be tried.

Lynde Denig Resigns from Goldwyn Publicity Staff

Lynde Denig, assistant publicity director of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, has resigned after nearly four years with that company, first in charge of trade paper publicity and for the past two years as assistant to Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity.

Prior to his connection with Goldwyn, Mr. Denig had served as a motion picture critic with various trade publications.

In addition to his work in the advertising and publicity and magazine fields, Mr. Denig has had considerable experience in editing and titling pictures. It is understood that he has been commissioned to write a series of special articles for a new national publication.

Mayer Purchases "Why Men Leave Home"

Louis B. Mayer has purchased the film rights to Avery Hopwood's "Why Men Leave Home" as John M. Stahl's next vehicle. Work will begin immediately on the Mayer lot.

Rowland Against Cut in Admissions

Says Lowering of Production and Exhibition Standards Will Surely Follow

REDUCING box office admissions with a view to increased patronage is a fallacy, according to Richard A. Rowland, general manager of Associated First National Pictures. A cutting in price as a solution to poor business was recommended in a recent article appearing in the trade press. Mr. Rowland's statement in refutation was occasioned by the appearance of this article.

The theatre patrons are ever demanding better pictures, and better pictures mean greater outlay of money, more time for production and greater artistry, says Mr. Rowland. Exhibition standards are at the same time being constantly raised to meet critical tastes; exceptional pictures are being given long runs and "securing without protest advanced admission prices." A widespread reduction in admission prices could only result in reducing the quality of productions and destroying the prestige of the screen already gained by years of sincere effort, declares the First National general manager, who continues:

"The selling price of a theatre's admission ticket is regulated by the cost of production, plus an expectancy of profit just the same as any other commodity, and it is illogical to expect box office prices to be lowered in the face of continually rising costs of operation of the theatre."

Mr. Rowland points out that under the improved screen standards "the public mind is growing in appreciation and developing in its taste." The demand for better pictures will continue, "and there can be no backtracking," he maintains. Further, "it is unlikely that theatre patrons would accept less in service, surroundings, music and other elements that go into a complete entertainment than they now receive."

"It is possible that some theatres might benefit by a reduction in admission prices from causes that are purely local, but it is dangerous to judge an entire industry by such remote examples," continues Mr. Rowland. "One theatre, it has been stated, reduced its admission price one-half and more than doubled its attendance. If such is true it is a remarkable achievement, but it is possible that other elements entered into the increase in business. A reduction of fifty per cent in admission prices means that an exhibitor must double his attendance to secure the same receipts, and if he is to increase his receipts, must create a clientele perhaps three times as large as he formerly enjoyed. Is such an achievement possible in even one per cent of the theatres of this country? Are there enough potential patrons in your neighborhood to justify such a gamble? And lastly, what is the effect on competition?

"Theatre patrons do not come out of thin air; the majority of them must be pulled from other theatres, and as a result your competitor must slash his prices to meet yours, with the result that soon all are selling admissions at reduced prices while the new flow of patrons that have brightened your doors for a period gradually drift back to their old haunts, and both your competitor and yourself are in exactly the same position you were before, minus a large portion of your gross receipts."

Mr. Rowland concludes with the suggestion that a reduction in prices for less desirable seats might achieve good results without forfeiture of standards, but reiterates that a "wholesale slaughter of admission prices is a dangerous path to take."

Tom Moore, Ann Forrest In Nigh's Second

Lawrence Weber & Bobby North, distributors of Will Nigh's productions for this season, received word from the independent director that Tom Moore and Ann Forrest had been cast as the principals of Nigh's second feature. Both stars have already begun work at the Metro studios in New York City, where the new picture is being shot.

Conrad Nagel Is Signed by Goldwyn for Long Term

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has signed Conrad Nagel under a long-term contract to appear in featured roles in a number of its most important productions.

For the past three years he has been playing featured roles under the Famous Players-Lasky banner. His screen career was preceded by work on both the vaudeville and the dramatic stage. He first appeared as an actor in the Des Moines, Iowa, stock company. He next went into vaudeville for six months, and then played on Broadway in "The Natural Law." He next appeared in the role of "Youth" in the Broadway presentation of "Experience," and after two seasons in New York went on tour with Mary Nash. His next role was opposite Alice Brady in "Forever," and it was at this time that he became interested in screen work.

Irving Thalberg's Association with Mayer Verified

Louis B. Mayer this week confirmed the report that Irving G. Thalberg will shortly become a member of his organization.

Mr. Thalberg tendered his resignation as director-general of the Universal Pictures Corporation several days ago and will leave Universal City on February 15 to become an executive at the Louis B. Mayer studios. His new post will carry with it the title of vice-president, and will include a substantial interest in the Mayer company, which was donated him upon the signing of the contract, it is stated.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Making a Man—
Business about average. Nothing exceptional about the feature. (East.)

Attendance was handicapped by stormy weather, but the picture did a fair business, as Jack Holt is popular here. (Middle West.)

Kick In—
This met with favor. General appeal seemed to have been good. Drew from all types of audiences. Business increased toward the end of the week. (Middle West.)

Our patrons liked this one. Business good during its run. (Middle West.)

One of the best pictures here this season. Good box office value. (Middle West.)

The World's Applause—
Fine picture; drew the crowds in face of big opposition. (Middle West.)

Good picture, from box office angle of drawing them in, but not one that advertises itself one patron to another. Fell off latter part of week. (West.)

Java Head—
Very high class picture with novel story. Well acted, direction and photography exceptionally good. Business heavy. (Middle West.)

My American Wife—
A splendid entertainment, in which Miss Swanson and Moreno rise to new heights. Drew excellently. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Stranger's Banquet—
One of the season's big pictures. No mistake in booking it. Fine receipts. (Middle West.)

Alias Julius Caesar—
Ray fans not plentiful any more. Those who came kicked. (West.)

Fury—
A very good picture. My patrons liked it. (Middle West.)

The Voice from the Minaret—
Broke the house records for this season. A lockout almost every night. All this in spite of adverse criticisms in the newspapers. This combination of stars cannot be beat. (Middle West.)

Did big business and pleased two sets of "fans." Great combination. (West.)

ORCHESTRA-ORGAN

Hand drawn "Beautiful and Damned" ad run in St. Louis newspapers by the West End Lyric and Capitol theatres

The Cave Girl—
Cannot highly recommend it. (West.)

METRO

Hearts Aflame—
A fair melodrama that drew moderately well. It's all right for its kind, but doesn't appeal to the vast majority. (Middle West.)

All the Brothers Were Valiant—
Fine picture. Interesting because it deals with elemental emotions. Business wasn't bad, but it was nothing to boast of. (Middle West.)

Trifling Women—
This feature has high entertainment value and our patrons liked it. Played to good business. (Middle West.)

Business just fair on this one. Patrons not so enthusiastic over the story. (East.)

Quincy Adams Sawyer—
A melodrama with a lot of kick and plenty of thrills; went over big.

Peg o' My Heart—
Started a run of success for a theatre that has not been maintaining the highest box office receipts. There were lock-outs for both matinee and evening performances and finished strong at the end of the week. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Tess o' the Storm Country—
The first audiences were cautious about this, seemed to have the idea that they had seen it before. But the crowds for the week were altogether satisfactory. Business was fine; a fine picture that advertised itself. (Middle West.)

Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood—
Holding its own on longest run in history of this theatre. (West.)

One Exciting Night—
Good picture; seemed to please audiences. Drew well. (Middle West.)

Did a good business at the beginning of the week, but the attendance fell off, due to bad weather. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

One Wonderful Night—
Went very well throughout week's run. Should please anywhere. (Southwest.)

The Scarlet Car—
An entertaining feature which did not attract average business. Stiff competition to blame. (East.)

The Black Bag—
Good little mystery picture. Seemed to take well. Good for any program house. (Middle West.)

The Flirt—
Played to good houses for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Rawlinson popular here; did well with it. (West.)

The Kentucky Derby—
Just like all others of this type, no better and no worse. Business fell off. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Broken Chains—
Business was good. The contest in which this was winner was near enough to have some effect on business, it is to be supposed. Week averaged well. (Middle West.)

The Christian—
Playing at two theatres and doing capacity at both. A wonderful picture. (West.)

FOX

Lights of New York—
In every way desirable. Pleased generally and drew them in. (South West.)

Nero—
Excellent costume picture; played to big business. (Middle West.)

The Yosemite Trail—
An attractively mounted western that proved just the thing for patrons of this house. With a strong supplementary bill, box office smiled all week. (East.)

WARNER BROTHERS

The Beautiful and Damned—
A fair sort of picture, but cannot be classed with season's top notchers. Did very well with it. (Middle West.)

AL LICHTMAN CORP.

Shadows—
An average attendance for the week. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

Flesh and Blood—
In combination with a good vaudeville bill, this picture played to immense crowds. Lon Chaney has a big following, who are interested in his work. This picture was considered especially well suited to him. (Middle West.)

I Am the Law—
This was the feature that marked the passing of this house. Continual publication of fact that house would be closed, hurt business. Receipts way off. (East.)

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 725 S. WABASH AVE.

Around the Trade

THE growing business of the Master Advertisers, has again made it necessary for them to move into larger quarters, and this time they are located at 30 E. Eighth Street, second floor. These enterprising young men have recently installed their own printing plant, which is operated under the name of Carmack-Dezel Printing Company, and also is now prepared to serve the exhibitors throughout the territory with trailers. A new trailer, originated by Albert Dezel, is composed of excerpts from reviews by Chicago motion picture critics, on leading photoplays, and is already being shown at the Woodlawn, Stratford and New Tiffin theatres. It is headed by the main title, "Leading Critical Comments by Chicago Critics."

The motion picture critic of the Chicago Tribune has picked the following twelve as the best photoplays shown for the first time in Chicago during the month of January. They are: "The Flirt," "Brothers Under the Skin," "Sure Fire Flint," "Fury," "Fabiola," "Java Head," "Back Home and Broke," "Shadows," "Pawn Ticket 210," "Thelma," "Monte Cristo," and "Love in the Dark."

Three of the up-to-date releases in the state right field had exceptional showings recently in the Chicago loop. They are, "The Streets of New York" and "Night Life In Hollywood," which were shown for three weeks, and "Shadows," which ran four weeks.

At the last meeting of the board of directors of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, action was taken, commending the movement inaugurated by the Chicago Lodge No. 4, B. P. O. Elks, to stamp out the dangerous use of narcotics, and pledging the support of the I. M. P. T. O. and offering the use of the theatre screens for the dissemination of propaganda against this growing evil. Joseph Hopp and Adolph Powell were appointed a committee to deliver the resolutions to the Chicago Lodge of Elks, Mr. Powell making a presentation speech, which received great applause. The lodge passed a resolution, accepting the support of the theatre men with thanks and commending them highly for the public-spirited stand taken.

The Chicago Herald-Examiner's fifteen thousand dollar picture contest has brought to life Chicago's premier movie fan, who won second prize in the first week's contest and first prize in the second week, and is after all the rest of the prizes. She is Anna Abrams and she said: "I am a movie fan and go to three or four movies every night. Whenever I am wanted I can always be found at the movies. I never miss a night at the Metropolitan theatre, and can claim the record of going to more movie houses than any other fan in town." It looks like the manager of the Metropolitan ought to see that Miss Abrams gets a medal or other suitable honors.

Aaron J. Jones, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, has journeyed to New Orleans for a season of golf, following a very busy season, made even more arduous than usual by the opening of the new McVicker's, over which Mr. Jones took personal supervision.

Harry Weiss, manager of the First National exchange at St. Louis, was in the city last week and received a hearty welcome from his numerous friends. He reports business is excellent in his territory.

S. E. Pittle, owner of a circuit of Illinois theatres, has recently taken over the Pythian Theatre at Marshall.

The Bijou Theatre at Carrollton has been purchased by Ross Denny, who is also the owner of the Dreamland Theatre at Roodhouse.

The opening of the Tivoli Theatre, at Michigan City, on February 1st, was one of the important events of the week. A large delegation of Chicago motion picture men attended and congratulated Managing Director Abe Wallerstein on the new house, which is already known as "The Pride of Michigan City." It not only is a large and commodious theatre, but the architecture and decorations are of the highest type, and it stands today as one of the finest theatres in the State of Michigan.

Mitchell Lewis, who has been in Chicago for the last five weeks, playing in Blair Coan Productions, "The Little Girl Next Door," has completed his work here and left for Los Angeles. Mr. Lewis has been engaged to take a star part in "The Spoilers," which will be produced by Jesse Hampton, and on which, work is to start immediately.

Paul Bush, who has held many important positions along Chicago's film row, is reported about to depart for Los Angeles, where he will make his home in the future. Mr. Bush, it is understood, has been appointed coast representative of the Radiotone Company, which controls a process for the making of very beautiful pictures on metal.

Roy Alexander was in the city this week, having been called here from Kansas City on account of the serious illness of his mother, who has suffered two strokes of paralysis within half an hour. His wife will be unable to join him in Chicago, as in rushing to the telephone to get a long distance call from Mr. Alexander, she fell and sprained her ankle, and is confined to her bed. Roy's host of friends sympathize deeply with him in his trouble.

"Jazzmania," Mae Murray's latest Metro picture, will have its first Chicago showing at Balaban & Katz' Chicago Theatre, the latter part of the month.

Leo and Harry Brunhild got back from their Florida vacation just in time to run into the zero weather of Chicago. Nevertheless, they are glad to be here as they are thoroughly loyal citizens, and believe there is no place like the Windy City.

Among the Exchanges

PUBLICITY Director Dan Roche of Famous Players-Lasky's Chicago exchange, is back at the local headquarters after firing the opening gun in the New York campaign exploiting "The Covered Wagon." A news weekly carried pictures of Dan, piloting the ox-team attached to the "covered wagon," down Broadway, New York, and many of his friends, after seeing him on Chicago screens last week, recommend that Dan enter the ranks of the actors. Mr. Roche, a little later, will supervise a publicity campaign on this big picture in the cities of the central west.

Frank Zambreno has completed arrangements for bringing Neva Gerber, popular little star, from the coast to Chicago, where she will make personal appearances in connection with the showing of several of her latest photoplays, which are released through Progress Pictures. Her most recent production is "Impulse," a society drama with a mystery angle, and other films which brought her into prominence, which are being released by Mr. Zambreno, are "The Price Of Youth," "Dangerous Paths," and "The Yankee Go-Getter." She will appear at a number of Chicago neighborhood theatres and will be in the city for about ten days.

District Supervisor George A. Hickey, of Goldwyn, is a busy man nowadays, as he has been commuting between the Chicago branch, Milwaukee and Minneapolis. The enlarged Milwaukee office, located at 506 Toy Building, opened on January 29th, with a house warming and Mr. Hickey and Resident Manager Sam Shurman were very much pleased by the reception given them by Wisconsin exhibitors.

Publicist Walt Nealand, of Goldwyn, is working on a publicity campaign for "The Stranger's Banquet," in Goldwyn's interest for Balaban & Katz's Chicago engagement, starting on February 26th. He expects this campaign to exceed that given "Broken Chains." He is also directing publicity for "The Christian," which opens in the same theatre the week of March 12th.

Jack Hellman, the latest recruit to Paramount's publicity department, is in Chicago working with Messrs. Roche and Danziger for a few days, previous to going to Minneapolis, where he will take charge of the publicity work for that exchange. Mr. Hellman comes from Kansas City, where he is well known in newspaper circles.

Trevor Faulkner, efficiency expert from the New York office of Famous Players-Lasky, is in the city putting in a new system at the exchange, which, it is expected, will facilitate and speed up the handling of business at this office.

District Manager R. C. Seery, of First National, is in New York on company business and expects to remain there for several weeks.

Ben Beadell is again connected with the motion picture business after pursuing other lines of activities for the last few months, having taken a position as suburban salesman for Universal. Mr. Beadell is one of the most widely known motion picture men in Chicago, where he has been identified with the industry since the early days, and for many years was manager of important exchanges. He has a host of friends among both exhibitors and exchange men and they all are glad to see the genial Ben back in the game.

Universal's Employees' Benefit Association held a banquet at the La Salle Hotel on the night of February 3rd, which will long be remembered for its spirit of friendship and good fellowship. Louis Laemmle was toastmaster and kept things moving in great shape. Speakers from all departments of the exchange were heard and it developed that Universal numbers among its ranks, not only orators, but poets. Following the dinner there was dancing. This association, by the way, is considered a big factor in promoting co-operation and loyalty among Universal employees, as well as the spirit of friendship, for which this organization is noted.

J. C. JESSEN'S PRODUCTION NOTES BY WIRE

Studio and Player Brevities

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

On the Goldwyn Lot

The Marshall Neilan production, originally entitled "The Ingrate," changed to "The Eternal Three."

Hobart Bosworth has been placed under a five-year contract to be featured. It gives him the right to make one independent production each year.

Rupert Hughes is now filming the circus episodes for "Souls for Sale." The entire staff was endangered when rain soaked big tents, purchased from Barnum & Bailey. Collapse was threatened.

Jesse D. Hampton this week begins filming "The Spoilers," from a continuity prepared by Fred Myton, Elliot Clawson and Hope Loring, with June Mathis consulting. Rights for this story are given at one hundred thousand dollars and all prints of former film made by Selig have been bought in.

The most recent addition to the Goldwyn stock company is Raymond Griffith, who has been signed to a long-term contract. He was recently signed to play Sheridan Scott, the "crime deflector" of "The Rear Car," which, in Carey Wilson's screen version is entitled "Red Lights," to be directed by Clarence Badger.

Violet Clark, scenario writer, and her husband, Robert Freeman, artist, are honeymooning in Europe, where they will remain for three months. Miss Clark had just completed the continuity for Elinor Glyn's "Six Days," which Goldwyn will produce.

Victory Bateman, one-time stage star, has been signed by Marshall Neilan for an important role in his second production in association with Goldwyn, the story of which was written by himself, "The Eternal Three." Good progress has been made filming the interiors for this photoplay and exteriors will soon be shot in Canada and in the Grand Canyon.

At Universal City

Lois Weber has completed filming "Jewel" with Claude Gillingwater and Jane Mercer in principal roles.

Hobart Henley will direct Virginia Valli in "Up the Ladder," adapted from the Owen Davis play.

Jack Conway is casting "What Wives Want" from an original by Perry Vekroff.

King Baggot is editing "The Town Scandal," starring Gladys Walton, while a new script is being prepared.

Stuart Paton is editing "Bavu" while a new script is being written.

Harry Pollard has completed "His Good Name," an all-star production, and is now working with continuity department on the next story.

"White Tiger," starring Priscilla Dean, directed by Tod Browning, is now completely edited and shipped.

Samuel Van Ronkle of New York is here to make a series of comedies of Andy Gump family taken from Sid Smith's cartoons, each two reels.

Joe Bonomo, eastern athlete and stunt man, has been engaged by Universal to play an important role in serials, in which he will perform the stunts.

Eva Gordon has been signed for a character role in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," which Wallace Worsley is directing with Lon Chaney in the role of Quasimodo.

Christie Comedy Bits

The Christie comedy, "Babies Welcome," starring Dorothy Devore, has been completed and announced for March release.

Around Metro Studios

Cast for the Max Graf production, "The Fog," being made in San Mateo, under the direction of Paul Powell, includes Mildred Harris, Louise Fazenda, Cullin Landis, Ralph Lewis, Billy Dove, Frank Currier and Eddie Phillips.

The cast for "Cordelia, the Magnificent," by LeRoy Scott, under the direction of George Archainbaud, produced by Harry Garson, starring Clara Kimball Young, includes Huntley Gordon, Carol Holloway, Jaques Gadesden, Mary Jane Irving, Lewis Dayton, Lloyd Whitlock, Katherine Murphy, Elinor Hancock.

The Hunt Stromberg-Bull Montana company has gone to Truckee to make a snow comedy titled "The Eskimo Spy."

Viola Dana is convalescing from an appendicitis operation.

With Paramount Units

John Flynn is in Hollywood preparing exploitation for "The Covered Wagon."

Cecil DeMille arrives from his cruise from Tiburon Islands, February 15. Jeanie McPherson returns from New York at the same time, and Claire West, DeMille's costumer, returns from Paris. DeMille will begin work on "The Ten Commandments" at once.

Pola Negri, back from a vacation, began "The Cheat" Thursday, under the direction of George Fitzmaurice with Jack Holt and Charles DeRoche, featured.

James Cruze will direct a special feature entitled "Hollywood" in which all Paramount stars, directors and others of staff will take important parts. The story is by Frank Condon, the continuity by Walter Wood, and the principals Pola Negri, Gloria Swanson, Jack Holt, May McAvoy, Agnes Ayres, Jacqueline Logan, Conrad Nagel, Walter Hiers, Theodore Kosloff, Lois Wilson and others.

Sam Wood begins "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," starring Gloria Swanson, adapted by Sada Cowan from Alfred Savoir play.

Clara Beranger is here conferring with William DeMille regarding his next production entitled "Only Thirty Eight."

Jacqueline Logan is back from two weeks vacation spent at home, Colorado Springs.

In production are "Seventy Five Cents an Hour," starring Walter Hiers under the direction of Joseph Henabery, Jacqueline Logan,, featured lead; "Grumpy," direction of William DeMille; "The Rustle of Silk" co-featuring Betty Compson and Conway Tearle, direction of Herbert Brenon.

"The Law of the Lawless," starring Dorothy Dalton has been completed by Victor Fleming.

Dorothy Dalton arrived in New York Monday from the coast to begin work in a new Paramount picture, "Fog Bound," under the direction of Irvin Willat.

While making preparations for his next Paramount picture, "Lawful Larceny," which Edmund Goulding is translating from the stage to screen form, Director Allan Dwan is cutting and titling his forthcoming production, "The Glimpses of the Moon."

Jack Boyle has been engaged by Cosmopolitan Productions to make screen adaptations of two of his most famous stories, "Grand-dad's Girl" and "The Painted Child."

Otto Brower has just come from the coast to be assistant to Irvin Willat who will make "Fog Bound" with Dorothy Dalton at the Paramount Long Island studio. Paul Dickey is at present preparing the continuity of the story, and production will be begun in a week or ten days.

Herbert Brenon has started at the Lasky studio his first Paramount picture, "The Rustle of Silk," in which are featured Betty Compson and Conway Tearle and which was adapted by Sada Cowan and Ouida Bergere from the novel by Cosmo Hamilton. Among the others in the cast are Anna Q. Nilsson and Cyril Chadwick.

Thomas Meighan and his company of Paramount players who have been in Panama for six weeks making exterior scenes for "The Ne'er-Do-Well," under Alfred E. Green's direction, sailed this week for the United States and will begin work on the interior scenes for the picture at the company's Long Island studio next Monday.

Century Cut-Backs

Eugene DeRue has been engaged to direct Bobby Dunn in comedies, the first titled "Semi-Mental Tommy."

Stern Brothers have purchased a story titled "Sweetheart of the Mounted," which will be the next vehicle for Baby Peggy Montgomery.

Harry Edwards has completed "Straighten 'Em Out," starring Brownie, the dog.

Al Herman is editing "Melting Eyes" with Jack Cooper, Jack Earl and Jimmy Adams.

Marjorie Meddows has been placed under contract to play leads.

East and West with Fox

Pretty Blondes Tour Chicago To Exploit "The Flirt"

Chicago, Ill.—The Randolph theatre, of which J. L. McCurdy is manager, used an effective and appropriate stunt to exploit "The Flirt."

In co-operation with Mr. McCurdy, W. L. Hill, the "U" exploiteer, arranged for a bevy of pretty blonde young ladies to travel about the city in squads of five, each with a copy of the special photoplay edition of "The Flirt." On the covers of these books, in very large type, was lettered "Booth Tarkington, The Flirt." This lettering ran across the cover from front to back. These young ladies knew not only how to use the books, but their eyes, in order that the stunt might be 100 per cent effective.

Hudson sport cars and sedans carried these young ladies along thoroughfares where their presence proved most effective, stopping with them where they were sure to attract attention.

The girls went to the city reading rooms—visited the rest rooms of the big hotels, department stores, and other equally prominent places where they would rest and read their books. They frequented dining rooms and restaurants during the luncheon hours and the attention and fun they created brought home the title of the picture very strongly to the public.

They visited the hospitals for wounded soldiers where they distributed copies of the book to the wounded men.

Letter Contest Tied Up with "Daughter of Luxury"

FAIRMONT, W. Va.—Oscar Nelson of the Nelson theatre, in exploiting "A Daughter of Luxury," obtained extensive newspaper publicity for the offering through a tie-up made with the McKeesport Times.

The paper conducted, in conjunction with the theatre, a contest in which girls were invited to send in letters covering experiences when they were "broke." A considerable number of replies were received and the stories of hard-hearted landladies made good reading.

Newspaper notices more than paid for the expense of the stunt.

A book store tie-up, arranged with Grosset & Dunlap, who printed a special photoplay edition of the book, "The Flirt," resulted in window displays in six big stores as well as displays in the McLain drug stores throughout the city.

People purchasing a copy of the book in some of the stores received a purchase ticket which was honored at the box office for one admission to the picture.

Japanese Exhibitor Exploits Value of Subtitles

Kwansai, Hansu.—Yammoto Kato, leading Japanese exhibitor, has been getting many Japanese into his Dai-Ichi Asahikan theatre by convincing them that the subtitles offered the quickest and simplest method of learning English.

To learn "practical English" easily as well as to get the power of "quick reading" study the cinema titles. "Come to our cinema house at least once a week and try to read the English titles appearing on the screen."

This idea was sold in the form of a four-page folder for "Don't Tell Everything," and widely distributed. Mr. Kato writes that it had a salutary effect on the box office.

The point of the story is that live exhibitors can try something like it if their theatres are in the foreign sections of large sections.

Offers Prizes for New Ending as "Sin Flood" Stunt

Salina, Kans.—The management of the Strand theatre used a contest in which prizes were offered for a new ending to "The Sin Flood," tied up to a newspaper, as an exploitation measure for that picture.

The manager furnished the prizes—$10 in gold for the best ending, $5 for the second and tickets for the third best and for those endings getting honorable mention—while the newspaper gave the publicity in several half-column articles which described the picture in detail.

While this is by no means a new exploitation feature, it was just as effective in Salina as it has been elsewhere. The women sent in new endings for the picture by the score, and turned out in force at the opening showing, getting the picture off to a good start.

Prizes Work Up Interest in "Lorna Doone" Windows

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—Manager Sam Harding of the Liberty theatre obtained 265 window tie-ups on "Lorna Doone," with the National Biscuit Company displays on a basis.

Earl Nesbitt, Mr. Harding's publicity man, personally supervised the exploitation and aided on the National Biscuit Company's contest which gave prizes for the best dressed window in connection with the "Lorna Doone" tie up.

The company offered prizes to the salesman squaring the best window and to one squaring the most windows. The Liberty theatre chipped in with season passes to two winners.

Advertising Truck on Streets for "Strangers' Banquet"

Washington, D. C.—William N. Robson, Goldwynner, convinced Tom and William Moore, of the Rialto theatre, that an advertising truck would get results for "The Strangers' Banquet," provided a license could be obtained to run it through the streets.

No license had ever been issued for a motor truck for picture advertising purposes, and Mr. Robson was told he could not get one. Nothing daunted, he went to police headquarters and soon convinced Daniel Sullivan, Major and Superintendent of the Metropolitan Police in the national capital, that the truck he would put out would be a credit to the city. Permission was obtained to operate the truck on Washington's streets from January 23 to February 3.

He had special signs painted for the truck—a big one on each side, a slightly smaller one on a table in the centre of the truck surrounded by small cards bearing the names of the principal characters and the roles they play. The back of the truck was masked by another artistic sign. Great stress was laid upon the fact that there are twenty-three stars in "The Strangers' Banquet." The display in the truck represented a banquet table surrounded by chairs.

Appeals to Selected Groups as Definite Business Builder

Paris, Ont.—Manager J. A. Bolinsky of the Allen theatre is concentrating his general exploitation on getting selected groups into his theatre, to build up a larger clientele of regular patrons.

Mr. Bolinsky's methods are simple. For "The Bachelor Daddy" he telephoned the membership of the Daughters of the Empire, a fraternal order, and out of the 28 women, 20 came. None of these were regular patrons. Mr. Bolinsky made a point of going up to each one and discussing moving pictures with them. They were tickled to death and promised to come oftener.

The same gag was worked with another society for "Across the Continent" and pretty soon Mr. Bolinsky expects to have a hundred or more influential folks constantly boosting his house.

Pearl Diver in Lobby Boosts "Ebb Tide" Showing

SHARON, Pa.—In exploiting "Ebb Tide," Sam Friedman of the Luna theatre built a special water tank in his lobby for the showing of Paramount's "Ebb Tide" and engaged one of the best local swimmers to show the town how the native South Sea Islanders dive for pearls.

This hooked up with the big kick in the picture. Mr. Friedman says that the attention attracted by the stunt more than justified the elaborate display.

Sidewalk Canopy Exploits "Strangers' Banquet"

TORONTO, Ont.—Much attention was attracted to the showing of "The Strangers' Banquet" at the Allen theatre through the erection of a canopy over the sidewalk leading from the curb to the lobby. A carpet was spread under the canopy—in fact the whole stunt was arranged as if for a fashionable wedding, lending class to it. This was the first time a permit to erect a canopy for a motion picture showing had been granted in Toronto. It made a very favorable impression upon the clientele of the Allen theatre.

Manager J. B. Cronk and Goldwynner W. J. Stewart picked out thirty of the best billboard stands in the city for the 24-sheet poster; they prepared special window cards and got them in fifty downtown locations.

Twenty thousand paper napkins, carrying the title of the picture, the theatre and date of showing and a line about the film, were distributed at high class cafes and restaurants.

Entire Fire Department Aids "Third Alarm" Showing

Canton, O.—Joe Calla, manager of the Strand theatre, and Harold Wendt, F. B. O. exploiteer, tied up "The Third Alarm" with the entire fire department of Canton.

Arrangements were made for a ticket sale by the fire department whereby a small percent of the proceeds were to go to the Firemen's Burial Fund. The tickets were turned over to the men a week before the picture's run and about 15,000 tickets were disposed of. All fire hydrants in the city, numbering more than 800, were tagged by the firemen on both sides with cards reading "Watch for The Third Alarm—Don't park within ten feet of either side of this fire plug."

A private showing of the picture for the men was given which gave them added incentive to get things going. Chief Mesner of the fire department was most generous in cooperation, publishing his annual report so as to appear in the Sunday edition of the papers the day before the opening, together with a story on "The Greatest Third Alarm Fire I Ever Saw." The chief's car was decked out with banners and run about town, and the fire apparatus was ordered to make various runs where ladders were raised and the men put through life-saving exhibitions. To make this realistic smoke pots were planted on the roofs, attracting huge crowds, which were immediattely canvassed by the men. The insurance companies were visited by firemen and persuaded to take blocks of tickets to be mailed to their clients, advising them to go and see the film so that they might see the real danger of a big fire.

One of the firemen was released from duty and sang at all performances the theme song, "A Fire Laddie."

Window display in book store, tied up with the showing of "The Flirt" at the Randolph theatre, Chicago

Blacksmith Shop Lobby for "Village Blacksmith"

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—William Raynor converted a large portion of his immense foyer in Reade's Hippodrome into a veritable blacksmith shop in anticipation of his engagement of "The Village Blacksmith."

The barn was built up, with stable, harness room and everything. A horse stood in one of the stalls. An old buggy, harness and equipment stood on one side on some improvised grass. The pillars of the foyer were covered with bark and huge branches attached to them, to resemble trees.

Another unusual feature of the stunt was the fact that it was featured the week before the opening of the engagement of "The Village Blacksmith."

Appropriation for Tie-Ups Is Made on "East Is West"

Austin, Texas.—Manager Hageman, of the Queen theatre, in exploiting "East Is West" through the medium of the Packer tar soap tie-up with local druggists, set what is believed to be an innovation in recognizing the value of these windows by allowing an extra appropriation to help the retailer dress them up with cut-outs, wistaria and Oriental effects instead of leaving it entirely to the merchant's judgment and expense allowance.

The lobby decoration of a Chinese garden and a special ticket booth at the front with painted panels and oriental lettering was artistic and novel. At night time red fire spat from a dragon's mouth.

Armed Guard Stunt Used with "Monte Cristo" Print

Charleston, W. Va.—The armed guard film carrier stunt was introduced into Charleston recently when "Monte Cristo" was played at the Capitol.

Assisted by a member of the Fox exploitation staff, Manager John E. Firnkoes arranged with the police department to detail a squad of three policemen to escort the films of the picture from the express office to the theatre. The automobile in which the prints were conveyed was loaned by a local automobile dealer who was repaid for his efforts by recognition in the large canvas sign which the theatre manager played on both sides of the tonneau.

It read: "This Rickenbacker Car Contains Armed Guards and Film of MONTE CRISTO —$50,000.00 Insured Photoplay. Capitol all next week."

C. F. McManus, exploitation manager of the Colonial, Tacoma, obtained this cigar store window tie-up for "Trouble"

"Broadway Rose" window tie-up in which picture is displayed prominently, obtained by the Granby theatre, Norfolk, Va., during the run of the picture

Striking Lobby Display Built for "Trifling Women"

Sumter, S. C.—Manager Oscar White, of the Rex theatre, made a striking display for "Trifling Women" by partially closing in the front of his lobby with a three-sheet panel on each side and a tent effect in the center. Between the tent and the three-sheet panel on each side was an opening for entrance and exit.

The panels were made of compo board, shadow box style, with concealed blue lights reflecting on the three-sheets. Overhead, and extending between these panels was a triangular piece of compo board carrying the billing of the picture. Two columns supporting this piece, leaving an opening in the center about six feet wide. Back and sides were made of cloth and the front of the opening was draped to show a triangular tent opening.

In the "tent" was placed a table and chair and on the table a glass ball borrowed from an optometrist. Inside the ball was a changing light that gave a vari-colored reflection.

Street Car Ballyhoo Stunt for "Broken Chains"

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—The street car balleyhoo stunt had never been used before in Springfield, so Walter D. Nealand, Goldwynner, and W. W.. Watts, owner and manager of the Princess, got excellent results with it on "Broken Chains."

As there was strong opposition, the town was billed as if for a circus. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday, from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m., a street car was leased, its sides covered with a big sign announcing the showing of the prize photoplay, and sent out through the streets of the city. As this was the first time a street car had been used to exploit a picture in Springfield, the stunt was an attention-getter of the first order; people would stop on the street to watch the car pass.

Coffee Tie-Up Already Gotten to Exploit "Adam's Rib"

DENVER, Colo.—Homer Ellison comes under the wire with the first exploitation reported for "Adam's Rib," which will play at one of his Denver houses.

The local dealers in Solataire Coffee have already signed for a tie-up in which the window and newspaper advertising will carry this line, "The coffee that tickles Adam's Rib."

Contest Angle Given Tie-Ups for "Lorna Doone"

ASHEVILLE, N. C.—Manager F. C. Strozier of the Strand sold "Lorna Doone" largely through tie-ups with nationally distributed "Lorna Doone" products, and by cooperation with local dealers for those products. He received best cooperation from a shoe store selling "Lorna Doone Shoes."

A contest was run in a local paper with prizes offered for the three most nearly correct lists of products sold under the name of "Lorna Doone." The first two prizes were pairs of shoes offered by the shoe store, and the third prize was a three months pass to the Strand.

A cooperative window display was secured with a book store, featuring stills and copies of the book.

The lobby display consisted of a large book cut-out and two special still frames filled with stills.

"Shadows" Linked Up with Odd Cabaret Selection

Chicago, Ill.—"Shadows" was hooked up with a unique cabaret number during its showing at the Castle theatre by Foster Moore, special representative of the Al Lichtman Corporation.

One of the principal characters in "Shadows" being a most likeable Chinaman, a tie-up was effected with the song, "Ching, Ching, Chinaman." Manager Bohler, of the Revue Classique at Terrace Garden in the Hotel Morrison, grasped eagerly at the idea and had one of his stars, Ruth Fischer, lead a specially costumed number in which each girl waved a lettered scarf and held it in front of her in such a manner as to spell "shadows."

These scarfs were made of blue flag silk twenty-four inches square, with white silk letters hemstitched on them. The hotel used a photograph of this chorus on its tri-fold post cards advertising the Revue.

Puzzle Herald, Novel Booklet, Exploit "Sherlock Holmes"

St. Petersburg, Fla.—Manager F. H. Burns, of the Grand theatre, exploited "Sherlock Holmes" energetically, one of the principal features of his campaign being a puzzle stunt. He made up special heralds, giving a chart of numbers. He also made up a one-sheet and ran an ad in the newspapers, exactly like the heralds. Free admission was offered the first fifty persons who successfully matched with "Sherlock Holmes" and solved the puzzle. The one-sheet was placed in the lobby Saturday night and created so much interest that it almost blocked traffic Sunday. The only way he could disperse the crowd was to pass out the puzzle heralds and let them go off and try to figure it out.

On Monday before the opening Tuesday the town was covered with little booklets titled, "How to Become a Detective." The inside pages were blank but the back cover said, "Get your information by seeing John Barrymore in 'Sherlock Holmes.'"

The lobby display consisted of cut-outs and banners and a clock face giving time of starting for next show. Mr. Burns also played up starting hours in the newspapers and on the screen for several days in advance. He was very successful in getting them in at the start.

Auto ballyhoo of unusual design used by Frank D. Adams, manager, and R. J. Tindell, advertising manager of the Orpheum, Waycross, Ga.

"Back Home and Broke" Put Over by Novel Stunt

TITUSVILLE, Pa.—Through the fact that he is acquainted with nearly everyone in town, Manager J. Schweizer of the Orpheum theatre was able to put over a stunt that attracted extensive comment during the showing of "Back Home and Broke."

Just before the feature was flashed on the screen, he singled out some well-known man in the audience and made him recite his early experiences where he had to save his pennies for a cup of coffee.

This was an unexpected novelty and the newspapers made mention of it. Of course the audience talked about it. Naturally, few of the business men were averse to this sort of publicity and the stunt "took" all the way around.

Many Tie-Ups in Campaign for "The Strangers' Banquet"

Denver, Colo.—Tie-ups of various sorts were the basis of the varied campaign for "The Strangers' Banquet" put over by Manager Talbot, of the Colorado theatre, and Eddie Carrier, Goldwynner.

Among the various exploitation devices which were used was a dry-goods store tie-up in which the store furnished several strips of neponset, carrying its own advertisement at each end. At the middle of the strip was painted an ad for the showing of "The Strangers' Banquet." This ad was painted twice on each strip of neponset so that any one stepping on it from either end could read the sign. These were placed upon many prominent Denver corners.

A tie-up was made with the Denver Book Store for a window display of fifty copies of Donn Byrne's novel. A large card announced the engagement of the picture. The book store mentioned the showing in its own ad, and the Sunday papers carried a review.

Mr. Carrier also furnished 200 time-clock cards, which were hung up by the time clocks in various Denver establishments. It advised employes to be on time and also to see "The Strangers' Banquet."

The leading taxi companies were induced to placed a ten by two inch paper sign on the windshield of their cars reading: "Official car to 'The Strangers' Banquet.'" These signs were seen everywhere on Denver's streets.

Novelty Radio Number Used on "Dangerous Age" Program

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Managing Director Edward L. Hyman, of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, in preparing his presentation program for "The Dangerous Age," used a novel radio song number that is timely and relatively simple to stage.

The song used, as a duet, was the melody of "My Buddy," with specially written lyrics to fit the name of the number, "Call Me by Radio." A special drop curtain, with a door at lower right, represented a landscape with a radio tower in the middle ground. This was lighted as a night scene, with the wireless flashing sparks as the overture played the introduction. Then a spot was thrown on the door and Everett Clark, tenor, was seen broadcasting a love song to his "sweetie," accompanied by a pianist, also visible.

At the chorus a girl became visible at the upper left of the curtain, through a transparency, and joined in. The number was very effective and is entirely different from anything the Brooklyn audiences have seen.

Well planned window tie-up on "Dr. Jack" arranged by Charles F. McManus, exploitation manager of the Jensen-Von Herberg theatres in Tacoma, Wash., for the showing at the Rialto

"Poor Men's Wives" Is Given Elaborate Campaign

New York, N. Y.—An extensive exploitation campaign and special presentation were used by Preferred Pictures and the Al Lichtman corporation in connection with the showing of "Rich Men's Wives" at the Criterion theatre.

Lichtman first arranged for a big billboard showing, 280 24 and 28-sheet stands around New York being used. Besides this, six sheets, three sheets and one sheets were posted. Several styles of oil paintings were made and placed in windows along Broadway. More than 30 window displays along Broadway also were used. Heralds were distributed freely all over the city, and cards announcing the showing were mailed to guests of the big hotels. A heavy play was made on advertising in the big New York dailies.

There were two banner stunts in connection with exploitation.

One was a tie-up with the Mogul Checker Taxicab Co., which has hundreds of taxicabs in New York City. The Mogul Checker Co. supplied 50 taxicabs and Foster Moore, exploitation man for the Preferred-Lichtman organizations, working with J. M. Loughborough, manager of publicity and exploitation, had 100 signs painted on oil cloth, reading as follows: "Take a Mogul Checker to the Criterion theatre. See 'Poor Men's Wives.'"

A sign was fastened on each side of each taxi. The group of 50 assembled at Columbus Circle and was directed into two sections of twenty-five each. Each section had a detachment of buglers supplied by the Seventy-first Regiment, and they blew fanfares while the chauffeurs sounded their klaxons.

Mr. Moore arranged a tie-up with Mallinson's the big silk firm, by which Consuelo Flowerton, a noted beauty, posed at the silk show in Madison Square Garden in elaborate silk gowns, one of them being valued at $5,000.

With the appearance of Miss Flowerton at the Silk Show, signs were displayed announcing that the gowns in which she appeared were similar to those worn in some of the lavish scenes in "Poor Men's Wives." Besides this, there was a big window display on "Poor Men's Wives" in Mallinson's store.

Hugh W. Wallace, manager of Allen's Lyric theatre, Swift Current, Sask., obtained this window display for "My Wild Irish Rose"

Special Matinee and Contest on "Around the World"

PITTSBURGH, PA.—A strong exploitation campaign was put behind the opening of the serial, "Around the World in 18 Days," at the Arsenal, Plaza and Belmar, Rowland & Clark houses.

The advertising on this picture consisted of twenty 24-sheet stands posted in the territory adjacent to the different theatres; 500 special one sheet window cards announcing a children's matinee. Fifteen thousand Around the World puzzles were used as a herald and to announce a contest in which the prize was a Victor phonograph.

Teaser Lobby Display Precedes "Sin Flood" Showing

Altoona, Pa.—Manager F. K. O'Kelley of the Strand theatre, used an advance teaser lobby display, painted on a mirror eight feet high, for "The Sin Flood."

Medallions of the heads of the six principal members of the cast were cut out from the special lobby panels which Goldwyn had painted to exploit this picture. They were pasted on the mirror, with the name of each actor, and the name of his role, and "Coming soon, 'The Sin Flood,'" painted on it in white.

The display attracted much favorable comment. Everyone who entered the lobby had the feeling that there was another lobby beyond the mirror.

Use Film Strip Herald in Five "Knighthood" Campaigns

New Haven, Conn.—The stunt of using a strip of film to add interest to a throwaway or herald seems to have become a stock bit of exploitation.

Fred V. Greene, Jr., manager of the Rialto theatre, Jamaica, L. I., first used it for "Pink Gods," but Russell B. Moon, Paramount exploiteer, adopted it with amendments for five theatres in the New Haven exchange territory playing "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

The cards were die-cut to permit the insertion of the film. When you held it up to the light you could see a genuine scene from the picture. In addition Moon also attached a foot of film to window cards used in the merchants' tie-ups.

Exhibitors who used this feature for their "Knighthood" campaigns were Walter Murphy of the Crown theatre, New London, Conn.; Sam Weiss of the Alhambra theatre, Stamford, Conn.; James Clancy of the Capitol theatre, Hartford, Conn.; William W. Cotter of Poli's theatre, Meriden, Conn., and David Esterson of the Regent theatre, Norwalk, Conn.

"Singed Wings" lobby display, with effective use of candle and butterfly cut-outs, prepared by Manager F. J. Miller of the Modjeska, Augusta, Ga.

Popularity Contest Exploits "Only a Shop Girl"

Milwaukee, Wis.—"Only a Shop Girl," at the Rialto theatre, was exploited through a voting contest for Milwaukee's most popular shop girl, put over by Manager Levinson and J. S. Grauman of Celebrated Players.

Nominations were turned in to the Wisconsin News up to a certain date, then elimination and the final voting began. An attractive group of prizes was distributed, as follows:

Choice of a diamond ring or diamond wrist watch from a downtown jeweler's establishment; fifty dollars' worth of lingerie from another downtown concern; vanity box; annual pass for two to Rialto theatre; annual pass for one to Rialto theatre; six months' pass for two to Rialto; six months' pass for one to Rialto; four months' pass for two to Rialto; four months' pass for one to Rialto; additional passes.

An additional feature of the contest is the fact that the photograph of the successful young lady was sent to Edward Le Saint, director of the picture, to determine whether or not she had qualifications for the movies.

Short Subject Prologue Is Used on "Frozen North"

SEATTLE, Wash.—Manager H. B. Wright, of the Strand theatre staged what is perhaps the first prologue ever given a short subject when he played "The Frozen North."

In between numbers of a jazz orchestra that gave a good music hall effect Clinton Montgomery, former Seattle stock star, appeared on the stage. He was "loaded for bear" with rimmed hat, revolver and holster. He recited "The Shooting of Dan McGrew."

The idea, Manager Wright reports, took instantly, and the heavy atmosphere of the recitation was dissipated as soon as the first few feet of "The Frozen North" flashed on the screen, providing a pleasing variety of semi-tragedy and comedy.

Heavy Co-operation Is Given "Third Alarm" Campaign

Los Angeles, Cal.—The showing of "The Third Alarm" at Grauman's million dollar theatre received unprecedented co-operation from the Los Angeles fire department.

Chief Scott co-operated to the utmost. One man from his department was detailed to devote his entire time to assist the F. B. O. exploiteers. A three-horse fire engine was used as a street ballyhoo. Driving through the crowded streets of downtown Los Angeles, the clanging fire apparatus, covered with "Third Alarm" banners, attracted the attention of thousands. It was manned by two firemen, one of whom saw to it that the gong and siren were continually in use. Smoke belched from the stack, giving the engine the appearance of returning from a fire. This was the first time that the Los Angeles fire department has actually assisted the exploitation of a motion picture.

Still another exploitation hook-up was effected when Chief Scott granted permission to place three sheet cut-outs in front of forty odd fire houses throughout the city. In addition to this more than one hundred twenty-four sheets were used by the Grauman interests to exploit the picture.

Flappers Are Appealed to in "The Flirt" Campaign

Columbia, S. C.—Manager C. W. Irvin of the Imperial theatre put "The Flirt" over to good advantage by stressing the comedy angle and appealing especially to the flappers.

To begin with, he announced on the screen and in the papers that a full page ad on "The Flirt" appeared in the current issue of The Saturday Evening Post, and asked everyone to read it. He followed this by a series of snappy slides containing sayings of "The Flirt." These were taken from "The Flirt's Book of Proverbs" in the press book on this subject.

The picture opened on Inauguration Day of the Governor of South Carolina, so the streets were crowded. One of the theatre employes was made up as a tramp and carried an old umbrella, the top of which was lettered to read, "'The Flirt' made me what I am today." This man was accompanied by another who distributed heralds. They attended the inauguration exercises and spent the rest of the day on the streets. The ballyhoo attracted much attention and got many laughs.

For a lobby display, a cut-out was made from the 6-sheet and one of the eyes was replaced with a small lamp on a flasher socket, causing it to wink. An electric shadow box was used on the stage for advance advertisement.

"Omar the Tentmaker" Is Given Varied Publicity Campaign

Portland, Ore.—Manager J. C. Stille, of the Rivoli theatre, used an exploitation campaign for "Omar the Tentmaker" that embraced many angles.

Ten days before the picture opened the Portland Oregonian started a Quatrain or Poetry Contest for the purpose of finding out the literary talent and sentiments of local people.

Then Manager J. C. Stille decorated his lobby elaborately a week in advance. From the Cartosian Bros. Persian Rug Co. Mr. Stille obtained $50,000 worth of rare rugs, lamps and antiques. These he had insured by the Lloyds, Inc., and the newspapers printed stories of the transaction.

The ushers came next for attention and were provided with specially made silk costumes of Persian design. From the Rivoli Sign Shop came a series of six two-sheet shadow box cut-outs illuminated with small candlepower colored lights and adorned with silver leaf and some artistic cut-out streamers for over the archway and aisle portieres.

The advertisements for the Sunday following the opening were modest but attractive, and among the follow-up ads used was one column ten-inch ad presumed to have been written by Mr. and Mrs. Portland, who remarked in brief sentences that they had decided to break the monotony of the Christmas shopping rush and enjoy "Omar the Tentmaker."

The night before the picture opened yellow slips supposedly written by Mr. Post and asking visitors to Portland to make an effort to see "Omar" before leaving were placed in every hotel mailbox of the city. Bookmarks were also placed in library books and packages sold at book stores.

Girls' Contest Held as Aid to "If I Were Queen"

SCHENECTADY, N. Y.—The management of the Albany theatre, during the run of "If I Were Queen," announced that a trophy cup would be given as a prize for the best essay written on the subject "What I Would Do If I Were Queen." The contest was open to all girls of the public and parochial high schools of the city.

Competent judges were selected to pass on the merits of the compositions and announcement of the result was published in the Gazette, a local paper. Presentation of the cup was made at the theatre. The third and second prizes were three and six months passes to the theatre.

Many Novel Accessories Boost "Strangers' Banquet"

New York, N. Y.—An unusual line of teaser accessories was gotten out for the showing of "The Strangers' Banquet" at the Capitol theatre by Eddie Bonns, manager of exploitation for Goldwyn, and W. R. Ferguson, headquarters exploiteer.

One of the novelties was the picture of a chair printed in yellow on a black background, furnished with a string by which it could be tied to telephone receivers, door-knobs, automobiles, etc. On the front of the card was the following: "Marshall Neilan has reserved a seat for you at the Strangers' Banquet."

Fifteen thousand six-inch rulers were used for the New York showing, being distributed particularly in offices. On the front of the ruler was printed: "A picture that will positively measure up to all expectations."

A herald in the shape of a bottle was used freely. It was green and black printed on white. It has two seals on it—the Goldwyn seal and the Neilan seal. Across the label was printed: "23-Star Brand of Sparkling Entertainment."

Ten thousand paper napkins, folded to form a triangle, with "Marshal Neilan's Supreme Screen Achievement of 1923, 'The Strangers' Banquet,' Capitol theatre," were distributed in restaurants, cafes and other places. Ten thousand toothpicks encased in little paper envelopes, on which were printed "Peppermint Flavored, Marshall Neilan's 'The Strangers' Banquet,' etc." were also distributed.

An imitation engraved invitation, together with a printed menu for "The Strangers' Banquet," a 23-star course, was mailed out. The name of a player in the cast was used in connection with each dish.

Gets Publicity Through Attack on "Manslaughter" Stunt

Iola, Kans.—The stock "Manslaughter" tieup was given a new slant by John J. Friedl, Paramount exploiteer, when the picture played at the Grand theatre.

The public came in for the tieup and the "Drive carefully and avoid 'Manslaughter'" signs were placed on every traffic semaphore and standard. Friedl then wrote a letter to the local newspaper signed "Curious" and asked why motion picture advertising was permitted on the city property and if the theatre was paying for it, who was getting the money.

Friedl also planted an editorial along the same lines. Then he got an interview from the mayor stating that the city was perfectly willing to cooperate with any business enterprise provided the city got benefit from the propaganda, too. He pronounced the "Manslaughter" hook-up as a proposition of immense value to Iola.

Everybody was satisfied, especially since not one cent of cash was involved, and the picture had publicity to the tune of an editorial and two front page stories.

Extensive Advertising Is Put Back of "Robin Hood"

Omaha, Neb.—An extensive campaign, beginning four weeks in advance, was put over for the showing of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at the A. H. Blank Strand theatre by Harry Watts, manager.

A newspaper advertising campaign was laid out that called for 400 inches of space up to and including the opening. The use of copy began with a week of teaser ads announcing a tremendous attraction for the Strand on the way. The second week was devoted to telling the name of the picture with only a few of its outstanding claims for special prominence. In the third week the copy became more specific, bringing the play date into the foreground. The week before the opening was given to details of the picture, prices, show hours, etc., all timed effectively to culminate on the opening day with half-page display space of an exceptionally attractive nature. Liberal display copy was planned to run through the engagement in all newspapers.

The principal outdoor billing for the "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" campaign took the form of fifty 24-sheet stands in hand-picked locations. Window displays in downtown spots consisted of special cards with two stills mounted on each to share space with painted text headlined in an original style. Of these there were 100.

"Dr. Jack" posters mounted on marquee by Manager B. B. Garner of the Casino theatre, Lakeland, Fla.

Illuminated Shirt Front on "Masquerader" Ballyhoo

MADISON, Wis.—Manager A. P. Descormeaux, of the Strand theatre, found a new angle for the street ballyhoo on "The Masquerader." The masked man was invested with evening clothes and sent on the streets all lit up.

This was effected by stenciling the front of the stiff shirt to read: "The Strand Now. 'The Masquerader.'" A thin piece of linen was pasted over this and underneath small electric light bulbs were placed and connected with the battery in his pocket by a button in the glove.

The masked figure invested with new lights was a certain eye-arrester. His route was unrestricted. He appeared in hotel lobbies, at street car intersections; in fact, in any place where he was likely to collect a crowd.

A smashing display was painted for the outside of the Strand. Mural paintings were designed for each of two large panels of the theatre front. They consisted of gigantic figures of Douglas Fairbanks in character, each being nineteen feet high and seven feet wide. Floodlights from across the street illuminated these. The coming of the feature also was heralded for ten days prior to the opening with electric signs.

"Broken Chains" Is Exploited in New Ending Contest

Tulsa, Okla.—"Broken Chains" at the Rialto theatre was exploited through a tie-up with the Tulsa Tribune.

A cash prize of $25 was offered for the best new ending to the picture which was sent in to the contest editor. Other prizes consisted of a box and pairs of seats to the showing of the photoplay.

The Tribune advertised the contest on its front page for five days and ran a story on an inside page giving the conditions, prizes and recounting the plot of the story. Nearly 200 letters giving new endings to the photoplay were received, showing how widely the contest idea appeals to the readers of newspapers—particularly to the women readers.

Tie-Ups and Lobby Display Aids "East Is West" Showing

Jacksonville, Fla.—The Packer tar soap window tie-up and a special lobby display were the outstanding features of Manager A. B. Hill's campaign for "East Is West."

A complete contest tie-up was arranged with the Packer's Tar Soap Company by which the company gave $50 in prizes and a considerable amount of material for window displays. Eight druggists came in on the contest tie-up and supplied large show windows. Each window carried cut-outs of Constance Talmadge, stills from the picture, cards giving theatre and play dates, and a card giving rules of contest. The only cost to the theatre was for the accessories used in the displays.

The marquee was boxed in with compoboard, extending down to the sidewalk on the two front corners. This was painted in oriental designs with a wonderful array of colors. On each of the corners extending down to the sidewalk was painted a large dragon. Across the front was the title in oriental letters.

On top of the marquee a very effective canopy was made of green and red bunting. The lights under the marquee were dyed pink and the inside of the compoboard was painted in various designs on a pink background. Hanging across the sidewalk was a banner painted in oriental letters.

Miss Beulah Martin is now secretary to Manager Falkner of Hodkinson. Hodkinson surprised Manager Faulkner of the Washington office with a sales "booster" bonus check last week. And before he got through the Saturday mail, he found a notice that his managerial salary had been raised. He has only been here a couple of months.

Mrs. E. J. Wondrach, assistant cashier of the Metro office here, has resigned, and returned to her home in Macomb, Illinois.

The reason for the frequent visits of Tom Sorierro, of the Century theatre, Baltimore, to Washington lately has just been learned. For the past two years the theatre men have suffered in the spring, fall and summer months from the city-wide Daylight Saving Law which the legislature passes each year and then makes applicable only in such towns and cities as wish to adopt it, on the principle of local option. To date only Baltimore, Annapolis and one or two Western Maryland cities have adopted it. In Baltimore it has caused the theatres to lose patronage, because the amusement parks, races and carnivals and block parties have drawn the neighborhood and downtown patronage away from the highly taxed theatres. The Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce of Baltimore and The Maryland Exhibitors League as local branches of the M.P.T.O.A. have asked the Washington Exchange Managers association and the F-I-L-M Board here as well as the Washington M.P.T.O.A. to cooperate with them financially and otherwise, to kill the Daylight Saving proposition, in the spring primaries. They are circulating petitions and educating the public. For once, city people are joining with the farmers in fighting a law that upsets a large group of business men and the farmer as well. Last summer the Crandall theatres polled their patrons and found them opposed to Daylight Saving.

In the St. Louis Branches

H. ROY HUGGINS is the new Southern Illinois Vitagraph salesman, succeeding Harry Pitner, who is now selling Pathe short subjects in Northern Illinois.

Jack Weil has succeeded J. B. Dugger at the St. Louis exchange as manager.

Mr. Weil has been in charge of the St. Louis exchange before and knows conditions and exhibitors in the territory.

Advices from Bristol, Tenn.-Va., show that the attempts of reformers, who long ago closed up the theatres on Sunday in Tennessee, to abolish Sunday baseball, also, had finally failed. Thanks to the action of the legislature in killing the measure in both houses, Tennessee men can roll up sleeves and play ball on Sunday without a blue law enforcement officer packing 'em off to the local bastile. Since toleration has gained this victory, it may now be possible to secure a partial late afternoon privilege for the movies.

It was definitely announced recently that Fred E. Johnson of Wheeling is not to take over the management of the Rex theatre for the present. Johnson was formerly manager of the Court theatre, which varies road attractions with feature films. George Shafer, of the Victoria, and new owner of the Chapline street playhouse, assumed control of the Court last Monday, instead of February 1. It is learned that the present policy of the Rex will be maintained, with George Zeppos retained as active head for the present.

Cleveland Bulletins

Joe Calla, manager of the Strand theatre, Canton, was here last Friday, booking pictures. He stopped just long enough to say that he cleaned up recently with "The Third Alarm." "The biggest business in the history of the house," says Calla. "It didn't just happen, though. It was the result of a well planned publicity campaign, and a happy tie-up with the Fire Department. The firemen sold in excess of 15,000 tickets on a profit-sharing plan. At noon, every day of the engagement, the apparatus from an near-by engine house, ran up and down the main street of Canton, with banners on either side, telling all about the picture and where to see it." Calla, also arranged to broadcast the song "Fire Laddie, Just Like My Daddy," a popular song that fitted into the scheme of things. In addition, he arranged a special matinee for orphans, and got front page newspaper space by appealing to the public for autos in which to take the orphans to the theatre. Then after the autos responded to the appeal, they were all decorated with banners bearing, in big letters, "We are on our way to the Strand theatre to see 'The Third Alarm.' After the show, the orphans were taken over to the fire department, given ice cream and cake, and then shown how the apparatus works. Calla is going to play a return engagement of "The Third Alarm" at the end of the month.

James Benis has sold the Quincy theatre, Cleveland, to Charles Pintner.

A. C. Hoganson has been appointed house manager of the Alhambra and Pantheon theatres, Toledo, by the Citizens Alhambra Company. Hogansons used to be field representative for Fox Film Company, travelling out of Cleveland.

M. A. Malanay, publicity director for Loew's Ohio theatres, took a projection machine, a moving picture operator and the first print of "Robin Hood" to arrive in the city to the home of Mayor Fred Kohler who has been confined to the house for the past two weeks with rheumatism. Among those present to enjoy the private exhibition were the Mayor and Mrs. Kohler, Law Director Paul Lamb, Welfare Director Ralph Perkins, and Dr. Maurice Budwig. The doctor said that movies ought to be shown in all hospitals, for convalescents, as the best way to cure a pain is to forget about it.

Fred Desberg, managing director of Loew's Ohio theatre, in a recent newspaper article said that favorable newspaper criticism do not boost a picture nearly as much as adverse newspaper criticisms hurt it. This theory was smashed into a cocked hat last week when every newspaper critic in town knocked "The Voice From the Minaret," the Norma Talmadge-Eugene O'Brien picture playing at the Stillman theatre, while the public flocked to see it. Which proves that a proper combination of stars can make an exception to all motion picture rules. "The Voice from the Minaret" broke the records for this season, according to Desberg.

Along Cleveland's Film Row

J. J. CRANDALL, field representative for Associated Exhibitors has brought his three months' sojourn in the Cleveland office to a close with the appointment of Herbert Ochs as local exchange manager. Ochs was formerly local Hodkinson exchange manager.

F. H. Brauer is getting signatures on the dotted line for Famous Players-Lasky now instead of for First National, as heretofore. Brauer is working the northern Ohio territory.

Henry Fleming has moved from the third floor of the Film Exchange building, where he had charge of the Hodkinson poster department, to the seventh floor, where he is now juggling the paper for First National.

H. E. Stahler is back in the distributing end of the business again, having recently allied himself with the local Fox family. Stahler used to be Cleveland manager for Associated Exhibitors.

E. A. McAuliffe. well known in these parts has severed his connection with the Cincinnati Universal exchange to join the sales force of the Cleveland Fox branch office.

J. S. Jossey, president of the Progress Pictures Company,. was conspicuously absent from his office last week, having been laid up with the prevalent grippe.

The Western Pictures Company, of which W. J. Slimm is president, has just opened a Cincinnati branch so as to give 100 per cent service to exhibitors in the southern part of the state. The new branch, located at 505 Broadway Film Exchange building, is under the direction of Louis Snitzer, formerly with Lande. Matthew Schiessel is office manager. President Slimm announced the purchase of the Neal Hart productions for distribution in Ohio through his two exchanges.

C. L. Peavey, Hodkinson manager in these parts, is having his Monday afternoon exhibitor screenings well attended. The third of the series is "Dollar Devils." Exhibitors have complimented Peavey for putting on these screenings regularly, so that they can keep their finger right on the Hodkinson pulse.

Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Service of Cleveland has spent the past two weeks in New York. It's a business trip. And now comes the announcement that Charnas has bought the Betty Blythe pictures, including "How Women Love," and "The Darling of the Rich;" "The World Astage" and "Environment" with Milton Sills and Alice Lake. These purchases are for distribution in Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Western Pennsylvania.

Joseph Palfi has taken over the Princess theatre, Kent, O., from H. Lallimont. It is said that Lallimont is retiring from the film business.

With Omaha's Exchanges

Harry Hollander has succeeded Roy E. Churchill as Omaha branch manager for Goldwyn. Mr. Churchhill goes to Kansas City as branch manager for F.B.O.

Harold D. Barnes, exploitation man for F.B.O., has gone to Grand Island, Neb., and Red Oak, Ia., in connection with the booking of "The Third Alarm," which will be shown in the Grand theatre in the former city and at the Beardsly theatre in the latter.

During the second week of Robin Hood at the Strand Theatre Manager Harry Watts entertained 500 public school children at a screening which began at 9 a. m. The children who stood first and second in their class averages during the last school semester were given tickets to this special showing. The invitations were limited to the honor pupils in Fourth to Eighth grades. Belle M. Ryan assistant superintendent of schools, also attended and was enthusiastic in her praise of this screen masterpiece.

Publicity Manager Nathan Frudenfeld of the World Realty Company and Harold Barnes of the local F.B.O. exploitation department, did some effective work in promoting "The Third Alarm," shown at the Moon Theatre. They went to the public library and obtained loan of photographs and other articles of interest relating to the genesis of the Omaha fire department. This collection and a series of still pictures of "The Third Alarm" were shown in a display window of a downtown store. They also dug up an antiquated piece of fire apparatus to which they hitched three horses that were used by the fire department before it was motorized. This horse-drawn apparatus with clanging bell attracted considerable attention along the streets through which it passed.

J. L. (Jimmy) Winn, assistant manager of the Omaha branch of Associated First National, has taken the publicity desk, succeeding E. R. Coffin who has gone to Hollywood, to be identified with a production unit of First National. Eddie Alperson, Omaha branch manager, and his efficient organization, tendered Mr. Coffin a farewell party at the new exchange rooms this week. Music and dancing were features of the function. Mr. Winn, the new publicity man, has experienced an unusually successful career in the motion picture industry during the last three years. He began his newspaper experience with The Omaha Bee.

Salesmen working out of the Omaha office of Associated First National are hitting the high spots in new Hupmobile sport roadsters.

"Dr. Jack" had a run of three weeks in downtown theatres, showing two weeks at the Sun and then at the Moon theatre for the third week, these houses being under the same management.

Canadian Chatter

Capt. Frank Goodale, manager of Loew's Ottawa theatre, was the "headliner" at the luncheon of the Lions Club of Ottawa on Tuesday, January 30, when his activities as an aeronaut in the States before and during the war were duly noted. Manager Goodale introduced several acts from the theatre who provided special entertainment and then distributed a number of passes to the theatre as "Good Fellowship Prizes."

Manager J. C. Kennedy of Allen's Regent theatre, Ottawa, joined "The 100 Club of Ottawa," an exclusive business men's organization in the Canadian Capital, on January 31.

On February 2, Manager Don Stapleton of the Centre theatre, Ottawa, was the "silent booster" at the Kiwanis Club of Ottawa, of which he is an active member. References were made to his activities in the moving picture business since the days when he and his father conducted the "Majestic," a store show on Sparks Street, Ottawa. Mr. Stapleton provided a number of theatre passes which had been hidden under the chairs at the luncheon tables and there was a scramble to secure the prizes.

Advertising for the first annual ball and banquet of the Montreal Elks was provided by George Rotsky, a member of the local lodge and manager of the Allen theatre, Montreal. Mr. Rotsky donated the use of half a column of space in the theatrical section of the Montreal Star for an announcement regarding the function which was held February 2. Incidentally, the orchestra of a rival theatre, the Capitol, under Conductor J. J. Shea, provided the music for the ball.

William Brown of Vancouver, B. C., one of those formerly identified with the Columbia theatre chain in British Columbia, has secured three of the theatres which were formerly operated by the company. The houses for which he has secured the releases include the Columbia, Maple Leaf and the Princess of Vancouver.

Arthur Detlor, former manager of the Empress theatre, Edmonton, Alberta, has been sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment on the charge of theft by the conversion of funds of the Western Amusement and Property Company, Limited, the corporation operating the Empress theatre which is one of the best known moving picture houses of the Canadian West.

Kansas City Slants

Two changes in management of theatres in the Kansas City territory were announced last week. The Elite theatre at Baxter Springs, Kas., has been purchased by Robinson & Garber from Thomas McGruder and J. G. Tinsdale, while the Olive theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., has been purchased by M. F. Meade from Mrs. W. W. Wertenberger.

Charles H. Barron and Showalter Lynch of the Kansas theatre, Wichita, Kas., by virtue of an effective exploitation campaign, were able to depart from the usual policy of two pictures a week and play to good crowds all last week. A fair grounds of miniature design at the front of the theatre, a frame mounted on a motor car, on which were displayed six-sheets on each side and two three-sheets in the rear, did the work.

News of the Canadian Exchanges

VINCENT McCABE, Toronto, has resigned from the post of general manager of Associated First National's Canadian organization because of ill health, announcement to this effect being made at Toronto on February 2. Mr. McCabe has been one of the outstanding men in the film exchange field in Canada and his withdrawal has aroused wide regret. He came into prominence first as Fox representative at Toronto about six years ago and he became general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, Limited, for Canada before he went with First National. He has visited every part of Canada and was known personally by almost every exhibitor in the Dominion. His health has been poor for some time past. He has no business plans for the future.

Announcement is made that Canadian Educational Films, Limited, with headquarters at Toronto, has taken over the Canadian distribution rights for Robertson-Cole productions, which were formerly handled by Regal Films, Limited. This announcement has occasioned considerable surprise in Canadian theatre circles because it marks the entry of Educational in Canada into the field of dramatic feature distribution.

Until a few months ago, Educationals were released in Canada under the direction of Jule and J. J. Allen, but Canadian Educational Films, Limited, was organized as an independent company to handle the releases throughout the country, offices being opened at Toronto, Montreal, St. John, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. This move has been followed by the acquiring of Robertson-Cole rights.

Regal Films, Limited, one of the largest exchanges in Canada, will continue to handle Metro, Pathe and other brands of pictures.

Cecil Wilson, Winnipeg branch manager of United Artists Corporation for the past year, has resigned, according to official announcement at Winnipeg. He is considering several offers from other exchange companies, it is stated.

Milwaukee's Film Row News

WILLIAM ASHMUN, manager of the Milwaukee branch of Pathe, Inc., tendered his entire office force a banquet on January 20 at Charley Toy's in celebration of the Milwaukee exchange winning third place in the Eschmann sales contest for 1922. The branch manager was awarded $300, each salesman $125, the booker $100, and cashier, $100. The Portland branch ranked first and Los Angeles second.

H. J. Terry has recently returned to Milwaukee and is in charge of Associated Exhibitors' Features, distributed through Pathe. Mr. Terry was associated with W. W. Hodkinson Corporation a number of years, and has been in and about this territory for some time. He comes from the Chicago branch, and will be in charge of sales for this section, comprising two-thirds of Wisconsin and the upper peninsula of Michigan.

J. B. Orth, general service manager of Universal, and his assistant, W. K. Lindman, are visiting Milwaukee, arranging for the equipment of Universal's new offices.

Book department tie-ups in Gimbel's, the Boston Store, Gray's, Espenhain's, three Schuster stores, have been helping exploit "The Flirt," now concluding the second week of its run at the Butterfly. A ticket of admission was given to each purchaser of the novel. A ready-to-wear window tie-up at Espenhain's was another feature of the publicity given the picture.

"Doc" Stimpson, who formerly traveled through northern Michigan for Famous Players-Lasky, has been transferred to the city sales department. O. J. Wooden is now in charge of the northern Michigan territory.

Mr. Durlam, local manager for Famous Players-Lasky, announces that their current product, comprising a group of thirty-nine pictures, has been closed for practically every key center in the territory.

Along Kansas City Film Row

THE Exhibitors Poster Exchange, which long has been one of the needs of the Kansas City film colony, has been organized by Al Kahn, president and general manager of the Crescent Film Exchange. The new exchange will be located in the same building as the Crescent Film Exchange.

Ralph Scherzer has resigned as office manager of the Mid-States Distributing Company's Kansas City office. Mr. Scherzer had been with the company since it took over the product of Peacock Productions. As to the future Mr. Scherzer is undecided.

H. E. Schiller, manager of the Kansas City Educational office, is confined to his bed this week, suffering from a severe attack of influenza. His condition is not dangerous, according to physicians, and he is expected to be back at his desk soon.

E. C. Jensen, assistant general sales manager of F.B.O., spent last week in "lining up" the force at Kansas City branch. After a series of "pep" lectures, he departed with the assurance of every one from the janitor to branch manager, that the Kansas City exchange would be "hitting the old pellet" the year round.

C. A. Vassar, chief of Kansas City police, received a request Wednesday to indorse the motion picture planned by Mrs. Dorothy Davenport Reid, widow of Wallace Reid, which will depict the evils of the narcotic habit. The request was in a letter from Louis Oaks, chief of police in Los Angeles, who is seeking the indorsements of all the police chiefs in the principal cities of America. Chief Vassar immediately sent a telegram of commendation.

Florida Flashes

L. I. Galbreath, who operates the Tha-Leno theatres in Center Hill and Webster, has opened another house in Bushnell. The new house will also be called Tha-Leno.

The annual meeting of the Strand Amusement Company, owners of the Strand, Victory and Bonita theatres of Tampa, was held in Tampa this week. Officers for the year were elected. W. D. Gray, president; E. Sudenforf, vice president; J. A. Waterman, treasurer; H. S. Hampton, secretary. The officers and directors were highly gratified with the excellent showing made by General Manager C. D. Cooley, and his efficient staff, and no changes of any kind were made in the management.

A cloud of smoke suddenly filled the Grand theatre, Tampa, about 8 o'clock last Monday evening, causing the patrons of the theatre to make a hasty exit, with some mild excitement. Someone from an office window above the theatre had possibly thrown a lighted cigarette on a pile of trash in the alley in the rear of the theatre, and the large suction fans drew the smoke from the burning trash into the theatre. The fire department quickly extinguished the blaze and the show proceeded as usual.

Geo. T. Chester, manager of the American and Ark theatres, Orlando, drove to Tampa last Thursday.

When the Clinch theatre closed on January 1, Frostproof was without amusement, as there was no other building to be had that was suitable for a theatre, so Stanley E. Meyer bought a 30 by 50 tent, chairs and other equipment, and expects to give the people of Frostproof their movies under canvas within the next two weeks.

San Diego Paragraphs

W. C. Everett, who has been connected with the Colonial Theatre since its opening, as treasurer of the Mission Amusement Corporation, which controls the house, has taken over the management of the theatre, succeeding S. S. Blachley, who has gone on the road with a company.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer," during its week's showing at the Plaza, proved a good box office attraction, and the fact that it was produced by A. H. Sawyer of the Sawyer-Lubin company, now building a studio at Grossmont, near here, added to its local popularity. Mr. Sawyer addressed the weekly luncheon of the University Club recently, using as his theme "Motion Pictures and Motion Picture Actors."

Western New York

The Palace, Peterson & Wood's new house in Jamestown, was formally opened last Monday evening. A large delegation of Buffalo exchange managers, salesmen and exhibitors attended the premiere. Howard Waugh is managing the Palace as well as the Mozart. The policy of the Palace is vaudeville and pictures.

Buffalo's Strand is no more. It closed its portals Wednesday night with a final showing of "I Am the Law." Manager Eugene A. Pfeil is going into the producing business. He has been named general manager of Cavalier Productions, Inc., in which Buffalo and Indiana financiers are interested. Mr. Pfeil plans to go to New York about April 1. A charter has been applied for. Charlie Johnson, the Strand's famous colored porter, will assume a similar position at the new Troy theatre in Troy, N. Y. The Strand is now being demolished to make way for an addition to a neighboring bank. The lobby is for rent as a store.

Buffalo clergymen saw an advance showing of episodes from the Old Testament in the Central "Y," Monday afternoon. The pictures are being distributed by National Non-Theatrical Pictures, Inc., of New York.

Buffalo may have a motion picture studio at last. Officials of the United Film Productions, Inc., New York City, are in town seeking a studio site. The roof of the old German-American brewery building at Main and High streets and the old Curtiss airplane plant in Elmwood avenue are being considered. Tefft Johnson will be in charge of the local studio. United has been making two-reel comedies. Officers said that Buffalo was an ideal location for a studio and that many producers were leaving Gotham because of the high cost of maintaining studios there.

The Opera House and Temple theatre in Cortland, N. Y., owned by J. S. Burnham have been purchased by Myron Bloom of Fulton, N. Y.

T. Cecil Leonard, manager, announces a change of policy at the Olympic. Hercafter there will be two changes of program each week instead of one. Mr. Leonard has designated Friday evening as "Family Night," when to all children presenting a coupon from the newspapers he is giving entrance for five cents. "The Oregon Trail," is being added Friday night and Saturday matinee.

Howard J. Smith, manager of the Palace theatre, is a live wire showman. He is now inviting all former satisfied Strand patrons to make the Palace their amusement headquarters. Mr. Smith says that his added vaudeville section is helping business.

"Robin Hood" opens in Buffalo for an indefinite run at Shea's Hippodrome, commencing Sunday, March 4, according to an announcement by Vincent McFaul, managing director of the "Hipp." Mr. McFaul is planning an elaborate pres-

Around Buffalo's Branch-Offices

THE big event of the week was the formal opening of the Buffalo exchange of Renown Pictures, Inc., of New York at 505 Pearl street with Robert T. Murphy as manager and the private screening of "The World's a Stage," in the Statler Hotel in the evening, followed by a reception and dance. Southard Brown of the home office publicity forces came to town to aid "Bob" put the show over. Walter Dion was in charge of projection at the Statler. There was a large attendance at the hotel end of the day's activities.

Colonel Howard F. Brink is anxiously awaiting a print of Dr. Coue's screen message. The Colonel wants to get a flash at it himself and see if it will help him in trying to smile exhibitors into signing contracts. One thing is certain, Howard ought to have an easy time of it booking this one. Clara Gross has resigned from the Educational office staff to accept a position with F.B.O. Educational is now installed in its fine new offices—the old Nu-Art exchange in the big new film building at Pearl and Tupper streets.

Hiram Abrams was a Buffalo visitor last week. He dropped into town for a conference with Chester A. Saunders, local exchange manager. Rose Owen and Rose Middleman have resigned from the United office force.

Henry W. Kahn, Metro manager, was in Syracuse last week end and while there met Jackie Coogan, who was in his old home town for a brief visit. Jackie assured Henry that he ought to break all booking records when his new Metro pictures came through.

H. L. Berkowitz, assistant manager of the First Graphic exchange journeyed to New York this week for a peek at the bright lights. Jack, manager, and H. L.'s brother has just returned from his peeking tour along Broadway. Phil Gentille invaded the Southern Tier this week and signed up a lot of business for the new Richard Talmadge pictures.

Josephine Genco, formerly with Fox exchange, has succeeded Miss Ruth Rappeport as secretary at the local Merit exchange, which is now in charge of N. I. Filkins. Miss Rappeport is now with Renown Pictures, Inc.

There has been much activity at First National the past few days. Edwin Walsh, booker, eloped with Miss Hazel McClellan, director of the Colonial theatre orchestra, and the reports got out that Harold Lloyd Beecroft, exploitationist extraordinary, is soon to wed Miss Genevieve Kehoe of Syracuse. No wonder this guy has always wanted to go to Syracuse to put on campaigns. We have a sneaking suspicion that much of the campaigning was at the home of Genevieve. We understand that Harold will do the bridegroom stuff this month and that he has already been set back several years through the purchase of a diamond ring that glows like a headlight on a Ford. Branch Manager E. J. Hayes has signed a mammoth contract with Shea's Hippodrome for First National productions and announces that the local exchange will go way over its quota for F. N. week, Feb. 3 to 10. R. H. Clark was in town last week end.

Joe Fitzer is now representing Universal in the Syracuse district, according to an announcement by Jim Savage, assistant-manager of the Buffalo exchange.

Fenton D. Lawlor, former manager and recently salesman at the Hodkinson exchange, has resigned. Paul Shaver has succeeded Howard Riehl for Hodkinson in the Syracuse district. Riehl is now with Renown. John Gentille, shipper, has resigned to go into business for himself. He has been succeeded by Elmer J. Tuksch, formerly with F.B.O. Ruth Lincoln has returned to her old job on the office staff. A. W. Carrick, salesmanager, visited towns along the Southern Tier this week.

George J. Canty, formerly with Fox, has been added to the sales force of Bond Photoplays, Inc. Mike Resnick has resigned. He has returned to New York, his old stamping grounds.

With Charlotte's Branch-Offices

FRITZ FRIEND, veteran Metro salesman in the Carolinas, and Jimmy Hicks, of Enterprise Distributing Corporation, detail harrowing experiences of being snowbound in the mountains of North Carolina, around Chimney Rock, early in January. They were traveling in their automobiles and were unable to negotiate the tortuous mountain roads during the worst snow storm of the winter, the men suffering intensely from exposure before relief came.

E. F. Dardine, Charlotte manager for Universal, has just returned from a trip through the Virginia territory. He also visited Raleigh and met many of his friends among the legislators, building anti-censorship fences, etc.

Fred H. Kirby, for several years Carolina salesman for Educational, is now covering the same territory for American Releasing Corporation.

V. P. Whitaker, special representative for Al Lichtman, has been in the Carolina territory with Branch Manager Rufus A. Davis, making calls on important key city exhibitors.

John Scruggs, of the accessory department of Goldwyn, was called to Greenville, S. C., last week on account of the death of his father.

W. B. Corby, former Universal salesman out of Charlotte, has resigned his position, but has not announced his new affiliation.

George V. Atkison, short subject salesman for Charlotte Pathe, is covering Eastern North Carolina.

H. H. Anderson, who formerly controlled a circuit of theatres in the Carolinas, has moved to Charlotte, where he has secured the premises formerly occupied by the Select offices, which have closed. It is rumored that Anderson will, at an early date, enter the independent state right field with an exchange in Charlotte.

entation of this Douglas Fairbanks' production de luxe.

The Shea Amusement Company's first house in Canada, Shea's in Toronto, now the Strand, is being offered for lease after May 15, according to ads in the local papers.

The new Strand theatre will open the end of this month in Endicott, N. Y. It is being built by the Kodeco corporation on Washington street. It has a capacity of 900. It is a beautifully decorated and modern equipped theatre.

In order to arouse interest in the first episode of "Plunder," Pearl White's new serial, Arthur L. Skinner, manager of the Victoria, arranged to have motion pictures taken of all folks entering the "Vic" last Saturday afternoon. These pictures will be shown on the screen at the next Saturday matinee and you can bet all the kids will come again to see themselves "in de movies."

Al Becker of the Becker Theatre Supply company has installed two new Simplex machines in Shea's Court street vaudeville house. He has also furnished the Kensington theatre with a new Crystal beaded screen, and Manager James Cardino hopes to thus acquire perfect pictures.

Carolina Bulletins

Carl Bamford, district supervisor of theatres in North Carolina for Southern Enterprises, Inc., has purchased the Majestic Theatre, Asheville, from the Southern Enterprises, Inc., and will hereafter operate it independently. It is a new theatre, one of the finest in the South and was formerly one of the best first run houses of the Lynch organization in Asheville, which is the original home of the vast Lynch enterprises.

Percy W. Wells, of Wilmington, N. C., president of the North Carolina M.P.T.O. is receiving the sympathy of his many friends upon two bank failures in Wilmington during the past four weeks, in each instance wiping out the cash surplus of the company on deposit in these banks. In addition to the different checking accounts of the amusement company, each bank at the time carried the entire accumulation of all theatres of admission taxes which had been collected for almost two months.

R. D. Craver, of Charlotte's "Broadway" and owner of the First National exchange there, has acquired the Broadway theatre, Columbia, S. C., by purchase. He formerly owned the house at one time. He will thoroughly remodel and redecorate it and install a mammoth pipe organ.

U. K. Rice, of the Pilot, Broadway and Auditorium theatres, Winston-Salem, was a visitor on Charlotte's Film Row during the past week.

H. F. Stallings, of Kinston, N. C. and H. R. Mason, of Goldsboro, N. C., operating the Mason-Stallings Enterprises, with theatres in Goldsboro, Kinston and Wilson, N. C., were visitors in Charlotte during the week.

Seattle Bulletins

"To have and To Hold" closed its engagement at the Strand theatre here the end of January, after having played to seventeen days of capacity business. The picture opened at Manager H. B. Wright's house in the middle of the week, and it was at first expected that it would play for ten days only, but attendance at the theatre held up so well that the attraction was held over for a two and half week run. "Ebb Tide" followed it as the next attraction.

"The Tale of the Pipe" a special propaganda reel produced in conjunction with the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, was recently introduced by Manager R. W. Case of the Columbia theatre to aid in the fight now going on in this city against the dope and drug evil. According to present plans, "The Tale of the Fipe" will be made into a series of pictures, and one reel will be shown at the Columbia each week. The film is made by "Shorty" Randolph, cameraman for the International News in Seattle. It contains figures on the narcotic evil and is supplemented by scenes in opium dens, exhibits of narcotic instruments, and descriptive titles regarding all phases of the situation. In the first series, flashed from "Broken Blossoms" and other pictures of that type, loaned by the various exchanges, as well as a telegram from Luther Burbank to Mr. Case, helped to introduce the subject to the theatre patrons, who were loud in their praises of the work the Columbia is doing.

A suit for $20,000 was filed against the Southern Pacific railway recently by Miss Frankie Darling, while she was appearing in this city at the Blue Mouse theatre in the "Irene Castle Fashion Promenade" offered as a prologue to the Hodkinson release, "Slim Shoulders." The suit is a result of an accident occurring at Medford, Oregon, recently, when the train gave a sudden lurch and Miss Darling was thrown to the floor, suffering a broken nose and other injuries as a result of her fall. She was unable to appear in the revue for over a week after the accident, and declares, in her suit, that three physicians have told her the scar on her nose will be permanent.

Word has just been received in this city that Miss Jean Haskell, who up to a few months ago had always resided in Seattle, has signed a long-term contract with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. She was recently announced as winner of a motion picture magazine "opportunity" contest, and will enter the "university of the motion picture" on the Goldwyn lot. She is the daughter of the president of one of Seattle's largest meat packing organizations.

Two traveling auditors have been recent visitors in the city. Joe De Maio, representing the First National exchanges, and Frank W. Talbert, of Universal, have both been working in their respective local exchanges for the past several weeks.

News of Seattle's Exchanges

S. J. VOGEL, western district manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, was a visitor in Seattle recently, en route to his general headquarters in San Francisco, after an extended business trip to New York and a tour of inspection of his territory. Mr. Vogel was a guest of J. R. Beal, manager of the local exchange, during his stay here. Another out-of-town man around the Hodkinson exchange was Jack Tripp publicity and exploitation manager for the Irene Castle Fashion Promenade, which is now touring the Pacific Coast in conjunction with the Hodkinson release, "Slim Shoulders." The picture was showing at the Blue Mouse this week, and Mr. Tripp left the city in the middle of the week for Tacoma to make arrangements for the engagement beginning there the following week. The picture and show has been meeting with capacity houses at all the cities on the Coast.

Roy Boomer, a special representative of the Universal Film Company, who handles key city bookings on most of the Universal Jewel productions, has returned to his headquarters in this city after a recent trip to the East, and in a short time expects to get on in the territory and work around Portland and San Francisco. Mr. Boomer reports business in the eastern part of Washington rather quiet, but much better in western Washington and Oregon. Edward Armstrong, assistant general sales manager for Universal, has also been in the city, where he has been watching the progress of the eight local territory offices in the "Armstrong Week" contest to determine which exchange made the greatest increase in sales over a ten-week period a year ago. Although the results had not been finally tabulated, it was believed that the Seattle exchange would share the cash prize awarded to the office that made the largest gain.

Visitors last week on Seattle's Film Row included E. A. Halberg of the Lincoln theatre, Port Angeles; W. G. Ripley of the Bijou in Aberdeen, and R. L. Ruggles of the Dream and Liberty in Chehalis.

Along Atlanta's Film Row

THE entire industry mourns the of a veteran of the game—Hugh M. Cardoza, who has been in the film game for more than sixteen years. Mr. Cardoza died January 27th, after an illness of several weeks. For the last several months, he had held down most ably the post of Exploitation Manager in the local Associated First National Exhibitors Exchange. His loss will be keenly felt.

Business with Savini Films, Inc., must be extraordinarily good, for genial "Bob" Savini, president of the firm, is wearing a particularly joyous smile these days, and, instead of the cautious "not so good" that some of the exchange men hand you in reply to the inevitable "How's business?" Mr. Savini chortles, gleefully, "Great! Couldn't be better!"

It is good to see Miss Bianca T. Bak, Assistant Manager of the local Goldwyn Exchange back on the job, again. Miss Bak has had a particularly severe tussle with the old "dengue fever" menace, which has kept her from Film Row for a number of weeks.

Frank W. Salley, formerly a popular member of Film Row, who has been in Miami, Fla., for several months, has returned to Atlanta, and taken over the duties of the late Hugh M. Cardoza, in the offices of First National.

G. B. Holt, formerly in the office of Bromberg Attractions, has acquired passports and necessary "scraps of paper" which will enable him to sail for France, on the fifteenth of February, to take up his permanent residence in "that dear Paris." Mrs. Holt is French, a native Parisienne and has been homesick for the old country. Mr. Holt will act as cameraman for a number of American firms and is quite enthusiastic over the new venture.

It was with deep and sincere regret that the local Film Row, and its ramifications, saw Stephen A. Lynch depart for New York. Mr. Lynch has been identified with the industry in the South so long that it doesn't seem possible to imagine a "film game" in the South without him. An air of deep gloom has hung over the offices of Southern Enterprises ever since he left.

Joseph L. Marentette, who made himself tremendously popular as manager of the now defunct Realart Exchange in Atlanta, has gone over to Goldwyn, where his exhibitor-friends will be delighted to find him as much interested in their problems as before.

The society editors grew quite excited over chronicling the marriage, last week, of Oscar Oldknow, only son of William Oldknow, one of the oldest pioneers, in point of service, in the picture industry, to charming Miss Louise Scruggs, daughter of a prominent and wealthy Atlanta family. Mr. Old-

In the Des Moines Exchanges

JOE COWAN, shipping clerk for Universal, is getting a lot of kidding this week. He dressed as "The Sheik" at a masquerade ball he attended last week. And he won first prize. So his friends mailed him a photo of Valentino inscribed as follows: "To my nearest rival."

The girls of the office staff at the Pathe exchange were entertained at the home of Mrs. Mary Frase last week. The guests were Helen Ditzler, Rose Browder and Mrs. M. R. Gallaway, and there were also a number of their friends invited. They had a lov-a-ly time.

Business has been so rushing at the Universal exchange that they have added two new stenographers to the staff, Miss Hughes and Miss Herman of Des Moines.

Atlanta Gossip

Manager De Sales Harrison, of the Howard theatre, is very busy just now with elaborate plans for a fashion revue which he will put on in conjunction with the smartest shop in the South, the week of Feb. 12. Ten girls, selected from the seventy-five most beautiful girls in Atlanta (talk about Ziegfeld choruses, and Mack Sennett girls!) will wear a bewildering assortment of gowns, the cream of New York fashion designers—and it's all going to be very wonderful—and feminine Atlanta is holding its breath in anticipation.

William R. Bedell, of the Rialto theatre, believes in contests, and his belief has been upheld by the pleasing success of several of his most recent ones. The grand prize of the last contest was a white enamel kitchen cabinet, that fired the eye of every feminine patron who saw it—and the essays on the value of the feature picture flew thick and fast, gathering for Mr. Bedell and the Rialto considerable free publicity.

Manager Kimball, of the Bonita, has an unusually clean and amusing tab show, labelled "Flappers of 1923," which is pleasing his patrons. He uses a five-reel feature, a two-reel comedy, and a news weekly in addition to his tab show and is doing excellent business.

Heretofore, a house with a three-changes-a-week policy, the Alamo No. 2, under the good showmanship of the manager and owner, Mr. Samuels, has successfully weathered a change to one picture a week. Each picture is booked for an indefinite run, with a minimum of four days and the new policy has met with success. Second runs of the really big specials, "Three Musketeers," "Way Down East," "When Knighthood was in Flower," has made the change possible.

Des Moines Flashes

J. E. Boyle, Iowa's oldest exhibitor, was removed to the hospital this week. He is in a very serious condition.

Mr. Harry Pace, of Pocahontas, is the father of a fine baby boy. Mr. Face is now acting as manager of the theatre at Pocahontas while Mr. Bauma who has been in partnership with him there, joins the Universal Sales force. Mr. Bauma will have territory 3.

The theatre at Mt. Ayr has changed hands. Mr. Kramer, of Great Bend, Kansas, has bought the theatre at Mt. Ayr.

Mr. Arthur Stolte, of the Des Moines theatre, has suffered an attack of the grippe or something like it.

Dan Burgum, of the Garden theatre, Des Moines, reports that a letter from his daughter, Ruth, in California, says that she agrees with boosters of the climate. She has gained ten pounds.

Mr. Helmts, manager of the Strand theatre, took a trip out ot town this week.

New England Jottings

More than 200 service and ex-service men were the guests of the Park theatre (Boston), management last Tuesday for a matinee of "Robin Hood," which is nearing the end of its run here after a great series of houses. The operetta of the same name by De Koven is to be given at the U. S. Naval Hospital here, and when the management heard of it they invited all men and nurses, not only there, but from all the veteran's hospitals in the vicinity of Boston.

A. W. Plummer has produced a New England photoplay from the old stage attraction, "Darkness and Daylight." Alta Vera is featured, others in the cast being Jack O'Brien, Audrey Berry, Harlan Knight and Wallace Ray. The scenes were all taken in the vicinity of Worcester.

William P. Connory, Jr., Congressman-elect from the Seventh Massachusetts district, has submitted his resignation to Mayor McPheters, of Lynn, Mass., as chairman of the Lynn censorship committee and the Mayor's secretary, to take effect February 17, preparatory to assuming his Washington duties.

Knights Templars, Pilgrim Commandery, of Lawrence, Mass., took over the Strand theatre in that city last Wednesday night for a special entertainment of pictures, dancing and buffet lunch. The affair was not limited to members and their friends, but anyone could get tickets. Following the photoplays the large lobby was turned into a dance hall.

Louise Lovely, who was at the Olympia theatre, New Bedford, the past week, was the guest of the Rotary Club there on Wednesday where she spoke on the false impressions gained among the public on Hollywood. At the theatre she invited young men and women to take part in her sketch, "A Day at the Studio," and declared that she would lend assistance in getting professional engagements for them if talent appeared.

Last Wednesday saw the third annual ball of the Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Operators' in Boston. It was held at Mechanics Hall, and more than 15,000 were there during most of the evening. The feature of the evening was the "fountain of perfume," placed in the center of the floor, and spouting fragrance throughout the evening. It was a sizable affair looking as if made of brown marble, and was constructed by Edward E. Chapman, of Loew's theatre, and William Morrell, and Robert McKee, of Keith's theatre. Vivian Martin led the grand march at midnight with Jack Donahue. Of the stars perhaps the most loudly applauded was Pauline Frederick.

The many methods employed by fish hatcheries in the state of Massachusetts were shown last Monday night at Leominster at a meeting of the Sportsman's Association of that city. The methods at hatcheries and the habits of game were shown, while Game Warden Bowen, of Boston, explained the film.

Among the Butte Exchanges

EDWARD ARMSTRONG, assistant general salesman of the Universal Film Exchanges on a tour of inspection of the Western Division was a Butte visitor the week of January 23. He reported conditions improving in general throughout the Northwest and was pleased to see that conditions in Butte had improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott of the Imperial and Margaret theatres in Anaconda paid the Universal a visit last week. While in the office they booked "The Flirt," "Flame of Life," "New Leather Pushers," the "Laemmle Nine," as well as Around the World in Eighteen Days."

P. C. Hurst, exhibitor at Bozeman, was a visitor in Butte a few days ago. While here he did considerable business with the Universal, giving his order for "The Flirt," "The Flame of Life," "New Leather Pushers," and the "Laemmle Nine."

Manager C. C. Pratt of the American theatre, Butte, has been running "The Flirt" for the past four days.

Power White, exhibitor of Livingston and F. A. Boedecker from Bozeman, were in the city last week calling on the various exchanges.

E. P. McCafferty of New York, manager of Fox Educational and Industrial Department, is making a tour of the Fox offices all over the world and he is scheduled to arrive in Butte on February 8th. He plans to be in Butte for four days.

Western representative of the Fox Exchange, George Ekre, has been in Great Falls the past few days screening for the exhibitors the newest Fox specials, "The Town That Forgot God," "The Village Blacksmith," "Custard Cup," "Face on the Barroom Floor," "Lupino Lane" and the comedy, "A Friendly Husband."

Fox's representative, "Whirlwind" Hughart, is now in Eastern Montana covering the territory for the Fox specials.

Merle Davis, General Manager of the Ansonia Amusement Company, with headquarters at Butte, has been in Seattle on a business trip, while there he was taken with La Grippe and hurried home. He is reported much improved.

The residents of Mechanicsville, N. Y., will vote on the question of Sunday movies at a special election to be held on February 28. At a recent meeting of the board of aldermen, it was decided that the best way to settle the matter was in a referendum vote. Those working for Sunday shows in Mechanicville have adopted as a slogan, the following: "What other places have, we should also have." The Sunday movie question was agitated a year ago in Mechanicville, but so much opposition developed along certain lines that those behind the proposition decided to withdraw for the time being.

The Liberty, at Newburgh, recently purchased by W. W. Berinstein, will hereafter be known as The Strand, and will reopen on February 14.

George Roberts, handling the Colonial and Hudson in Albany, spent a portion of last week in Elmira.

Charles Walder, manager of Goldwyn's exchange in Albany, has been confined to his house for a week or more, from a severe attack of influenza.

Lou Buettner, of Cohoes, in Albany recently, reported that the Strand, which he has just opened in Hudson Falls, is doing a capacity business, with a daily change of pictures. The house supports a six-piece orchestra besides an organ.

Ground will be broken on April 1 for William Berinstein's new theatre in Little Falls. Bids will be opened this week.

Manager Herman, of the First National Exchange in Albany, took a swing through northern New York last week, where he encountered snowdrifts as high as the trains.

No manager has yet been appointed to the Palace in Troy. Harry Berinstein, who has been handling the house, has been transferred to Newburgh, although eventually, he will handle the Little Falls house.

Olin L. Hawk, of New York, has just been named as manager of the Strand in Mechanicville, succeeding J. E. Fitzgerald, who has been transferred to Hudson Falls. Mr. Hawk will assume his duties on February 12.

Charles McCarthy, of Hoosick Falls, better known over the state as "Judge" McCarthy, and one of the old timers in the business, visited the Albany exchanges last week. T. J. McCarthy, of Port Henry, was also in town.

Manager Herman of the First National in Albany, now changes his collars twice a day, having been presented with a big supply from one of the Troy collar factories, in a tie-up with "The Hottentot."

As an exhibitor, there are few women in New York state the equal of Mrs. D. S. Regan, of the Star in Greenwich. Mrs. Regan was in Albany last week, selecting several pictures for early presentation.

An important motion picture deal was consummated in Cortland last week, in which the Opera House, as well as the Temple theatre was sold by J. S. Burnham to Michael Bloom, of Fulton. It is said that Meyer Schine was also out after the two houses.

The Strand of Phoenix changed hands last week, being sold to a Greek named Vernakas, of Watertown.

Jimmie Rose, one of the Pathe salesmen out of Albany, is back on the job, after three weeks in the hospital.

Uly Hill, managing director of the Mark Strand in Albany, will also handle the Troy, when it opens the latter part of this month. "The Flirt" will be used as the opening feature, with "Dr. Jack" running for a straight week at both houses, opening February 26.

Harry Bernstein, Buffalo manager for Universal, with supervision over Albany as well, was in the Capital City last week.

The Park, of Utica, and other theatres are heavily exploiting "Plunder," the latest Pearl White serial.

According to E. S. Johnson, a Pathe salesman out of Albany, just back from a two weeks' trip through northern New York, theatres in that section of the state have lost thousands of dollars during the past month because of the almost impassable condition of the roads.

Charles J. Rose, who has been handling the two Schine houses in Oneonta, has been transferred to Oswego.

L. L. Connor, of the Victory in Cambridge, prominent in American Legion affairs, was in Albany last week.

David C. Lithgow, of Green Island, is executing two mural paintings of large size for the new Troy theatre. One represents Emma Willard instructing a class in 1824, while the other shows the laying of the cornerstone of the first Court House.

Negotiations are pending in Syracuse, which may result in the Nate Robbins Enterprises of Utica acquiring the Grand Opera House. It is the first move in a vast expansion program planned by the Robbins interests.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

"Jazzmania"

Tiffany-Metro—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

JAZZMANIA. We'll say it is. But we'll wager that the exponents of syncopation eat this one up. Today the nation is in the grip of jazz. It dominates every social activity, at least the successful events. Taking cognizance of this state of affairs, Director Leonard has opened wide the purse strings and let a golden stream fall into the production of one of the most elaborately staged pictures of the season.

Made for fun purposes only, the story may be passed over quickly. It is a sort of syncopated Graustark theme with an American and Monte Carlo locale thrown in for good measure. Tiring of the continual plottings and bomb throwings of her countryfolk and determined not to marry Prince Otto, the pretender to the throne, Queen Ninon flees to America with the star reporter of one of the big dailies. There she becomes all the rage because of her dances, but in the end returns to her country to expose the perfidy of Otto. Her American lover follows thither and all ends well.

The story has been written with Miss Murray's dancing proclivities in mind. At every step Mae is given an opportunity to shake a wicked shoulder or gyrate on her pretty tootsies. The while, of course, she is donned in striking costumes, each more original than its predecessor and costing enough to make Britain's debt to U. S. pale into insignificance.

The settings, as in every Murray production, are unusually elaborate, some of them reaching heights of artistic splendor. A saving grace of the whole thing is the fact that the director and author have seen to it that seriousness does not intrude at any time.

There are some thrilling airplane shots showing a plane doing a tail spin. The mob scenes are well handled. From a photographic viewpoint, "Jazzmania," is a masterpiece. This picture answers the demand for pep in our picture programs.

The cast is a good one.

The Cast

Queen Ninon.....Mae Murray
Jerry Langdon.....Rod LaRoque
Jerry's Uncle.....Herbert Standing
"Buddy" Daimler.....Eddie Burns
Prince Otto.....Jean Herscholt
Captain Valmar.....Robert Frazer
Baron Bolo.....Lionel Belmore
American Capitalist.....Harry Northrup
American Capitalist.....Wilfred Lucas
General Muroff.....Thomas Guise
August Daimler.....Henry Barrows

By Edmund Goulding. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Photographed by Oliver T. Marsh.

The Story—Prince Otto threatens revolution in Jazzmania unless the queen consents to marry him. She refuses. Revolution starts. The queen becomes a jazz enthusiast and when the bombs begin to fall fast and furious she flees to America. She goes back, grabs the throne, turns the land into a republic, introduces flivvers and other modern equipment—and accepts American's love.

Classification—Graustark stuff jazzed up and set in elaborate scenes. The whole serving as a background for Miss Murray's dances.

Production Highlights—The dances performed by the star. The sets. The gowns worn by Miss Murray. The revolution in Jazzmania. The scenes attending the airplane wreck at Monte Carlo. The fine photography. The snappy subtitles.

Exploitationo Angles—The title. The star. Wonderful opportunities for putting over elaborate window displays in the leading music stores of your town.

Drawing Power—Will have a decided appeal to our modern jazz followers. The intelligencia may not care for it.

A scene from "Rob 'Em Good," Metro Comedy, starring Bull Montana, directed by Hunt Stromberg.

"The Pauper Millionaire"

Playgoers—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE we have the wealthy-father-determined-to-prevent-his-son's-marriage-to-a-girl-beneath-his-station formula—an old and obvious formula, incidentally, which becomes so involved that it never seems to get anywhere. It is an English production, carrying an English cast and is quite ordinary in most every department. Poor continuity seems to be a fault with these English productions—though once in a while one of these importations register sufficiently to pass muster—particularly if it contains players who are fairly well known and is directed by some one who knows how to put it over in the American way.

"The Pauper Millionaire" is slow-moving and after the theme is introduced it gets off on another tack without any of the situations being cleverly dovetailed. Such a type of story needs to be balanced with a humorous vein, but most of the action here is heavy with plot. The millionaire, an American, goes broke in London and suffers a deal of hardships before he is able to admit his failure in preventing the romance. In fact, the girl, a nurse, brings him back to health. And so he grants his consent to her becoming a member of his family.

The most pleasing highlights of the picture is some first rate atmosphere of London during one of its enveloping fogs. The acting is only fair—the millionaire suggesting a Britisher more than he does a New Yorker. Katherine Blair as the girl is charming and deserves a more outstanding part, while the rest of the cast is competent without displaying unusual qualities of screen pantomime.

Once in a while some praiseworthy incident flashes through the sequences, but there are not enough of them to carry the picture through a winner. The title and the theme should have been treated in a semi-humorous fashion, and the chances are it would have offered far better entertainment.

The Cast

John Pye Smith.....C. M. Hallard
Mrs. Pye Smith.....Norma Whaley
Harry Smith.....J. P. Roberts
Hilda Martin.....Katherine Blair
Jenks.....Jeff Barlow

By Austin Fryers. Scenario by Elliot Stannard. Directed by Frank H. Crane.

The Story—New York millionaire is determined to break up his son's engagement, and goes to London to "settle" with the pretty nurse to whom the youth is engaged. Through a stress of circumstances he loses his money and becomes injured. But the nurse brings him back to health and the father grants his consent to the boy's marriage.

Classification—Based upon conflict of father vesus son because latter is determined to marry.

Production Highlights—English atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Title looks like best feature to exploit here, since cast is unknown.

"Truxton King"

Fox—5613 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE mythical kingdom formula is resurrected again and since this particular film is an adaptation of George Barr McCutcheon's story of the same name, it is certain of a definite appeal because this author has become popular through being more experienced than any other in dealing with this ancient theme. Besides, his name is sufficiently familiar with the average patron to enlist his patronage. There isn't so much comic opera flavor to this picture as one would expect and the answer may be found in the adventure and romance which are not over-stuffed with hokum.

"Truxton King" is the best picture which has come John Gilbert's way in some time. Not since "Monte Cristo" has he had a story which gives him the opportunities to show what he can do until his sponsors gave him the McCutcheon yarn. Oh, there is nothing original about it; there is the same dashing American who rescues the fair daughter of royalty and wins her undying gratitude and affection. And the usual conflict between the ruling faction and the revolutionists is exposed to provide a more or less exciting climax. The popular elements of such a story are in their customary places. And because it keeps moving, furnishing a good line of action and adventure, it must be put down as a likely attraction for the everyday patron.

While humor is usually the saving grace of this type of play when it is exaggerated, here it looks out of place. In fact it appears labored in execution because it is entrusted to a corpulent player who impersonates a tourist guide. The director has provided a good production and deserves praise for his excellent lighting effects. Some of the shots featuring the battle between the rival factions were taken at night—and they offer a picturesque appeal.

And the plot? Well, the American is suspected of being a spy by the royalists. But when he protects them and effects the rescue of the girl and saves the kingdom he is taken right into the royal household. An active picture, this, and calculated to bring Gilbert back into the good graces of the public.

The Cast

Truxton King.....John Gilbert
Lorraine.....Ruth Clifford
Count Marlanx.....Frank Leigh
Prince Robin, aged 6.....Mickey Moore
Hobbs.....Otis Harlan
Count Carlos Von Enge.....Henry John Miller
John Tullis.....Richard Wayne
William Spanz.....Willis Marks
Olga Platanova.....Winifred Bryson
Baron Dangloss.....Mark Fenton

By George Barr McCutcheon. Scenario by Paul Schofield. Directed by Jerome Storm. Produced by Fox.

The Story—American in Graustark seeking adventure scrapes acquaintance with little prince and a meeting with the boy's charming aunt follows. Later he discovers that revolutionists are seeking to overthrow the government and appoints himself her protector. He is taken prisoner but escapes to effect the rescue of the aunt.

Classification—Adaptation of story of same name by George Barr McCutcheon. Based upon mythical kingdom formula.

Production Highlights—The line of action which is well sustained with adventure. The encounter between the revolutionists and the royalists.

Exploitation Angles—Author's name well known. Might link up with book-dealers in exploiting book and other novels by author.

Drawing Power—Suitable for any house catering to the fans.

"The Bohemian Girl"

American Releasing—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HARLEY KNOLES has paid his respects to the memory of Balfe by producing "The Bohemian Girl," one of the most popular romantic operas ever written. There is scarcely enough substance to provide picture material. So he relies mostly upon atmosphere and makes it a well-staged production. It is lavishly produced and fairly colorful. Most of us are familiar with the opera, but seeing it revivified for the screen will kindle a feeling of sentiment even though the spectator will not be conquered by the plot. Most of the sets are interiors, and the libretto is followed with true fidelity.

If Knoles has erred it is in holding his scenes too long, so that the action seems to drag throughout the entire footage. Also it seems as if he could have ordered the players who interpreted the gypsy roles to act more spiritedly. This is not condemning Constance Collier and C. Aubrey Smith, English actors who have appeared in American stage and screen productions, who, as the chief gypsies, manage to appear in character.

Ivor Novello, however, did not put enough animation in his study of the youthful Pole who became a gypsy to escape the Austrian conquerors. Moreover, when the Count's child is kidnapped and reared as a gypsy, he allows the years to rest lightly upon his shoulders, although ten or fifteen years must have elapsed. Ellen Terry as the old nurse of the girl has a small part, but her pantomime is perfect, and Gladys Cooper, in the title role, succeeds in lending a charming wistfulness to the interpretation. This personable English star is given several close-ups, and she can stand them. Again, she knows how to use make-up with discretion. Novello comes into the close-up considerably, too, mostly with his profile.

The story does not sustain one's interest throughout because the plot is slow in developing and very little adventure and incident are shown. The famous songs, "The Heart Bowed Down," "Then You'll Remember Me" and "I Dreamt I Dwelt in Marble Halls," are neatly dovetailed in captions and scenes. The picture, however, should draw well at any house and carries good exploitation possibilities.

The Cast

Arline.....Gladys Cooper
Thaddeus.....Ivor Novello
Buda.....Ellen Terry
The Gypsy Queen.....Constance Collier
Devilshoof.....C. Aubrey Smith
Count Arnheim.....Henry Vibart
Count Florestein.....Gibb McLaughlin

By William Balfe. Adapted from opera. Directed by Harley Knoles. Photographed by Rene Guissart. Released by American Releasing Corp.

The Story—Austrian count gives hunt dinner at which young gypsy is guest of honor—the gypsy having saved the life of the count's little daughter. The gypsy's comrade kidnaps the child and escapes, and the girl is brought up a gypsy, ignorant of her real identity. The youth who saved her life is in reality a Pole of royal blood. They fall in love with one another and are separated when the girl is reunited to her father. Explanations follow and the count grants his consent to their engagement.

Classification—Adaptation of Balfe's famous opera. Features adventure and romance.

Production Highlights—The good production. The notable names in cast—the players contributing good performances. Gladys Cooper's beauty. The scenes in the castle.

Exploitation Angles—Most every one is familiar with the score of Balfe's opera. Feature the music in your presentation. Stage a prologue featuring gypsy life and gypsy songs—with Balfe's "Dreamt I Dwelled in Marble Halls," "The Heart Bowed Down," and "Then You'll Remember Me," sung by soloists or featured by the orchestra. Play up the cast.

Drawing Power—Title should attract patrons of second class houses. Suitable for small town houses.

"Adam's Rib"

Paramount—Ten Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

CECIL B. DEMILLE has come to the defense of the flapper. And in passing it might be mentioned that the defense has cost a pretty penny. If ever a picture showed disregard for the money bags this one is it. From a production viewpoint it is DeMille's masterpiece and probably one of the most elaborate pictures in the history of the industry when the interior sets are taken into consideration. We are told that the prehistoric forest scene in which is set forth the life of the caveman is the largest indoor set ever staged. We believe it and confess that few will ever believe it possible that it is an interior scene.

"Adam's Rib" is a vivid refutation of the argument that there is nothing new in motion pictures. The natural history museum is that "something new." It shows us gigantic reproductions of dinosaurs and other 30-foot 2-ton playmates of our stone age ancestors. It is a novelty that is bound to cause comment. The grand ball scene is a triumph of color, photography and beauty. The forest scene in the "Adam Period" shows us that even then flappers held forth and that passion reigned. It is DeMille at his bizarre best.

In this picture the director seeks to prove that the modern girl is not as bad as his "Manslaughter" would have us believe. He argues on the screen that under the bobbed hair there may be brains and somewhere beneath the folds of the latest Poiret—a heart. In putting over this defense of flapperism he tells us a richly entertaining story. He has selected a cast that could not be improved upon—what with Milton Sills, Elliott Dexter, Anna Q. Nilsson, Theodore Kosloff and Pauline Garon—to play the characters.

The production is filled with typical DeMille surprises. Even at the close he introduced several thousand feet of color photography to make us sit up and take notice. Spice, snap, color, love, thrills—they're all here.

The Cast

Michael Ramsay.....Milton Sills
Prof. Nathan Reade.....Elliott Dexter
M. Jaromir.....Theodore Kosloff
(King of Morania)
Mrs. Michael Ramsay.....Anna Q. Nilsson
Mathilde Ramsay.....Pauline Garon
James Kilkenna.....Clarence Geldart
Minister to Morania.....George Field
Hugo Kermaier.....Robert Brower
Kramar.....Forrest Robinson

By Jeanie Macpherson. Directed by Cecil B. deMille.

The Story—Deals with passion through the ages. Mrs. Michael Ramsay, neglected by her husband and daughter, meets and falls in love with M. Jaromir, deposed king of Morania. Her daughter is in love with Reade, a professor. To save mother from King, daughter tries to win King away. Failing, she is also abandoned by professor. Mother and King plan to elope. Mother is shocked at daughter sacrifice, realizes conduct and quits king. The husband's fortune, which he spent to get the king back on his throne, is restored and all ends happily. A similar story is worked out in prehistoric settings.

Classification—A lavish society drama that sets a new standard in elaborate scenic investiture.

Production Highlights—The Natural history museum. The reproduction of the Chicago Board of Trade. The lavish ball scene. The fine cast. The exquisitive camera work, lighting effects and near the close the color photography. The elaborate sets throughout the picture.

Exploitation Angles—Probably the prize picture of the year for exploitation purposes. DeMille, Sills, Dexter, Nilsson, Kosloff, Macpherson, etc. Theme offers opportunities for tieups with your local board of trade, your natural history museum, your style emporiums, etc. It ought to be a winner if you plug it.

Drawing Power—We feel sure that this one can make money for any house, anywhere.

"The Gentleman from America"

Universal—4658 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THEY'VE left the shootin' and the trenches out of this serio-comic sketch of a buddy's adventures during a two weeks' furlough and the picture with Ed Gibson in the title role is certain to be called snappy entertainment, even though it is packed with hokum. "The Gentleman from America" presents a group of buddies waiting for sailing orders after the armistice. Naturally there is no suggestion of actual warfare. Gibson and his pal get a two weeks' furlough, hop a train for Paris, but are taken into a principality of Spain lying in the Pyrenees Mountains. And then the fun begins.

The sponsors have flavored the picture with life-like incident. Indeed, what happens here doubtless happened time and again during the war. The buddies, with characteristic American pep, breeze through some ticklish situations and our hero saves the girl from the unwelcome attentions of a Spanish don. The latter, the son of the over-lord, is determined to marry her, for, while she is ignorant that she is the reigning duke's daughter, the conspirators have full knowledge of this fact. This gives Gibson a chance to masquerade as a bandit with a price on his head—a bandit who robs the rich to help the poor. Therefore, he is always welcomed on his visits to the community.

There is not so much plot as there is incident. And the star's horsemanship is neglected for once. He saves the girl and is elected to the office of over-lord. Which accounts for the hokum, for not knowing any Spanish, he is able to get away with it by simply wearing a picturesque costume which might have seen service in "Carmen." Then the M. P. comes after him (the high light of the picture, incidentally), and he is next discovered in camp peeling onions.

It's a sure winner—this offering. It will satisfy any of the boys who were over there. And wise is that exhibitor who makes a play for the Legion patronage. It carries adventure and romance and, above all, retains the flavor of army life when the cares of war are forgotten. Moreover, it builds evenly and releases proper atmosphere.

The Cast

Dennis O'Shane.....Ed "Hoot" Gibson
Johnny Day.....Tom O'Brien
Carmen Navarro.....Louise Lorraine
The Vamp.....Carmen Phillips
Don Ramon Gonzales.....Frank Leigh
Juan Gonzales.....Jack Crane
San Felipe.....Bob McKenzie
Grand Duke.....Albert Prisco
Old Inez.....Rosa Rosonova

By Raymond Schrock. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Doughboy and his buddy get two weeks furlough and decide on Paris. They are carried into a principality of Spain and the hero falls in love with the reigning duke's daughter. She is pledged to a Spanish don but does not love him. The doughboy masquerades as a bandit and rescues her and is elected as overlord of the province. The military police come after him eventually. But he returns to the girl after his punishment.

Classification—Adventure-romance of buddy's experiences during a furlough, A. W. O. L. gets him into trouble.

Production Highlights—The spirited incident. The good interpretation of Gibson. The scene when the Spanish don and the doughboy have a bayonet fight. The scene when the M. P. comes after him.

Exploitation Angles—Here is your chance to co-operate with the American Legion. It will interest any of the boys who were over there. Would use war "stuff" for lobby display. Use stills of Gibson in his Castilian costume. Put on a Spanish dance for a prologue.

Drawing Power—Will please 'em in any down town or neighborhood house. Also suitable for small towns and country districts.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"A Hulu Honeymoon"

(Christie-Educational—Two Reels)

WHEN on the trail of a good comedy, don't overlook this one. In addition to being entertaining farce, it also answers the description of novelty.

The editor of a small town paper conceives the idea of running a popularity contest, newly-weds or near prospects eligible, the prize a trip to and from Honolulu, with all expenses paid.

Henry Smudge has his eye on a plump and good natured mate (Babe London) and believes on the strength of their combined popularities, that they stand a chance to win. They do not learn that all couples must be married when the ballots close until five minutes previous to the last vote. Which occasions a hurry up wedding.

The real fun begins, however, when the couple make a start for Los Angeles to board the tropic going vessel. Before the end of the first reel, they have arrived in Honolulu and discover the loss of hotel reservations. Therefore, they come in close contact with natives and the groom makes the fatal mistake of getting too close to a native daughter to whom, by an old custom, he accidentally becomes married. It is up to the first new wife to come to the husband's rescue. She finally assumes native attire and in grass skirts, endeavors to "vamp" the attentions of the male members of the Hawaiian girl's family, and after many humorous and hard fought efforts, succeeds in boarding another boat, leaving the intruding wife behind. Then they find they are on a boat bound for China, and we see them homeward bound in a rowboat.

The exteriors, obviously taken on actual location, are interesting, in addition to the comedy that is held at race-horse tempo throughout, resulting in a worth-while two reeler, apt to amuse generally.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Tattle Tail"

(Universal—Two Reels)

BROWNIE, of the cocked ears and the expressive tail, continues his screen career in this one with no diminution of stellar brilliance. He plays the part of a literal rum-hound, and assisted by a remarkably small boy and several adults, depicts the sleuthing, pursuit and capture of a band of bootleggers who dispense their wares through the medium of a piano hitched on a wagon, which emits liquid notes when given keys are struck. Brownie "soaks up the evidence" by rolling in it, but is captured by the bootleggers and thrown into a lake. He manages to keep his tail above water, and the liquor still upon it is drained off and used as evidence.—STUART GIBSON.

"Jailed and Bailed"

(Roach-Pathe—One Reel)

HERE we have Jobyna Ralston as a girl, unable to decide which of two suitors she desires to wed. She plans to test them out by getting arested for speeding—the one who successfully gets her out of jail, to be the winner. Both suitors "speed" to the rescue, with the usual getting-in-each-other's-way incidents, and almost forget the girl getting themselves out of "jams." However, the hero finally succeeds in getting arrested himself, which wins the bet, the girl, etc. A comedy with a lot of action, but not an excess of humor. Paul Parrott is the hero, who, about to be "tricked" out of winning the girl, gets there anyway.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Lost, Strayed or Stolen"

(Range Rider-Pathe—Two Reels)

A SPLENDID young westerner, in love with the pretty daughter of a neighboring rancher, finds himself in a difficult position. He has borrowed, on security, from the girl's father and unless he can secure an extension, faces severe loss. The two men quarrel about the deal and the younger man is ordered off the ranch. This pleases a ranch hand, who also looks with favor upon the girl, and who decides to take advantage of a situation that arises which will throw suspicion on his rival, as guilty of kidnapping.

Other neighbors become involved upon the disappearance of the baby brother of the girl and idol of her father's heart. A party is formed to lynch Maloney, who has committed no crime, but, on the contrary, has sent the missing child home, long before. The quick thinking of the girl and rapid action of Maloney prevent further trouble, and Maloney wins the reward offered for the return of the child, which the father substitutes by extending Maloney's note and approving of his daughter's choice among the ranchmen aspiring for her hand.

There is the usual good riding, good fighting and out-of-door activities identified with the series. This is not the strongest one, but is a pleasing modest western.—LILLIAN GALE.

"A Loose Tight-Wad"

(Roach-Pathe—One Reel)

PAUL PARROTT does not appear in the title role, but as the nephew of a man who has accumulated money by holding on to small bits of it. Paul is a student in college, behind in his studies and advanced on his allowance. The Uncle and his pretty ward plan to curb the boy's extravagances, so a telegram is sent calling the college man to the Uncle's home. In order to command the boy's confidence, the Uncle and girl decide to change places with the servants. The Uncle borrows the butler's outfit, while the girl acts as maid. Then Uncle's wife arrives and finding her home undergoing radical changes, disapproves.

The real butler sees an opportunity to get away with some money, attempts to do so, and that makes Paul who saves the situation, a hero.

This comedy is a bit above unseemly slapstick, yet lacks genuine laughs. However, it is inoffensive and stands a chance to amuse those who find over-drawn situations humerous.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Nuisance"

(Burr All-Star-Hodkinson—Two Reels)

THIS comedy relates the story of a young man who gains possession of a letter of introduction intended for someone else and on the strength of it proceeds to get a job. He manages to cause any number of complications through his well-meant efforts, which provide the basis for a number of ingenious gags. Raymond McKee appears as "the nuisance" in question, with Mary Anderson opposite as the boss's daughter. Charles Murray appears as the father, and is good for a number of laughs with his characteristic business. There is a fair element of story here, adequate to carry to gags and business. Mary Anderson is attractive in the leading female role. This should be a very satisfactory audience comedy.—L. C. MOEN.

"The Cobbler"

("Our Gang"-Pathe—Two Reels)

A GREAT deal has been said about the "perfect picture of the future." Well, the perfect two reel comedy is here and now, one of the "Our Gang' Series and sailing triumphantly under the title of "The Cobbler." In the cast are those juvenile artists, Sunshine Sammy, Farina, Mickey Daniels, and the rest usually among "Our Gang" players. They are at their individual best in a comedy that is thoroughly saturated with amusing incident and human interest touches.

The story hinges upon the good nature of a hard working cobbler, who looks forward through the week to Saturday when the "gang" are sure to use his shop for a play-house and generally disrupt order. On this particular Saturday, he is not disappointed, for as each one makes an appearance, that one does so with an individual disaster. In the midst of the excitement, a customer appears. She is a daintily dressed little girl, who rides in a handsome limousine, accompanied by a nurse, and who comes into the shop to have a little white shoe made comfortable. The boys in the "gang" flirt like veterans and all seem to register. The departure of the rich child makes the world seem commonplace again until a long anticipated check for back pension is delivered the cobbler, by the postman. That closes the shop for a pic-nic, "the gang," guests of the kindly man, all pile in a decrepit Ford. Things happen so fast, it would be difficult to enumerate them, but Farina's inclination to meditate, leads her to a watermelon patch, while two of the boys have a lively encounter with a tramp, whose hiding place they accidentally disclose.

The accuracy in connecting incidents, the splendid characterizations of these children, even the parrot, the dog, cats, pigs, etc., indicate Tom McNamara's ability as a director, and the extent of his patience. Nevertheless, if there is anyone who dares the world to make him laugh he had better not look at "The Cobbler," for there is a laugh every foot of the way.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Gambling with the Gulf Stream"

(Bray Romance-Hodkinson—One Reel)

NEARLY all of us remember from back in school the importance of the Gulf Stream in its relation to climate, so this Bray Romance should prove a fascinating subject.

It is one of those "What would happen if—" affairs, the "if" in this case being the deflection of the Gulf Stream, so that, instead of going across to England, it came up along our own coast. We are then shown, in animated form, the stream of cold water that pours down from Labrador, and how this might be deflected at the Grand Banks. Should this go across to England, England would become an icebound island. The removal of this "cold wall" would then transform North America into a tropical region. The Gulf Stream would flow into the Polar regions, melting the ice and perhaps altering the position of the earth in relation to the sun. All of this, and more, is shown in photographic form, including some amusing shots of New York as it would appear under tropical conditions.

There is food for thought in this release, and a good bit of interest as well.—L. C. MOEN.

Comedies, Short Subjects & Serials

Special Press Book on Emile "Message

An extra size press book prepared for the Educational Special, "The Message of Emile Coue," carries many suggestions to exhibitors for exploiting this subject in the street, lobby and through the mails. For newspaper advertising, one, two and three column cuts and mats will be available to the exhibitor as well as prepared advance feature publicity material for use in newspapers, including one and two column cuts and mats.

In addition to the regular line of paper ordinarily issued on a two-reel subject, Educational is preparing a twenty-four sheet in colors. It is believed, according to Educational, that this is the first time that a twenty-four sheet has ever been issued on a two-reeler.

A broadside is going out to exhibitors, and exploitation novelties are also in preparation.

"Breath of Mankind" is Analysis of Air

Popular and highly interesting illustrations showing how pure air, when breathed by man, is changed into a slow poison are presented in Pathe Review No. 7. These are scientific laboratory tests screened in a way to be understood by everybody. The pictures—some rather startling—are accompanied by titles which make clear the whole subject.

A man's breath is shown being forced through lime water which causes the poison in the breath, called carbon dioxide to settle in a white powder at the bottom of the test tube. This poison, which the lungs extract from the blood, thus purifying the life current, is artificially produced by mixing dust, soda and acid. In this form it is used—as shown on the screen—as a fire extinguisher.

Ex-Kaiser Is Shown in Exile

Government Officials, Newspapermen Approve Picture at Washington Showing

MORE than 1,500 members of Congress and other officials of Washington, foreign diplomats, newspaper correspondents and others recently viewed and approved "The Ex-Kaiser in Exile" in two reels, produced by Fred E. Hamlin and distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, at two private showings of the only motion picture film of the former Emperor in his twenty-acre exile at Doorn, Holland.

The Washington showings were at the National Press Club and three days later, by invitation, to the Congressional and other officials of Washington at the dedication ceremonies of Harding Hall, a department of the Government Printing Office.

Recalling the scenes of a few years ago, when all Washington was bending every energy toward directing the war operations on this side, the government officials took particular interest in seeing how the ex-Kaiser looks, acts and otherwise exists in exile at Doorn.

The film was shown by Mr. Hamlin, of New York City, through invitation extended to the Newspaper Club of New York City. Mr. Hamlin, a member of the New York Club, had previously shown the film to the club here. It was accorded such an enthusiastic reception that the Washington showings followed. The newspaper clubs were perhaps quicker to realize, than the ordinary person, the fact that the film represents a big international scoop—the first film successfully taken after many others had failed.

"The Ex-Kaiser in Exile" is shortly to be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, and, although the film was taken by a German nobleman, it was later turned over to Mr. Hamlin and the production is credited to him.

Statesmen Series for N. Y. Mass Meeting

"George Washington" and "Abraham Lincoln," two of the Great American Statesmen Series of the Urban Popular Classics released by Vitagraph, were selected by the Americanization Committee as particularly appropriate for screening at the special mass meeting at Town Hall, New York City, on Thursday night, Feb. 22nd.

The Americanization Committee appointed by Mayor Hylan, with Mrs. William Randolph Hearst as Chairman, arranged to make the meeting on Washington's birthday one of the biggest and most attractive since the Committee was organized and in addition to the pictures, there were addresses by Herbert Hoover and Bainbridge Colby.

The two one-reel Urban subjects, "George Washington" and "Abraham Lincoln" were shown privately to Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst and invited dinner guests at Mr. Hearst's residence last Sunday night.

The Americanization Committee is encouraging similar mass meetings throughout the country at which, it is expected, the Great American Statesmen Series will be part of the entertainment.

Pathe's Feb. 18 Releases Named

List of Nine Subjects Led by "Our Gang" and Leo Maloney Two Reelers

THE nine releases which Pathe announces for Feb. 18 include two two-reelers in series which are gaining favor with exhibitors all over the country as high-calibre box office winners. Hal Roach's famous Our Gang is represented by a comic disturbance called, "The Cobbler," while the hero of the Range Riders in life-like Western comedy drama will be seen in "Lost, Strayed or Stolen." In the list are included Pathe News Nos. 16 and 17, and Topics of the Day No. 7.

In the Our Gang attraction a huge stack of bales of hay full of caverns and angular passages furnishes a new angle for the urchins and the bulldog in their joyous chase of a tramp who has purloined their picnic lunch. The production is described as "a case of turning Sunshine Sammy, Jackie Condon, Mickey Daniels, Little Farina, and the rest loose to do their worst."

Leo Maloney seldom has ridden or fought harder than in "Lost, Strayed or Stolen." With the best of intentions the hero gets himself where a rival lover can charge him with kidnaping—which means a lynching with the rival lover handling the noose. The result is a whirlwind mix-up out of which the lost child and the lovers emerge triumphant.

The weekly one-reel comedy on the Pathe release schedule is "A Loose Tightwad," with Paul Parrott and Jobyna Ralston. Parrott is the scapegrace nephew in need of funds.

"Troubles on the Ark" is the inviting title of the Aesop's Film Fable of this release list.

The Patheserial, "Plunder," with Pearl White, reaches its fourth episode, "Ruin."

Pathe Review No. 7 screens engrossing scenes of an Alaskan postman on his rounds; also spectacular laboratory analysis of "The Breath of Mankind." Sculptor Willie Hopkins, with lumps of clay, illustrates how "The Worm Turns," while the Pathecolor offering takes the audience to that ancient city of Timbuctoo, in Africa. Pictorial studies in babyhood are in the "Living Paintings" series.

"School Days in Japan" Interesting Half-Reel

The Japanese seem to have earned the title of "Yankees of the East," because of their industry and commercial prowess. With a view of adapting American methods of education, the foremost families in Japan have sent their last generation of sons to the United States to study at first hand our system of imparting learning. They have taken all these matters back with them and started excellent schools of their own. Concrete evidence of this fact will be found in "Schooldays in Japan," the second Fox Educational Entertainment released in February. This is a half reel, which contains close-ups picturing the Japanese manner of teaching.

Tiny Auto Used in "A Spooky Romance"

The smallest automobile in the world was used in making "A Spooky Romance," Century comedy, directed by Al Herman. The car used in the picture is the property of Arthur Anderson, and operates under its own power. It is six feet long and goes under the name of a baby Packard, because it has the body of a Packard. The motor, however, is composed of parts from practically every car on the market. The miniature carries extra tires, bumpers, in fact everything that a regular car would have, and while any normal person can sit in it, use the shift gear and self-starter, yet the entire car weighs five pounds and is two and a half feet high.

Arrow Closes Big Deal For Brazil

David J. Mountan, Foreign Manager of Arrow Film Corporation, announces the sale of the following pictures to Universal Pictures Corporation for Brazil:

"The Streets of New York," starring Barbara Castleton and Edward Earle; "The Price of Youth," with Neva Gerber; "God's Country and the Law," with Gladys Leslie; "Impulse," with Neva Gerber; "A Motion to Adjourn," with Marjorie Daw and Roy Stewart; "Bonnie May," with Bessie Love; "The Innocent Cheat," with Kathleen Kirkham and Roy Stewart; "Night Life in Hollywood," an Arrow Special; "The Hidden Light," with Dolores Cassinelli; "Penny of Top Hill Trail."

"The Five Fifteen" Unusual Two-Reeler

"The Five Fifteen," the latest Fox Sunshine Comedy, is another episode in the career of the fat young bachelor who adopted the boy child and who considers as designing each helpful act of the attractive young widow next door. The clean fun of the picture, and the almost impossible stunts that the young fat man does in his "tin lizzie" while taking his child and friends to a picnic, are said to be extremely laughable.

Everything would have been all right had not an attractive and wholly useless "friend" joined the crowded party and sat beside the widow—while the host had a man-sized job in keeping his temperamental rattler in the road.

Billy Engle Signed for Century Comedies

Billy Engle, formerly with Fox, Christie, Sennett and Educational, is another well known comedian who has been added to the comedy stock company of Century Film Corporation. Julius Stern has signed him for a series of pictures. "A Spooky Romance," the first, to be directed by Al Herman. Engle also appeared in "Sweet and Pretty," the Brownie release for March.

"A School of Dumb Bells" is now being made, in which Engle is scheduled to appear. He will also play in a comedy in which Jack Cooper will be tried in a starring role, by Stern Brothers.

Educational's Subjects Popular in Chicago

Evidence that Educational Pictures are well represented in Chicago is presented in the theatrical advertising page of the Chicago Sunday Tribune. Of the theatres advertising on this page in a recent issue, twenty-six of them were running Educational Short Subjects.

"Dog Sense" and "High Power" at N. Y. Houses

"Dog Sense," Educational-Cameo Comedy, is booked at the Rivoli theatre, New York, for two weeks, starting February 4. "High Power," an Educational-Mermaid Comedy, continues at the Criterion.

Record Bookings on Coue Picture

Flood of Inquiries Indicate Popularity of "Message of Emile Coue"

IN closing most of the key cities for representative runs on the Educational Pictures Special "The Message of Emile Coue," in the short space of time following the initial announcement that the picture was being produced, Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., has established a startling record for a short subject attraction.

Twenty-four hours after the news that Emile Coue would appear on the screen had been wired to branch managers, reports from the field indicated that "The Message of Emile Coue" would prove to be a most sensational box office attraction. The branch managers reported themselves flooded with offers for the picture from every city, town and hamlet in the country.

At Detroit four of the large houses of the Kunsky circuit have booked the Coue special and are using a program consisting also of a Christie Comedy, a Hamilton Comedy and Kinograms, Educational's news reel, to complete the program. This plan is being followed in other key cities as fast as dates can be arranged.

In many cities percentage bookings have been made. This is believed to be the first time that a short subject has carried percentage bookings in the large houses of the country.

Two Universal Serials Nearing Completion

Two educational chapter plays, in line with Universal's policy to combine facts and thrills in the continued features, are in the latter stages of production at Universal City.

"The Oregon Trail," starring Art Acord with Louise Lorraine opposite him and Edward Laemmle directing, will give to the screen the history of one of the most romantic chapters in the story of America, the exploration and conquest of the Northwest.

"The Phantom Fortune" is being made under the direction of Robert F. Hill, with William Desmond starring and Esther Ralson in the leading feminine role. It unfolds the mysteries of the American business game and promulgates higher ideals in commerce and trade.

"The Cold Homestead" Is Rock's Latest

Joe Rock Productions, the distributing organization for the series of twelve two-reel comedies produced by Joe Rock, announce the completion of the comedian's fifth comedy this season, "The Cold Homestead."

This burlesque on "The Old Homestead" is part of a series of parodies on the serious classics of the screen.

The plot of Rock's latest mimic is the frenzied effort of a faithful lover to save the home of his bride-to-be from the threatening sheriff. The action opens with a back-stage scene.

Five Educational Offerings Listed by Bulletin

The current Bulletin of the National Motion Picture League lists five Educational comedies as family films, recommended for adults and young people. They are "In Dutch," Christie Comedy, featuring Bobby Vernon; "Treasure Bound," Mermaid Comedy with Lige Conley; "Chicken Dressing," an Earl Hurd Cartoon-Comedy; and the two Robert C. Bruce Wilderness Tales, "By Lantern Light," and "Moonblind." The current issues of Kinograms, Educational's news reel, are also listed.

Artist Paints Marion Davies on Broadway

W. T. BENDA, world famous artist and illustrator, appeared in a new role one day this week and tied up traffic at the corner of Broadway, Seventh Avenue and 47th Street, New York City.

Mr. Benda made a remarkable portrait of Marion Davies in her latest photoplay, "Adam and Eva," which comes to the Rivoli theatre the week of February 11th. This illustration is being used for painted signs and twenty-four sheet billboard stands throughout the country.

Mr. Benda was so anxious to have his sketch accurately reproduced, that he climbed up on the ladder and added the finishing touches to the portrait of the big sign.

The sign is one of the most beautiful seen on Broadway, the portrait being typical of Benda with all of his vivid colorings. The actual portrait of Miss Davies is 25 feet high by 18 feet wide.

Golf Champs Appear in "Fighting Blood"

Gene Sarazen, American champion golfer, and Jock Hutchinson, former holder of all titles in the gift of the links game, invaded the film studios recently accompanied by Bob Edgren, famous sporting writer and cartoonist. All three appeared in scenes being filmed at the R-C Studios for the H. C. Witwer "Fighting Blood" stories, under the direction of Mal St. Clair.

The scenes portrayed a ring contest in which George O'Hara boxed Leach Cross. Before the contest began, Edgren stepped into the ring, bowed before the eyes of the camera and was given a big hand by the assembled throng of "extras." Then followed Sarazen and Jock the Hutch, both taking their bows in nifty fashion and receiving the plaudits of the ring-siders.

"Temptation" Nearing Completion

Completion of "Temptation," the third of the Box Office Winners series, and the laying out of distribution and exploitation campaigns on three big productions, comprise the schedule that will make the current month a tremendously busy one for the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation.

"Temptation" is being produced at the company's West Coast production centre, with an all star cast directed by Edward J. LeSaint, who directed the first two pictures on the series.

"Hearts Aflame" is Approved

Critics in Boston and Los Angeles Commend Reginald Barker Production

ATLANTIC and Pacific Coasts have approved "Hearts Aflame," the Reginald Barker spectacle drama.

After viewing the film at the first showing at Loew's State Theatre, Los Angeles, Allen Claire of the Los Angeles Record wrote:

"The zenith of realism in motion pictures is reached in 'Hearts Aflame,' the wonder spectacle now showing at Loew's State Theatre.

"Acres of forests, blazing high, give the picture a punch that will long be remembered. Anna Q. Nilsson, the star, personally drives a locomotive through the burning forests, with real tongues of flame licking at her through the window of the engine cab."

"Not only, states the Los Angeles Express, "does 'Hearts Aflame' supply exceptionally good entertainment with its stirring story of life in the timber country of Northern Michigan, culminating in a forest fire realistically depicted in colored photography, but it combines with its thrills certain episodes that have come to be recognized in the vernacular of the movies as 'educational' . . . Miss Nilsson plays the leading role charmingly and Mr. Keenan is excellent throughout."

Loew's Orpheum Theatre housed "Hearts Aflame" at its opening showing in Boston. The Boston Herald of January 16 reported: "'Hearts Aflame,' the big screen production shown at Loew's Orpheum Theatre yesterday, is a thrilling photoplay. There is a vivid forest fire, the blowing up of a hillside, the spectacle of thousands of logs floating down a river after a dam had been wrecked."

The Post found the picture to be "a thrilling photoplay telling a good story with episodes that should be remembered for a long time by those who saw it. The characters that are presented in it are drawn with amazing fidelity. Frank Keenan and Anna Q. Nilsson head the large and capable cast."

Of Miss Nilsson's acting the Advertiser observes: ". . . the best work of her film career," Frank Keenan, "given many opportunities to display his virile art, responded with vim." The forest fire "surpasses anything of the kind hithertofore attempted in the silent drama."

"A thrilling photoplay" is the Traveler's verdict, and the Telegram's observations are equally enthusiastic.

"Hearts Aflame" adapted from the Harold Titus novel, "Timber," is a Reginald Barker production presented by Louis B. Mayer and distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation. In the cast are Frank Keenan, Anna Q. Nilsson, Craig Ward, Richard Headrick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker, Stanton Heck, Martha Mattox, Walt Whitman, Joan Standing, Ralph Cloninger, Lee Shumway, John Dill, Gordon Magee and Irene Hunt.

"Brass" Shown at Coast Review

Warner Brothers Receive Telegrams Acclaiming Production Screen Classic

BEFORE a special audience of prominent motion picture people at Glendale, Los Angeles, a preview showing of the Warner Brothers "Brass," a Harry Rapf production directed by Sidney Franklin, was greeted with applause, according to telegrams received at the Warner offices from the coast studios.

J. H. Goldberg, of the S. & O. Pictures Corp., Los Angeles, wired as follows: "Previewed 'Brass' and went over million per cent. Absolutely the greatest picture released in months. Monte Blue simply wonderful. In fact entire cast at its best. If 'Main Street' is as good as 'Brass' you will be sitting on top of the world."

Sam Warner wired: "You can put us down for saying that this is positively the last word in motion pictures. It is something entirely different than has heretofore been produced and is far superior to Franklin's 'Smilin' Thru' or 'East is West.'"

Harry Rapf and Mr. Warner are expected to arrive east this week with the production. Since the Strand theatre, New York, has contracted for the Warner classics, it is given a first run showing at the theatre within the very near future.

"Brass" was adapted by Julien Josephson from the popular novel written by Charles G. Norris. The novel is in its fifty-third edition. The subject of the novel has been widely discussed, dealing as it does with marriage and divorce.

"Dr. Jack" Continues Record S. F. Run

The New Portola theatre, San Francisco, has the satisfaction at the close of its seventh big week of "Dr. Jack" of having set a new long run picture record for that city.

"Flirt" Scores in Four Weeks Pittsburg Run

"THE FLIRT," the Hobart Henley production made for Universal-Jewel release, is just closing the last of its four weeks' run in the Cameo theatre, Pittsburgh. Although it originally was planned to run the picture only one week, the crowds which, the crowds which flocked to the Cameo were so great that the addition of an extra show late in the evening did not lessen the box office line, it is stated.

The run was first extended to a second week, then to a third and finally to a fourth. Latest reports from Pittsburgh indicate that the attendance, not now so good as during the first week or so, still keeps the house filled. But for the obligatory presentation of another picture beginning next week, "The Flirt" might continue in the Cameo for a longer run.

Essanay Studio Making Final Shots

Director W. S. Van Dyke made the final shots for "The Little Girl Next Door," at the Essanay studios, Chicago, this week, and the work of titling this picture, which is the first to be made by Blair Coan Productions, Inc., of Chicago, will be started immediately.

Pauline Starke, Carmel Meyers, James Morrison, Mitchell Lewis, and other members of the strong cast brought to Chicago for this picture, left for Los Angeles on Saturday, where they all have signed up for work in other important pictures.

A remarkable feature of "The Little Girl Next Door," is an expose of how spirit photographs are taken, which occurs during the action, and is part of the very interesting story told by this feature.

The spirit photographs' angle to "The Little Girl Next Door" will prove a valuable advertising and exploitation feature in view of the world-wide interest and discussion of these matters.

Marshall Neilan Signs Orchestra

Marshall Neilan has just placed under a long-term contract a most important piece of studio atmosphere—a motion picture orchestra called the "Studio String Quartette," which now is playing for Neilan's present production "The Eternal Three."

E. E. McGarger, Cecil Grandall, F. B. Pendleton, and Ray S. Martinez comprise the personnel of the portable orchestra, consisting of two violins, a cello, and a bass violin.

The Photodramatic Gem of 1923

HAS THE WOR

"HAS The World Gone Mad?" What a picture! What a title! And what exploitation possibilities! Seldom before has such a high class picture offered the seat-selling possibilities contained in this one—and never before has a picture been backed by such a showman's campaign — a showman's campaign which will bring millions of fans to theatres in Main Street as well as theatres on Broadway. Here's the photodramatic gem of 1923—backed by showmanship that will spread its virtues to the world that is awaiting a picture that TELLS SOMETHING.

LD GONE MAD!

HERE is the thundering answer to the cry of exhibitors and public for something different—for a picture that TELLS SOMETHING. Here it is—a gigantic ENTERTAINMENT that dramatically delves deep down into the very souls of real men and women of today and brings their lives, their emotions, their reactions—their very beings themselves—to life in an unescapable sweep of universally appealing drama.

HERE is the picture that is not only an answer to a cry but a challenge to those who will imitate. It is Daniel Carson Goodman's supreme achievement, as well as it is Equity Pictures Corporation's rightful claim to a place in the foremost ranks of the industry. "Has The World Gone Mad" is drama—pure, unadulterated drama—of such high class and so splendidly produced as to stamp it a masterpiece that will create new records for the exhibitors who book it.

Fans Choose Favorites for "Ben Hur"

THE American motion picture "fans" are being heard from by the thousand as to which favorite screen player they would like to have Goldwyn cast for the title role in its production of "Ben Hur," founded upon A. L. Erlanger's stage version of Gen. Lew Wallace's famous novel.

Votes began to come in at the Goldwyn studios in Culver City, Calif., by the hundred soon after the announcement was made. Now they are being received by the thousand.

More than a dozen men have been entered in the "contest," but the first official announcement, just made by production officials at the studios, is that Rodolph Valentino has taken the lead for the name part. Others whose names have been entered in the race by the "fans" are William Desmond, Richard Dix, William Farnum, Conway Tearle, Gaston Glass, Thomas Meighan, Bert Lytell, Milton Sills, Forrest Stanley, Antonio Moreno, Ramon Navarro, Wm. S. Hart and J. W. Kerrigan.

Will Run "Shopgirl" as Novel

A complete novelized version of "Only a Shopgirl" is being carried in the syndicated supplement of the Milwaukee Sunday Sentinel as one of the tie-ups being made in conjunction with the release of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation feature in that territory.

The picture opens for a special run at the Rialto Theatre there on February 10th, and Celebrated Players Film Corporation of Milwaukee, which controls territorial rights, reports such wide interest throughout the field that the Sentinel broached the subject of novel rights, according to C. B. C.

C.B.C. Series Sold in Washington

Another sale was completed this week on the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation Box Office Winners series, when Strand Film Service of Washington, D. C. took over territorial rights to them.

D. M. Thomas, head of Strand Film Service, made a special trip to New York for the purpose of seeing "More To Be Pitied" and "Only a Shopgirl" and immediately following the showing arranged to take them over for the Maryland, District of Columbia, and Virginia territory.

Three Jewels Near Completion

Strong List of Universal Super Productions on Schedule for 1923

THREE new Universal Jewel productions have reached the last stage of production and now are in the cutting and editing rooms at Universal City, according to information just received from the Universal home office. They are "The Abysmal Brute," starring Reginald Denny, "White Tiger," starring Priscilla Dean, and "Bavu" with an all-star cast.

The early completion of these three Jewels will mark a great forward step in Universal's super-picture schedule for 1923. It will assure a monthly release up to and including the month of June. According to Universal present schedule of announced Jewel releases for the present year, "The Abysmal Brute" is due to reach the screen April 2nd, "White Tiger" on May 7th, and "Bavu" on June 4th.

Assurances of a further supply of Jewels for the succeeding months of 1923 are indicated in the report that four other Jewels are now in production at Universal City for release between June and December, and that two others, to fill the monthly schedule, soon will be under way. The four now under production are "Jewel," "Drifting," "Merry-Go-Round," and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." The two additional ones are to be "Up The Ladder" and "A Lady of Quality," both scheduled as starring vehicles for Virginia Valli.

"The Abysmal Brute," is a screen adaptation of Jack London's famous novel. Of all the stars on the screen Reginald Denny was chosen as the most fitting for the leading role. The "abysmal brute" is the nickname given to a young prize ring hero of perfect physical attainments combined with lofty ideals and refinement.

Mabel Julienne Scott, a star in her own right, plays the role of the girl, opposite Denny. Others in the cast are Nell Craig, Hayden Stevenson, Fritzi Ridgeway, Al Edmundson, Tom McGuire, Dorothea Wolbert, Irene Haisman, Buddy Messenger, Eddie Gribbon, Tom O'Brien and George Stewart.

"White Tiger," the Universal release for May, will cause a sensation among the followers of Priscilla Dean, it is predicted by Universal. Matt Moore, Ray Griffith and Wallace Beery play the leading roles opposite Miss Dean.

"Bavu," also known as "The Attic of Felix Bavu," is a picture of Russian revolution. Stuart Paton is directing it.

The picture was adapted from the play "Bavu" written and produced by Earl Carroll in the Earl Carroll Theatre, New York City, last season.

Wallace Beery plays the title role. Forrest Stanley takes the part of a young member of the intelligensia who throws his lot in with the revolutionists for the good of Russia. Estelle Taylor has the part of a Russian princess around whom whirls the conflict of the picture. Sylvia Breamer and Martha Mattox also have important roles.

L. A. Critics Laud "Adam's Rib"

De Mille's Latest Production for Paramount Unanimously Commended

CECIL B. DeMILLE'S latest production for Paramount, "Adam's Rib," by Jeanie Macpherson, had its world premiere at Grauman's Rialto Theatre, Los Angeles, last Sunday and registered the greatest triumph of the producer's career, according to the Los Angeles newspapers, all of which gave high praise to the picture.

Guy. Price, in the Evening Herald, said: "For novel daring in the production of forest and cave-man sequences in the midst of a portrayal of Twentieth Century life it is doubtful if this picture has ever been equalled. Cecil B. DeMille deserves great commendation as a director. The excellence of the photography cannot be gainsaid. Milton Sills wins the unrestricted approval of all spectators, Elliott Dexter made the most of his part, Theodore Kosloff is a success and Anna Q. Nilsson and Pauline Garon are well suited to their roles."

Edwin Schallert, in the Times said: "DeMille is more clever than usual in 'Adam's Rib.' It is just full of fascinating stuff."

The Examiner's critic said: "'Adam's Rib' is rich in philosophy on married life. The plot, with all of its richness of detail, its sumptuous settings and its beauty of evolution, takes Cecil DeMille back to the philosophies which made his earlier pictures such great popular successes."

The Express said: "'Adam's Rib' stirs up a Pandora's Box of sophistry and brilliant technic. It is a fascinating study in directorial psychology and cunning craftsmanship."

Exhibitors Benefit by "Plunder" Campaign

IN a national advertising campaign for "Plunder" just launched by Pathe, individual exhibitors of the new Pearl White serial are receiving much direct benefit. The campaign includes newspaper and billboard displays. An important feature of these displays is their listing of the theatres in each city which are playing or have booked "Plunder."

The cities in which this campaign is now under way include: Atlanta, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Macon, Nashville, Knoxville, Jacksonville, Augusta, Savannah, Chicago, Utica, Watertown, Des Moines, Davenport, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Mo., Cleveland, Evansville, Terra Haute, Lafayette, Logansport, Lincoln, Denver, Salt Lake City, Memphis, Little Rock, Oklahoma City, Dallas, Houston, Fort Worth, St. Louis, Newark, Paterson, Buffalo, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Great Falls, Mont., San Francisco, Oakland.

The Chicago Herald "Plunder" display printed on Jan. 21, for example, listed 111 theatres which had booked the serial up to that date. On Jan. 23 the St. Louis Globe-Democrat list contained 37 houses.

"Main Street" Shooting Half Finished

More than half of the scenes for the Warner Brothers classic of the screen, "Main Street," have been filmed by Director Harry Beaumont, according to reports from the Warner coast studios. The completion of this production will mark the seventh and last classic to be produced for this season.

Plans are now being formulated by Harry M. Warner for the picturization of eighteen classics for 1923-24. Announcement of the producing units, directors, players and the complete roster of plays and novels secured for the coming year is expected to be made after "Main Street" has been completed.

Display Ads for Holy Land Picture

The Apollo theatre, Kansas City, advertises "The Voice of the Land," American Releasing's series of one-reel pictures of the Holy Land, to the same extent it does a big feature, according to space taken by the theatre in Kansas City newspapers.

While their advertising policy does not usually prompt special announcement of short subjects, the Bible pictures were found worthy of display advertising.

Fox to Release "The Net" Feb. 25

FOX FILM CORPORATION announces the release for national distribution on February 25th, of "The Net," an elaborate special. The picture is one directed by J. Gordon Edwards. On the list of the cast appear such well known names as Barbara Castleton, Raymond Bloomer, Albert Roscoe, Peggy Davis, Arthur Gordoni and Helen Tracy.

Special attention has been devoted to the advertising possibilities and a bounteous array of material has been prepared by experts to aid the exhibitor. There is a 16 page exploitation book, beautifully printed and replete with catching scenes as well as many useful suggestions that ought to be of great help. In the 12 page press book are many unusual features, descriptive articles dealing with the story, sketches of some of the better known men and women in the cast, suggestions for newspaper contests and many other features.

Numerous Tieups for "Jazzmania"

Taking early advantage of the exceptional appeal of its title, according to Metro, merchants all over the country dealing in sheet music, phonographs, records and the like, have flooded the offices of Metro Pictures Corporation with messages asking for tieups with "Jazzmania," the latest Tiffany production in which Robert Z. Leonard presents Mae Murray.

This unusual procedure, in which the merchant is said to be taking the initiative in arranging co-operative stunts, window displays and other exploitation devices, is based on several important factors. In the first place, there is the excellent title, easily linked with any type of shop dealing in music and musical instruments. Store owners as well as theatre managers have been quick to sense the exploitable quality of "Jazzmania."

"Romance Land" Due Feb. 11th

"Truxton King" Is Next Fox Starring Vehicle Announced for John Gilbert

FEBRUARY 11th has been set as release day for "Romance Land," the next Tom Mix feature, according to Fox Film Corporation.

It is a story of a man and a maid on the Western plains who become inspired by the romance and adventures set forth in Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe" and the tales of King Arthur and his round table.

Barbara Bedford as the feminine lead portrays the romantic maid. Tom Mix carries out his part as the youth who becomes so saturated with the adventures of Scott's "Ivanhoe," that he starts out to emulate that hero. There is a tournament done in modern Western style, which furnishes much thrilling incident. Tom Mix is said to go through many exciting stunts.

Among the others in the cast are: Frank Brownlee, George Webb, Pat Chrisman and Wynn Mace. The story is by Kenneth Perkins and was adapted by Joseph F. Poland, Edward Sedgwick directed.

"Truxton King," by George Barr McCutcheon, will be the next starring vehicle for John Gilbert, whose work in "Monte Cristo" and "Shame" won for him the promotion to stardom. It is scheduled for release on February 18th.

The announcement of the selection of this highly romantic and widely-read story is in line with the policy of the Fox organization to produce for the screen a great number of the best sellers of the past and the present.

Jerome Storm, the director, has endowed the production with elaborate and pretentious settings, and many of the interior scenes in the Prince's palace are replicas of those in the castles along the Rhine.

The title role is that of an adventurous American, Truxton King, who suddenly finds himself entwined in the intrigue and mystery of a revolution in Graustark. Ruth Clifford has the leading feminine role while little Mickey Moore is cast as Prince Robin. Others in the cast are: Frank Leigh, Otis Harlan, Henry John Miller, Richard Wayne, Willis Marks, Winifred Bryson, and Mark Fenton. Paul Schofield is credited with the scenario.

The week of February 5th brought two new Fox releases.

"The Town That Forgot God," the special which recently completed a three months' run at the Astor Theatre, New York, will be ready for release on February 11th.

"Romance Land," the Tom Mix starring vehicle, is the other production scheduled for the week. In the feminine lead is Barbara Bedford, once a star in her own right.

"Spoilers" Gets Under Way Soon

Goldwyn to Start Production of Rex Beach Story Within Three Weeks

SCORE another big production for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation! Rex Beach's most famous story, "The Spoilers," is to go into production within three weeks and Goldwyn is handling it. The picture will be photographed at Goldwyn's studios in Culver City, Calif., with exteriors, probably, being taken in Alaska.

This new film version of "The Spoilers" will be one of the great special productions to which Goldwyn is confining itself and will keep glorious company with "The Christian," "The Strangers' Banquet," "Vanity Fair" and "Ben Hur." It is said that $130,000 was paid for the picture rights to "The Spoilers."

Lambert Hillyer has been induced to forego other plans which he had in view to direct this great production of "The Spoilers."

Actual photography is soon to start on the Goldwyn lot. The scenario is all ready, having been prepared by Fred Myton, Elliott Clawson and Hope Loring. In its final stages the continuity has been looked over by June Mathis, Editorial Director for Goldwyn, whose suggestions have been incorporated into the manuscript. The picture has been in preparation for the past four months, so that when photography has actually begun, it can be rushed through with great speed.

Twelve players of stellar prominence will appear in the leading roles of the picture; some of these have already been signed; negotiations are still pending with others and will be closed in a day or two.

Rex Beach will personally assist in the picturization of his story.

"The Spoilers" was filmed once before—ten years ago, by Col. William Selig. It was the first of the big American photoplays and set records that are still remembered by everyone connected with the industry. It was the first attraction ever shown at the Strand theatre in New York.

Premium Pictures Has Stock Company

Word has been received from the coast that Premium Picture Productions, producing for exclusive distribution through Independent Pictures Corporation, has formed a permanent stock company and is rapidly placing under annual contract representative actors and actresses who will play principal roles, while the smaller parts will be cast at the time each picture goes into production. A large staff of technical workers is also being placed under contract.

Officials of the company express themselves as extremely pleased at the outlook for the independent producer and feel certain that business conditions will more than justify the extension of their activities and their securing of the entire services of the various artists who are to appear in their future productions.

"Knighthood" Floods Chicago Papers

THE amusement pages of the Chicago newspapers last week, particularly on Sunday, looked like special editions gotten out for Marion Davies in "When Knighthood Was in Flower." It was all brought about by the fact that thirty-two theatres in the Windy City were playing week engagements of "When Knighthood Was in Flower" simultaneously. Everyone of these theatres carried advertisements in the Sunday newspapers and some of them in the weekday newspapers as well.

In order to provide sufficient prints for these record breaking engagements, it was necessary to draw upon New York, where the second run had not yet started, for a part of its quota of prints.

Review Board Approves Burr Photoplays

The National Board of Review announced last week that it had included in the January list of commendable photoplays, two C. C. Burr pictures which they particularly recommended to exhibitors and picture audiences. These are "The Last Hour" a feature with Milton Sills and Carmel Myers in the leading roles now awaiting a definite release date and "Faint Hearts," an All-Star comedy, featuring Ray McKee, Charlie Murray and Mary Anderson. "Faint Hearts" is distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

"Faint Hearts" was also praised by the Oregon Council of the National Motion Picture League and received special mention in its publication, along with "The Lake of Silence," a scenic photographed by Roland Lester Dixon and distributed for C. C. Burr by Educational.

The National Board of Review in citing "The Last Hour" favorably, stated that this picture was one particularly adaptable to adult audiences and deserving of high praise for its artistry, coherence and high dramatic qualities.

Picture Cabaret Scene Is Copyrighted

Realizing that he has a scene in his latest "Special" that is a real innovation in film production, Daniel Carson Goodman, the author and producer of "Has the World Gone Mad," has set about protecting his new idea fully and announces that "The Ascending Stairs," the lavish cabaret scene in his production is now copyrighted and, as such, cannot be used, duplicated nor imitated in any other film production from now on.

The scene itself is said to represent the highest type of showmanship and class that any Broadway cabaret could use as a design and it is so constructed that it seems to the eye of the individual onlooker to be a continual succession of gorgeous steps of beauty without end. This feature of it is accomplished by the ingenious curve given to the ascending stairs and fully conveys the effect and the idea that Daniel Carson Goodman has copyrighted.

Editorial Lauds "Robin Hood"

Denver Times Comments Editorially for First Time on Fairbanks Production

FOR the first time in the history of motion pictures a photoplay has been commented upon editorially by a Denver newspaper, according to United Artists. The picture was "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" and the newspaper was the Denver Times.

Mr. Fairbanks, latest screen sensation, a United Artists release, was being shown at the Colorado theatre, later being transferred to the American. Not only did this photoplay win extensive editorial comment in the Times but it also drew flattering paragraphs from "Observer" who writes a column on the first page of the Denver Express under the title "Getting Down to Brass Tacks."

"As an historical narrative, recreating the scenes and atmosphere of the Middle Ages and presenting to modern eyes a vivid and fascinating picture of the age of chivalry, 'Robin Hood,' now being shown at the Colorado theatre, quite justifies, in our opinion, all the glowing comments made upon it by the dramatic critics of the East, who have welcomed it as an epoch-making film," wrote George Sanford Holmes in the Denver Times. "It is a triumph in all the features which go to make up the art of the silent drama, and in producing it Douglas Fairbanks and his associates have made a notable contribution to the development of the moving picture as a medium of entertainment and instruction.

"It is not often, in spite of the advances made in photoplay technique, that pictures are encountered which reproduce with convincing accuracy the very spirit which grips one from between the pages of the historian or the novelist. Flaws and anachronisms crop out here and there to shatter the illusion and destroy the land of make-believe in which the mind travels. But in 'Robin Hood' one is silently ushered into the realm of romance, in which the spell of interest and absorption is not dissipated until the picture itself fades from view. Then one steps reluctantly from the days of knighthood back into the prosaic life of the twentieth century with the consciousness of having a page out of time's book dominated by figures of heroic size."

"A Clouded Name" Due Feb. 18

Norma Shearer, Gladden James, Yvonne Logan Featured in Playgoers' Release

NORMA SHEARER, Gladden James and little Yvonne Logan are featured in "A Clouded Name," a five-reel drama which Playgoers Pictures has set for release February 18th.

Miss Shearer, who has the leading woman's role, would seem to be in direct line for stardom. She was Eugene O'Brien's leading lady in "Channing of the Northwest," and was with Reginald Denny in the 5th Round of "The Leather Pushers." She also is a featured player in the Iroquois production, "The Devil's Partner," and in two finished but unreleased pictures, Ernest Shipman's "Blue Water" and Arrow's "Man and Wife."

Gladden James has been in pictures almost since the early days and has a splendid record. He was with Vitagraph seven years. Recently he has been seen in the Fox all-star film, "Footfalls," and in support of Norma Talmadge in such photoplays as "The Heart of Wetona," and "Yes Or No."

A third featured player in "A Clouded Name" is little Yvonne Logan, who, though only six years old and now making her picture debut, has already won renown as a singer and dancer. The director was Austin O. Huhn, who, on the stage, directed Nazimova's stage productions of Ibsen's "A Doll's House," "Hedda Gabler" and "A Wild Duck," and in the films has wielded the megaphone for Walker Whiteside, Mollie King, Irving Cummings and others.

An appealing story, cleverly developed, is said to be excellently portrayed in this Playgoers offering. A strange double tragedy casts a cloud of disgrace over the names of the hero and the heroine. The man tries to avoid the girl, but she is not afraid to go after what she wants, and, in fleeing his fair pursuer, the hero finds a clue to the mystery, which is finally cleared up to the satisfaction of all.

Davis Complimented on Production

Geo. H. Davis, since his announcement in the trade press of the release of "The Passionate Friends," by H. G. Wells, has been the recipient of congratulatory letters and messages complimenting him on getting worthwhile literature for screen production and declaring it to be a marked step in the advancement of the motion picture.

The name of H. G. Wells coupled with motion pictures is considered an additional asset to the industry. His unique position in the rank of famous authors, and the great popularity of his novels, are responsible for many inquiries which Geo. H. Davis is receiving, asking if Wells' famous novels, "The Time Machine," "The Invisible Man," "The First Men in the Moon," "The Sea Lady," "The Food of the Gods," "Mankind in the Making," "Kipps" and "A Modern Utopia" will be adapted to the screen.

Mr. Davis has no statement to make as to what his plans are for picturizing other Wells popular novels. He is greatly pleased with the responses to the announcement and feels certain that "The Passionate Friends" will play to satisfied audiences everywhere.

Irving Lesser Announces Many Deals Closed

Irving Lesser, eastern manager of Principal Pictures Corporation, has closed a deal with Harry Charnas, owner of the Standard Film Service Exchanges in Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit, and the Federated Film Exchange of Pittsburgh, whereby those exchanges will handle the distribution of "The World's A Stage" and "Environment" in Ohio, Michigan, Western Pennsylvania, Wset Virginia and Kentucky.

Mr. Lesser also announced the following sales:

"Environment", "The World's A Stage" and all Principal Pictures Corporation product to Midwest Film Exchange of Milwaukee for Wisconsin and the upper Michigan peninsular.

"Environment" to E. M. Thomas of Strand Film Exchange, Washington, D. C. for District of Columbia, Virginia, Maryland and Delaware.

Dick Hatton series to Oscar Oldknow, of Atlanta, Ga. for Louisiana and Mississippi.

Nazimova's "Salome" Praised in S. F.

"'Salome' will be found the sensation of the week—the art sensation. This is Nazimova's triumph. There never was better acting on the screen," said the critic for the San Francisco Examiner when Nazimova's screen version of Oscar Wilde's "Salome," was shown at the Imperial theatre, San Francisco under an Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation release.

"As spectacle, as drama, as symphony and as a fantastical historic document Nazimova's 'Salome' has carved for itself an important niche in the photodramatic Hall of Fame," said the critic for the Call.

"Nazimova has made her most daring venture into the realms of the motion picture with the production of 'Salome' says the critic of the Chronicle. "Nazimova's strange beauty lends itself well to the impersonation of Salome. The incident of the 'Dance of the Seven Veils' is handled delicately by Nazimova who has achieved the impossible feat of being 'clothed in nudity.'"

Attractive Posters for "No Wedding Bells"

Vitagraph is issuing some very unusual, but at the same time, exceedingly attractive posters on "No Wedding Bells," the newest Larry Semon comedy. They are the work of J. Norman Lynd, well known cartoonist, for many years associated with the New York Herald, and have the advantage of having created subject matter and not just copies or combinations of stills. The general effect is a sort of colored line drawings.

Avoiding the use of stills the artist has been able to crowd a great deal of action into each poster and these original drawings, before being turned over for coloring, were utilized for a splendid set of line advertising cuts for the exhibitor. After coloring and lettering the drawings were turned over for the usual lithographic treatment and printing.

"Bishop of Ozarks" Is February Release

"The Bishop of the Ozarks" will be issued in February by F. B. O., heading the list of feature releases for that month. Ex-Congressman Milford W. Howard, of Alabama, is the author of the story. His novels are well known throughout the country, but "The Bishop of the Ozarks" is the first of his stories to reach the screen. Mr. Howard also plays the leading male role. In his supporting cast is Derelys Perdue, who will be seen as the featured player in forthcoming F. B. O. productions. Following it will be "Stormswept," a story of the sea by H. H. Van Loan, directed by Robert Thornby, with a cast including Wallace and Noah Beery, Arline Pretty and Virginia Faire.

Carewe Engages Veteran Character Actor

Russell Simpson, the veteran character actor, who has been engaged to play Sheriff Jack Rance in Edwin Carewes production of "The Girl of the Golden West" for First National will create the same role on the screen which he played on the stage for more than a year.

A decade ago Simpson was touring the country in "The Girl of the Golden West" and he was playing the part of Sheriff Jack Rance. Because of his ability to play the role Director Carewe engaged him for the picture.

Charley Chaplin Has New Protege

Dean Franklin, "Dinky Dean" Introduced by Comedian in "The Pilgrim"

FORMERLY known to fame by virtue of large, shuffling feet, a trimmed mustache and a smileless countenance, Charlie Chaplin, whose next picture "The Pilgrim" is to be released by First National, is coming to have a new name as a maker of juvenile stars. The growing reputation and the release of "The Pilgrim" are simultaneous for it is in this production that Chaplin introduces his latest find, young Dean Franklin, or Dinky Dean as he is popularly known.

Followers of the silent screen recall how, four years ago, little Jackie Coogan made a meteoric rise to fame by appearing in "The Kid." Even during the production of that picture young Jackie was receiving what was regarded as a marvelous salary for a four year old youngster in the $75 a week that he was receiving from Chaplin. But when, on the completion of "The Kid" he was able, by virtue of the reputation acquired in that picture to jump into a series of starring roles that have netted him a fortune, he established a record for juvenile affluence that has never been equalled.

It has never been threatened even until Dinky Dean came on the horizon. Those who have seen "The Pilgrim" and watched the performance of Chaplin's new find predict that another juvenile star may have been discovered as the result of association with the comedy king.

Dinky is now four years old, the same age that Jackie was when he made his initial appearance with Chaplin. Like his predecessor, Dinky is the son of an actor, the father in this case being Chuck Reisner, popular song writer and a principal in the casts of many Chaplin pictures. Dinky was born while his dad was playing with Charlie in "A Dog's Life," and the engagement of Dinky for a part in a Chaplin picture is the fulfilment of a promise made to Reisner at that time, albeit Dinky's own ability had made the reminder of such a promise unnecessary.

Preferred Picture Wins Praise

Reviewers of Philadelphia Papers Like "Thorns and Orange Blossoms"

"THORNS and Orange Blossoms," one of the Preferred Eight, had a successful run at the Aldine Theatre, Philadelphia, and was praised by the motion picture critics there. Following are some of the comments:

North American: "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," a picture version of the famous novel by Bertha M. Clay, with Kenneth Harlan, Estelle Taylor and Edith Roberts in the star roles, is the feature at the Aldine this week. Kenneth Harlan, who has been seen chiefly heretofore as Constance Talmadge's leading man is the real star of the picture. As the hero he depicts a very attractive, and likeable young man who is torn between the fiery love of a Spanish Prima Donna who was well versed in the ways of the world and a sweet, demure little Southern beauty.

Inquirer: Bertha M. Clay's romance, "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," has lost none of its throbs in its transition to the screen and the picture, set in all this generation's modernness, will likely prove as popular at the Aldine Theatre this week as the book was. The story is well photographed and many of the scenes are exceptionally good.

Public Ledger: One has not heard much heretofore of Bertha M. Clay's stories on the screen, yet there is a wealth of material in her romances which might be deemed priceless for film commercial purposes. Gasnier has approached the story in a sympathetic frame of mind and he has given it both beauty and as much honesty as possible.

Record: The romance is worked out with considerable skill and the general result is satisfactory.

"Three Wise Fools" Is Vidor's First

"Three Wise Fools," one of the most successful stage plays of the last decade, will be King Vidor's first production under his new Goldwyn contract. Mr. Vidor had had an option on the work for two years and has been awaiting the time when he would have at his disposal all the resources necessary to produce it in the manner it deserved. Vidor will personally make the adaptation in consultation with June Mathis, Editorial Director.

"Three Wise Fools" was produced in New York in 1918 and ran for eleven months on Broadway. It has been playing on the road ever since. In the original cast were Claude Gillingwater, Helen Menckcn and Harry Davenport.

"A Front Page Story," a Vitagraph, Jess Robbins production, which has been entertaining many Newspaper and Press Clubs over the country at private showings owing to its newspaper theme, is now drawing the attention of the advertising clubs. One of the first of these organizations to have the special production screened privately was the Greater Buffalo Advertising Club which includes in its membership advertising men not only at Buffalo but in the surrounding towns.

"A Front Page Story" was made a special and extra attraction for the meeting of the organization in Buffalo on January 29th. Special notices were sent to the 270 members and the result was that it was one of the largest attended meetings of the club and the Buffalo newspapers in their notices of the meeting gave exceedingly high praise to the newspaper story as shown on the screen.

Doug's Bow and Arrow to Boy Scout Winner

Douglas Fairbanks has sent word that he will present to the Boy Scout of Chicago who writes the best essay on the subject archery, the original bow and arrow used by him in the making of his latest picture, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," a United Artists release, booked for showing at the Roosevelt theatre, Chicago.

In the production of this picture Mr. Fairbanks became an enthusiast on the subject of archery and its benefits for the lad of the Boy Scout type. Since Scouts encourage archery among their members it was decided to have them look after a contest as the result of which some boy would win the bow and arrow used by Mr. Fairbanks while he played the role of Robin Hood. The bow and arrow are now on view in Chicago, having been shipped on from the Fairbanks studio at Hollywood. They have been placed in the Roosevelt theatre lobby together with details of the essay contest.

"Little Johnny Jones" Being Prepared

"Little Johnny Jones," the famous George M. Cohan stage success, which will be the first of three Warner Brothers classics of the screen, featuring Wesley Barry, for the coming season, is being whipped into shape by William Beaudine and Julien Josephson at the coast studios, according to advices received at the eastern offices of the organization.

Beaudine, who directed the freckled youngster in "Heroes of the Street," has been engaged to direct the three Barry features. "Freckles," who is at present making a personal appearance tour in connection with his latest picture is expected to arrive on the west coast in March, when active work will be started on the first production. Following "Little Johnny Jones," it is planned to film "George Washington, Jr.," another Cohan success.

Goldburg Sees Light for Independents

The New York office of the Independent Pictures Corporation is in receipt of a communication from its president, Jesse J. Goldburg, who is on the coast casting the first of a series of special productions which his organization is to release, in which he says that he broke his trip to the coast by various stopovers in key cities and that both exhibitors and state right buyers are unanimous in affirming that this is emphatically the day of the independent.

As a general proposition the demand for independent productions vastly exceeds the available supply and, according to Mr. Goldburg, any independent producer with worthwhile product can be sure of the most gratifying support. The problem of the average independent exchange man today seems to be not one of finding a market for his product, but rather in finding sufficient product to supply his market.

Christie Comedies New Releases Announced

"Second Childhood" and "A Hula Honeymoon" are announced as the new Christie Comedies to be released in February through Educational Film Exchanges. The latter is one of the special events of the Christie season, the first comedy starring Henry Murdock, filmed in Honolulu.

In this new comedy Christie announces a new team of players in Henry Murdock and Babe London, Murdock being elevated to a featured position for the first time in Christie Comedies, although he has been appearing in prominent comedy roles during the last year. Babe London is the heavyweight girl who has also received favorable mention by reviewers of some of the recent comedy releases.

"Second Childhood," the other February release, features Bobby Vernon in a farce in which the star plays the role of "Little Oscar" to deceive a philanthropic uncle into a continuance of an allowance sent a supposed nephew.

Ivor Novello and Gladyss Cooper in the Harley Knowles production "The Bohemian Girl," American Releasing Corporation Picture.

Bray Productions Enjoy Encouraging Sales

A. Canter, in charge of sales of Bray Magazine and Bray Nature Pictures on the independent market, reports the following sales:

For Eastern Pennsylvanian and Southern New Jersey to Ben Amsterdam, Masterpiece Film Attractions, Philadelphia; for Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia to E. A. Sherwood, Exhibitors Film Exchange, Washington; for Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia to Harry Chairns, Standard Film Service Company, Cleveland.

Hodkinson Productions on Broadway

Following upon the heels of other announcements relative to the appearance of Hodkinson film successes at New York's leading film theatres, it is further added that the Victor Schertzinger production "The Kingdom Within" made its bow to the New York public at Loew's State theatre.

At the same time "Colonel Heeza Liar's Treasure Island," the first of the series of Bray Comedies produced by the Bray Productions, Inc., has been booked by the Strand theatre, New York.

"Bulldog Drummond" to Be Seen in Philly

Continued gratifying reports are coming into the Home Office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation regarding the Hollandia Film Corporations production of "Bulldog Drummond." The latest important report is from the Philadelphia Branch of the Hodkinson Corporation stating that a very important contract has been signed with the Victoria theatre, Phila., for this production.

It is understood that the Victoria theatre, in conjunction with the Philadelphia Branch, is planning exceptional advertising and exploitation and that an extended run is expected in the Quaker City.

Reports show that "Bulldog Drummond" has been meeting with widespread success wherever shown. This production is an adaptation of the famous book and stage success by "Sapper." It was directed by Oscar Apfel featuring Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley in the stellar roles.

"Brothers Under Skin" Clubs Thrive

The proportions of the "Brothers Under the Skin" club publicity stunt put across originally in New York early in November for the showing of Goldwyn's photoplay, "Brothers Under the Skin," at the Capitol theatre, by Howard Dietz, director of advertising and publicity for Goldwyn, and by Eddie Bonns, manager of exploitation, continues to grow.

Three months after the stunt was started, the daily and weekly newspapers of the country are still printing the original story which was broadcast from New York by the correspondents of out-of-town papers, by the press associations and by the newspaper syndicates.

Several newspaper clippings have recorded the organization of such clubs in towns where the picture has already been shown, proving that the down-trodden husbands of the country have seen a great light and are firmly convinced that in union there is strength, even against domineering wives.

"The Woman of Bronze" Ready Soon

The success of "Enter Madame" and "The Hands of Nara," the two most recent Metro releases starring Clara Kimball Young, has brought about exceptionally heavy bookings for "The Woman of Bronze," the latest photoplay in which this popular star is soon to be seen, according to the Metro offices. Although this picture is not yet ready for general release, bookings in unprecedented volume have been already recorded, says Metro.

"The Woman of Bronze," served as a stage play for Margaret Anglin in her successful season in New York recently, having been adapted for the American theatre from the novel of Henry Kistaemaecher. In support of the star are seen John Bowers, Edwin Stevens, Lloyd Whitlock, Katherine McGuire and Edward Kimball. King Vidor was director.

Priscilla Dean in a Scene from "The Flame of Life" Universal.

"Climbing" Taken From Stage Play

More complete information regarding "Climbing," the next John M. Stahl production for First National release through Louis B. Mayer's organization, supplements the initial announcement last week with data that this story is based on a well known play and that the screen rights cost far more than the average eastern stage offering.

This fact is accounted for by virtue of the stage version's unusually successful run at the Majestic theatre, Los Angeles.

The story is based on the theme that there is only one class of people in America, all spiritually equal. It has, in story values, the same fine touches and realistic appeal that were found in such previous John M. Stahl productions as "One Clear Call" and "The Dangerous Age."

"Breaking Home Ties" Gets Contracts

"Breaking Home Ties," the Associated Exhibitors feature based on "Eili, Eili," the song-prayer, has scored a notable success in New York and is still going strong, according to Associated Exhibitors. Although it already has had runs in a large number of theatres, and has played second engagements in some, nearly sixty additional houses have contracted for showings in the near future, and other bookings are being made daily.

The production offers unusual opportunities for exploitation features and many clever ideas have been adapted in the arrangement of special displays and prologues.

The picture is being released by Metro.

SYNOPSIS

The paper contains a brief historical résumé of the art, including the development of the Automatic Film Splicing Machine, with comparative results of various methods of splicing both the negative and positive film, and the results in printing spliced film. The figures show the superiority of automatic film splicing over the method of splicing by hand and with film clamping devices. An endeavor is made to prove greater longevity of film spliced by machine methods. The paper also contains other technical data pertaining to splicing and joining of film.

IN the early days of the motion picture, when subjects ranged in length anywhere from twenty-five to two hundred feet, the art of film splicing required only scant consideration; but, with the natural evolution in the perfection of the mechanics employed in the industry, film splicing has become an operation that requires very serious and important consideration. Authors who have written about motion pictures have dwelt sparingly on the subject, so that few, if any, references to the prior art can be found. Most of the veterans in the industry, however, can readily recall how the operations were performed, and the conventional equipment used for making splices. There was then nothing very formidable in the operation of cementing two pieces of motion picture film in a continuous strip; the only tools required being: a pair of shears, a knife, and a bottle of cement.

To many it would seem logical that the crude methods of those early days should soon have been supplanted by mechanical means; yet, a recent investigation disclosed the fact that in one of the largest exchange centres in the country less than twenty-five per cent. of film splicing is being accomplished by mechanical means; while the antiquated hand method is invariably employed in the majority of the film exchanges.

Earlier Practices

Until the advent of semi-mechanical means for film splicing some twenty years ago, in the form of a small, hand operated clamping or pressing machine, the patch was not a weld in the film but merely a temporary connection. It was reasoned that, with the application of pressure during the splicing operation, the pieces of film would become bonded and the splice made permanent. With this idea in view, the Edison Company produced a hand-operated splicing device, which presented a great improvement in results over the plain hand-made splice. The Edison clamp may be considered the first real practical device, and nearly all other hand operated machines built since its introduction were patterned along identical lines of construction and operation. While they were styled "machines," the actuation of these devices presented a manual, rather than a mechanical, process. Splicing was accomplished in the same manner as by hand, excepting that the two ends of the film to be joined were clamped securely after the application of the cement. Some of the devices had pilot pins as an aid in locating the film ends in relation to the perforations; but, while the pins aided registration in the newer or prime stock, they really were a detriment in the splicing of shrunken film. Most of these earlier hand operated splicing devices were referred to as splicing clamps, splicing blocks, splicing presses, film menders, etc., for the reason that they were considered to embody the advanced feature enabling the application of pressure during the splicing operation. The kind of splices usually made varied from 1/8" to 1/4" in width, and the thickness approximately .011.

The splice overlapping as much as 1/4 or even 3/16 of an inch soon becomes hard and inelastic; because, in applying moisture and cement to this excessive width, the film base softens, and in due time hardens; in which latter condition it does not readily conform to the curvature of the projector or printing machine sprockets, and by improper spacing between the perforations frequently "jumps" sprockets altogether. Its lack of flexibility weakens the film by preventing the yielding but tenacious contact that is a necessary requisite to a good bond, and, further, often causes the film to break parallel to the splice.

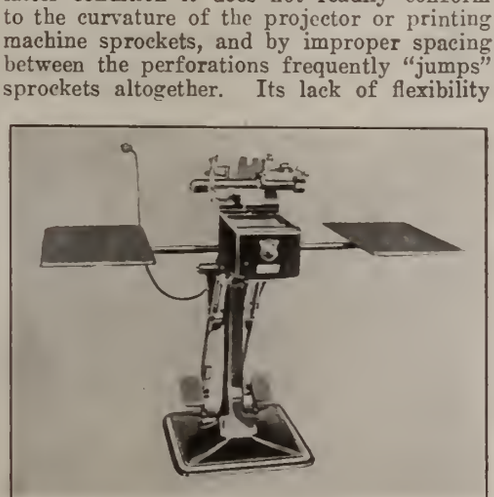

Fig. 1—B and H Semi-Automatic Film Splicing Machine

The motion picture producers and laboratories have always been untiring in their efforts to produce a film of the highest attainable quality, and great credit is due to them for the progress attained, but, unfortunately, these excellent films, which, with proper handling, would last as long as the subjects, seldom make much headway toward longevity. This, in the main, may be attributed to obsolete and antequated methods of handling—including, principally, the operation of splicing in a great many theatres and exchanges of the present day. Because these methods are crude and costly, they have no place in the processing routine of a great industry, and the sooner they are entirely supplanted the sooner shall we have lower distribution and replacement costs and exceptionally better and pleasing projection results.

Results With Semi-Automatic Film Splicing Machine

The development of a practical film splicing machine presented problems quite as intricate as those of its allies: the printing machine, the perforator, the camera, and the projector, and its present degree of perfection was obtained only after considerable experimenting. The first essential, constantly kept in view, was a mechanism to take the uncertainty out of splicing and make the joint an element of strength, rather than one of weakness—at the same time, combining accuracy and efficiency.

A cut of the first really practical semi-automatic film splicing machine is appended hereto. This machine is interchangeable for either negative or positive joining, and adjustable for any desired width of splice. As to quantity of output, a beginner is enabled to splice double that of an experienced operator using the smaller or hand operated devices; while the machine operator, with a few days' experience, turns out four or five times the quantity of splices that was previously possible, besides very materially improving the quality of the product. The machine is provided with two pilot register pins, located in fixed relation to the frame line of the film to be spliced, which automatically compensates for any shrinkage that might exist in the stock; that is, both ends of the film to be spliced locate from the same pins, thereby affecting correct registration. Besides greatly facilitating the setting-up operations, as well as scrapping, cementing, etc., the machine automatically shears and discards both the superfluous film ends, throws off excess cement, and leaves the splice a bonded portion of the film, clean and free from the necessity of wiping or trimming. An electric heating unit, placed beneath the lower cutter plates, furnishes heat to hurry the drying of the cement, so that the splice ordinarily is ready for immediate service.

It is not the purpose of this paper to recommend the adoption of any particular size or kind of splice, nor to suggest a standard; but to show what has been accomplished in the development of a machine which may be adjusted to conform to almost any desired type of splice, and to compare its results with those most commonly used in the industry; further, to show, by comparison, the superiority of service which has been determined by exhaustive experiments of certain kinds of splices with respect to the duty imposed upon them.

The original theory was (and it still has its adherents) that the wider the splice the stronger it became. The practice was, and is today, largely that of using a splice almost invariably three-sixteenths to one-quarter inches in width. Regardless of how natural the supposition may be, the comparative strength of the splices of extra large width was early proved erroneous. From the experiments which were conducted covering the continuous running through the projectors and printers of film spliced by all known methods, there was finally evolved certain formulæ which would produce the most perfect results for negative and positive film.

Among the conclusions reached were: that a beveled splice, approximately one thirty-second of an inch in width, and which would increase the thickness of the spliced portion but .0025, would be the most satisfactory for negative film. First, because it would permit the splicing of raw negative so that its travel through the camera would be without interference; second, the developed negative could be spliced together for printing, and the resultant positive print would be one which would require no cutouts, as the splice being the approximate width of the frame line would not be noticeable. This resulted in being able to affect a considerable saving in the laboratory assembly and joining rooms, particularly as longer rolls could be printed and little cutting up of the positive would be required.

It was further determined that the splice approximately the width equal to the distance between the standard film perforations, or 5/64 inch, would be the most suitable and efficient for the positive film. It was demonstrated that splices of greater width, while evidencing a stronger surface appearance when stressed in parallel alignment, yet after passing over the projection machine sprockets for several runnings, exhibited a tendency to loosen at the corners, as a result of the tangent force exerted in the pulldown of the intermittent. The wider splice lacked the necessary degree of flexibility, owing to the film base becoming stiffened and curled by the hardening of the cement, and naturally it would not long withstand being conformed to the curvature of the film sprockets. This contention may easily be proved by making the following simple test:

Take two pieces of cardboard, stiff paper, or film, overlap each piece approximately one-half inch, and thoroughly secure one to the other by means of cement, glue, or other adhesive. Thence take two similar pieces, securing one to the other, as before, only overlapping one-quarter inch. It will be found that the piece embodying the narrow patch can be bent to a smaller radius before breaking than can the unit containing the wide patch.

Fig. 4—Cut-outs from the average exchange and projection booths

This example serves to illustrate the relative merit of a narrow and wide splice in its particular application to positive film. The splice unnecessarily wide requires a greater amount of labor and cement in its making; it creates the irregularities and difficulties which have been so long identified with the exhibition of motion pictures to be regarded as necessary evils. The semi-narrow splice, as made by the automatic film splicing machine for positive film which has been subjected to exhaustive comparative tests, should mark the passage of haphazard methods, waste, and destruction, and fill a predetermined place in the modern practice of the art of motion picture making.

Figure No. 2 shows a fair example of the average hand-made splices for different uses. Sample "A" is almost invariably used in the projection rooms and in a great many exchanges. It should have been discarded fifteen years ago. "B," printed, would pass most screen inspectors in the laboratory, but difficulty often attends its life in the printing machine. "C" and "D," if a negative, would not pass through the average camera mechanism; if a positive, doubt would ensue as to its proper passage through the printer; and the splice would obviously require deleting in assembly.

"D"—Positive Semi-Narrow
Fig. 5—Samples of splices made on the B and H semi-automatic film splicing machine

Figure No. 3 shows examples of splices made with representative hand clamping devices. They compare, in a certain degree, with those shown in Figure No. 2, except that better registration and alignment have been made possible, due to the setting and location of the frame with the use of pilot pins, although, more frequently, in the splicing of shrunken stock, the pilot registration of the present type of block does not anticipate compensation for shrinkage, and, consequently, cannot be properly joined in frame. The same conclusions are deduced, with respect to their ultimate practicability, as have been stated for the samples in Figure No. 2.

These positive splices were made either by hand or with the use of hand clamping devices. In the slide, they are flattened out but wound in a roll of film; they are warped and curled, and in time become stiff and brittle. This type of splice has been the cause of more annoyance, waste and spoilage than all other projection irregularities combined.

Outline of Series of Articles for Course in Electricity

AS mentioned in several preceding issues of the NEWS, a series of articles, dealing first with electrical subjects and later with optics, will be presented in the Projection Department. The first article of this series will be given in next week's (February 24) issue.

The program calls for such a comprehensive list of subjects as will give the projectionist at least a working knowledge of all common phases of the subject of electricity. It is not expected that anything startlingly new will be brought out in these articles. Rather, an attempt will be made to simplify the presentation so as to enable the projectionist to obtain a clear understanding of the fundamental principles of the subject. Thus a firm foundation will be laid down on which he can build up, by means of his practical experience and every day observation, the means of bettering his daily work and broadening his vision of the field.

No doubt some of the projectionists are already familiar with many of the points slated for treatment. It is our intention, however, to start at the very beginning in order to reach those who have had none of the elementary training. The main object of this course will be to give a simplified, true explanation of the various electrical actions and their causes. It may seem strange to include the word "true" in the above description, but the fact is that some writers, when endeavoring to give a simple explanation of a difficult subject, resort to such crude analogies, or comparisons, in an effort to compare the subject under discussion with one they think the reader familiar with, that a wrong conception of the very basic principles involved are left in the projectionist's mind.

These writers attempt to justify their actions by saying that anything which will drive home their point is excusable. They are driving home one point, however, at the expense of another. The excuse is often made that the subject is too complicated to describe it correctly and so a hasty, general, misleading description is given in order to "cover" it.

At this rate the projectionist will never be able to thoroughly understand the underlying principles for the simple reason that they are never correctly explained to him.

It is not exactly an easy matter to write a series of articles which will meet the entire satisfaction of all readers when it is considered that there are classes of projectionists from the good, earnest, painstaking kind, to the thoughtless, shiftless variety, commonly known as "clock-watchers." Then again, there are those who learn and understand a thing quicker than others.

In order to give you an idea of the points to be covered, an outline is given below. Any suggestions concerning additions, changes, etc., will be welcomed, as after all, this department is run solely for the benefit of the projectionists. If you think the subjects are too simple, remember there are others who may not know as much as about it as you. If you are one of those who are well advanced in your chosen profession and are "above" such easy explanations, remember there are those who are young in the game and require just such simplicity in order to give them a clear understanding of the principles involved.

Run your eye down the outline and ask yourself if you could pass a stiff "exam." covering those points. If your answer is "yes," then you might just as well stop here, close the book and go to sleep for the rest of your life. You know it all!

A word to the wise. As the series progresses, references will be made back to article already published so it would be well to cut out each week's article and save it for future use. Later they can be bound into book form for permanent reference.

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

MERE splendor in outward appearance will not make a theatre chair. There must also be those less apparent but none the less essential qualities of correct construction, skilled workmanship and sound materials that make for dependable and satisfactory service over a long period of time. With so large and important an investment as seating for auditorium and theatre, years, not weeks and months, must be the measure of value.

Theatre owners and managers of longest experience know well that underneath the beauty and good taste of American Seating Company theatre chairs are present always those sterling qualities of enduring value and strength that make for lasting satisfaction and long wear.

Amateur Motion Pictures Outfit Developed by Eastman Kodak Company

HOME movies, among other things, will act as feeders to motion picture theatres, according to the Eastman Kodak Company who have just announced the successful development of an amateur movie outfit. Just as the phonograph for example has helped so wonderfully in popularizing opera and the better things in music, so will home motion pictures be in a positon to educate popular taste in screen offerings. This, at least, is the belief of the Eastman industry whose stake in the movie theatre world is considerable.

The amateur outfit developed by the Kodak Company consists of a taking camera and a projector. The taking camera which weighs only seven pounds, is daylight loading and so simplified mechanically as to enable the amateur to take motion pictures with the same facility as he has recorded snapshots. The projector, equipped with a two inch lens for ordinary home use, will fill a screen 30x40 at a distance of 18 feet and a 40x54 screen at 21 feet. This projector to be known as the Kodascope, is motor driven, entirely automatic in operation and once threaded requires no further attention until the reel is exhausted.

The film on which the motion picture Kodak system is based is of special size being 11-16 inches in width as against the standard width of 1 3-8 inches. This is coated with a special emulsion which, by a reverse process, yields a direct positive. These prints can be duplicated in a special printer and can also be enlarged to standard size for theatre use. This special film, is of the non-inflammable type made from cellulose acetate. Five pictures on the small film, it will be seen, will occupy the same length as two on the standard so that 100 feet of Cine Kodak film will be equivalent to 250 feet of standard and 400 foot reel equal to a thousand foot standard reel.

The diminutive taking camera, to be known as the Cine Kodak, is on the whole of standard type. It is fitted with a Kodak anastigmat lens, working at 5.3.5, permitting pictures to be made under poor light conditions. The finder is just above the lens and by an ingenious attachment changes the position of its image as the lens is focused. In this way the image is shown through the center of the field at all times.

MAJOR SYSTEM ADVANTAGES:

- Remote Control
- Extended Remote Control
- Remote Dimmer Control
- Cumulative Control
- Pre-selection
- Flashless, noiseless switch operation
- Minimum stage space
- Unit construction
- Experienced design
- Perfect workmanship
- Highest grade materials.

These motion picture theaters, the finest in this country, are equipped with the Major System of Theater Lighting Control. They represent the type that have accepted the Major System as the only one worthy of installation. The great number of theaters who boast of this advantage of Major installations is being added to every week—a definite assurance of leadership.

Both old and new theaters alike may be equipped with Major Systems, the unit construction of the system itself making it exceptionally adaptable in fulfilling the better lighting needs in any size of theatre. In addition, it is equipped with a momentary contact switch to lock the switchboard with any combination of lights on, insuring absolute safety from meddling.

Another special feature is the " All-out " switch which is available only in the Major System of Light Control. With this device, every light on the stage may be turned out, regardless of the position of individual switches. The Major System of Theater Lighting Control is known to be the simplest to operate, the safest to handle and the most practical, and by these three reasons alone achieved its success.

readily made by slight cutter adjustments on the semi-automatic machine. As is necessary for any successful splice, all the emulsion or scraped portion must be removed before applying the cement; for this reason, some users prefer the wet scrape, but the greater proportion of machine users today are making the dry scrape, as it eliminates one troublesome operation. This splice, while not as pliable as the beveled splice, is still very much advanced over the sprocket hole lap of the hand-made splice; it is the type which under running tests shows the greatest efficiency; it does not curl, or stiffen the film, and will readily conform to the radius of any sprocket, without jumping. It is now almost universally used by laboratories, in the assembling and joining of release prints.

Sample "A" shows an exposed negative splice made on a semi-automatic machine. Its characteristic neatness is transferred to print (sample "B"). No cut-out is necessary for this patch; it is not discernible on the screen;

Splicing Negative and Positive Films

Samples "A," "B" and "C" are beveled splices; that is, both emulsion and celluloid surfaces have been scraped to a bevel of 8°. The average width of these splices is one thirty-second of an inch, or approximately the width of the average frame line. The thickness at point of splice is but .0075, which is .0025 thicker than the average thickness of a single strip of film. Sample "A" for negative raw stock will readily pass through any of the present day camera movements, and a positive raw stock splice through the printers without interference or liability of breakage.

Sample "B" is an exposed negative splice, which will be compared in Figure No. 6 with a print of itself on positive stock.

Sample "C" is an exposed positive splice, beveled with the negative adjustment cutters. To all appearances this splice is barely noticeable, and even to the scrutinizing eye is as one continuous piece of film. It is as flexible as the film itself, and its longevity is determined only by the accuracy and care with which it is made and the proper adjustment of the machine cutters. For all practical purposes this splice, in positive release work, was not found successful, as the average machine operators would not give the time and attention that were necessary in the care and cleanliness of their machines. The cutters for this type of splice are adjusted and kept with tolerances of .0003 inch, so that, if care is not taken in keeping the machine free from cement and scrapings, the fine adjustment is soon lost, and the splice loses its efficiency. However, that this type of splice, carefully made, will last indefinitely has been proven by practical tests; samples of such splices made several years ago were run continuously in the same strip of film with present day, wider splices; the latter breaking away, but the old, beveled splices seemingly remained as strong as the film itself.

Sample "D" is a semi-narrow, exposed positive splice; its width being .078, and thickness, .010. It is too wide for successful beveling, as shown in sample "C." It is, however,

F. H. Gruneberg

F. H. Gruneberg takes pride in pointing to the fact that every theatre controlled by the company of which he is president, is "located on a main street near a busy corner." And these theatres constitute the biggest chain in the state of Indiana.

Mr. Gruneberg was a medical student, pharmacist, and a chemist. He was principal owner of a wholesale drug firm, but emerged from the world of Pills and Pain to rise to a place of prominence in the world of Film and Screen. Now, after only a few years, the Consolidated Corporation, which was organized by Mr. Gruneberg, owns theatres in the principal cities of Indiana, with a total seating capacity of over 15,000—and this number is continually on the increase.

Says Mr. Gruneberg: "If we did not have a GOLD SEAL Automatic ticket register in our booths we would not know if tickets were being resold. Our object in operating theatres is for profit and when hand sold tickets can be resold, we must protect our profits with GOLD SEALS."

How many theatre owners find this to be true! And just as a customer in a retail store is impressed by the efficient whir-r-r and merry tinkle of the modern cash register, so are theatre patrons impressed with the GOLD SEAL Automatic ticket selling service.

The GOLD SEAL makes money and saves money; it is an advertising device and an efficient bookkeeper at the same time. And it is NOT expensive. Write for price and free demonstration.

Splicing Negative and Positive Film

further, it saves much time and annoyance in the assemblying and joining rooms. It is particularly desirable for laboratories using the automatic system of developing in units of one-thousand-foot rolls. Ordinarily the negative is joined in lengths as long as is permissible by the laboratory system employed, and the resultant prints, with little or no breaks, eliminate much handling in assembling, and joining; moreover, because of the fewer splices used, the life of the positive is made considerably longer than one having a multiplicity of splices. It is for these reasons that the machine made negative splice has found almost universal usage in the laboratories of this country.

Compare the hand-made exposed negative splice, sample "C," with its print, sample "D." This print would probably pass in most laboratories, but would be rejected in many establishments where greater perfection is required. The negative splice in this instance has been very carefully and laboriously made, and, with good fortune, it might survive several runnings through the printer; more often, however, it breaks, causing mutilation of valuable negative and destruction of the continuity of the positive being printed, resulting in loss of time and additional film spoilage, owing to rethreading, etc.

In Figure No. 7 there is shown a comparison of various types of positive splices. "A," "B" and "C" are made on the semi-automatic machine, which, by slight cutter adjustment, is easily conformed to the desired type.

Sample "A" as has previously been stated, is not generally practical for positive release work, because of the precision and accuracy of adjustment required.

Sample "B" has been proven ideal for all practical purposes, both from the standpoint of performance in the machines and for conservation of the film.

Sample "C" is what has been commonly termed "a compromise splice"; that is, a type of splice demanded by a number of exchanges and distributors because of its size being nearer that which the average exhibitor has been accustomed to, as indicated by sample "D." While it has the outward appearance of strength, neatness, and accuracy of register, it lacks the fundamental requirements of an ideal splice, as was determined by the tests made with sample "B."

Sample "D" should be condemned, as it has no place in a well-organized industry. To its use may be charged thousands of dollars in film renewals, interrupted projection, "jumpy" registration on the screen, twisted, curled or kinky rolls, and many other irregularities that are not a part of the advanced mechanism used in the industry.

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee—Leigh Hunt, 445 Milwaukee St., has plans for two story theatre, 35 x 150, on Kinnickinnic & Logan Sts., for David Taxey, 550 Potter Ave. Building of concrete foundation, brick and tile walls, steel roof.

Outfit to Exhibit Legislative Films

The New Hotel President, being erected on Capitol Hill, near the House Office Building, is to have as a feature a unique motion picture theatre and projection outfit for the exhibition of legislative films. Major A. H. Gillis, the builder, said: "Although not generally known, thousands of feet of film are exhibited before the members of Congress weekly, covering varying phases of public welfare in all parts of the country. Films concerned with local industrial projects, irrigation and agricultural improvements, geological developments, forestry and fisheries, public safety and welfare campaigns shown the members constitute a large part in the legislation of today. The Hotel President in its projection room will have the most modern motion picture devices, and a silver screen. The little theatre will be at the disposal of the Congress and Government at all times." At present the House caucus and Senate conference rooms are used for this work, but no appropriation exists, and local equipment dealers must rent the projectors individually and are paid out of the committee funds, "for cost of hearing, testimony, etc."—Knappen.

Criterion Being Renovated

Work will start in a few weeks on rebuilding the Criterion theatre at Enid, Okla., Mr. Weil will again lease the Criterion and will run first run features as the policy. Power's Type "E" machines and a Transverter will be installed as the projection room equipment. Orchestra will be employed.—Trout.

WASHINGTON

Hoquiam—Negotiations for the erection of a new playhouse are under way and plans call for a theatre with seating capacity for 1,000, to be located on Eighth St. and be fireproof in every detail. Structure will cost about $45,000.

Wenatchee—Permit has been granted to Peoples Theatre Co. to construct a brick building in the rear of the Mission St. pavilion to house a stage with a proscenium 25 feet in width, to cost about $2,000.

thy Yost. It will be produced for American release.

A crook story especially written by F. Scott Fitzgerald for Glenn Hunter will be the next Film Guild picture for W. W. Hodkinson. The scenario will be written by James Ashmore Creelman who has recently adapted "Smilin' Through" and "The Scarecrow" and will be directed by Frank Tuttle who has made all the previous Glenn Hunter starring vehicles.

Edward Cline, comedy director, motion picture industry, has signed a contract with Sol Lesser and Michel Rosenberg of Principal Pictures Corporation whereby he will have charge of the megaphone work on the forthcoming Sol Lesser production of "The Meanest Man in the World."

"Temporary Marriage," the first of a series of four pictures to be produced during the year by the Sacramento Pictures Corporation, is now in its final stages of production at the Fine Arts studios. Lambert Hillyer is directing and Mildred Davis, Kenneth Harlan, Stuart Holmes, Tully Marshall and Maud George are included in the cast.

Scenes from the Universal Attraction "The Flame of Life," starring Priscilla Dean.

Word comes from the Schulberg studios that Ruth Clifford has replaced Harriet Hammond in the cast of Tom Forman's production, "April Showers." Miss Hammond was forced to leave the cast because of illness.

Eve Unsell has finished editing "The Girl Who Came Back," the Blancy play which is to be presented by B. P. Schulberg as a Tom Forman Production. Its cast includes Miriam Cooper, Gaston Glass, Kenneth Harlan, Fred Malatesta, Joseph Dowling and Zasu Pitts.

Under the title of "So This is Hamlet," C. C. Burr will soon present a burlesque of Shakespeare's "Hamlet"—Charlie Murray has a role in it as the false King. Most of the scenes for this picture were taken in St. Augustine, Florida, among the old Spanish ruins for which this city is famous.

Katherine Martyn, stage beauty, and member of the Ziegfeld Follies for several seasons, has been added to the group of players featured in the All Star Comedies produced by C. C. Burr. Miss Martyn is now at work on a new comedy called "Beware of the Dog" at the Glendale, Long Island, studios of the company. Gregory La Cava is directing the production.

Word comes to the Arrow home office from Miami, Fla., where the company making "The Broken Violin" under the direction of Jack Dillon is working, that the stunt sequence in which Reed Howes, the star, was to make an airplane to speed-boat change, has been successfully filmed.

RESPONSIBILITY

A FILM laboratory has a grave responsibility to producers, directors and cinematographers. The producer's money and the professional reputation of all whose brains and artistry go into the making of a motion picture are, in a sense, entrusted to the laboratory. The artistic and financial success of a picture depends largely upon the photography. The photography depends largely upon the skillful co-operation the cinematographer gets in the laboratory.

EACH member of our organization realizes this responsibility. Each appreciates the importance of what he contributes toward making every STANDARD PRINT the best it is possible to turn out. This realization and the individual interest of each employee in what he is doing preclude the possibility of carelessness in STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES. It is one of the factors assuring the superiority of STANDARD SERVICE and STANDARD PRINTS.

THE screen's greatest novelty. DeMille's master spectacle of modern life—contrasted with the life of the cave-man. Was Eve the first flapper? How "modern" is the modern girl? Those are some of the lively questions that will make people talk about "Adam's Rib."

"THE COVERED WAGON"

TO make "The Covered Wagon", 3000 actors spent three months in the Utah desert, eighty miles from a railroad. They endured floods, blizzards, zero temperatures and sometimes lack of food.

On this page you see a view of the camp after a flood had destroyed many of the tents; also a view of one of the mess tents, and other scenes on location.

Besides the regular actors, a thousand Indians were also on location, and the live stock included 600 oxen, a thousand horses, and five hundred mules.

Nothing so big was ever attempted in motion picture history, and probably never will be again.

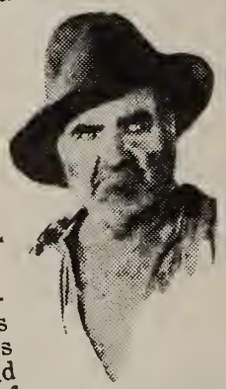
"DRIVEN" REACHES HEIGHTS OF BEST AMERICAN FILMS

By P. W. GALLICO.

"Driven," to us, stands out as one of the best photoplays we have ever seen from an American producer. This is a tall statement, but we stick to it. It is powerfully dramatic, brilliantly acted and directed, and makes no concessions.

The producer set out to tell a story of the kind of people who inhabit the mountain regions of the South, and he did it unflinchingly. It is not a pretty picture, but it is an honest picture.

The story is so simple it can be told in a few words. A drab, miserable mother of a vicious mountain brood sells information which leads to its being wiped out in order to assure happiness to her youngest son.



Burr McIntosh

We can recall, perhaps, only two other photoplays in which the inevitability of circumstances has been as powerfully rendered in a series of pictures as it is in "Driven." There is more real despair and heartbreak in this short film than in all the rest of the so-called "heart" and "mother" pictures put together.

Acting honors belong to Emily Fitzroy, whose portrayal of the woman of the mountains whose family have crushed everything but life out of her is a marvelous bit of acting. Charles Emmet Mack is seen as her youngest son, who is different from the others. With Elinor Fair, he shares next honors in this remarkable picture. Miss Fair plays Essie, the girl, thrown in with the brutal family of Tollivers when one of them murders her father.

Elinor Fair and Charles Emmet Mack

George Bancroft and Burr McIntosh have the other two telling parts, Bancroft, as Lem the killer, who desires Essie, and McIntosh as Paw, the head of an unholy family of moonshiners.

We haven't the space to be as enthusiastic about this film as we would like to. We suggest that you see it.

The photography is excellent, because it does just what it should. It helps to tell the story. The love element between Tommy and Essie is handled as charmingly as we have ever seen it done. It is a picture of life. It is....oh, well, see for yourself.

"One of the really fine things dramatically, which have been shown on Broadway screens this year. It is natural, human and moving; it is acted with exceeding grace and faithfulness. It is worked out masterfully."

NEW YORK WORLD

"Among the very best, not only of this season but all other seasons. In all respects it is a masterly work. Greatness is achieved. 'Driven' could be utilized as a model for the great majority of cinema producers."

NEW YORK GLOBE

"Among the best cinemas produced here in a long time. It is well worth seeing."

"DRIVEN"

The Dramatic Gem of the Year!

THE SCREEN

"Driven," the motion picture of Southern mountaineer life which opened an engagement at the Criterion Theatre yesterday afternoon, is one of the most genuine films even shown on Briadway. Except for its ending, which is, in part, a concession to the popular taste for theatrical hokum, it is convincingly sincere. And, most important of all, it is intensely dramatic. It is dramatic because it is rooted in reality, in a true situation, and grows logically, inevitably, up from its solid ground.

And it is unusually well made. Charles J. Brabin, who broke away from the movie millyard to do something he wanted to do in motion picture creation, went down into the Southern mountains to make this film. He sought a natural setting, he took competent players with him, and he grasped the fundamentals of life in the mountains before he used the camera. Then he made the picture. He brought technical skill and an instinct for cinematographic expressiveness to his task, and the result is a story in living pictures, pictures that you can't get away from and are not likely to forget for a long time. There are scenes in "Driven" that reach the summit of cinematographic power. It is impossible to imagine how the things they say could be more effectively told.

The story that they tell is that of a mountaineer mother. She is the wife of a beast and three of her sons are beasts. Moonshining is their business and brutality their recreation. But the woman has a fourth son, a slender, youthful dreamer, a weakling, if you will, but tender, too, and all the love in the mother's life is centred in him. His love is centred in a girl, a frail little orphan whom his oldest brother, Lem, decides to marry—and Lem's decision is backed by the authority and strength of the father and the other two older sons. This is the situation, and no one has the resourcefulness and the will to change it. Except the mother. She can sacrifice her four men for the child she loves. She can deny the tribal loyalty that rules all things in the mountain and sell to the revenue officers the information that will lead them to the family still, where, she knows, her men will die fighting. And with the money she gets she can send the boy and girl out of the mountains. And this is the new situation in which the story comes to its stirring, compelling climax.

As this mother in the mountains, Emily Fitzroy gives a thrilling performance. Her life is dead. She is broken. Her face is forever set in weariness—except when it blazes in resolution. And when it blazes, the spectator sits up in his seat. He feels the fire. The others in the cast are also good. Elinor Fair, as the girl, is appealing, and Charles Emmett Mack, though not altogether a happy selection for his rôle, still gives it the essential character it demands. He weakens it chiefly in the close-ups, of which might be fewer. Burr McIntosh, as the father and George Bancroft as Lem are true to their type and make themselves plain. Altogether, the acting is excellent.

Mr Hiram Abrams,

Dear Mr Abrams,

I am sure you will appreciate a line relative to the exhibitor's value of "One Exciting Night."

Personally I think it is one of the best pictures I have ever seen,and I have yet to find one patron of our theatres who is not thoroughly satisfied in every way.

The exploitation possibilities are numerous and with the splendid assistance that you have given our publicity department we have put over campaigns that mean something,and when the public got into the theatre they saw a picture that more than measured up to everything that you or we said about it.

"One Exciting Night," in my judgment,is a 100 per cent box-office draw and will get money for any exhibitor anywhere who gets behind it and lets his public know that he has a regular picture.

I hope we may have the pleasure of playing a lot more Griffith subjects,and if they are all as good from every standpoint as "One Exciting Night",we will be more than satisfied.

With kindest personal regards,believe me

Very cordially yours,

Who's Doing the Big Things in this Industry Today?

What company is smashing through to big success at the box-office?

What company is stepping out and corralling the greatest directors and players?

What company owns the biggest story vehicles?

What company is being most talked about by exhibitors? By critics?

Who's doing the Big Things Anyway?

SMASHING through to real money—watch "The Christian" pile up profits! It's taking the country by storm. Look around and see what pictures are turning in the big money. Neilan's "The Stranger's Banquet," Holubar's "Broken Chains," R. A. Walsh's "Lost and Found," "A Blind Bargain"—what company has the line-up of box-office attractions that picture for picture are the best buys offered to exhibitors today?

What company has brought together the greatest aggregation of talent ever assembled under one banner? The Giant Directors of the industry are in this gathering: Marshall Neilan, von Stroheim, Rupert Hughes, Allen Holubar, Maurice Tourneur, Hugo Ballin, R. A. Walsh, Clarence Badger. And to this notable list is now added Victor Seastrom, Europe's foremost director. Look over these players, at the height of their popularity: Pola Negri, Mae Busch, Claire Windsor, John Barrymore, Lon Chaney, Colleen Moore, Cullen Landis, Claude Gillingwater, Blanche Sweet, Antonio Moreno. You know what they mean in a cast of players. Add to these Frank Mayo, Conrad Nagle and Hobart Bosworth!

THE shopping public that looks for names in electric lights! Who's giving them the biggest names in the entire field of motion pictures? Here are big things in store for exhibitors: Eric von Stroheim's "Greedy Wives;" Pola Negri's greatest sensation "Mad Love;" Marshall Neilan's biggest offering "The Eternal Three;" Hugo Ballin's knock-out, the immortal "Vanity Fair;" King Vidor's production of "Three Wise Fools;" Elinor Glynn's "Six Days;" the famous stage success "The Merry Widow" directed by von Stroheim.

Big things! There's only one "Ben Hur," the most prized moving picture vehicle in the entire world. Everybody's waiting to see it on the screen. There's no subject in pictures more talked about than who will direct it! You know the company that bought it. You know the company that believes no vehicle is too big to buy, if it means success to exhibitors. You know who coined that slogan: Big Pictures Pay Big Profits. You know the company that's stepping right out and doing things—

What the Picture Did for Me

Sherlock Holmes. A great picture with John Barrymore at his best—and exhibitors should know what that means. He does great work, and for that matter so does the entire cast. Go after it strong; it will take care of every promise you make regarding its excellence. Advertising: heralds, mailing list, photos, etc. Patronage: health seekers and tourists. Attendance: good.

Dave Seymour, Pontiac Theatre Beautiful, Saranac Lake, New York.

Remembrance. An excellent and most remarkable picture, full of human pathos and sentiment and showing, to a remarkable degree, the frailties of human life from a father's standpoint and the ingratitude of some families. A great picture, excellent in photography and execution and one that every person should see, both old and young.

William Noble, Empress Theatre, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Brothers Under the Skin. With a special cast.—As keen and entertaining as intelligent direction and capable acting could make it. In fact it scored far better with my patrons than many of the recent "specials" I have shown. I class this production as first rate entertainment. General patronage.

John B. Ritch, Myrtle Theatre, Lewistown, Mont.

The Sin Flood. With Helene Chadwick.—This went big with my patrons. The story is different and holds interest throughout. Supporting cast excellent. General patronage.

B. C. Brown, Temple Theatre, Viroqua, Wis.

Broken Chains opened to very big business at the Chicago Theatre. Long lines of waiting patrons in front of theatre every day occurrence during this engagement. Picture receives tremendous applause after every performance,

Balaban & Katz, Chicago.

Sherlock Holmes. With John Barrymore.—All the earmarks of a real audience picture. The star at his best. The local critics were unanimous in their praises. Transient patronage.

Herbert Jennings, Palace Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

Brothers Under the Skin. With a special cast.—Absolutely fine comedy-drama. Well done in every particular. My particular patrons liked it fine and if they can be pleased anyone can. Neighborhood and college patronage.

S. M. Southworth, The American Theatre, Canton, N. Y.

A Blind Bargain with Lon Chaney. If they like thrillers give them this one. Lon Chaney doubles and is great. Did good business. Advertising: six, three, ones, slide, heralds, etc. City of 31,000. Attendance good.

E. Myers, Palace Theatre.

Remembrance. With a special cast.—Great picture, true to life. You will not make any mistake in getting this and advertising big. Neighborhood patronage.

Charles Morton, Family Theatre, Mt. Carroll, Ill.,

Hungry Hearts with Bryant Washburn. Great audience picture. An artistic production throughout.

-KAISER EXILE!

Presented by Fred E. Hamlin

Here is the answer, graphically and realistically flashed on the screen, to the great question:

You see in this film the aged, broken and helpless man who deluged Europe in blood that his towering vanity might triumph for a moment in history.

What Did the War Accomplish?

He paces his twenty-acre, barbed-wire enclosed prison like a caged lion, but with none of the lion's dignity. His companions are a pair of dachshunds!

This is the only motion picture ever taken of the ex-Kaiser in exile. It was obtained by a former school-mate of the ex-Crown Prince, who smuggled a specially constructed motion-picture camera into the estate at Doorn, and caught the one-time "war lord" at close range under the pretext of photographing landscapes and flower gardens.

Many of its moments are startling. Hanford MacNider, former head of the American Legion says:

"It appears to me as an epoch-making event in the screen industry, in that it gives a most faithful and realistic description of how the once all-powerful German War Lord is forced to end his declining years, isolated and alone, a pitiful figure in the world of affairs."

Book it now, while newspapers are giving pages of publicity to this sensational film.

"FOUR DEEP" IN SAN FRANCISCO

Coincident with the first showing of "The Beautiful and Damned" at Loew's Warfield, Saturday night, January 13, the sidewalks were jammed with crowds both above and below the theatre. The line, four deep, extended up Market Street and around the corner of Taylor Street to Turk. This is unusual, to say the least, to draw such a crowd the first night. But Sunday night following, the same situation was duplicated. This still more unusual.

Gentlemen,

Your Warner Bros. Production, "The Beautiful and Damned," opened at this theatre Monday Feb. 5th, and opened big.

Tuesday, despite severe snow-storm, did well; Wednesday very big. Look for a big week. Patrons were all pleased with acting, direction and photography, all of which were excellent. Author, title and cast, if played up big, will prove of big box-office value to any theatre.

Very truly yours,

Boyd Brown Mgr.

From Providence

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—(Special)—"The Beautiful and Damned" hung up one of the best money weeks the Modern Theatre has known. The picture was only moderately exploited, too. The popularity of the book, however, proved a good puller.

From Atlanta

ATLANTA — (Special) — Warner Brothers' "Beautiful and Damned" came within an ace of setting the record at the Metropolitan Theatre last week. This Georgian metropolis turned out seemingly en masse for this production, which was highly praised by the press.

The romance of a beautiful heiress and a poor boy who believes the girl's family responsible for the failure and disappearance of his father.
A broken engagement, a hero crushed by his father's disgrace, a heroine struggling under the sting of her lover's reproach, a villain scheming to marry her money and a child to help untangle the affair, gives to "A Clouded Name" enough romance, mystery, plot, suspense and thrills to suit every audience.

"The Tents of Allah" boasts of Monte Blue in a characterization which rivals his marvellous Danton in D. W. Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm"; Mary Alden in her greatest mother role, different and romantic.

It presents a supporting cast of tremendous dramatic talent:—Mary Thurman, Macey Harlam, Sally Crute, Frank Currier, Charles Lane, Martin Faust and others.

It reveals the adventures and romance of an American girl who brought seven years' bad luck to Morocco and of a daring young desert bandit who plundered caravans for riches but who had never stolen a woman.

The artistry of "The Tents of Allah" is comparable to the pictorial perfection of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood."
Massive walls and towers, graceful mosques and minarets; exotic Morocco with all its lure and bizarre beauty The extravagent luxury of the Sultan's palace; the slinking squalor of low-arched, water front cafes. Cloud-banked skies and wind-swept wastes. Life with the wandering tribes of desert bandits, plunderers of caravans.
A tale of wild adventure and intrigue. Ferocious fighting, passionate romance, powerful drama, glorious entertainment.

Beautiful, stirring and distinctly different.

A Good Service Being Constantly Improved

The first edition of THE BOOKING GUIDE met with instant approval.

Today, it is used by exhibitors everywhere in booking and exploiting pictures. THE BOOKING GUIDE AND A FILE OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS is an important part of a theatre's equipment.

Its usefulness is not limited to theatre-owners. There are many other branches of the industry which have found a use for it in the conduct of business.

Some of these uses have been a revelation to us. They will surprise you. Statistics are being prepared along these lines and will be ready for publication in a short time.

It has been our aim to improve THE GUIDE wherever possible. To this end we have followed suggestions from exhibitors from the hundreds of letters received since its publication.

Counsel from the men who use it and suggestions for betterment is proof conclusive that it is needed and of use.

Many new features have been included in past issues; many others will be an important part of the coming April edition.

> Mr. E. O. Ellsworth, Metropolitan Theatre, Iowa Falls, Iowa, in a recent letter wrote in part: "I find THE GUIDE very useful and helpful not only in connection with booking pictures but also in exploiting them. I notice several new features embodied in this new edition which I am sure will add to its value to the exhibitors."

The NEW FEATURES have been brought about by the exhibitors' requests. THE BOOKING GUIDE is published for their use and is compiled the way they want it.

THE NEWS IS FILED THROUGHOUT THE FIELD

Every KEATON COMEDY a headliner

Scores of exhibitors have told us that when they play a Keaton comedy the box office receipts take a jump.

The newspapers have a habit of reviewing his 2 reelers as the feature of the show.

That's because, while they are of short length, they really are the feature. Play them up as such and you will make money.

Any Keaton comedy will steal the show.

"Our patrons enjoyed 'Mighty Lak a Rose' better than 'When Knighthood Was in Flower.' The music, composed of 'Old Time Melodies,' as per First National cue sheet on this picture, made a real hit. If the weather had been fine and we had spent a little more money in advertising I think we would have broken all records for the house."

Whoozinit?

THERE'S the story of the little schoolboy who came home one day and announced that he had mastered "gazinta."

Asked what "gazinta" was, he replied "one 'gazinta' two; two 'gazinta' four; four 'gazinta' eight," etc.

All of which is by way of introducing a word which has been stamped and coined within this trade; its widespread, daily use has given it the same glib twist. Nearly every salesman gets it flung at him nearly every day from nearly every exhibitor.

And it goes echoing down the channels of trade defining the ambitions of production and shaping the policies of distribution

It is the word: "whoozinit?"

Meaning: "who's in the picture?"

We have no desire here to attack the star or the star system; and we are not impractical enough to discount the screen personality as a drawing card.

Ten years in this business have taught us the hold of the star on the public; and a little reading in the public library will indicate to anyone clearly enough that the stage has had exactly the same experience with the star, reaping the system's advantages and trials and tribulations in exactly the same way.

But the motion picture is not merely the stage, for one thing. And for another, there are few, very few real stars in pictures.

From every angle we don't like the word: "whoozinit?"; it is too prominent, by far, in the motion picture vocabulary; its consequences are hurting the hold of the picture upon the public—for the simple reason that it over-emphasizes the drawing power of the screen personality for one thing and for another it is holding back the production and distribution of many, many pictures that may have fine entertainment value regardless of who are in them.

Thus, in a very large way, it is holding back the entire development of the motion picture which certainly was never meant to be cramped to the entertainment point of merely expressing faces and personalities.

The "whoozinit" policy of rating pictures is an advertising fault. Lack of advertising opportunity or ability upon the part of the exhibitor is the real nigger in the woodpile.

Several years ago Barrett McCormick began giving the Indianapolis newspapers the first real advertising copy pictures had ever enjoyed, and his ads made a pronounced hit with leading exhibitors all over the country.

Go back over the copy and you will find that he didn't sell stars to the public. He sold picture entertainment. He screened his pictures, picked out of each the heart appeal and told the public about it in readable prose. And the public came to the Circle theatre.

"Whoozinit" advertising lets the names and faces in the picture do the work. Generally it relies only on the poster. It's the easiest-way kind of advertising.

And up to a certain point it succeeds, because in every locality there is a percentage of the public attracted by stars' names. The posters get them. But there's never enough to fill the seats; and there are more people, always, whose craving for entertainment is of another character. McCormick copy would bring them out.

If picture theatre seats are to be filled in this country the public must be considered in a broader, more intelligent way. The "whoozinit" idea of picture value isn't broad or deep enough by a long shot. But new and broader picture values won't be forthcoming from production sources if the exhibitor keeps up the hue and cry of "whoozinit?"

And, of course, there's another big point.

The "whoozinit" type of exhibitor should never complain about stars' salaries. He's the man who makes them. Just so long as he yells "whoozinit" at the distributor just so long are distributors going to compete to get just what he asks for. And any schoolboy knows that a large demand for a limited supply of material shoots the cost of it sky high.

* * *

Stars' salaries are important enough. But it's the public that we've got to consider most.

"Whoozinit?" isn't satisfying the big motion picture public.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

SWEDEN is showing the way in using films as a medium of education in its public schools. The Superior Board of Education has been won over to the idea and henceforth Swedish children will learn their geography lessons from the screen, by which they will also be informed concerning the customs, industries, etc., of the principal countries of the world. Physics can well be taught through slow-motion pictures and, as stereographic projection becomes more perfect, solid geometry can be taught in a way not otherwise possible. One of the first steps will be to give regular instruction to young teachers in the proper care and handling of projecting machines, and other film apparatus.

Instruction by motion pictures in the regular curricula of the public schools under competent teachers is taken here to mean a safeguarding of the children's education and a correction of the misinformation and erroneous impressions now so often obtained from the commercial films in the public theatres.

We predict the day is not far distant when America will adopt the films as a medium of education. Geography, history, physics and old John J. Geometry need pepping up to keep the boys and girls interested in these jazzy days. And motion pictures will supply the pep.

HE'S off again! Who? Arthur S. Kane. All trains look alike to the Big Chief of Associated Exhibitors. He's doing a Chaplin. Listen. Charlie shuts his eyes in "The Pilgrim" and picks out a Texas town on the train bulletin. Arthur S., just back from a business trip through the corn belt of "these United States" (as the political speakers have it), hopped off a Pullman the other day, dashed into the station, shut his eyes, and picked out a time-table marked Florida. He leaves the 17th for southern lands and waters—to be gone a month or more. No business to be transacted. Just a vacation. Oh, yes, Cuba and Bermuda will be included.

EARL J. HUDSON was tendered a farewell dinner given him by some friends last Tuesday. He leaves for the Coast the end of the week for what may be an indefinite stay in connection with First National production plans.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE in its editorial page of last Wednesday contributes half a column toward A Thought for "Movie" Haters. It introduces the idea that "the army of 'movie' haters is not exactly militant, but its hatred has a very grim quality. It will concede nothing to films except boredom. So it is with some trepidation that we rise to suggest a service which the 'movie' may have rendered these self-same haters.

"That is to compel the theatre to improve. There seems to be a general agreement that never before has the New York stage reached so high a level of plays and productions as this year. There have been many factors to aid in this renaissance, concededly. But what we are suggesting is that the 'movie,' all unintentionally, has been the force that gave the final push to Broadway and made the drama of ideas the fashion."

The Tribune suggests "that by presenting a certain kind of emotional spectacle exceedingly well and very cheaply the 'movie' has forced the theatre manager either to lie down and quit or seize himself by the bootstraps and hoist his trade to a new level where the 'movie' could not, try as it would, compete. That level is the drama of ideas. In the spectacular field, in sentiment and slapstick, the 'movie' is supreme. In melodrama it can give the theatre a close run. When you come to the play of wit and thought it is left standing at the post."

This is hitting the nail right on the head and the NEWS agrees with the Tribune that it is a plain business proposition. The theatrical managers have dared to search for new ideas because the sponsors of the screen forced them to show their hands.

THEY'RE counting the ballots at the Goldwyn studios and Rodolph leads in the popular choice for the title role in "Ben Hur." There is no mention whether the other selections (a dozen or more) also ran. But here they are: Warren Kerrigan, Bill Farnum (Bill once played the role on the stage), Richard Dix, Bill Desmond, Conway Tearle, Gaston Glass, Thomas Meighan, Bert Lytell, Milton Sills, Forrest Stanley, Antonio Moreno, Ramon Navarro, Bill Hart (Bill played Messala, the heavy in the original stage version). Inasmuch as the sons of Italy, Spain, Argentine, Mexico, France and points south are in their hey-day of popularity, it looks like gross neglect on the part of the fan public to forget Ivor Novello, Armand Cortez, Charles de Roche, and Bull Montana.

VIVIAN MOSES is leaving the 17th for Los Angeles—to join other representatives of the Fox klan who traveled westward some time ago to look after business interests on the Coast. It is reported that several new stars and directors will shortly appear under the Fox banner.

THE metropolis, this season, has gone in for Shakespeare stronger than ever before in the history of dramatic art. John Barrymore has broken Booth's record of "Hamlet." Belasco's presentation of Warfield as Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice" is proving to be a tremendously popular as well as an artistic triumph. And Jane Cowl in "Romeo and Juliet" is drawing packed houses, the star being acclaimed as one of the greatest Juliets of all time. Critics have lauded these dramatic performances and some of them have to a certain extent used them as an example of the superiority of the stage over the screen. The screen answers the challenge. Ben Blumenthal has picked up the gauntlet for the picture industry and will use "Othello" as his sword. Naturally the reading will be missed, but the spirit of Shakespeare should be manifested because, being a German production, the Germans take the Bard and his immortal works seriously.

Now John Barrymore, David Warfield and Jane Cowl, through the limitations of the stage, are prevented from reaching the big American public which attends the screen. But the camera comes along and penetrates into the furthermost reaches of the country. "Othello" should be capably interpreted—what with Emil Jannings in the title role and Werner Kraus (of "Dr. Caligari" fame) as Iago. Desdemona is played by Ica Lenkeffy, an Hungarian actress of beauty and talent.

THE lobbyists are gathering in Albany and among them is our old friend, Canon Chase. No mention is made of any "gum-shoe" tactics being employed. The law-makers are commencing to show their teeth and it is rumored that any lobbyist with a grievance in his system must keep his "shushes" to himself. Now what do you suppose the good Canon is in Albany for? Can it be censorship or Sunday films? If you are unable to tell a lobbyist when you see one, we will tell you he can be distinguished by his footsteps. He walks as lightly as a cat. It's a gift, boys, it's a gift.

The star of "Grandma's Boy" and "Dr. Jack," and his charming feminine lead, who has been lending love interest to his pictures the past few seasons, decided to play their romance in earnest. And so they were married. Harold's newest picture, "Safety Last," wins the National Board of Review's latest asterisk. Congratulations all around.

ONE has to die to be appreciated in some communities. This rule has been adopted in all countries and climes since the dawn of civilization. And Hamilton, Ohio, is the latest town to pay tribute to the dead. For nearly two years, according to Fred S. Meyer, the managing director of the Palace, Wally Reid failed to get over. Every picture which the late lamented star made for Paramount was played and the reception for each was only ordinary.

Just after his death, the Palace ran a three column ten inch ad in each of Hamilton's two dailies—a column with a half-inch black border. The result was the biggest day in over two years, the house breaking all but two existing records, both as to reecipts and attendance. And this despite the fact that the paper and a few slides on the screen were the only efforts put forth.

This may be appreciation or morbid curiosity—probably a combination of both. The tragic culmination of Reid's career just when he was at the peak is certain tonic for the morbid mind. But after the first few shots the morbidly curious would stay to appreciate what a loss the star is to picturedom—for certainly no one else on the screen typified so well the American youth, the American manner, the American spirit as Wallace Reid.

"30 Days" was far from being his best picture—the "still" we prefer to carry in our memory is when he sat in a jaunty racing car and stepped on the gas in "Excuse My Dust."

M. P. T. O. Michigan Lifts Boycott

Ban Is Raised On United Artists Releases After Conferences of Officials

THE boycott voted two months ago by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan against all United Artists releases will be lifted on February 15. Word to this effect was received this morning in the office of the United Artists, D. W. Griffith, Inc., and the Distinctive Pictures Corporation. Raising of the ban was decided on by the directors of the Michigan state organization, following conferences in New York, which were brought about through the initiative of Arthur S. Friend, president of Distinctive Pictures Corporation.

The Michigan boycott was put into effect as the result of an incident involving the principle of non-theatrical bookings prior to exhibitor bookings. A Masonic order obtained "Robin Hood" prior to any of the Michigan first-run houses and immediately the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, Inc., took action.

This action affected the productions of Distinctive Pictures Corporation—"Disraeli," "The Ruling Passion" and "The Man Who Played God"—and the Griffith pictures distributed by United Artists. Mr. Friend sent a special representative, Homer K. Gordon, to Michigan for conferences with W. S. McClaren, of Jackson, president, and H. M. Richey, of Detroit, general manager of the Michigan organization. Then Mr. Friend invited the two executives to New York for special conferences and, subsequently, Sidney Cohen brought about a meeting between them and Hiram Abrams, president of the United Artists Corporation. They also conferred here with Albert L. Grey, vice-president of the Griffith corporation.

The New York conferences resulted in the obtaining by the Michigan men of written endorsement of the non-theatrical booking principle, for which they were contending.

The meeting of the board of directors of the Michigan owners was held on February 6. At this session Mr. McClaren made it clear to the exhibitors that great credit for the negotiations which ended the boycott was due to Mr. Friend, of Distinctive.

Canadian Officials Meet in Film Discussion

At a convention of Federal and Provincial Government officials, technical men of the moving picture industry and other interested people held in Ottawa February 9, it was brought out that not one life had been lost in a Canadian theatre through the explosion of a nitro-cellulose film.

Statistics offered showed that there were 900 moving picture theatres in Canada having a total investment of $30,000,000. There were thirty film exchanges in the Dominion having an investment of $750,000. A flood of figures regarding the immensity of the industry in the United States was also presented.

Mystery Action Is Filed Against Zukor

Considerable mystery surrounds an action for $25,000 damages brought during the week in the Superior Court by Hiram Abrams against Adolph Zukor. The usual complaint was lacking, only the summons being filed.

Parties involved in the action, as well as their attorneys, refused to comment on the action. Zukor is now en route to Europe.

Jos. Schenck Buys Controlling Interest in United Studios; Deal Involves $2,500,000

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK has bought a controlling interest in the United Studios. The consummation of this new deal follows closely upon his purchase of an equal interest in the West Coast Theatres with Sol Lesser, A. L. Gore, Michael Gore, and Adolph Remish.

The amount of the deal which places practically all of the stock in the hands of Mr. Schenck and M. C. Levee was stated to be $2,500,000, of which Mr. Schenck's personal expenditure is said to have been in excess of $1,500,000.

The deal was consummated through the efforts of Lou Anger, Mr. Schenck's general manager. Mr. Levee will continue as president of United Studios and Mr. Schenck becomes chairman of the board of directors.

The appointment of the following executives to work under them has been announced: Stephen Goosson, supervising art director; Walter Strohm, head electrician; Walter Israel, head of the costume department, and Thomas Little, head of the property department, Jack Okey, technical director and Fred Pelton, studio manager.

Mr. Schenck's need for larger studio facilities in view of his present production activities and more extensive plans under contemplation was responsible for the deal, it is stated. Mr. Schenck's production headquarters will be hereafter located at the United Studios.

The present complement at the United Studios consists of 500 employees, but Mr. Schenck's first statement incorporated the announcement that this number would be increased shortly and that $350,000 will be spent in improvements to include the erection of a new administration building, cottages to serve as dressing rooms and the heating of all stages and paving of all streets within the studios.

At the present time Mr. Schenck's production interests consist of Norma and Constance Talmadge whose pictures are being released through First National and Buster Keaton whose short comedies have been released through First National for the past year and who has just signed a contract with Metro. Mr. Levee, for his part, is producer for the Maurice Tourneur and Allan Holubar pictures, while it is planned to continue to make the United Studios the headquarters for independent companies because of the facilities it offers.

Bill to Regulate Picture Machine Booths

First proposed legislation offered in the new session of the Pennsylvania Legislature, in Harrisburg, which would have a distinct relation to the motion picture industry if enacted into law, has made its appearance.

Senator Frederick W. Culbertson, of Mifflin County, has introduced in the Upper Branch, a proposed amendment to the law regulating the use of motion picture machine booths, which would require license fees of ten dollars for all operators for the first year and fees of two dollars for each annual renewal.

It would also give inspectors of the Industrial Board of the State Department of Labor and Industry authority to order discontinued the use of booths or enclosures found not to comply in all respects with the specifications and rules governing the use of such booths, if corrections of alleged violations of the code are not made within a period of ten days' notice.

The proposed amendment also would give persons believing the provisions of the existing law governing the use of booths, to be unjust or unnecessarily burdensome in specific cases, the right to appeal to the Industrial Board for relief. The bill was referred to the Judiciary General Committee of the Senate.

Another measure, introduced in the House by Assemblyman Edward W. Patton, of Philadelphia, provides an annual license tax of five cents per square foot of surface for all billboard used for advertising purposes. This bill was referred to the Judiciary Special Committee of the House.

Radical Measures Before Kansas Legislature

Two of the most radical measures presented in Kansas in many years were introduced last week at the legislative session in Topeka. One, introduced by C. E. Snyder of Atchison, provides that no minor under the age of eighteen shall be allowed to attend an entertainment without the written consent of parents or being accompanied by parents.

The measure provides that both the parent and manager of the entertainment failing to comply with the law would be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction would be punished by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500 or by confinement in the county jail for thirty days or both fine and imprisonment.

The second measure, also introduced by Snyder provides that any entertainment at which an admission fee is charged or where the entertainers are paid, be prohibited on Sunday. This also would be punishable by fine or imprisonment or both.

Two Directors Elected on F.P.-Lasky Board

Ralph A. Kohn and Harold B. Franklin have been elected to the board of directors of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Mr. Kohn was elected at the meeting January 31 to fill a vacancy and Mr. Franklin was elected Tuesday to fill the unexpired term of Arthur S. Friend, resigned. The terms of both Mr. Franklin and Mr. Kohn expire at the annual meeting of the company in March.

At Tuesday's meeting of the board the regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share on the common stock was declared payable April 2 to stockholders of record March 15.

Pitfalls in Historical Drama Claimed

By Jerome Lachenbruch

THIS is the fifth of a series of articles by Jerome Lachenbruch for Motion Picture News on conditions as he finds them in Europe. It will be found both instructive and entertaining. Mr. Lachenbruch is qualified to write authoritatively on any subject in connection with the industry because of his long identification with pictures. He was formerly connected with the home office publicity staff of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

In the present article the author points out the lessons learned from the production of the German Historical film. It will be to the advantage of producers, distributors and exhibitors to read what he has written.

SINCE 1918, the year in which "Passion" made its sensational appearance in Germany, the world has been fed with historical films almost to the point of repletion. I say "almost," because there is still room for a good costume picture in Germany or anywhere else on the globe. But it must meet certain conditions; and they are to be found in the laws of logic and in the author's story telling ability. Herein lies the comparative commercial failure, and to my mind, the artistic failure, of the German historical film. Many producers and some critics, perhaps, will take exception to this statement, but no picture has artistic value as a photoplay that is good only in spots. That is all that can be said of nearly every European, as well as American, historical photoplay.

Recently news from America has filtered into Berlin that Mary Pickford is about to make a feminine rival to the brisk "Three Musketeers," and that Goldwyn has already begun work on a gigantic version of "Ben-Hur." My purpose in writing about the historical film in Germany is to warn American producers who may be about to embark upon the production of elaborate costume pictures, of the pitfalls that lurk in the path of such undertakings, and to testify both for and against this type of picture.

The fact that producers are seizing upon colorful romantic episodes in history and fantasy in their forthcoming productions is definite proof of their rightness in sensing the desires of the public. After every great upheaval in history such as the past war, when the thoughts and the customs of peoples have undergone a change in four years that in peace times would occupy a time space of fifty years, the entertainment demanded by the people has always been of a romantic nature. The American stage today is turning more and more to productions of fantasy and romance; and so I believe motion picture exhibitors will do well to overcome their prejudice against the historical film merely because the actors wear costumes of other days, and accept it as the film of the next few years.

America has made many historical and so-called historical films, among the first of which was "The Birth of a Nation." Both producers and exhibitors should remember that not history, but the dramatic episodes and their rise to climactic pinnacles were the factors that made this picture the world-wide success it proved to be. Those exhibitors who have fought shy of all pictures that showed a gown of less recent date than the coming season, will have to change their views; for America will produce a few excellent historical films, and the demand for them will forthwith be created. This period in the history of the American film has not yet arrived with both feet, though several attempts have been made within the past few years to introduce the historical film as a standard feature.

The demand for costume pictures in Germany is not so intense as it was last year, but the producing conditions are so chaotic that the money needed for large production is difficult to obtain. Today, producers would still go on making historical pictures were the cost not prohibitive; but they are being forced by necessity to keep turning over their capital. They cannot tie up a huge amount of money in a production that takes six months to complete. Rather are they now seeking to do stories that can be finished with as little expense as possible and in the shortest possible time.

The present unstable condition of Europe, and our interest in the unfolding of the various forces at work on the Continent, has brought the old world close to us in point of spectatorial interest, and we are curious to know something about these strange peoples who live close to one another, speak different languages, and have always been ready to carry on a little war. The national history of European nations may be used for American stories, but I doubt whether such American-made productions could have a large success outside of America. In the first place, scenic and acting details are likely to be inaccurate and, to an European, laughable. Secondly, it is scarcely possible for American actors to recreate Continental psychology on the screen. But though we may fail for these reasons, the Germans failed because they were not true to the ideals they started with.

Let us go back a few years. "Passion," "Deception" were both artistic and financial successes. "The Loves of Pharoah," a gentle flivver. What was the reason? All were made by Ernest Lubitsch, all productions were the result of infinite care and minute attention to detail. The formula, or rather the principles, upon which these pictures were made, was announced by Paul Davidson, the man who gave Lubitsch his first chance at directing and who was later associated with him in the European Film Alliance, the German branch of Famous Players-Lasky. He said:

"Every picture, whether historical or otherwise, must be told with so much dramatic power that the actors become modern people who speak to us directly across the gap of time, of social custom, or of class interests."

This principle was fresh in the minds of the people who had a hand in the production of "Passion"; it began to fade a little in "Deception"; and in "The Loves of Pharaoh" it was but the shadow of itself that one caught here and there. After these three Lubitsch productions, a host of other German producers began turning out films that cost dizzy millions of marks. Of course, these producers looked to America to buy their products. As several agents have told me about their marvelous "sure fire" films, a sample sales talk will give American exhibitors and producers an inkling as to why these foreign pictures are largely waste celluloid so far as the American market is concerned, and why they are poor pictures as pictures.

According to these salesmen, a picture is great because it has "seven stupendous battle scenes, ten thousand soldiers, six famous actors, twenty reels of film, a wonderful clown for comedy relief, beautiful exteriors, several light peasant scenes to liven up the story, and a nice little love story with a beautiful girl as the heroine." The actual film usually has the announced number of battle scenes—taken with decrepit men—and the clown and the rest of the advertising details. But the story is more often entirely lost than occasionally present. Moreover, it stops and starts in several different places. I pointed this out several months ago as a vital defect in German pictures in general. Since then there have been some photoplays that showed better continuity work and more logic in story telling. Nevertheless, the failure of the German historical film as an artistic venture, can be ascribed to nothing else but a passion for grandeur for its own sake, and the inability to see that nobody cares a rap about the glad rags of other days unless they are draped about persons who lived and loved and fought with the same passions that we do today. In other words, these pictures, with all their decorativeness, weren't photoplays. The play was lacking, and they became a series of more or less connected scenes.

The warning to American producers and exhibitors is plain. If the story is powerful, for the love of heaven and earth and the bank account, don't smother it with battles, unnecessary or stupidly injected "comedy relief"; don't let the actors who carry the interest of the story hunt up a new bootlegger while a few thousand feet of film are used up to show an unimportant character strolling about a pretty garden, merely because the garden is a good "shot." A six reel film can't stand all the extraneous matter that the German historical photoplays filled them with. There was so much scenery and scenic effect that there was no room left for the story. After all, the twenty reels taken had to be cut to six; and if the story had to be cut out, why it was simply cut out.

Interest in the settings should be intense, but of secondary importance. Here in Germany it began that way. Certainly, every effort was made to keep an historical story true to the period in which it acted itself out. But after a while that interest, purely a pictorial one, overshadowed the dramatic element to such an extent that no picture shown in the last six months has approached the first big success, "Passion."

Besides the so-called historical film, which is always a romantic version of history, often with no attempt at truthful representation, America will be won over to the fantastic film; that is, a comedy idea told in fantasy. In this type of photoplay, I know of none so beautiful and so powerfully made as "Der Müde Tot," a production that will be released or perhaps has already been released under the title of "Destiny." Motion pictures of this type, which are purely imaginative, and in Germany always of a serious nature, are needed in America today, if only for the

Blue Law Petitions Meet Opposition

Proposed Sunday Regulations Protested in Resolutions by Congressmen

DURING the last week many members of Congress introduced resolutions, petitions and memorials against the pending Sunday regulations, sought by resolutions of the House and Senate, now in the hands of the respective Committee on The District of Columbia and the Judiciary Committees.

Senator Willis of Ohio introduced a communication from "sundry citizens of Cincinnati, O., protesting against the various forms of Sunday closing for the District, now pending, including the Myers bill, which would absolutely close things from delicatessens to theatres and similarly make such opening subject to fines and other penalties." The Zihlman bill to close on the Sabbath, but to allow a limited latitude in certain lines, provided that one day in seven was allowed each employe for recreation, etc., introduced as a labor measure, as well as a local regulatory act. The Zihlman bill, H. R. 4388 was introduced in the first session of the now closing Congress, on April 19th, 1921, and is still pending in the District Committee of the House. Senator McKellar of Tennessee introduced protests from citizens of Memphis, against the Sunday legislation of this type, particularly referring to the sinister attempt at Sunday closing of the movies and other theatres in the National Capital. Mr. Byrnes, a representative from Tennessee, introduced a similar protest from his constituents in the city of Nashville. Even Mr. Zihlman of Cumberland, Maryland, author of the protested 4388, read a petition from his own constituents at Cumberland, in protest against his bill and similar bills shutting down commercial enterprises on Sunday. The Myers bill, however, does not require the suspension of ball games, athletic events or other amateur sports on Sunday, but does prohibit commercial enterprises of that character. In effect, even the American Legion would be prohibited from giving a benefit athletic meet on a Sunday afternoon in summer, if an admission were charged, or prizes awarded. If no charges were made, such proposed legislation would not interfere. The opinion of citizens in neighboring states who like to make week-end trips to the city, apparently is being felt by members who oppose local improvements here.

Late News Notes from the West Coast by Wire

HOMER C. BOUSHEY arrived on the coast on Thursday and assumed a position as director of production at Universal City. He was formerly with Essanay.

M. C. Levee has gone to New York to complete contracts with Associated First National for future Maurice Tourneur productions. Charles Maigne is now writing the continuity for "The Brass Bottle" from a novel by F. Anstey, which will be Tourneur's next.

Walter Hagen, champion golf player, has been signed by Mowat Productions for "The Man Who Cheated," a six-reel feature to be directed by Clarence Bricker. Miss Dupont will play opposite.

With the co-operation of local and federal officials, Ince and C. Gardner Sullivan are preparing the story for the anti-dope film to star Dorothy Davenport Reid.

Snub Pollard, Hal Roach comedian, leaves February 20th for Australia on a six months' vacation.

Literary Lights Invited to Attend Banff Carnival

Invitations have been extended to literary celebrities all over the country to attend the winter carnival at Banff from the week of February 24th to March 5th. The writers have been asked to make the trip as the guests of the Canadian Pacific railroad and to attend the carnival as the guests of the Banff Carnival Committee. Laurence Trimble, director of "Strongheart" productions, has been assigned to an important post in connection with the winter sports carnival. Trimble has posted $5,000 for a hundred-mile dog classic to be conducted on the five-mile course on Lake Winnwanka, March 3rd. Trimble's kennel of seventy huskies has been entered for the dog races.

The literary lights in the list of invited guests include: Hal G. Evarts, famous writer of dog stories; Bozeman Bulger, nation-wide known sports writer; Hugh Fullerton, sporting editor of the New York Evening Mail: Heywood Broun, feature writer and columnist of the New York World; Jack Lait, Talbot Mundy, Jesse Butcher of the New York Times; Damon Runyon, Roy Miller, Albert Payson Terhune, Joseph Jefferson O'Neill, the sporting editor of the New York Morning Telegraph and the editor of Outing Magazine and the editor of Field and Stream.

Consul Urges Beban Include Italy in Tour

The Italian Consul-General has urged George Beban to include Italy in the actor's forthcoming foreign tour, and added that he would call Beban's performance and his past work to the attention of the King of Italy, with a recommendation that the actor be given a decoration. He guaranteed a very cordial reception in Italy and exacted the promise that Beban seriously consider visiting that country.

This happened at the new Fugazi theatre at MacDougall and Third streets, New York, in the heart of the Italian quarter, where George Beban has just concluded a two weeks' engagement in "The Sign of the Rose" in person and on the screen.

M.P.T.O. Drive Brings Money, Members

Defying the severest weather in three years seven groups of exhibitors, all members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, conducted an intensive two-day drive on February 6 and 7 for dues and members.

At a meeting of these committees at the Vendig Hotel, February 8, reports were read which indicated that the contributions and pledges will total about $1,500 and that a number of delinquents were restored to active membership.

Bill in New York Senate to Repeal Censorship Law

A BILL was introduced in the New York State Senate in Albany by Senator James J. Walker, of New York City, calling for the repeal of the motion-picture censorship law.. The bill was introduced on Wednesday, February 14th. A similar bill was proposed in the Assembly some time ago.

A public hearing will be heard at the State capitol on Tuesday, February 27th, on this measure.

California Court Gives Vitagraph Verdict

A decision of importance to both distributor and exhibitor has just been handed down by a California Court. In effect it sustains the inviolability of contracts regardless of whether the pictures mentioned in the contract have been played, and follows closely a recent decision of the Massachusetts Courts in a similar case. The Boston decision established a precedent which has now been made doubly secure by the decision of the California Courts.

As in the Boston case, the suit brought in California was instituted by Vitagraph. The action was brought against the Liberty Theatre Corporation, which owned motion picture theatres in Fresno and San Jose. Vitagraph alleged that the defendant contracted for several Larry Semon comedies for both of its theatres, but later transferred its interest in the Fresno theatre to Kehrlein Bros., who played one comedy but in paying, attempted to deduct the amount of the deposit on the contract and cancel the contract, asserting that the price was too high.

The Liberty Theatre Corporation, which completed its contract so far as the San Jose theatre was concerned, and renewed it under the same terms, was then sued by Vitagraph for $1,200 damages, representing the contract value of the unplayed pictures in Fresno.

Assoc. Exhib's Elect Officers and Vote Dividend

The stockholders of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., held their annual meeting in the offices of the company on Tuesday last and re-elected the following directors: Arthur S. Kane, Roy Crawford, Elmer R. Pearson, John C. Ragland and John P. Fritts. George M. Sharrard was added to the list of directors. The directors re-elected Arthur S. Kane president; Roy Crawford, vice-president and treasurer; John C. Ragland, secretary; Walter N. Seligsberg, assistant secretary, and G. Bardet, assistant treasurer. Mr. Kane, Mr. Crawford, Mr. Pearson, Mr. Fritts and Mr. Sharrard were elected members of the executive committee.

The directors voted to declare a two per cent dividend for the first quarter of 1923 on the company's preferred stock to stockholders of record as of March 25th next, and an accrued and deferred dividend of 2⅔ per cent for the last four months of 1921 to stockholders of record as of December 31st, 1921. The dividend for the first quarter of 1923 is payable April 4th.

These dividend declarations make complete the payment of all dividends from March 1st, 1921, when the present corporation was formed, until the end of the first quarter of 1923.

Public Relations Bureau Great Theatre Aid

Work of Expert in Crandall Organization Establishes Theatres as Community Centers

NO truer index to the value of a Public Relations Bureau to every exhibitor of motion pictures—especially the chain theatre owner—could be found than is afforded by a review of the first eight months of operation of the Public Service and Educational Department of the Harry M. Crandall theatres in Washington, D. C., under the direction of Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher. Mr. Crandall established the department last June without any thought of its having a direct bearing on box office statements, but with the single view of making his ten Washington houses real community centers, aiding effectively in the promotion of valuable civic betterments. The department has been consistently conducted with that end in view.

Mrs. Locher's first official act was attendance at the sixteenth Biennial Convention of General Federated Women's Clubs at Chautauqua, New York, where her presence was announced by Mrs. Louis N. Geldert, president, as "national chairman of motion pictures for the League of American Pen Women, representing the Crandall theatres of Washington, D. C." Her work in this way was given an immediate national recognition.

The first constructive work done in Washington was to attain recognition of the Saturday afternoon performances in all of the Crandall residential houses as especially suitable for juvenile audiences and to organize an Advisory Board composed of representatives of every organization in the District of Columbia having direct contact with the child mind. The organization of the Advisory Board led naturally to the creation of a Junior Committee and a Theatre Committee. The Advisory Board is composed of representatives of the Children of the American Revolution, Camp Fire Girls, Municipal Playgrounds, Girl Reserves, Y. W. C. A., Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts, Boys' Club of Washington, Trinity Community House. From this contact Mrs. Locher organized the Capital Athletic Club, composed of girls who have won distinction in some branch of high school sport—tennis, basketball, swimming, diving, running, jumping, etc. This club meets twice a month in Mrs. Locher's studio or the projection room of Crandall's Metropolitan theatre and analyzes the various sports by means of pictures done in slow-motion photography.

The Junior Committee was formed because it was found that the so-called "child mind" frequently was capable of making valuable suggestions toward the improvement of the juvenile bills. The Theatre Committee was formed to impart to the Advisory Board a higher degree of "showmanship" and a more intimate knowledge of the conduct of the amusement business.

The Municipal Playgrounds being the only agency whose work was not impaired by the hot weather, the Crandall Public Service Department first allied itself with them. Motion pictures were made of the playground activities in all sections of Washington and presented to Mrs. Susie Root Rhodes, supervisor. They were sufficiently valuable in her work to have been shown in all of the principal cities of the country. This led naturally to the co-operation of the Crandall organization with other activities of a useful nature and to the establishment of the Crandall Community Service Hour observed each week in the neighborhood theatres and devoted to topics of interest and concern to each respective neighborhood.

The formal Fall opening of the Public Service Department's year was observed in October by a reception to Mrs. Woodallen Chapman, chairman of the division of motion pictures of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. This occasion was marked by the attendance of one or more of the executives of every woman's organization in the District of Columbia, and had a proportionately far reaching effect in bringing the Crandall organization into the consciousness of a large number of residents of the Capital in an entirely new light—as an aid to civic progress, rather than merely as a commercialized amusement enterprise.

At Christmas time special Crandall Community Celebrations were held in six of the theatres, at which more than two tons of candy and a correspondingly large number of toys were distributed to approximately 12,000 children.

While these activities were being fostered Mrs. Locher was otherwise active. During the Fall and early Winter she has made addresses before the following organizations: Zonta Club. Pocahontas Memorial Association, Sixteenth Street Highlands Women's Club, Anthony League. Unitarian Parish House. Civic Section of the Women's Club, Adams School Parent-Teachers' Association, D. C. Board of the Children of the American Revolution, American and Patriotic Committee of the D. A. R., Force School Parent-Teachers' Association, Trinity Church, Park View Mothers' Club, Phyllis Wheatly Y. W. C. A. (Colored), D. C. Federated Women's Clubs. Dolly Madison Chapter, D. A. R.

During the same period there have been entertained in the Department's studio in the Metropolitan Theatre Building Mrs. Woodallen Chapman, Pocahontas Memorial Association, Camp Fire Girls, Children of the American Revolution, Mrs. Nanette B. Paul. Special programs have been arranged for them.

Community Service Hours have been dedicated to the Juvenile Protective Association, Municipal Playgrounds, Woman's Bureau of the Police Department, Mothers' Congress, Visiting Nurses' Association, Infant Welfare Association, Social Hygiene.

Mrs. Locher has speaking engagements immediately ahead at the Takoma Park Woman's Club, Patworth Women's Club, Forest Glen Seminary and the College Women's Club.

The response of that portion of the public heretofore not interested particularly in motion pictures has been widespread and sincere. The work of the Public Service and Educational Department has carried the name of the Crandall theatres where it was not before known, or, if known, of secondary significance. It has made new friends for the pictures and converted former enemies into friends. But more important is the fact that it has made the Crandall theatres real community centers as well as the Capital's foremost amusement places.

Exhibitors of Illinois Being Questioned on Music Tax

AN official movement is under way with a view to determining whether or not the American Society of Authors, Composers, and Publishers have been acting in restraint of interstate commerce. Motion picture theatre owners of the state of Illinois are being canvassed by questionnaires appertaining to the music tax. These questionnaires, which are being circulated among the exhibitors at the request of Department of Justice agent in Illinois, are so drafted as to elicit all possible items of information that may serve as a basis for legal action in the matter. Some of the most pertinent questions embodied in the report follow:

"Have you been threatened because you refused to pay the Tax? Have you been sued? . . . If so, in what court? What was the disposition of your case? What effect, if any, has this had on your business? Do you know of anybody forced out of business through the activities of the American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers? Do you know of any motion picture house which has been closed because they did not pay the tax to use licensed copyrighted music? . . . If so, give the details. Do you know of any orchestra leader, member, or musician who has been kept from employment because the manager or owner would not use licensed copyrighted music? . . . If so, explain."

Railroad "Movies" Meet with Approval

When the crack Alton Limited steamed out of Chicago, bound for St. Louis, Monday morning, a motion picture theatre on wheels was a part of its equipment, and in the near future the Alton Limited train leaving St. Louis and Chicago daily, will carry a car equipped to give motion picture entertainment to passengers on these flyers and help them pass away the hours spent en route.

While other railroads have provided motion picture entertainment for passengers from time to time, the Alton is the first road to install traveling motion picture theatres as part of its regular service.

The pictures to be shown will be supplied by Universal Film exchanges, a contract with the Alton having been signed up, according to Assistant General Sales Manager Stern of Chicago, and the shows will include a feature picture, a news reel and a comedy.

A party of Alton railroad officials, including S. G. Lutz, vice-president and chief traffic officer; George J. Charlton, passenger traffic manager; C. R. Davidson, assistant general passenger agent; R. A. Pearce, general agent passenger department, Chicago; E. H. Sharkey, division passenger agent, Springfield; and M. W. Danzy, general agent, Peoria, made the trip to St. Louis Monday to observe how the traveling public aboard the limited welcomed the innovation of pictures "while you travel," and were greatly pleased over the expressions of pleasure heard and commendations of the innovation.

Messrs. Stern, Lesserman, Louis Laemmle and Walter Hill, of the Chicago Universal exchange; Ray Murray, of Exhibitors' Herald; and L. H. Mason, of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, also made the trip as guests of the Alton.

Uniform Contract Meets Opposition

Exhibitor Groups Forward Protests Against Adoption by National Body

THE uniform contract, in process of preparation for many months past, and ratified last week at a meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York City and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New York State, has already met with considerable protest from exhibitor organizations, with every prospect that a veritable tempest will follow.

The Sydney S. Cohen office during the week has received protests from three different bodies. They are the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin, the Western New York Motion Picture Theatre Owners and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut.

From the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin came the following telegram to the Cohen office:

"The Board of Directors of the Wisconsin Theatre Owners in session today unqualifiedly protest against the adoption of the so-called uniform contract. Paragraph twelve would give to producers headed by Will H. Hays absolute control of the screens of the country, which control could be sold for fabulous sums for political or other propaganda. This alone is sufficient to condemn the whole contract."

Howard J. Smith, president of the Western New York Motion Picture Theatre Owners, sent out the following as a result of the meeting of that organization:

"At a meeting of the Western New York Motion Picture Theatre Owners held at the Palace theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., on February 13th, a full discussion was had of the contract submitted by Mr. Will Hays in behalf of the companies he represents.

"Strong resolutions were adopted directing the officers of this organization to notify all exchanges operated by these companies to the effect that the members of the Western New York Motion Picture Theatre Owners considered the contract unfair and inequitable, and had agreed not to sign any such contracts, and authorizing the institution of legal proceedings, if necessary, to restrain film companies from operating under the provisions of this contract to the detriment of theatre owners."

The following resolution was adopted as a result of the meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut in New Haven, February 13th:

"Whereas, a skeleton of a uniform contract has been presented by Mr. Will H. Hays, representing those producers and distributors by whom he is employed; and,

"Whereas, our Executive Committee Member, Mr. Joseph Walsh, of Hartford, Conn., and Vice-President of our State organization, has made a full and complete report of the clauses contained in this skeleton of a contract as presented by Mr. Hays;

"We, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut, in convention assembled this 13th day of February, 1923, at New Haven, Conn., after full and deliberate consideration and discussion of the tentative contract as submitted, vote to and decide to advise our national officers to reject the said proposed contract as unfair, inequitable and lacking in mutuality.

"We further urge our national organization to notify Mr. Hays accordingly and also all members of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America."

Personnel of Universal's Sales Cabinet Named

THE personnel of Universal's newly inaugurated Sales Cabinet will comprise the following:

Art Schmidt, general sales manager, and Joe Friedman, ass't general sales manager in charge of five-reel features to be headquartered in New York; and the following newly appointed assistant general sales managers: Cleve Adams, H. M. Herbel, Herman Stern. Edward Armstrong, Jules Levy, Ned E. Depinet and Clair Hague.

Cleve Adams wil control the territory embracing Kansas City, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Oklahoma City and Omaha. H. M. Herbel's territory will embrace Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, Buffalo and Cincinnati. Stern will have under his jurisdiction the exchanges in Chicago, St. Louis, Indianapolis and Milwaukee. Edward Armstrong will have charge of San Francisco, Salt Lake City, Butte, Seattle, Denver, Los Angeles, Portland and Spokane.

Jules Levy will be responsible for the exchanges in Philadelphia, Charlotte, Washington, D. C. and New Haven, Conn. Ned Depinet will cover the South, including the Universal exchanges in Dallas, El Paso, Memphis, Atlanta, Jacksonville and New Orleans.

Friedman has been promoted to his position as the right hand man of Art Schmidt from the managership of Universal's Detroit exchange. Herbel is being elevated from the managership of the Pittsburgh exchange. Friedman's former place in the Detroit exchange has been taken by A. J. Mertz, who was assistant exchange manager. Herbel's place now is filled by E. L. Rife, of the Pittsburgh exchange force.

The functions of the Sales Cabinet were announced in the January 27th issue of the NEWS on Page 433, under the caption "Universal Plans Sales Cabinet."

South Carolina Fears New Tax Bills

South Carolina theatre owners are interested largely in two bills now before their State Legislature. It is stated that a bill to levy a special tax on all public entertainments has been reported favorably by the committee and that like action has been taken relative to a projected bill levying a special state license tax against theatres as well as some other specialized lines of business. The license tax is already in effect in most states, it is understood, but so far South Carolina has paid no such taxes for theatres.

North Carolina Banning Carnival Shows

Carnivals are finding their path beset with many difficulties in North Carolina. Many counties are having enacted special legislation forbidding these traveling show organizations from camping within their limits, the laws being localized to apply only to such counties as petition for it. The exhibitors in such counties are escaping one of their worst enemies.

Pitfalls in Historical Drama Claimed

reason that they open a field for director and continuity writer that has hardly been touched. Booth Tarkington explored it in an extremely naive way in his fanciful child stories. On the whole, though, those that we have produced have the same weakness as have the German historical films. They don't keep moving consistently all the way. It is as though they wanted to get away from the slapstick, but got lost on the way, and so had to go back to it to keep the story from coming to a full stop before the needed number of feet had been made.

Nevertheless, I am optimistic that the next few years will bring a demand for films that have grace, romance, fantasy. For purposes of study and stimulation, there are many foreign films that will inspire American producers and directors to new attempts in photoplay making. I am not losing sight of the fact that America doesn't want philosophic stuff in its entertainment, for I believe that with us the method that Continental Europe employs in a tragic vein will be used for the production of fantastic comedies and imaginative farces. What we need is a new angle of attack; we need to revive our tiring imaginations, and then to make a few experiments. The new type of comedy may not come forth this month or the next; but we have already had glimpses of it in some of the Rupert Hughes stories and in one or two others. That it will come, is certain; its arrival is but a question of time.

Passion Play Classed With Sunday Pictures

Union Hill, N. J., is in the throes of excitement over the opening of picture houses in the town last Sunday and the simultaneous production of the Passion Play by Rev. J. N. Grieff, pastor of the Holy Trinity Church.

Seven motion picture theatre managers were found guilty and fined $1 each. At the same time a summons was issued for Father Grieff, to whose production an admission fee was charged. Recorder Louis C. Hauenstein, who issued the summons, asserted that if found guilty, Father Grieff should be subjected to the same penalty as the theatre managers.

The Recorder said that a second offense would also meet with a fine, and a third offense would be given to the grand jury on the charge of running a disorderly house. Father Grieff said the Passion Play would be repeated next Sunday and the following Sunday, regardless of the fines and the disorderly house charge.

Anti-Blue Laws League to Combat Lord's Alliance

A clash is promised shortly in New York City between the Anti-Blue Law League of America and the Lord's Day Alliance over the attempt of the latter to make effective the "blue Sunday."

National officers of the Blue Law League have sent out word that they are coming to New York to wage combat. This is the result of the arrest last Sunday night of William A. Brady for producing "La Flamme" at the Playhouse.

Harry Frank, State Superintendent of the Anti-Blue Law League, said he had communicated with national headquarters of the league at Cleveland and expects the leaders in New York City soon.

Concerted Move Against Inflammable Film

Substitution of Acetate-Cellulose for Nitrocellulose Would Inflict Excessive Tax on Industry

THAT a world-wide agitation is under way to prohibit the use of inflammable motion picture film, technically known as nitrocellulose, is evidenced by the activity of the fire marshals' associations and other similar bodies in the United States, Canada and Europe, according to a statement issued by Frederick H. Elliott, formerly executive secretary of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

"I doubt if the motion picture industry fully realizes the seriousness of the situation," said Mr. Elliott, "as the substitution of nitrate or slow burning film will place a terrific tax upon the industry." This will be not alone in the increased cost of film, but the slow burning film cannot be compared with the film now used as to length of service and durability. Owing to its brittle quality, the slow burning film will easily crack or break, thus rendering scenes absolutely worthless and frequently ruining an entire feature production.

"This proposal should be given the most serious consideration by leaders of the industry. It certainly merits the attention of those who have so many millions invested, as well as of the theatre owners and managers, who may not be aware of the fact that with the substitution of slow burning film for nitrocellulose, the price of pictures must inevitably increase to meet the additional cost of prints and their necessary frequent replacements."

Mr. Elliott calls attention to the activity of the Fire Marshals' Association of North America which is urging upon Congress the passage of a bill which would prohibit the handling of inflammable motion picture film in interstate commerce after January 1, 1925.

Also the International Association of Fire Engineers, composed of Fire Chiefs, has adopted a resolution calling for similar action by Congress, and has instructed its members to bring this subject to the attention of the authorities in their home states.

In Canada, the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs has recommended the exclusive use of slow-burning film. Newman T. Miller, fire marshal of Indiana and president of the Fire Marshals' Association of North America, has announced that the Federal bill introduced by Representative Sanders of Indiana which would prohibit "the importation and mailing, shipment, sending, carrying, or transportation of inflammable films in interstate commerce after January 1, 1925," is being urged for passage by the fire marshals of the various states who are presenting convincing arguments to their Senators and Congressmen upon the subject.

Considerable quantities of nitro-cellulose film are reported as having been found in the department and toy stores during the holidays, placed on sale to amateur operators and others inexperienced in the handling of inflammable film. It is partly because of the practical impossibility of keeping the inflammable film out of the hands of non-professional users, that the fire marshals and fire chiefs are moving to abolish its use altogether.

Attention is also being directed to other branches of the film business in addition to the theatres, according to advices from San Francisco, where an ordinance has been adopted governing film exchanges in that city. This ordinance prohibits the housing of film exchanges in buildings exceeding two stories in height, or where more than fifty people, not connected with the exchange itself, are employed. The French Minister of Foreign Affairs is distributing copies of the ordinance of April 10, 1922, prohibiting the display of the nitrocellulose motion picture film in Paris after January 1, 1925.

While it is true that with the improvements which have been made in the projection machines and the attachments for them to better safeguard film, which have been perfected at tremendous expense, nevertheless, the professional film finds it way into homes, schools, churches and other places where there is always danger from exposed film in the hands of amateurs or inexperienced operators.

When consideration is given to the fact that approximately 750 to 800 million feet of nitrocellulose film is manufactured annually and there are thousands of millions of feet of positive prints in daily circulation in this country alone, the problem is a most complex one and deserves careful and serious thought. It is conceded that wonderful strides have been made in the art of projection during recent years and the many new theatres as well as thousands which have been remodeled, have proven their ability to handle film quite satisfactorily, which is attested by the fire records. Nevertheless, it is highly essential that every preventive should be taken in the handling of film and to protect it at all times. There are many appliances which have been approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, especially designed to protect film and the theatre exchanges and studios should investigate this modern equipment, not alone for the protection of their patrons and employes, but by adopting such approved appliances and devices they will automatically eliminate the ever-present fire peril and avoid film fires and last but not least, avert panics in motion picture theatre audiences and other public places of amusement where motion pictures are shown.

Startling recommendations for Federal legislation covering the manufacture, distribution and use of moving picture film in Canada were brought in by George F. Lewis, of Toronto, Deputy Fire Marshal of Ontario, at Ottawa, the Canadian capital, on February 9, on the occasion of the annual convention of the Dominion Fire Prevention Association. The legislative proposals were presented during the course of an address on the subject of "Motion Picture Fire Hazard," during which he treated the subject from every angle. He pointed out that the danger was there, but that the public did not seem to be aware of the fact. The projection machines did not constitute the menace—it was the film itself. The use of nitro-cellulose film had been legalized and whatever hazard now existed was one that had been created largely outside the legitimate confines of the motion picture industry.

The outline of the new Canadian law brought out by the Ontario Fire Marshal is briefly that licenses are to be issued to all importers, manufacturers and distributors of nitro-cellulose films, the projection of which is to be prohibited in any but licensed buildings fitted with an approved fireproof booth with vent to the outside air and in charge of a licensed operator. All projectors and other equipment are to be licensed. Standard vaults are to be provided for the storage of nitrocellulose films and there are also provisions for certain metal shipping cases to be marked as dangerous. Nitro-cellulose films are to be of a standard width of 1.375 inches with perforations spaced 5.4 to the inch. Acetate-cellulose films can be made in any width and with any perforations and are to be stamped with the words "Safety Film." Those handling, making or using acetate-cellulose films are not to be licensed. The intention of the new law is to make it impossible for nitrocellulose films to be used in projectors for use in homes, schools and buildings other than licensed theatres or licensed halls by eventually prescribing distinct width and perforations for safety films as compared with "inflammable" film. Incidentally, these recommendations are to be carefully considered by a special committee of three before being placed before the Canadian Parliament for final enactment.

New Officers Elected for Preducers' Association

ACCORDING to word received from the coast this week, the Motion Picture Producers' Association on February 8th elected new officers as follows:

Joseph W. Engle, president; Louis B. Mayer, Abraham Lehr, Thomas H. Ince, Hal E. Roach, Charles E. Christie, vice-presidents; Frank A. Garbutt, treasurer; Walter J. Reynolds, secretary.

Garbutt and Reynolds have held these offices since the inception of the organization in 1915.

George H. Eastman Joins Hays Organization

An announcement issued on Tuesday of this week from the offices of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America advised of the admission of the George H. Eastman interests to membership in the Will Hays organization. The announcement simply lends an official stamp to a condition that has existed for some time past. The George H. Eastman Company has always been in harmony with the purposes and functions of the Hays association and has on several occasions aligned itself with movements espoused by the M. P. P. D. of A.

M. P. D. A. Chooses New West Coast Officers

NEW officers have been elected by the Motion Picture Directors' Association on the west coast, as follows:

Fred Niblo, director; Rowland V. Lee, assistant director; Jack Ford, technical director; Norval MacGregor, treasurer; Francis J. Powers, secretary; Howard M. Mitchell, inner guard; Duke Warren, outer guard; William Worthington and King Vidor, directors.

M.P.T.O.A. Issues Convention Call

Annual Gathering Scheduled for Chicago Coliseum from May 19 to 26 Inclusive

AN official call has been issued from the National Office of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America for the annual convention of the organization which will be held at the Coliseum, Chicago, on May 19th to 26th, 1923, inclusive. The business sessions will open on Monday, May 21st.

Special arrangements have been made to make this convention the most constructive gathering of Motion Picture Theatre Owners in the history of the industry. Theatre owners from all over the United States will be present and many matters of the most vital concern to the industry will be considered.

The present year has in many relations been a history maker in the business and this involves evolutionary moves which tend to produce beneficial changes.

The convention headquarters will be at the Sherman Hotel, Chicago. All sessions of the convention will be held at the Coliseum. A number of distinguished men and women in and out of official life will address the theatre owners during the sessions.

In conjunction with the convention, a mammoth exposition will be conducted in the main section of the Coliseum from May 19th to 26th inclusive, which will be known as the Motion Picture Palace of Progress.

This is designed to bring together the advanced phases of every element within this vast industry and illustrate through this composite picture the great progress made in a few years which made the business one of the leaders in the Nation.

The co-operation of all important divisions of the industry is assured for this exposition which is also destined to supersede in point of size, interest and importance, any public event thus far associated with the industry.

In the convention each state shall be entitled to votes equal in number to the congressional representation from said states. The delegates may be selected at large from each state without regard to special congressional divisions.

The selection of delegates and alternates from each state shall be made at least one month previous to the holding of the National Convention.

Special arrangements are being perfected for hotel accommodations for the theatre owners attending the convention, and a circular letter, dealing with this subject will be mailed to every independent theatre owner in the United States very soon, as it is now in process of compilation.

Des Moines Censorship Appears Defeated

The censorship bill in Des Moines has been referred to the police regulation committee after having been introduced in the House session. As Representative Hansen, who heads this committee, is the one who last year fought the bill so strenously it looks very much as though the bill would go no farther.

It was rumored that another bill was being prepared for introduction in the Senate. But as yet no such bill has appeared. The ten per cent tax bill also died early.

Arthur Loew Under Knife For Appendicitis

Arthur Loew, son of Marcus Loew, was suddenly stricken with appendicitis Wednesday. He was immediately taken to Sinai Hospital, where an operation followed. He is said to have been resting easily since.

Missourians Hear Censorship Protests

THE Criminal Jurisprudence Committee of the Missouri House of Representatives at Jefferson City, on February 8, received first hand information of the hardships that state censorship of motion pictures would work on the industry and the community at large without in any way benefiting the morals of either the pictures or their patrons.

Led by Dr. Burris Jenkins, pastor of the Linwood Boulevard Christian Church, Kansas City, former editor of the Kansas City Post, and Mrs. Henry H. Ess, prominent Kansas City woman leader, the opponents of the Committee of Fifty's censorship bill now before the Criminal Jurisprudence Committee whipped into shreds every argument in favor of motion picture censorship advanced by proponents of the measure at their hearing before the committee last week.

"The difficulty about censorship is to find someone competent to censor pictures," Rev. Dr. Jenkins told the committee. "If we could get a Censorship Board composed of Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and Charlie Chaplin; or if we could get producers like D. W. Griffith and Rex Ingram, then I would be for censorship. But they are not in Missouri."

Mrs. Ess, former president of the Athenaeum Club of Kansas City speaking from her experiences with the Kansas City board of censors and the operations of the censorship laws in the State of Kansas, clearly demonstrated to the committee that censorship merely means political control of an industry without benefiting anyone. She and other women speakers told of the operation in Kansas City of a voluntary arrangement between the exhibitors and representatives of civic and church organizations. They said that the city board of censors were merely political appointees.

Anita Stewart Is Signed by Cosmopolitan

Anita Stewart has signed a contract to be featured by Cosmopolitan Productions and has left for Los Angeles to begin work.

The first picture in which Miss Stewart will appear is "The Love Piker," by Frank R. Adams, which originally appeared as a story in Cosmopolitan Magazine. The screen adaptation was made by Frances Marion and will be directed by E. Mason Hopper.

Miss Stewart has been appearing in Louis B. Mayer productions for several years.

Universal's "Driven" Opens at N. Y. Criterion

"DRIVEN," the Universal-Jewel production made by Charles J. Brabin, received its world premiere in the Criterion theatre, New York City, Sunday, Feb. 11. This subject is the first Universal feature to be shown in that house. It will run two weeks.

The Committee on Exceptional Photoplays of the National Board of Review, selected "Driven" for a special showing on Monday evening of this week in the Town Hall, New York City. The showing was well attended and the picture was favorably received by the audience, which included representatives of the literary, stage and screen fields as well as officials and members of the National Board of Review. The Criterion showing is a prerelease showing, as "Driven" is not due to be released until March 5th. The presentation includes a specialty selected musicial program and an atmospheric prologue of colorful setting.

The run will be preceded by a special exploitation campaign. It is likely that one or more members of the cast will make personal appearances at the Criterion opening and during the two weeks' run. The cast includes Charles E. Mack, Burr McIntosh, Elinor Fair, Emily Fitzroy and George Bancroft.

C. J. Howard in Field for Hodkinson Short-Subjects

C. J. Howard has become associated with the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, acting as special field representative of short subjects. He is now touring the Middle West, working out of the Cincinnati branch of the Hodkinson Corporation.

Mr. Howard was formerly associated with Paramount, Educational, Mutual and other film companies.

Leading British Exhibitor Here

Castleton Knight of London Making Study of American Methods

CASTLETON KNIGHT, director of presentation for the Marble Arch Pavilion, Shaftesbury Avenue Pavilion, Shepherds Bush Pavilion and Lavender Hill Pavilion, all of London, England, and formerly general manager of the Majestic Cinema, Clapham, arrived in New York this week on the "Carmania" for a several weeks' stay, during which he will make a study of presentation methods in the leading theatres in New York, Chicago and probably Los Angeles.

Knight is known throughout England as one of the most enterprising of showmen, and accounts of many of his campaigns have appeared in the Exhibitors' Service Bureau of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

At the time of Chaplin's visit to England, Knight flew to Cherbourg by airplane and was the first exhibitor to greet him. Chaplin promised to make a personal appearance at his Majestic Cinema, but when the comedian was returning to London from Paris by airplane, with but two days remaining, Knight decided on a ruse. He chartered a high powered car, disguised himself, and met the plane when Chaplin landed, stating that he had been sent from the Ritz, where Chaplin was stopping.

Chaplin entered the machine and Knight drove him to the Majestic Cinema, then revealed his identity. He took it good naturedly and made a personal appearance and speech, the only one made in England. Meanwhile, Lloyd George was waiting for Chaplin.

Knight obtained extensive newspaper publicity in the most conservative papers on this, as he did again on the 27th birthday of the Prince of Wales, when he flew over Buckingham Palace and dropped messages of congratulation.

In addition to his work at the Majestic, Knight played an important part in the exploitation campaigns used in England by Associated First National, Ltd., on "Smilin' Through" and "East Is West," as well as the elaborate campaign for the London showing of "Foolish Wives," accounts of all of which have appeared in the NEWS.

While in New York, Mr. Knight is making his headquarters with Bruce Johnson, manager of the Foreign Department of Associated First National, Inc. Since landing he has been busy taking in the bills of the Broadway houses.

Charles Jones Finishes New Western

Charles Jones, of the William Fox forces, has completed a new western, "Hell's Hole," directed by Emmett J. Flynn. Prominent in his support are Ruth Clifford and Maurice B. Flynn.

Ruth Clifford has never been on the stage. She will also be seen opposite John Gilbert in his new picture, "Truxton King." As the feminine lead in the William Fox special, "The Face on the Barroom Floor," she scored a personal success.

Goldwyn to Release "Mad Love" on March 4th

Goldwyn's Pola Negri picture, "Mad Love," will be released on March 4. The first print of the picture, edited and titled by Katherine Hilliker and H. H. Caldwell, has just been received and shown at Goldwyn headquarters, and was accorded an enthusiastic reception.

"Mad Love" will receive its premiere at the Capitol theatre, New York, about the time of its national release date.

F. B. C. States Production Plans

Six Specials Scheduled During Year; P. A. Powers Returns to Coast Studios

FILM Booking Offices of America announces six specials for release during the coming year, according to P. A. Powers, managing director, who left for California last week after a brief visit to the F.B.O. home office. These will be in addition to a number of starring vehicles and all-star productions.

Mr. Powers will remain at the Coast studios of his organization and will be in personal touch with all production activities. Emil Offeman, production manager, and Edgar Forrest, will work in cooperation with Mr. Powers in building up the production schedule of the former Robertson-Cole corporation, which became on July 1st of the past year, the Film Booking Offices of America. The enlarged scenario department will work under the direction of Wyndham Gittens, and the studio publicity department will be headed by Hyatt Daab, under the direction of Nat G. Rothstein, advertising and publicity director of F.B.O.

Mr. Powers announces the first special of the coming season to be "Daytime Wives," a society drama. "Daytime Wives" is an adaptation of a story of Lenore Coffee and John F. Goodrich. Under the direction of Emil Chautard this picture will be attempted on an elaborate scale, it is stated. The cast will be headed by Derelys Perdue, new F.B.O. featured player, and Wyndham Standing, in the leading male role. The other principals will be Grace Darmond, Al Roscoe, Edward Hearn, Catherine Lewis, Kenneth Gibson and Jack Carlisle. "Daytime Wives" will contrast the capable, economical secretary of a business man, with his frivolous wife. The screen adaptation is by Wyndham Gittens and Helmer Bergman. Lucien Andriot is behind the camera.

"Divorce," a Chester Bennett production starring Jane Novak, has already been put into production. In "Divorce" Miss Novak will continue to move against a lavish background in contrast to the Northwest dramas in which she first became famous. John Bowers has been selected as the star's leading man. Chester Bennett, who is producing this feature, will also direct.

"Blow Your Own Horn," a screen adaptation of a play by Owen Davis, one of the best known American playwrights, will be put into production shortly. It is a story of a returned soldier and is said to contain the pleasing ingredients of drama, comedy and action, with perfect small town atmosphere.

A second Broadway stage success, "Lights Out," the joint work of Paul Dickey, author of "The Misleading Lady," "The Broken Wing" and many others, and Mann Page, is scheduled for early production at the F.B.O. studios. Other stories recently purchased by F.B.O., which will be transferred to the screen for release during the coming season include "Jerry Comes Home," a three-act play by Roy Briant, a story of small town newspaper life.

Among the thrilling outdoor stories promised by F.B.O. is "Temple of the Giants," a novel by Robert Wills Richie, which appeared in "The Country Gentleman." The locale is the redwood forests of California and the story is announced as one of dramatic strength and rapid physical action.

"Judith of Bohemia" is a story of the Bohemian quarter of London, originally published in Munsey's Magazine. The authors are Corelie Stanton and Heath Hosken. The cast has not as yet been announced.

"Born of the Cyclone" is a play by Charles B. Stillson and Charles Berham, adapted by G. Marion Burton. The story is one of gypsy life, with the action laid in the Northwest.

Katherine MacDonald in the First National attraction, "Refuge."

Scenes from "A Clouded Name," Playgoers pictures.

Burr Nickle Coming East with New Productions

Burr Nickle, head of the Burr Nickle Productions, is en route for New York with the master prints of five pictures. Included are the finished prints of the first three feature releases of this company—"Sunken Rocks," from the story by E. Temple Thurston; "Tansy," from the novel by Tickner Edwards, and "Bargains," from the stage play by Edward Irwin.

In addition to these features, Mr. Nickle took prints of the first of his new two-reel series, "People and Things," the first entitled "With the Sea Elephant Expedition" and the second "Rambling Through Old Japan."

"Once Aboard the Lugger," the fourth in the series of twelve that have been made for the coming year, is now in the cutting room and will be ready for screening about March 1st. This is a screen adaptation of the humorous story by A. S. M. Hutchinson.

Frank Mayo Is Signed by Goldwyn for Long Term

The popular film star, Frank Mayo, has just been placed under a long-term contract by Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and will be featured in some of that company's most ambitious productions. He is now playing in the new Rupert Hughes picture, "Souls for Sale."

By this contract Goldwyn adds another motion picture actor of wide experience to its roster of players. Mr. Mayo has been starred in many pictures and has played leads opposite many of the prominent feminine stars.

C. C. Burr Purchases New Story Material

C. C. Burr, president of Mastodon Films, Inc., has already bought two stories which he will produce for his next program of features for the independent market. These are "The Average Woman," a story by Dorothy de Jaegers from the Saturday Evening Post; and "Rich Men's Sons," by Gerald Duffy.

These are the first of a large program of features scheduled to follow the completion of the Big Six program announced for the independent market by C. C. Burr last season.

Carewe and Players in Utah to Film Belasco Success

Edwin Carewe has left Los Angeles with two carloads of players and picture paraphernalia for Zion National Park, Utah, where he will photograph the scenes for the First National picture, "The Girl of the Golden West," the great David Belasco stage success. Carewe's cars will be sidetracked at Cedar City, Utah, and his organization will "pack" into the furthermost interior of Zion Park.

The members of the cast who are with Mr. Carewe are: J. Warren Kerrigan, who plays the role of Ramorrez; Russell Simpson, who will enact the sheriff; Sylvia Breamer, the girl; Wilfred Lucas, the express agent; Hector Sarno, Castro; Nelson McDowell, Sonora Slim; Joseph Hazelton, the judge; Cecil Holland, Antonio; Minnie Prevost, the squaw. Barbara La Marr may also join the company.

Wallace Fox is acting as Carewe's assistant. Sol Polito is the cameraman. Others on Carewe's staff are Robert de Lacey, film editor; Oscar Clements, master of properties, and Mildred Early, executive secretary.

John Sainpolis, Fred Esmelton in "Three Wise Fools"

King Vidor started production on the screen version of Austin Strong's stage success, "Three Wise Fools," on Thursday, February 8, at Culver City.

John Sainpolis, who has been seen in a number of Goldwyn pictures, and Fred Esmelton have been added to the cast of "Three Wise Fools." The leading role will be played by Claude Gillingwater. Alec Francis is to play Dr. Gaunt, and Brinsley Shaw, Benny the Duck.

Scenes from the Fox production, "Three Jumps Ahead," starring Tom Mix, assisted by the master horse "Tony."

Shipman Releases via Hodkinson

Distribution Arrangements Closed for Adaptation of Ralph Connors' Stories

ANOTHER important producer who has joined the ranks of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has been announced by the Hodkinson Corporation in their report relative to the distribution throughout the United States and Canada of three Ernest Shipman productions. These attractions comprise two picturizations of Ralph Connors' most popular novels, "The Man from Glengarry" and "Glengarry School Days," which has been renamed "The Good for Nothin'" and "The Rapids" directed by D. M. Hartford. These pictures have been produced in Canada upon the exact locations as called for in the novels from which they were taken.

Mr. Shipman believes in allowing nature to work for him, which has been evidenced in the three mentioned productions. In this respect it is said that genuine scenes in the logging camps of the Ottawa River were used. Nature's stupendous waterfalls and rapids were also utilized in giving reality to these photodramas.

In a statement issued to the press Mr. Shipman said: "It is my purpose to produce independent productions that are less trouble to the censor boards and those that are so produced as to have their strongest appeal to the American family. It is also my purpose to present photodramatic entertainment free from the spectacular, but affording something new and unusual in the way of film treatment. I believe that the average motion picture going public will find more interest in the entertaining possibilities of the unusually treated film drama than they will in the expensively dressed shallow stories that are so prevalent in this present day."

Speaking of his association with the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation as distributors for his product, Mr. Shipman further added: "Through the intimate knowledge I have of the new line of big product that the Hodkinson Corporation is about to release, I predict that great success will be gained by them throughout the motion picture world. After a thorough investigation of prominent distributing organizations and after making a report to my Canadian associates, I have been authorized to sign with the Hodkinson Corporation as an evidence of our belief in their spirit of reciprocity and their ability to give conscientious efforts toward the productions they are handling."

Referring to the Hodkinson special production of "Down to the Sea in Ships," which Mr. Shipman classed as one of the outstanding productions of the year, he stated that it showed the making of productions upon the exact locations was of exceptional value to the finished production, and that he was more determined than ever to make all of his future productions upon the exact locale.

Remarking about Mr. Hodkinson's belief in the percentage plan for motion picture distribution Mr. Shipman added that he was in accord with Mr. Hodkinson's idea, stating that no one could dispute that there should be a fair distribution of a production's earning powers.

"The three productions soon to be released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation," Mr. Shipman added, "have all had the audience test and many compliments have been received from the press and public."

"The Rapids" is a story by Allan Sullivan and directed by David M. Hartford. Mary Astor and Harry T. Morey are the featured players.

First Nat'l Has Four for March

Ince and Tourneur Productions and MacDonald and Coogan Vehicles Due

FOUR productions of feature length are on First National's March release schedule: "Scars of Jealousy," "Refuge," "The Isle of Lost Ships" and "Daddy."

"Scars of Jealousy" is a Thomas H. Ince production originally produced under the title of "The Brotherhood of Hate." The story, written by Anthony Rudd, deals with city and mountain life in the south and the jealousies that are engendered among brothers when one of them is adopted by a wealthy plantation owner. Frank Keenan, Edward Burns, Lloyd Hughes and Marguerite de la Motte play the leading roles. The picture was directed by Lambert Hillyer.

The action of "Refuge," starring Katherine MacDonald, transpires in the imaginary kingdom of Morvinia, with Miss MacDonald cast in the part of a countess. The action has been embellished with beautiful sets and gorgeous gowns, while the painstaking direction of Victor Shertzinger has provided several novelties in presentation. The cast, in addition to Miss MacDonald, includes: Hugh Thompson, Edmund Carewe, Fred Malatesta, Eric Mayne, Matilde Brundage, Grace Morse, Victor Potel, J. Gordon Russell and J. Gunnis Davis.

Capt. Marriott's South Sea island adventure story, renamed "The Ise of Lost Ships," will be Maurice Tourneur's contribution to First National's March releases. The story deals with the discovery of a lost colony on an uncharted island by castaways and the fight for the treasure in the lost Spanish galleons.

In the last week of March First National will release Jackie Coogan in "Daddy," the next to last feature that the little star will make for this organization. Few details have been made available regarding the production up to the present time, although a print of the picture is expected in the East almost any day.

Keith Books "The Hero" for Special Showing

"The Hero," Gilbert Emery's play which Preferred Pictures has filmed for distribution through the Al Lichtman Corporation, has been booked by B. F. Keith for special presentation at the George M. Cohan theatre on Sunday, February 11.

B. F. Keith recently took over the theatre for Sundays for the exhibition of special attractions for one day only. "The Hero" is the second picture to be chosen for showing there. It will later be shown in New York on the Keith, Moss and Proctor circuits.

The cast includes Barbara La Marr, Gaston Glass, Doris Pawn and Frankie Lee.

Ralph Ince's "Success" Is Bought by Metro

"Success," a Ralph Ince production, based on a play of the same name with Brandon Tynan in the role he created on the stage, has been purchased by Metro Pictures Corporation and is scheduled for release March 26.

The stage version was produced in New York, Boston, Cleveland and Pittsburgh. The authors are Adeline Leitzbach and Theodore A. Leibler, Jr.

The photoplay was produced by Murray W. Garrson.

Private Showing for "Backbone" at N. Y. Strand

A private showing of "Backbone," the first of the Distinctive Pictures Corporation's features for 1923, will be held at the Strand theatre, New York, on Tuesday, February 20, at 10 o'clock.

This picture will mark the screen debut of Alfred Lunt as a star. Edith Roberts appears opposite Mr. Lunt. The story is by Clarence Budington Kelland and ran serially in the Saturday Evening Post. It is directed by Edward Sloman.

The showing will be under the personal direction of Joseph L. Plunkett.

Cast Is Named for Hampton "Spoilers" Production

JESSE D. HAMPTON announced on the coast this week the cast for the new version of "The Spoilers," by Rex Beach, which he will start shortly.

The cast will include: Milton Sills as Glennister; Noah Beery as McNamara; Barbara Bedford as Helen Chester; Anna Q. Nilsson as Cherry Malotte; Robert Edeson as Dexter; Mitchell Lewis as Voorhees; William V. Mong as Struve; Ford Sterling as Slapjack Simms, and Wallace McDonald as the Broncho Kid Alec Francis, Kate Price and Louise Fazenda are also to be in the cast. Lambert Hillyer will direct.

It will be noted that Sills will play the role originally portrayed by William Farnum, Noah Beery that taken by Tom Santschi, Anna Q. Nilsson that taken by Kathlyn Williams, and that to Wallace McDonald falls the part played by Wheeler Oakman in the Selig production.

New Director General of Universal City Named

JULIUS BERNHEIM has been appointed Director General of Universal City to take the place of Irving Thalberg, who recently resigned to go with Louis B. Mayer. Homer A. Boushey has been named Production Manager.

Bernheim has had extensive experience in the distributing end of the business as well as in the production departments. For the past two years he has been in the business office of Universal City, serving as business manager for the past year.

Homer A. Boushey is a veteran in the production end of the business, having been the production manager of the old Essanay company. Later Boushey became associated with George K. Spoor of Chicago in the handling of projection appliances.

Pyramid to Film "Wife in Name Only"

George Terwilliger, who recently completed a screen version of Eugene Walters' play, "The Flapper," for Pyramid Pictures, Inc., which the latter renamed "What Fools Men Are," has been re-engaged by Pyramid to direct the filming of "Wife in Name Only."

The screen version of "Wife in Name Only" will be based on Adeline Leitzbach's dramatization of Bertha M. Clay's novel of the same title. Director Terwilliger's script, prepared for him by Peter Milne, is from an adaptation of the play by Mr. Milne and Georgette Duchesne.

Charles Murray as he appears in "The Four Orphans," the Burr-Hodkinson two reel comedy, with Mary Anderson and Raymond McKee co-featured.

"The Lion's Mouse" contains these scenes. The picture was produced by the Hollandia Film Corp., and directed by Oscar Apfel, for Producers Security Corporation.

World Conference for the Screen

Adolph Zukor Goes Abroad to Interest Writers and Artists in the Project

FOR the purpose of formulating a set of principles for the artistic development of motion pictures, leading novelists, artists, dramatists, editors, educators and others prominent in public affairs in this country and Europe, will be invited by Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, to attend a conference to be held in New York in the near future, when the artistic needs and possibilities of the screen will be explored. Announcement of his plans for the conference was made late last week by Mr. Zukor, who sailed on Saturday on the Olympic for the purpose of interesting European writers and artists in the project.

These artistic standards, said Mr. Zukor, will guide picture producers in discharging their obligation toward the cultural development of the millions of people all over the world who rely on the screen for their principal recreation. A supervisory board of well known men and women will be appointed by the conference, and this board will award a series of prizes, amounting to several thousand dollars, which Mr. Zukor will offer at the conference "to those elements contributing most to the motion picture's artistic development during the year."

"While the artistic progress of the motion picture has been great," said Mr. Zukor, "the greatest development so far in the pictures' short career has necessarily been in the technical side of picture craftsmanship and in the stabilization of the industrial side.

"Today we have pretty nearly attained perfection in photography, lighting, scenery and in other phases of picture production which go into the making of merely beautiful and effective photography. The last two years also has seen the business put on a firm and stable financial basis.

"The big field of picture progress, therefore, lies in developing the screen along the soundest artistic principles. Millions of people all over the world not only get all of their amusement from motion pictures, but they also depend largely on pictures for their cultural development.

"The responsibility of picture producers toward the fostering of the sound taste and artistic standards in those people is an enormous one. I know the producers have tried to meet this responsibility, but the growth of the industry has been so swift that attention has had to be concentrated on the physical development of the picture business.

"So that in discharging this responsibility we may have the best advice and guidance available, I am going to invite the leading novelists, dramatists, artists, sculptors, editors and educators to explore the artistic and cultural possibilities of the motion picture in a conference to be held in New York in the very near future. It is my hope that these men and women, representing the best in American thought and American taste, will evolve some set principles which can be accepted by the motion picture industry as its artistic guide. Our aim is to have a conference that will be to the motion picture what the French Academy is to French letters, what the Royal Academy is to British art and what the Pulitzer Foundation is to American Journalism."

Laemmle Will Award Scholarship

Student Winning Scenario Contest to Get $1,000 and His College $1,000 More

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal Pictures Corporation, announces a plan destined to promote interest among the educational authorities of the country in the art and technique of the screen. Mr. Laemmle will establish a scholarship and endowment fund to be applied in accordance with the provisions of a scenario competition in which the students of every college and university in the country are eligible to participate. The amount involved in the plan will approximate $3,000, it is announced. The award will be known as the "Laemmle Scholarship."

The scenario competition and the subsequent awards will be conducted as follows: College and university students throughout the country will be invited through the officers in charge of these institutions to prepare and submit scenarios to be produced for the screen. The author of the scenario selected as the best of all those sent in will be awarded $1,000 plus an indeterminate amount not less than $500 for the screen rights to the scenario. An endowment of $1,000 will be conferred upon the college or the university in which the winner is enrolled.

In a letter addressed this week by Mr. Laemmle to the president of every college and university of the United States, the purpose and provisions of the scenario competition, and the method of making the awards were explained in detail. The more important of these provisions follow:

"1—Scholarship of one thousand dollars will be awarded the student submitting the best scenario from which a motion picture can be produced. This sum will be paid on or before October 1, 1923, to the treasurer or bursar of the college at which the prize winner is enrolled and shall be paid by the bursar to the student in equal yearly installments throughout the balance of his or her college course.

"2—In case the winner is a senior at the time of the submission of the scenario and shall have graduated prior to the announcement of the award, the entire $1,000 will be paid direct to the winner.

"3—In addition to the Scholarship the scenario will be paid for at a rate to be determined by this company, said amount to be not less than $500.

"4—The sum of one thousand dollars will also be paid to the college or university at which the winner is a student. This will be in addition to all monies paid to the winner, as outlined in paragraphs one, two and three, and may be used by the Board of Trustees of the college or university for any purpose whatsoever in the interest of the college.

"5—In the event that there are stories other than the prize winning story that we can use, we will purchase them at rates to be determined by this company, said rate to be not less than $500 for each story.

"6—All students now enrolled in colleges and universities which have approved of the Laemmle Scholarship contest are eligible.

"12—All scenarios from your college or university should be forwarded not later than May 15, 1923, in one package by registered mail."

Mr. Laemmle in his letter to the heads of educational institutions of the country explains that the basic object of the competition is to promote the campaign for "better pictures, launched some months ago by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, headed by Will Hays. Mr. Laemmle declares that if this initial attempt to secure aid from the student body proves successful, "there will be many Laemmle Scholarships in future years."

The deal, which was closed this week, disposes of the Lichtman releases in Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland. They will be handlel by the Overseas Film Trading Company.

The contracts were signed through their New York representative and general manager, Ernst Mattson. The Preferred Pictures coming under the agreement are "Rich-Men's Wives," "Shadows," "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," "The Hero," "Poor Men's Wives," "Are You a Failure?" "The Girl Who Came Back" and "April Showers."

N. Y. Crippled Children See Doug's "Robin Hood"

The New York Capitol brought joy to the hearts of a number of youngsters of the New York Crippled Children's School by inviting them to see Douglas Fairbanks in "Robin Hood."

"The children enjoyed every minute of the picture to the very fullest," wrote the teachers of the school after viewing this United Artists release, "and have asked us to thank the theatre management for their day of pleasure. They never have had a happier party, nor been treated with greater courtesy and kindness."

Geo. Archainbaud to Direct Clara Kimball Young

Harry Garson has engaged George Archainbaud to direct Clara Kimball Young in her newest Metro release, "Cordelia, the Magnificent," Frank Beresford's screen version of Le Roy Scott's novel of the same name, which appeared as a serial in Hearst's International Magazine.

Production has been started upon "Cordelia, the Magnificent" at the Garson studios in Los Angeles with a cast that includes, besides Miss Young, Elinor Hancock, Jacques Gadesden, Carol Holloway, little Mary Jane Irving, Lloyd Whitlock, Huntley Gordon, Lewis Dayton and Katherine Murphy.

Williams Talk Pleases A. M. P. A.

"J. D." Tells Members of Responsibility on Shoulders of Advertising Men

J. D. WILLIAMS was the speaker at the A. M. P. A. lunch last week, and at the conclusion of his address Victor Shapiro, who presided, stated that Mr. Williams was the first prominent executive in the history of the organization to talk to the members and take them into his confidence, and that he felt the address was the most practical and constructive they had ever heard. Many questions were asked Mr. Williams from the floor, and there was an interesting discussion of distribution, sales and advertising policy.

Mr. Williams was introduced by C. L. Yearsley, who spoke of their early association, going back to a picture theatre in Spokane fourteen years ago. Mr. Williams opened his address by stating that advertising is 90% of the picture business. As a matter of fact, advertising is the picture business. He spoke of the large responsibility resting upon the shoulders of the advertising men of the trade, and stated that it was their ability that influenced the gross of a picture. He warned them against the advertising of inferior pictures. He believed that when a picture upon its release evidenced its inferiority, advertising should be governed accordingly and the picture allowed to go its way. It had been his own policy, he stated, and he believed that this should be done generally in the trade, to let the advertising men have a good deal to say with the acceptance by the distributor of a picture. He also believed that the advertising man should be given full responsibility as to the advertising campaign to be employed.

In the open discussion that followed Mr. Williams' address he stated his belief in centralized distribution. He also pointed out the fallacy of making distribution cost a percentage of the gross returns. He stated that the change in distribution policy was coming and would have to come if the industry is to be put on a more stable basis for the producer and the exhibitor. Asked if he considered the advertising manager to be a more important factor than the sales manager, he stated he did not, but that both should work intimately together. As to the advertising outlay on any picture, he said this was impossible to determine, that it would depend in amount altogether on the character of the picture.

At the conclusion of his speech Mr. Williams was asked to address the body later on.

Fox Announces Releases for Feb. 12

FOX FILM CORPORATION announces the release during the week beginning February 12 of two feature productions, a Sunshine Comedy and four educational short subjects.

Goldwyn Purchases Rights to "Eternal City"

Sir Hall Caine's "The Eternal City" will be George Fitzmaurice's first production under his contract with Goldwyn. This was the announcement made by Samuel Goldwyn immediately after he had completed arrangements for the film rights to the story.

The picture, it is said, will be made in Rome and England. Ouida Bergere will leave for England shortly to consult with Caine regarding the scenario. Fitzmaurice will be in New York about April 1 to select the cast and arrange other matters incidental to the production. It is expected the picture will be ready by Fall.

Leah Baird Feature Is Set for March 18 Release

When the first of three 1923 productions featuring Leah Baird is released by Associated Exhibitors, March 18th, it will bear the name, "Is Divorce A Failure?" This picture, adapted from a well known play by Dorian Neve, bore the working title, "When Civilization Failed."

The plot concerns a woman who obtains a divorce decree in Reno but regrets her action when the former husband and the man who has fascinated her are shown to her in vivid contrast.

"Down to Sea in Ships" to Open on B'way Feb. 18th

Elmer Clifton's production, "Down to the Sea in Ships," will open for an indefinite run at the Cameo theatre, New York, N. Y., beginning Sunday, February 18. It was produced by Elmer Clifton for the Whaling Film Corporation and will be distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

This will be the premier showing of this romance of old whaling days in New York.

Mills to Make Romance for Goldwyn

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has just closed a deal with Frank B. Mills whereby he will produce for Goldwyn distribution a romantic photoplay called, "What Shall It Profit?" It is an original story by George D. Baker.

Lichtman to Leave on European Tour

AL LICHTMAN, president of the Al Lichtman Corporation and vice-president of Preferred Pictures, will sail February 20th on the Berengaria for an extended tour through Europe. The purpose of the trip will be to arrange for the complete distribution of the Lichtman product on the continent. Lichtman's itinerary will include all the European capitals where he will establish Al Lichtman Exchanges to handle Preferred Pictures abroad.

He will go first to London where he has timed his arrival there with the premier of "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" in that city. In the United Kingdom the distribution of Preferred Pictures has already been arranged. Walterdaw handles Lichtman's output there. "Rich Men's Wives" and "Shadows" have already been released in their terriiory.

Lichtman's European trip is the last step in the building up of his complete distributing organization. He expects to establish a chain of offices throughout the continent which will take care of the universal releasing system of his product.

Playgoers' Release Is Set for February 25th

Tom Moore's celebrated poem, "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms," is the basis of the story told in "The Supreme Passion," a romantic drama which Playgoers Pictures has set for release February 25th. The authors of this six-part feature are the playwrights, Robert McLaughlin and Charles T. Dazey.

Among the featured players in "The Supreme Passion" is Alice Dixon, who before entering motion pictures was widely known as the Coca Cola Girl. The leading male role is played by Robert Adams.

Cullen Landis Is Cast for Lead in "The Fog"

Cullen Landis is the first member of the cast signed for "The Fog," William Dudley Pelley's story, which Graf Productions will produce for Metro release. Mr. Landis will enact the leading male role in this story which H. H. Van Loan adapted for the screen.

Technicalities Halt Crandall Suits

Plea Made by Defense Counsel Contends Action Must Be Filed in Delaware

TECHNICALITIES are adding innumerable complications to the numerous suits on file against Harry M. Crandall and his associates in Washington, D. C., which grew out of the Knickerbocker theatre disaster of a year ago. According to the latest twist affairs have taken the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia has under consideration the legality of bringing the suits in the District of Columbia.

Should the court accept argument advanced by counsel for Crandall and his associates, suits brought by Norman E. Martingale would be quashed and the claimants would have to transfer their cases to the courts of Delaware.

The contention of the attorneys for the defendants is that there is no Knickerbocker Theatre Company in Washington, as that corporation was dissolved last July in Delaware, and also that the corporate charter of the company was secured in that state. All claims, it is contended, must be filed in Delaware with the receivers appointed there. Service on Harry M. Crandall as president of the company in the suit of Norman E. Martingale, administrator of the estate of his wife, Gertrude L. Martingale, is illegal, it is contended.

Further complications come about in the declaration of some of the defendants that they are not now, nor were they connected with the organization at the time the Martingale suits were filed. A joint plea in abatement was filed to this effect by Mr. Crandall, Albert E. Beitzel and Harry Bulkeley who were sued as trustees of the Knickerbocker company.

The Delaware court, it is contended, appointed receivers for the company long prior to the suits and by order of that court all claims against the corporation must be presented to these court receivers. Attorneys Wilton J. Lambert and R. H. Yeatmans filed a special appearance for the three defendants for the purpose of plea to abate the suit.

Reginald Geare, the building's architect, through counsel also petitioned the District court to dismiss the suits against him, citing technical legal grounds tending to dissolve any cause for action against him, and absolving him from responsibility for structural defects of the building planned by him.

Up to the present time the court has not handed down any decision on any of the petitions offered by counsel for Mr. Crandall and the trustees for Mr. Geare.

John Barrymore Signed For "Beau Brummel"

JOHN BARRYMORE, who this week sailed for Europe after completing a highly successful run in the Arthur Hopkins production of "Hamlet," has been signed by Warner Brothers to play the title role in the Clyde Fitch play, "Beau Brummel" according to announcement by Harry M. Warner.

It is also understood that Barrymore will play the title role in "Deburau," acquired recently from David Belasco. Originally, it was planned that Lionel Atwill, who created the role on the stage, was to play this, but it is said that camera tests indicated that Mr. Atwill would not screen satisfactorily.

Barrymore has frequently stated that he would do no more screen work, and the announcement of his acquisition by Warner Brothers came as something of a surprise.

Seattle Parent Teachers to Pass on Pictures

To insure the exhibition in Seattle of only the best current photoplays, the motion picture and visual education committee of the Seattle chapter of the national Parent-Teachers' Association has adopted a three-plank platform for the remainder of 1923, according to an announcement made recently.

Pictures contracted for by Seattle motion picture houses will be passed upon by the reviewing board. Films which the committee believe should be censored or suppressed will be omitted from the list of pictures recommended each week by the board.

The board's recommendations of the best pictures will be made each week in Seattle newspapers, and the list will also be broadcasted four times each week by a Northwestern radio broadcasting station.

Wilmington Decries Defeat of Daylight Saving

Business interests of Wilmington, Del., are up in arms over the recent passage of the anti-daylight saving measure, which forbids all time systems excepting Eastern Standard Time. Great confusion has occurred in Delaware over the summer time adoption of daylight time.

The City Council of Wilmington, manufacturers, sportsmen, clubs and clergymen have sent hundreds of letters to the legislators protesting against minority rule of the city and suburban majorities. Councilman A. R. Abraham, father of the old daylight measure, declared Saturday that he knew if the House passed the Senate bill against daylight time, although signed by the Governor, Wilmington would ignore the law and observe daylight time, any way.

Sunday Pictures Bill Up in Rhode Island

An act to legalize the Sunday showing of motion pictures throughout the state of Rhode Island has been offered in the Senate of that state by Senator Greene of Newport. The act is in amendment of Section 2, Chapter 124 of the general laws. Senator Greene has stated that he stands unqualifiedly in favor of its passage. It was referred to the Senate committee on judiciary.

New Managing Director for Eastman

William Fait, Jr., who returned a few months ago from Mexico City, where he was managing director of the Olympia theatre, has been appointed managing director of the Eastman theatre, Rochester, N. Y.

Mr. Fait has been in the motion picture business since the early days of the industry.

National Committee Drafts "Better Films" Creed

The National Committee for Better Films, affiliated with the National Board of Review, is to have its "credo." The creed, which was formulated by a group of educators, clergymen, and welfare workers associated with the committee, reads as follows:

"I Believe that the best way to improve motion pictures is to select, patronize and advertise the best.

"I Believe in special performances for boys and girls and special family nights.

"I Believe in educating parents to study their children and to regulate their attendance at motion pictures with intelligent care.

"I Believe in the maintenance of the highest standards in the conduct of the motion pictures with intelligent care.

"I Believe in telling the exhibitor when I like his program and why, as well as when I don't like his program and why.

"I Believe in the motion picture theatre as a community institution and in community cooperation with the exhibitor.

"I Believe in the vast educative, cultural and recreational values of the screen, and in my own ability to add a little to the forces working for its constant elevation."

Censorship Bill Before the Idaho Legislature

Motion pictures in Idaho will be drastically censored if a bill introduced by Representatives Bruce and McBirney of Ada County and Brainard of Soshone County passes the state legislature, which is now in session. The bill extends to supervision over advertising as well as demanding the licensing of all films shown within the state, by a commission of three members, one of which must be a woman.

The bill, which was introduced into the house on February 10, provides for a bureau of standardization and for the appointment of members of a commission by the governor, commissioner of education and state superintendent. The lengthy bill covers every phase of movie censorship.

Hiers Alters "Seventy-five Cents" to "Six Bits"

For the sake of brevity and adaptability in advertising display, the title of Walter Hiers' second starring picture for Paramount has been changed from "Seventy-five Cents an Hour" to "Six Bits an Hour." Hiers has just started work in this picture at the Lasky studio. The original story is by Frank Condon and the scenario is by Grant Carpenter. Jacqueline Logan is again playing opposite

George Eastman Cuts Price on Film Raw Stock

Announcement was made during the week of a cut in the price of film raw stock manufactured by George H. Eastman. The new schedule of the Rochester company reduces the price from 2.25 cents to 2 cents per foot.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 725 S. WABASH AVE.

Around the Trade

THE Post Office Department, through the Chicago postmaster, has requested MOTION PICTURE NEWS to advise exhibitors of the fact that parcels of film, when remailed, must bear legible addresses, and that if the old labels are not removed, the new label or address should be placed so as to completely obscure or obliterate the original address. With this co-operation on the part of the exhibitors, the mis-sending of film parcels should be reduced to a minimum.

Emil Mayer, former chief accountant for Jones, Linick & Schaefer, leaves shortly for California, where he will make his future home. Jones, Linick & Schaefer executives and their theatre managers gave Mr. Mayer a farewell dinner at the Sherman Hotel and wished him good luck, last week.

J. S. McHenry, who has a host of friends in Chicago motion picture circles, where he, for many years, was known as one of the most popular men connected with the trade press, has been appointed branch manager for Fox Film Corporation in Germany, and expects to leave for Berlin about the first of May.

L. H. Frank, well known exhibitor and hard worker in the I. M. P. T. O., has been elected secretary of the state organization to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. B. Dibelka, as secretary.

A gala program was arranged for Lubliner & Trinz's Senate theatre this week under the direction of Manager Sam Trinz, to celebrate the anniversary of this magnificent theatre's opening. A colorful Lincoln's birthday spectacle, depicting the memorable Gettysburg address, and Art Kahn and his orchestra in a specially arranged novelty number, were the outstanding features of the program.

Word from L. M. Rubens, who is vacationing at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles, where he went a few weeks ago to join his family, is to the effect that the popular president of the I. M. P. T. O. will return to his home about the 1st of March. "The days are balmy and the weather delightful," says Mr. Rubens, "but give me Chicago."

"Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," went into its fifth week at the Roosevelt theatre Monday, with a fine attendance record behind it. Its run will be extended to at least six weeks.

"Mighty Lak' A Rose" made a new attendance record for opening days at the Chicago theatre when it started its week's run on February 12th. The picture satisfied the audiences one hundred per cent, and despite bad weather, the second day's business was also very heavy. Particular interest is felt in this picture as it is the first to be made by the Associated First National Pictures and sets a high standard for future productions to measure up to.

The second birthday of the Tivoli theatre was celebrated at the south side cinema palace this week with a gala program of stage specialties and musical features. Balaban & Katz's statistics show that the Tivoli's second year has been fifteen per cent more successful in attendance than its first year. Interest in this beautiful house, instead of waning, seems to grow constantly and people from all parts of Chicago and tourists from out of town are present at every performance.

Numerous complaints have been received by the United States Department of Justice at Washington, and an investigation has been authorized by the Attorney General of the United States to ascertain whether or not the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers have been violating the federal laws; namely the restraint of interstate commerce through the activities of this association. Co-operating with the department, the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners have sent out a questionnaire to all motion picture exhibitors in Illinois, and the returns are expected to give the federal authorities information on which they may be able to act. It is hoped that the exhibitors will fill out and return questionnaires to the headquarters of the I. M. P. T. O., 752 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, immediately, as it will be to their direct advantage to have the facts before the government.

Ben Serkowich is a recent addition to Balaban & Katz's publicity department. Mr. Serkowich made a big reputation for himself as publicity man for Dee Robinson's Madison theatre at Peoria, where he secured columns of free publicity space for this house, and also put over many notable exploitation stunts.

Rodolph Valentino and Winifred Hudnut will put on a dancing act at the Trianon, Andrew Karzas' palatial dancing hall, next week. Mr. Valentino passed through the city this week, en route to St. Louis, where he will fulfill a similar engagement, returning to Chicago Sunday for a week at the Trianon. While in the city he shunned publicity and refused to give any interviews as to future plans.

Among the Exchanges

CRESS SMITH, of United Artists, was scheduled to arrive at Sydney, Australia, aboard the good ship Ventura, on February 13th. He is accompanied by his family and is expected to remain in the South Sea continent for several months before returning to the United States.

Del Goodman, who recently resigned as United Artists' salesman, is now connected with Fox Film Corporation, and it is reported, will be given charge of the Australian branch of this company at an early date.

Maurice Hellman is pleased over the way exhibitors are booking his new five reel feature, "Any Night," starring Robert Edeson and Tully Marshall. Among the circuits already signed up are Lubliner & Trinz and Ascher Brothers.

"Only A Shop Girl" will be released by Greiver Productions in northern Illinois and Indiana territory, Si Greiver having purchased the rights to this widely advertised picture from C. B. C. Films Corporation. Mr. Greiver, it will be remembered, also purchased the rights to the first of the "box office winners" put out by C. B. C. when the series was first announced. It was "More To Be Pitied."

Sam S. Shurman, recently promoted to resident manager of Goldwyn's new Milwaukee branch, was given a surprise party February 10th. On that day he received a phone message from the Chicago office, requesting his immediate presence there and Sam responded with alacrity and hastened to Chicago as fast as the train could carry him. When he arrived at the Chicago office he was ushered into the offices of District Manager George A. Hickey, where he found the entire sales force assembled. Whereupon Resident Manager B. B. Reingold arose and presented the astonished Shurman with a handsome smoking set and humidor. Mr. Shurman was sales manager at the Chicago exchange until recently and is extremely popular along the film row. Following the presentation Mr. Shurman was stricken with the flu and is slowly convalescing at the Hotel Atlantic, this city.

District Manager Hurn, of Hodkinson, was in the city this week, and while here discussed plans for the release of "Down to the Sea in Ships," which is said to be one of the greatest pictures ever produced. A print of this fine feature arrived in Chicago Tuesday and was viewed for the first time by Manager Simmons and staff, who were greatly enthused over it.

Neva Gerber, who was brought to Chicago by Frank Zambreno to make a number of personal appearances in connection with showing of pictures in which she stars, went over big at the Shakespeare on Monday and Tuesday of this week, where she made her first appearance before Chicago audiences, "Impulse," which is released by Progress Pictures in this territory, being the picture shown. Miss Gerber will also appear at the Gold, Peoples, Atlantic, Easterly, Emmett, Julian and other theatres before she leaves the city next week.

District Supervisor George A. Hickey has had new honors conferred upon him and hereafter film row should watch its step, especially when passing the Goldwyn exchange at Eighth and Wabash, as Mr. Hickey is now a deputy sheriff of Cook County.

BOOTH TARKINGTON'S
"The Flirt"
She was a liar—
She was a hypocrite—
She was a tyrant—
She was a cheat—
Yet no one lifted a hand against her—
Why?
THE FLIRT is such a story as Booth Tarkington has always loved to depict—full of dramatic situations, irresistible humor, and just enough pathos now and then to arouse the softer emotions. No one knows American life as Tarkington knows it; no one can depict it more graphically.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Racing Hearts—

This story is somewhat shopworn, but the picture is well directed and played. Has lots of action. Pulled good crowd. (South West.)

The World's Applause—

Bebe Daniel's many admirers here, were loud in their praises of her work in this film masterpiece. It is a very well balanced production and should please almost 100% anywhere. (South West.)

It came through with a bang and is well up in the ranks of the best. Excellent business. (East.)

Dark Secrets—

Like most of Dorothy Dalton's pictures, it was exciting—and good. Very good business. (East.)

When Knighthood Was in Flower—

Great picture—played to capacity business at increased prices all week. A fine piece of direction. (Middle West.)

Patrons surprised in the improvement of Marion Davies. Some hesitated to come on account of not liking her as a rule, but all were pleased with the picture when they had seen it and praised the star. A beautiful production. (West.)

Anna Ascends

The fact that the local band was an attraction, not the picture, was the reason for excellent business. Alice Brady not a very good box-office attraction here. (East.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Oliver Twist—

Capacity every performance. Could not expect more. (West.)

As good as the nice advance notices it received. Pulled good attendance during run. (Middle West.)

The Voice from the Minaret—

One of the biggest business getters of the year to date. Packed them in each evening and attracted much feminine business at matinees. (East.)

Played to good crowds for a week's run. Norma Talmadge is a big favorite here. (Middle West.)

The business was the kind that warms the heart of the theatre manager. They came often, early, late and many. Considered a sure-fire box office bet in this territory. (Middle West.)

Not an exceptional picture, but the kind that draws the crowds. Held for a second week. (Middle West.)

Good business, satisfied patrons. "'Nuff said." (West.)

This one shows Norma Talmadge at her best and has fine entertainment value. Played to big business for week. (Middle West.)

Fury—

Fine picture. Barthelmess popular here; played to good business. (Middle West.)

Somewhat depressing, but a big picture. Our patrons liked it, business good. (Middle West.)

One of Barthelmess' best; splendid cast. (West.)

Alias Julius Caesar—

Possessing lots of fun and having a star that is popular in this neck of the woods, this picture marked up satisfactory business for a six-day run. (East.)

Minnie—

A lively attendance all week. (Middle West.)

Holding on steadily during run. (West.)

Brawn of the North—

An average attendance for the week with this one. (Middle West.)

What a Wife Learned—

Did good business, better than was expected. Men came in as well as the women. (Middle West.)

Bell Boy 13—

Following "The Hottentot" this feature playing on a short bill, did good business. It was the only comedy on the bill this week. Maintained a healthy average. (Middle West.)

Money, Money, Money—

Um—pretty slow. This picture did not advertise itself. Stayed on for the week, but the manager himself didn't boost it. (Middle West.)

Gas, Oil and Water—

Proved disappointing. Was taken off a day ahead of schedule. (Middle West.)

METRO

Crinoline and Romance—

A very appealing little tale that took great. Improbable but good. Excellent business all week. (East.)

FOX

The Face on the Barroom Floor—

An old fashioned melodrama that appeals to certain element. Many new patrons appeared to view it. Did fairly well. (Middle West.)

HODKINSON

The Grey Dawn—

A fair picture and did fairly good business with it. (Middle West.)

No Trespassing—

Irene Castle has a host of admirers in this town. They come to see her and not so much the picture. Business fair. (East.)

GOLDWYN

Mad Love—

On account of Pola Negri's sudden popularity of a year or so ago, people wanted to see her in this. It did not meet with wide approval. (West.)

Hungry Hearts—

Hard to have made it better liked. It packs a real punch and is full of laughs and tears all mixed up. Very good business. (East.)

UNIVERSAL

The Power of a Lie—

A fairly entertaining picture which recorded only average results at the box office. Stiff competition main cause. (East.)

The Ghost Patrol—

Up to the standard of its stars and my patrons liked it very much. Good receipts. (Middle West.)

All Night—

Business for the week with this one was good, despite cold weather. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood—

No stopping this one. They come twice and three times. Especially good in territories where the star is popular. (West.)

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

Here and There

Allen Holubar will this week complete editing "Slander the Woman," adapted from the novel "The White Frontier."

Sam Rork and James Young have selected Marguerite de la Motte for the title role in "Wandering Daughters," and following is part of the supporting cast engaged: William V. Mong, Pat O'Malley, Mabel Van Buren, Allan Forrest.

Maryon Aye will plan opposite Bert Lytell in Principal Pictures' "The Meanest Man in the World."

Hugh Dierker is producing "The Other Side," from an original by John Blackwood. In the cast are Fritzi Brunette, Pat O'Malley, David Butler, Herbert Standing, Helen Lynch and others. (American Releasing.)

At the Phil Goldstone studio, "His Last Race," an all-star production including Pauline Starke, Noah Beery, Gladys Brockwell, Robert McKim, Tully Marshall, Alec B. Francis, William Scott, Rex (Snowy) Baker, has been completed.

Al Metz is directing "Up in the Air," a comedy drama starring Rex (Snowy) Baker.

Richard Talmadge is now being featured in "Mind Over Matter," an original story by Jack Natteford.

William K. Howard, who directed "Deserted at the Altar," has been engaged by Phil Goldstone to direct the second special feature.

Victor Schertzinger has been assigned to head a new unit at the Schulberg Studio, which will bear the name of the director, who expects to make a series of all star productions. The first is tentatively decided upon as "The Mansion of Aching Hearts."

Ethel Shannon has been placed under long time contract with Schulberg.

George Irving, director of "Lost in a Big City," the Blazed Trail feature, starring John Lowell, released through Arrow, will direct Lowell's next picture, "Power."

Ralph Faulkner, ex-favorite of the New York stage, is now in Hollywood. He has been signed for a leading role in "April Showers," the Tom Forman production for Preferred Pictures, Inc.

Announcement was made this week by Eastern Manager, Irving Lesser, on receipt of information from Los Angeles from Michael Rosenberg and Irving Lesser, of Principal Pictures Corporation, that Producer Irving Cummings had signed Hope Loring to adapt "East Side, West Side," the Broadway stage play, for the screen. Mr. Cummings also has signed Kenneth Harlan and Eileen Percy for the production.

"Beware of the Dog" will be the next All-Star comedy produced by Mastodon Films, Inc. Kathlene Martyn, Raymond McKee and Charlie Murray will be the featured players. It will be directed by Gregory La Cava.

Michael Rosenberg, production of Principal Pictures corporation, this week wired Eastern Manager Irving Lesser that production on "Temporary Marriage," the first release of Sacramento Pictures Corporation, for Principal distribution has been completed. The picture which has been more than a month in production is now being edited and titled.

Maurice Tourneur has finished "shooting" the scenes for his new First National release, "The Isle of Lost Ships," adapted from Captain Marriott's celebrated novel of stirring sea life.

Frank Lloyd has taken the entire cast of "Within the Law" to San Francisco to "shoot" the final scenes of that picture in which Miss Norma Talmadge is the star.

Rosemary Theby has been added to the cast of "The Girl of the Golden West," which Edwin Carewe is directing on the coast for First National release. Those already picked for this screen version of David Belasco's big stage success are J. Warren Kerrigan, Sylvia Breamer and Russell Simpson.

At Universal City

Bert Roach has been cast to play an important role in "Up the Ladder," starring Virginia Valli, under the direction of Hobart Henley.

Caesar Gravina has been added to the cast of "The Hunchback."

Fleur de Lys in Victor Hugo's "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" was the reigning beauty of fifteenth century France. Naturally the film colony was searched from cellar to garret to find the person best adapted to represent this imperious potentate. Choice fell upon Winifred Bryson.

Around Metro Studios

Winifred Dunn has been appointed scenario editor.

Rex Ingram arrives Thursday.

Chuck Reisner and Florence Gilbert will be principal supports of Bull Montana in "The Eskimo Spy Hunt," according to Hunt Stromberg.

Reginald Barker is casting "The Law Bringers," his second Louis B. Mayer production for Metro.

Alvin Wykoff, formerly director of photography and special photographer for Cecil B. De Mille's productions at the Famous Players-Lasky studio, has been placed under contract by Louis B. Mayer to take charge of the photography of the Fred Niblo Productions for Metro release.

On the Goldwyn Lot

Cecil Holland and Lucien Littlefield have been placed under long term contract. Both are character players and have ten and eight years' experience, respectively.

Charles Murphy has been added to the cast of "Red Lights," being directed by Clarence Badger.

Fred Esmelton, John Sainpolis and Pat Hartigan have been added to "Three Wise Fools" cast, directed by King Vidor.

Barbara La Marr is in Dallas, Texas, serving as queen of the automobile show. A dinner, attended by forty screen notables, was given at the Pasadena Cafe on the eve of her departure.

Blanche Sweet, engaged by Marshall Neilan and Goldwyn for the lead in Neilan's third production in association with that corporation, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," from Thomas Hardy's novel, has returned from her vacation on a dairy farm and is ready to begin as soon as Mr. Neilan calls his company together.

With Paramount Units

There are three new productions beginning this week: "The Cheat," under direction of George Fitzmaurice, starring Pola Negri; "Blue Beard's Eighth Wife," the Sam Wood production starring Gloria Swanson, adapted by Sada Cowan and Carleton Andrews from Albert Savoir play; and "Hollywood," under the direction of James Cruze, from a story by Frank Condon, adapted by Thomas J. Geraghty. Hope Brown, a young stock actress, never in pictures, will play the lead of a Kansas girl who comes to Filmtown to get into the movies. All Paramount players and directors will take part.

In production are: "Seventy-Five Cents an Hour," under the direction of Joseph Henabery, starring Walter Hiers; "Rustle of Silk," directed by Herbert Brenon, co-starring Betty Compson and Conway Tearle, and "Contraband," starring Agnes Ayres.

"The Law of the Lawless," the Paramount picture directed by Victor Fleming with Dorothy Dalton starred and Theodore Kosloff and Charles de Roche featured in her support has been finished. This picture was adapted by E. Lloyd Sheldon and Edfrid A. Bingham from a story of the wandering gypsy tribes by Konrad Bercovici, the famous Roumanian author.

The first scenes for Dorothy Dalton's latest Paramount picture, "Fog Bound," were filmed near Palm Beach, Fla., on Lincoln's birthday, February 12. The company, which includes David Powell, Maurice Costello, Martha Mansfield, William David, Warren Cook and Jack Richardson, left last week for the South, where all the exterior scenes for the picture will be made. In addition to scenes at Palm Beach several will be filmed in the Everglades of Florida.

Agnes Ayres arrived in New York this week from the Coast to take a leading role with Antonio Moreno in "The Exciters," a Paramount picture which will be started next week at the company's Long Island studio under the direction of Richard Ordynski. John Colton, author of "Rain," is adapting the stage play to the screen.

Warner Brothers Items

Gene Sarazen has been signed to appear in a series of one-reel golf pictures to be made upon the champion golf player's return from Florida.

Allen Hale has been engaged to play the role of Bjorenstam in "Main Street."

Sidney Franklin will direct the filming of "Beau Brummel," an adaptation from Clyde Fitch's play being made by Mary O'Hara.

Grant Carpenter is preparing a screen version of "The Gold Diggers."

F. B. O. Production Notes

The cast for "Daytime Wives," to be directed by Emile Chautard from an original story by Leonore Coffee and John S. Goodrich, adapted by Wyndham Gittens, includes Derelys Perdue, Grace Darmond, Wyndham Standing, Edward Hearn, Al Roscoe, Katherine Lewis, Christina Montt, Kenneth Gibson and Jack Carlisle.

Emory Johnson is cutting "Westbound Ninety-Nine."

"Divorce," from an original story and continuity by Andrew Bennison, under direction of Chester Bennett, stars Jane Novak, and the supporting cast embraces John Bowers, James Corrigan, Edythe Chapman, Margaret Livingston, Phillipe De Lacey.

Mal St. Clair is directing the eighth episode of "Fighting Blood," titled "Christopher, of Columbus."

Carter DeHaven is engaged in making his eleventh comedy, entitled, "Home Comfort."

East and West with Fox

There are three new productions starting this week on the west coast, "Alias the Night Wind," starring William Russell, under the direction of Joseph Franz; "The End of the Road," starring Shirley Mason, under the direction of Henry Otto, and "Snow Drift," starring Charles (Buck) Jones, under the direction of Scotty Dunlap.

Century Cut-Backs

Edith Lee Grant, now appearing in vaudeville, has been engaged for the ingenue part in Raymaker's "Try and Get It."

Ernie Adams has been engaged for a part in Eugene Deruy's first comedy.

"The Bus Boy," third Buddy Messenger comedy, has been changed in title to "Dad's Boy," and "Straighten 'Em Out," starring Brownie, has been changed to "Sunny Gym."

Baby Peggy has been chosen to present the national charter of the Lion's Club to the Hollywood branch, just organized.

Heavy Exploitation Campaign For "Quincy Adams Sawyer"

Chicago, Ill.—An unusually heavy advance campaign was used for "Quincy Adams Sawyer" at the Chicago theatre, put over by Bert Ennis in conjunction with S. A. Shirley, Chicago Metro representative.

Beginning with Monday, half-page advertisements were used in every paper and a full page was taken in the Herald-Examiner on the day prior to the opening. In addition to these display announcements a novel series of Mabel and Mary letters were used for four days, the letters covering the various points in "Quincy Adams Sawyer" through the medium of one girl querying another as to when and where the picture was to play Chicago. The final letter on Thursday divulged all of the information concerning the opening of the picture.

Tie-ups were also effected with the Yellow Taxicab Company, the cab organization carrying cards in which the comparison between the one-horse shay in "Quincy Adams Sawyer" and up-to-date vehicles of the company was pointed out.

Three of Chicago's largest department stores also co-operated in the exploitation of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" through the medium of window displays covering the photoplay edition of the novel in their windows. These stores were Marshall Field & Co., The Fair and Rothschild's, in addition to which numerous local booksellers displayed the novel and still scenes from the picture.

"Dangerous Age" Teasers Used in Newspapers and Lobby

WILMINGTON, N. C.—D. M. Bain, in charge of exploitation for the Howard-Wells chain, for the showing at the Grand theatre of "The Dangerous Age" used an advance teaser campaign in the newspapers, the same copy being used three days before the opening for long, hand painted panels, 18 by 54 inches, which were placed on every door-mirror on the front of the theatre.

Some of the copy read as follows: "The Dangerous Age—When a Wife Wanders; When a Woman Wonders"; "The Dangerous Age—Flapper of 16, wife of 36—Both know it!"; "The Dangerous Age—Jazz-age, Marriage, Wreckage? When is it?"; "The Dangerous Age—When a Man Thinks of What Marriage Makes Him Miss!"

The panels carried the title on a large red oval at the top, the other copy being in bright water colors, and created a flash that could be seen for almost a block.

Two days before the opening, a novel herald was used in the form of a weather forecast, one side of which definitely stated that exactly seventeen stars would shine on January 29th at the corner of the Chicago theatre's location, while the other side announced the names of the seventeen film celebrities appearing in the S-L special.

Teaser Ads and Novelties Are Used to Aid "Dr. Jack"

Lakeland, Fla.—A strong newspaper teaser campaign was used by Manager B. B. Garner of the Casino theatre in exploiting "Dr. Jack."

Starting some time in advance he announced that Dr. Jack, famous joy specialist, would locate in Lakeland on a certain date. He followed this by giving several of Dr. Jack's famous prescriptions and then announced that his office would be at 47 Kentucky avenue, the address of the theatre.

Several days in advance the Lloyd hand bags and goggles were distributed to the kids. And to make sure that these would be kept, admission for 10 cents was offered any child under 12 who brought one of the hand bags or a pair of goggles with him to any matinee performance. The regular price for kids was 15 cents.

New Style Hair Cut Is Tied Up With "The Flirt" Showing

New York, N. Y.—The Sam Fenton Hair Cut, as applied to Tom Kennedy in "The Flirt," was made the subject of exploitation during the run of the picture at the Rialto theatre recenly.

Marc Lachmann, Universal home office exploitation representative, for this production drafted this comedy innovation from the picture and tied up with Anthony Accordini, organizer of the Barbers' Union, for a special day to be set aside in all barber shops in New York City and Brooklyn for the debut of the "Sam Fenton Hair Cut for Men."

A special card illustrating the hair cut was made up and posted in front of a chair in each barber shop co-operating.

John Bounds, art director of the Palace theatre, Dallas, Texas, executed this attractive front for "When Knighthood Was in Flower"

"Apple Girl" is Tied Up With Campaign on "Fury"

Seattle, Wash.—When Mayor Ed J. Brown declared the week in which the Coliseum theatre was to show "Fury" as Apple Week, Manager Frank Steffy took advantage of the fact to tie up to the municipal event.

First he secured from Wenatchee 20,000 big red Stayman Winesap apples, and arranged to give each lady attending the Coliseum a big red apple. Then he dressed one of his twenty pretty usherettes in a quaint Colonial costume and had her recognized as "The Apple Girl"; took her out to the mayor's home and shot 300 feet of movies of her with the chief executive of Seattle giving apples to children.

Then he arranged, with the Daily Star, the evening paper with the largest circulation, to put on an apple pie contest and donated $25 in prizes to go to the seven best pie bakers. All photos dealing with the contest brought the "Apple Girl" into them, according to the arrangement with the newspaper. Mr. Steffy also obtained the show room of a big Ford agency for a display of apples, banners, one-sheets and arranged for the judging of the pies. Five days of two-column heads and photographs on the front page of the Star followed, and at the conclusion of the contest the pies were awarded to orphanages and to thirty poor families, which brought forth considerable gratitude.

Appropriate Prologue Used for "Oliver Twist"

WASHINGTON, D. C.—A prologue entitled, "A Dicken's Reverie," was part of the presentation of "Oliver Twist" at Harry Crandall's Metropolitan theatre.

The opening curtain showed Dickens writing at his desk. Then there were visualized the character creations of his brain, including Nancy and Bill Sikes, the Beadle, the Artful Dodger, Sowerberry, the undertaker, Fagin and Oliver Twist.

The cast included a youngster who bore a strong resemblance to Jackie Coogan and the conclusion of the prologue, after most of the members had done their bit, left Oliver in the center of the stage with his bowl and soup ladle.

"Man Who Saw Tomorrow" Is Tied Up with Bank

EL PASO, Texas.—Manager J. M. Edgar Hart advertised "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" at the Palace theatre with an effective tie-up with a local bank, in which the bank carried the title of the picture at the head of all their newspaper ads and allowed Mr. Hart to place neatly painted signs under the glass of the writing tables in the bank.. The signs read:

"The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" invests in a Savings Account.

Readers Invited to Finish "Masquerader" Story

DANVILLE, Ky.—Running the fictionized version of "The Masquerader" in serial form as a tie-up on the picture is not new, but Stout's theatre used a somewhat different angle that gave it added reader interest.

The Daily Messenger used the fictionized version of "The Masquerader" serially, with a "How Does the Story End?" angle. It held up the last two instalments and allowed its readers to submit their own versions of the ending before publishing the conclusion as it was really written.

"Gimme" Is Tied Up with Fund Campaign of Masons

Battle Creek, Mich.—After "Gimme" had been booked at the Bijou theatre, A. W. Force, the manager, thought that there was a good chance of a profitable tie-up, so he had a special screening of the film for the leading Masons of the city, who are at present raising $150,000 for a new wing to their home. They were enthusiastic, and contracted to take over 20,000 tickets, to be sold on a percentage basis.

Mr. Force ordered a number of little blue "Gimme" buttons from the Detroit exchange, and turned them over to the working squad of the Masons. The idea was for each member to approach his intended buyer and tag him with a "Gimme" button. When asked for an explanation he was slipped a pair of tickets for the picture, and told to come across with the price of same.

Through the influence of the order the management of the Bijou was enabled to hang "Gimme" cards and special pennants on lamp posts, public buildings, and in banks.

"Knighthood" Campaign is Varied and Extensive

Denver, Colo.—When "When Knighthood was in Flower" played at Homer Ellison's Princess theatre, a campaign was planned of such scope that it was necessary to divide it up, Ellison supervising it, Al G. Birch, his publicity man, handling the newspaper end, and Rick Ricketson, Paramount exploiteer, the window, street and novelty exploitation.

The material landed by Mr. Birch in the papers was remarkable in quantity. As the title does not lend itself readily to newspaper stunts, only straight publicity was used, and that is the hardest stuff in the world to get over. However, Mr. Birch convinced the Denver editors that he had a picture that would attract great attention, and that the society folks would be out in all their sable coats and diamond necklaces.

The advertising was illustrated atmospherically and old English type was used for the title. Each ad contained a large cut.

In securing windows, Ricketson established the rule that he would only tie up with chain stores. This restriction sort of whetted the desire of merchants to come in.

The Owl drug stores tied up for perfume, giving the theatre a window in each of their ten stores. The Green Dragon Candy Co., operating a string of confectioneries and high-class tea rooms, created a "Knighthood Kiss."

The Willys-Knight Motor Co. arranged a big parade, in which enough automobiles were used to stir up as much enthusiasm as a circus. This put the title over in fine style.

Manager Ernie Sanders of the Star theatre, St. Thomas, Ont., arranged for this effective window display on "The Old Homestead"

Handles Reid's Last Film in Dignified Fashion

CISCO, Texas—William H. Mayhew of the Broadway theatre, after the death of Wallace Reid, turned the showing of "Thirty Days" into a commemorative showing for the actor.

Mr. Mayhew used large 22 by 28 inch star photographs mounted on a large compo-board slightly-tinted star, with small wisps of crepe draped over the points. This was placed in the lobby along with the regular display for "Thirty Days" and an announcement that this was Reid's last picture.

This cast just the proper sanctity and atmosphere for the occasion and the town turned out to render a last tribute to their favorite.

Nearly every restaurant, tea room and ice cream parlor was landed for a tie-up, and the menu featured some dish labeled after the title.

The entire theatre was "done over" for the event. A complete castle was built in the lobby. Thousands of dollars worth of fine draperies were borrowed from one of the leading stores for the interior display.

Star Cut-Outs Used on Front on "Strangers' Banquet"

St. Paul, Minn.—An attractive front for "The Strangers' Banquet" was prepared by the manager of the Tower theatre, based on the 24-sheet with the portraits of 23 stars.

Over the marquee was placed a painted imitation of the 24-sheet with the heads of the 23 stars as a border clear around it. This sign was lighted by concealed electric lights.

Under the marquee, above the entrance doors and down the supporting columns on either side, were the heads of the 23 players, cut from the poster. The effect was so out of the ordinary that passersby across the street would cross over to examine the display and find out the names of the players pictured.

A pleasing window display was obtained in the window of Schuneman's furniture store. This consisted of a large table set for a banquet, with chairs around it. At one side was an enlargement of one of the "Strangers' Banquet" stills.

"Nanook of the North" Tied Up With Public Schools

Emporia, Kans.—The management of the Strand theatre, on "Nanook of the North," entered into an arrangement with the High School Faculty and Grade Teachers' clubs by which practically every school teacher in Emporia became an advance ticket seller for "Nanook." The proposition posted on school bulletin boards read:

"The High School Faculty Club and the Grade Teachers' Club are needing money to finance various projects. We have a very favorable contract with the Strand, provided we will get back of the canvass for the sale of tickets, and go after it. If we work, Mr. McClure will guarantee us a minimum of $100 for our share. He thinks it ought to be more. Our share to be divided between the two clubs in proportion to the amount of money turned in for the sale of tickets."

One of the "Nanook" school circulars contained a brilliant story of the action of the picture, which was widely distributed.

Vincent Lander, manager of Quittner's Stratton theatre, Middletown, N. Y., pulled this stunt on "The Eternal Flame," making the letters in the snow on the roof with an acetylene torch

Pre-release Reviews of Features

"The Speed King"

Ph. Goldstone-State Rights—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is a stunt picture, naturally, with Richard Talmadge called upon to execute his acrobatic feats. A stunt actor doesn't need a story any more than a burlesque comedian, although one is usually written to provide a background. "The Speed King" relies upon thrills and in this respect it is certain to compel attention. You might say that the plot is "Graustark" enacted with reckless abandon with the star impersonating a motor-cycle champion who doubles in brass as the king. When the royal personage is abducted the action begins and it chugs away with plenty of pep.

It is up to the masquerader to fall in love with the princess and save the kingdom as well as his own life and that of the king. Some order. But did you ever see a mythical kingdom pattern get tangled up in its own complications?. Neither did we. So it's easy for Talmadge. He performs several acrobatic escapes—to say nothing of some hazardous leaps and bounds. And the boys should be pleased with the picture. What if its plot is of the rubber stamp variety?

What if its double exposure isn't especially good? What if it gets off to a slow start? What is important is the fact that the acrobatic Talmadge puts over his stunts—the same as a burlesque comedian puts over his gags. He seems to possess the proverbial nine lives of the w. k. cat. Swinging, fighting, leaping or bounding mean nothing in his young life. One doesn't bother about a plot in watching such activities. But we'll say for the sake of comparison that "The Speed King" is not up to the standard of some of Talmadge's other features. It has more technical shortcomings.

On its mechanical side it appears to be adequately staged—without the expenditure of a snug sum of money. There is some heavy boosting of a well known make of motor-cycle in the picture. And it doesn't belong in this day when pictures get by without relying upon advertising props.

The Cast

Jimmy Martin / King Charles ..... Richard Talmadge
Princess Margaret ..... Virginia Warwick
General Mendell ..... Mark Fenton
Rodolph D'Henri ..... Harry Van Meter

Scenario by Grover Jones. Directed by Grover Jones. State Rights Distribution.

The Story—Treats of a motor-cycle champion who, because of his resemblance to King Charles of Mandavia, is employed to impersonate the royal personage. The latter is abducted by a traitor working in the interests of a neighboring kingdom. Jimmy, the champion, falls in love with the princess and discloses his real identity. Which is sufficient reason to defeat the plans of the traitor. The youth is successful.

Classification—Stunt picture carrying plot based upon variations of mythical kingdom formula.

Production Highlights—Talmadge's acrobatic agility. The stunts executed by star.

Exploitation Angles—Talmadge, if he has been properly exploited, should have a following. Play up that he is one of the foremost stunt actors on the screen. Link up with motor-cycle dealers, and use a motor-cyclist to exploit the picture.

Drawing Power—Suitable for second and third class downtown houses.

A scene from "Lost, Strayed or Stolen," with Leo Maloney—a Range Rider Series two reeler.—Pathe.

"Mad Love"

Goldwyn—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THIS title connected with the avalanche of publicity which has recently fallen into the newspapers anent Pola Negri's arrival in this country and her approaching marriage to Chaplin should make this picture a box office winner. As a picture, however, it has few redeeming factors. In the first place the heroine dies at the end, which will not please American audiences which demand the clinch at the close unless, of course, the story is something like "The Christian."

"Mad Love" is a product of German studios, but it is perhaps the best Negri program picture which has been imported. It does not compare with "Passion" and one or two others of the bigger productions in which Pola is the star. The characters assume the roles of French persons and in this they are not convincing. None of them look or act like Frenchmen. The story, we understand, is an adaptation of Sappho. If this is so, it is a very free translation.

Some of the settings are very good, especially the carnival scenes at the close when we are treated to some well staged mob effects. The picture is not without its thrills, in fact the feature is quite melodramatic at times. Miss Negri is splendid in her role and puts real pep into her work. The actor who assumes the role of Andreas, the crazed engineer, works hard and is fairly convincing. The other two male actors, appearing as Richard de la Croix and Bertink, the millionaire, both overact, and are not at all convincing. The gentleman who appears as the doctor is one of the best in the cast. He acts composed at all times. The names of the various actors are not given in the film. Neither is the director, scenario writer or photographer credited.

The Story—Grief-stricken over the fact that his brother has become mentally deranged through his love for the heroine, Richard de la Croix denounces all women. As he does so the heroine appears and is fascinated by this man who curses her sex. Ignorant of the fact that this is the woman who caused his brother's downfall, Richard escorts her home. There she exercises her wiles to captivate him. The couple go to a seaside hotel, but are followed by Bertink, the millionaire lover of the heroine. There Richard is told that the heroine is the woman who caused his brother's ruin. He leaves her. The brother escapes and at a carnival chokes the heroine to death.

Classification—A dramatic love story of the eternal triangle type.

Production Highlights—The work of Miss Negri in the leading role. The carnival scenes.

"Success"

Murray Garsson-Metro—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS story of the stage written by people of the stage follows the regulation pattern. The idea might be called the forerunner of them all for it exploits the "ups and downs" of a Shakespearian star without missing a single situation. The actor who plays Lear reaches the peak of his profession, and, unable to stand prosperity, passes into oblivion and during his downward journey there is shown an accumulation of hard knocks which, while old-fashioned in conception and execution, manage to hold the interest because of the incident and heart stuff.

The actor's wife leaves him and her daughter grows up ignorant of her father's identity. A new Lear is ready for the new generation. The managers interest an "angel" who backs the show through his attention to the broken down actor's beautiful daughter who is cast as Cordelia. The once-successful thespian is kicked out of the managers' office and is introduced to his daughter as a friend of her father. Meanwhile he registers pathos and talks of better times. Shots are shown of his attic bedroom with some juvenile interest introduced to carry on the sentiment.

And so it follows its familiar groove—even to the old actor assuming the new Lear's identity when the latter displays some temperament and becomes too intoxicated to go on. There is a final reconciliation of husband and wife and the daughter helps her father back on his feet. Some of the titles express a few moral platitudes and two or three of them cover the incident which shows the actor's fall from grace. Dore Davidson plays a familiar type of manager—burlesquing the part for the sake of adding a humorous note.

The best touch is the performance of "King Lear" in the climax with all the attendant incident back-stage. The interpretation is competent enough. Brandon Tynan expresses a reel feeling for his part of the tragedian. Naomi Childers, however, refuses to keep pace with the advancing years. The story should have carried a better production. Whatever its technical shortcomings it is certain to interest patrons in search of human interest. They will doubtless overlook the artificial touches.

The Players

Brandon Tynan, Naomi Childers, Billy Quirk, Dore Davidson and others

By Adeline Leitzbach and Theodore A. Liebler, Jr. Directed by Ralph Ince. Produced by Murray Garsson. Distributed by Metro.

The Story—Famous Shakespearian actor rises to heights, but is unable to stand prosperity and sinks to the depths. His wife leaves him and his daughter is brought up to believe him dead. Finally he gets a job as dresser to a new Lear, but later is unable to perform. The old actor assumes the role. He is finally reconciled to his wife and the daughter.

Classification—Human interest story of the "ups and downs" of a celebrated actor.

Production Highlights—The admirable work of Brandon Tynan and Dore Davidson. The stage scene in climax during performance of "King Lear."

Exploitation Angles—Stage stories invariably get over. Play up stage atmosphere. And put on a prologue. Mention the important players. Might put over some copy about famous Lears—Booth, Barrett, Mantell.

Drawing Power—A first class audience picture. Good for any downtown and neighborhood house.

"Racing Hearts"

Paramount—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THIS is a crackerjack of an automobile picture. It's another one of those Byron Morgan tales in which Wallace Reid gained fame, only this has an auto race in it that eclipses anything of its kind seen on the screen in lo, these many moons. While Agnes Ayres is the star of the production, Richard Dix and Theodore Roberts deserve equal praise for their excellent character portraits. Dix is a very satisfying substitute for Reid. Roberts is the one man in the picture world for the role of an automobile manufacturer. Who can forget his rich sketches in Wally's auto features?

The story is built along familiar lines, but the thrills put into the film make it most entertaining. Early in the picture we are shown some real auto driving when Dix, impersonating a speed cop, chases Agnes in one of those "straight eight" affairs that do about 150 an hour. Agnes drives that car everywhere but up a tree and comes out alive. She's trying to get arrested to gain some publicity for her dad's make of car out of the term in the hoosgow.

Then things hum along until the road race is staged. It looks like real stuff and to give it realism, James A. Murphy, the racing driver, himself, is introduced in a minor role. The race is a peach. There are a number of close calls as the cars go around dangerous curves. Agnes plunges the nose of her car through the hay barricade at one curb and the climax comes when Dix, knowing his father is trying to win the race by crooked work, and knowing, also, that his rival car is out of gas, sends his speeder into the rear of Agnes' car, shoving it across the line a winner—while his boat does a somersault into the field. It's a clever bit of screen craft.

While these auto stories may have been worn bare, this one is acceptable because of the novelty of a girl star in the leading role and the fine race. Bert Baldridge has done some very fine camera work, especially in the race scenes. The picture has great exploitation possibilities.

The Cast

"Ginger" Kent	Agnes Ayres
Roddy Smith	Richard Dix
John Kent	Theodore Roberts
Fred Claxton	Robert Cain
Jimmy Britt	Warren Rogers
Zeb Martin	J. Farrell MacDonald
Racing Driver	James A. Murphy
Pete Delaney	Edwin Brady
Burton Smith	Fred J. Butler
Horatio Whipple	Robert Brower
Mechanic	Kalla Pasha

By Byron Morgan. Scenario by Will M. Ritchey. Directed by Paul Powell. Photographed by Bert Baldridge.

The Story—John Kent is an old fashioned automobile manufacturer. He does not believe in advertising his car. He is just about to go on the rocks, when his daughter takes up the suggestion of Roddy Smith that dad ought to get out a racing car to enter in the Vanderbilt road race. A rival manufacturer has placed a "spy" in Kent's plant and this man insists on driving the Kent entry in the race, having arranged beforehand to "throw" it at the proper moment. However, his plans are discovered and "Ginger" dons a driver's outfit herself and sends her car to victory. She marries Roddy. Dad prospers.

Classification—An automobile story that winds up with a corking race.

Production Highlights—The realistic automobile road race, through some beautiful California country. The excellent cast. The wreck at the close of auto race. The fine camera work. The scene in which Roddy makes Clax-

Exploitation Angles—Doll up a young lady who can drive in racing garments and put her in a flashy sport roadster, a racer if possible, and keep her moving around the principal downtown streets. Great chance for tieup with your local auto dealers.

Drawing Power—Everybody drives a car nowadays. Therefore auto stories usually interest. This one should make money if properly exploited.

Snub Pollard in the Pathe two-reeler "A Tough Winter"

"Romance Land"

Fox—4500 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

TOM MIX starts off in his latest picture by showing that he is not taking his westerns too seriously. That touch of burlesque which has characterized most of his recent stories is in evidence again in the introductory scenes. There is every indication that Mix is burlesquing "The Connecticut Yankee," but the comedy is labored especially with Ralph Spence's wise cracks for titles. A few of these get over, but it is our impression that the majority will pass over the heads of the spectators.

It is very slight material which forms the skeleton of the plot—in fact it presents the customary triangle, the cowboy, the girl and the villainous foreman—and the action offers the heroine being rescued from the clutches of the wicked rival who is the favorite of the girl's father. The action releases some fair incident and a few thrills, but for the most part builds without any indication of unusual suspense or surprise. However, it picks up in momentum when the rodeo is staged and manages to finish with the speed which has marked Mix's offerings.

It is this rodeo show which furnishes the highlights. The crooked work goes on apace, but the ranchman agrees to permit his daughter to marry the winner. Which is fair enough for the star. A few races are run off and the cowboy emerges the victor of the meet. The finish shows the usual chase—with the villain determined to win the girl at any cost. So he kidnaps her. The pursuit follows and the heroine is rescued. The concluding scene is the most exciting.

"Romance Land" should succeed with Mix's followers. He does most of his customary stunts and adds several new ones. There are some gaps which slow up the action at the start, but once the rodeo and subsequent rescue are staged it develops quite a "kick." There are some effective exteriors and the detail is adequate. Mix should stick to straight burlesque or dashing melodrama. We'd like to see him in another "Sky High." Give us the old stunts done in a big way.

The Cast

"Pep" Hawkins	Tom Mix
Nan Harvess	Barbara Bedford
"Scrub" Hazen	Frank Brownlee
Counterfeit Bill	George Webb
White Eagle	Pat Christman

By Kenneth Perkins. Scenario by Joseph F. Poland. Directed by Edward Sedgwick. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Features a romantic cowboy who dreams of rescuing damsels in distress. He finally rescues one from a runaway—the girl being the daughter of the wealthy rancher who is trying to force her into marriage with the foreman. He agrees however, to give his consent to the winner of the rodeo. The cowboy wins and rescues the girl again after she has been kidnapped.

Classification—Burlesque of a western, with the plot swinging into melodramatic action, which includes a rodeo show and a chase or two.

Production Highlights—Star's new stunts. The rodeo stuff—showing a chariot race, etc.

Exploitation Angles—Play it up as another of Mix's burlesques. Feature the rodeo show. Put on your cowboy quartette, etc.

Drawing Power—A program picture for any program house, downtown or neighborhood.

"Mighty Lak a Rose"

Carewe-First National—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

BY a display of unusually good treatment, Edwin Carewe has made "Mighty Lak a Rose," a picture which not only establishes itself as solid entertainment, but goes further, and stimulates one with its spiritual significance. The central idea is not new, being founded as it is, upon the regeneration of a band of crooks. You look for a certain amount of sentiment, but the picture is not saturated with it.

Repression seems to have been Carewe's slogan throughout the production of the story. He has not wasted any moments in pointing his conflict or in revealing his incident. And if the action progresses slowly the tempo may be excused in that it points the logic. The director might have hastened some of his scenes and resorted to improbable sequences to show a few bold strokes. But on the contrary he has shown good taste by covering his ground in a thorough manner, giving stress where it is needed and balancing the sentiment and pathos with rattling good incident of a melodramatic character.

Here we have a blind girl whose misfortune places her in the power of a desperate gang of criminals. She is a violinist who has come on to New York to receive a musical education from an interested benefactor. The ringleader seizes his opportunity to employ the girl as a "blind." And under her regenerating influence the most adaptable member of the gang sees the light. And the other crooks hit the "straight and narrow." The girl's playing of Nevin's beautiful melody which furnishes the title of this picture and from which the theme is inspired is no small factor toward their redemption. The youth will do one more trick to get money for an operation to restore the girl's sight. He is caught but wins his freedom in time to attend her debut.

A happy touch is that of presenting the professor as a decent sort instead of the customary moral leper. He sees the romance developing and gracefully steps aside. Carewe has mounted the picture in fine fashion as well as seeing to it that it is properly cast. Dorothy Mackaill as the blind heroine lends a wistful charm and a sincere portrayal. She is always convincing. Her eloquent mannerisms remind one of Lillian Gish and her pantomimic ability and her individual charm should carry her far. The others are highly competent, especially James Rennie, Anders Randolph, Helen Montrose and Harry Short. Fine treatment and admirable acting make the picture especially worth while.

The Cast

Jimmy Harrison	James Rennie
Jerome Trevor	Sam Hardy
Bull Morgan	Anders Randolf
Slippery Eddie Foster	Harry Short
Rose Duncan	Dorothy Mackaill
Hard-Boiled Molly Malone	Helen Montrose
Humpty Logan	Paul Panzer
Mrs. Trevor	Dora Mills Adams
Jean, the dog	Jean Bronte

By Curtis Benton. Scenario by Curtis Benton. Directed by Edwin Carewe. Photographed by Sol Polito. Produced by Edwin Carewe. Released by First National.

The Story—Treats of regeneration of crooks who give up their criminal ways when they come under influence of blind girl who is talented with the violin. The crooks pick up the girl and employ her to be the "blind."

Classification—Crook melodrama tempered with pathos and heart interest—to say nothing of romance.

Production Highlights—The excellent treatment of old theme. The detail. The fine acting turned in by Dorothy Mackaill. The conflict, the pathos and human interest touches. The good staging. The well balanced cast.

Exploitation Angles—Would feature the cast. Also put over a musical prologue featuring Nevin's song, upon which title and story are based. Put over a Nevin program of selections.

Drawing Power—Good for first run houses in any locality.

"The Prisoner"

Universal—4795 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS introduces the latest picture to hang in the mythical kingdom gallery—the picture being an adaptation of George Barr McCutcheon's "Castle Craneycrow," which had quite a sale among the bookdealers several years ago. The plot and characterization here are identical with those which have featured the mythical kingdom formula. The American, bored with life, in search of adventure, the fair heroine from his own country who is being lugged toward the altar by a scheming prince, her doting mother, and the usual retinue of servants, friends, etc.—these play at the customary conflict and intrigue.

It is unadulterated fiction to be sure. One could not expect anything else from a comic opera plot. Yet there are moments of interest in it despite the hokum. Herbert Rawlinson is cast as the American—and he plays himself as usual. There is nothing of the nonchalant abandon which is characteristic of wealthy adventurers who "globe-trot" over the two hemispheres. Instead his manner is awkward, particularly so during the reception scenes. The American discovers that the prince has a shady reputation: so he elects himself the protector of the girl—regardless of the danger. He refuses to walk into the trap set for him by the prince; and is called a coward by his erstwhile sweetheart. So there is nothing left but to kidnap her during the wedding ceremony and carry her to a mountain castle.

Jack Conway, who directed, has managed to show some good detail even though his reception scenes are crudely executed. Some of the sets are designed on the scale of the Pennsylvania station and they appear out of harmony. The castle incident carries the hokum in that it resembles a serial with its secret chambers, trap doors, and sub-cellar passages. The bride is obdurate to the advances of the American until her life is in danger. Then she gladly falls into his arms and is married to him.

The plot has been carefully planned—even to a priest being on the job. It comes as a surprise and furnishes some suspense. A large cast supports the star with none of the players showing any individuality of talent. The picture is suitable for program houses.

The Cast

Philip Quentin.....Herbert Rawlinson
Dorothy Garrison.....Eileen Percy
Lord Bob.....George Cowle
Lady Francis.....June Elvidge
Dickey Savage.....Lincoln Stedman
Lady Jane.....Gertrude Short
Prince Ugo Riccardi.....Bertram Grassby
Count Sallonica.....Mario Carillo
Duke Laselli.....Hayford Hobbs

By George Barr McCutcheon. Scenario by Edward T. Lowe, Jr. Directed by Jack Conway. Photographed by Benjamin Reynolds.

The Story—American in search of adventure meets his erstwhile fiancee at reception and is chagrined to learn that she is engaged to count who has bad reputation. The count tries to trap the American but fails. At the wedding ceremony the American kidnaps the bride and takes her to a castle where he wins back her love.

Classification—Adapted from McCutcheon's story, "Castle Craneycrow." Adventure, intrigue and romance.

Production Highlights—The effort made to provide a good atmosphere. The sets.

Exploitation Angles—McCutcheon's name is popular. Play up the author and co-operate with bookdealers for a sale of his novels.

Drawing Power—A good neighborhood picture.

A scene laid in Constantinople, interior of a harem, from the Universal serial starring William Desmond, "Around the World in Eighteen Days."

"The Buster"

Fox—4587 Feet

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

A WELCOME relief from ordinary society drama is this essence of a "western" in feature length. It is about a well bred, high principled ranch foreman, allotted the task of taming a Boston society girl, whose aunt owns a ranch in charge of Bill Coryell, a role well fitted to Dustin Farnum and one in which he appears to good advantage. The title is significant. The ranchman "busts" his way to right whenever he senses wrong.

The picture is marked with general appeal. There is an appealing girl, accompanied by a French maid, a handsome ranchman, who can ride, shoot, fight and lasso to perfection, a malicious ranchman usually described as a "villain," and a ranch comedian. These are the principal characters. In addition there are many ranchmen, who frequent the typical western rendezvous, and "The Buster" has the advantage of having been photographed on some delightfully beautiful locations, lending pleasing scenic value.

While there is nothing particularly new about the taming of an indulged daughter of the rich by a scrupulous, good looking ranchman, his ultimate triumph over the girl to her satisfaction, yet the picture has been well directed, the suspense interestingly built up, the cast well selected, with the result of rather pleasing light entertainment.

The Cast

Bill Coryell.....Dustin Farnum
Charlotte Rowland.....Doris Pawn
Swing.....Francis McDonald
Light Laurie.....Gilbert Holmes
Yvonne.....Lucille Hutton

Directed by Colin Campbell. Story by William Patterson White. Scenario by Jack Strumwasser. Produced and distributed by Fox.

The Story—A temperamental niece of a wealthy eastern woman is sent west to a ranch, where it is hoped the change of environment will awaken the girl to something more than having her own way. Charlotte is accompanied by a French maid, a poodle dog and many pieces of baggage. The foreman, a handsome, virile type, finds the over-indulged girl amusing. Then he recognizes a more serious feeling regarding her welfare and his attempts to protect her from harm are misunderstood. When Coryell meets with accident in Charlotte's defense she, in turn, saves him from a fatal plunge down the mountainside, loses her self-interest and finds herself, decides to return east and then decides to remain on the ranch, the proud wife of so manly a speciman as Bill Coryell.

Classification—Western melodrama of the thrilling, romantic type, riding, shooting, typical "western" situations, with distinct love interest.

Production Highlights—Scene wherein Charlotte decides to ride an unruly horse (against the advice of the foreman, whose warning is in vain). She first seems to conquer the steed, then is given a violent throw. Also her fight to save the ranchman from death, which occasioned her tussle with the villain, and Coryell's danger.

Exploitation Angles—Play up the riding and natural scenic value. Dress your lobby with saddles, whips and accessories used by horsemen. Dress your ushers in habits or riding apparel.

"Stormswept"

F. B. O.—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Edward Hanley)

THE author may have had some logic to put over in this latest story of the briny deep. If so it has been lost or destroyed during its screening. He talks about the "monotonous monotony" of the sea—of how it destroys the spirit of those who follow it. One would think from this particular case that the philosophy applied to the skipper or the crew of a ship that never came to port. But it features a lightship and a supply boat which are fairly close to shore.

The theme itself takes up the plight of a despondent husband who rescues the skipper of the lightship who has been bumped overboard during one of his shore visits. When the captain saves the other's life (he is about to commit suicide) out of gratitude, a strong friendship develops. The subsequent scenes picture life aboard the lightship with the despondent husband still harboring his grudge though he is charmed by a girl who lives on the supply boat.

What follows defies explanation, though it may be that the gaps were produced in the cutting room. A storm is shown which has no connecting link with the action. It is night and the mechanics of the studio are visible when instead of huge waves crashing over the sides of the boat, the water appears to be shot from an invisible hose. The radio is employed and picks up an S.O.S. from a sinking ship. You look for some vital stuff concerning rescues. But the following scene shows the boat in broad daylight plunging to the depths. It should have been tinted if it belonged in the picture. But it doesn't seem to belong because there are no rescues.

The most mystifying sequence comes immediately after when the skipper puts out in a life-boat in a tranquil sea and finds a lone woman rowing about. When he asks her how she happened to be out there, she replies: "I'm taking a row before breakfast." She is brought aboard and the despondent husband recognizes her as his wife, but not before the friendship of the two men is threatened because of the skipper's romantic impulse. The the two Beerys, Wallace and Noah, are in the picture, but their work is hopeless in the face of such an incoherent story and such a mediocre production. Wallace is the hero for once while Noah is the heavy. Wallace finds out that his wife has been given a divorce, which leaves him free to marry the girl on the supply boat.

The Cast

William McCabe.....Wallace Beery
Shark Moran.....Noah Beery
Ann Reynolds.....Virginia Browne Faire
Helda McCabe.....Arline Pretty
Snape.....Jack Carlyle

By H. H. Van Loan. Scenario by Winifred Dunn. Directed by Robert Thornby. Photographed by Ben Reynolds.

The Story—Despondent husband attempts suicide when wife leaves him. Is saved by a ship captain who thus shows his gratitude for having his life saved during one of his shore leaves. The skipper takes his friend to the lightship and, after a storm at sea, the latter discovers his wife, who has been rescued. He controls his temper and after her departure, he finds consolation and happiness with a girl on the supply boat.

Classification—Marital infidelity basis of plot which treats of romance and melodrama.

Production Highlights—The acting of Wallace and Noah Beery.

Exploitation Angles—Wallace Beery and Noah Beery are well enough known to exploit here. Also play up author, who wrote "The Virgin of Stamboul."

Drawing Power—Best suited for second and third-class downtown houses.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Extra, Extra"

(Lloyd Hamilton-Educational—Two Reels)

A little touch of what police officials and newspaper men are doing, while the general populace of New York reposes, opens the plot and the introduction of a mysterious stranger who throws dynamite.

Another mysterious stranger (Lloyd Hamilton) leads a quiet life, wears a checkered cap and writes on a typewriter. He is only a newspaper staff photographer, but on account of a great resemblance to the dynamite thrower, gets into some pretty tight places.

The comedy waxes fast and furious. Lloyd Hamilton cleverly drains every opportunity to provoke laughter and never misses a bet. There is a mighty clever youngster who works with him, and an entirely adequate support. The two reeler has been well directed, cut to run with excess pep and embraces a few touches of human interest that will pacify those who do not care for slap-stick varieties.—LILLIAN GALE.

Screen Snapshots No. 19

(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS opens with showing Rodolph Valentino at home, about to start on a tramp, accompanied by his dog, but interrupted by a note from the studio, calling him from play to work.

The arrival of Mary and Doug at home, and a dinner given Doug by the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, follows, and the rehearsing of scenes for a Cecil DeMille production brings Theodore Roberts, Leatrice Joy, Thomas Meighan and Lois Wilson into view. Theda Bara enjoying a game of "Pung Chow," and taking a golf lesson is balanced by views of "The Hottentot" being filmed with Thos. H. Ince explaining the action to Madge Bellamy.

The reel concludes with showing how Philadelphia turned out en masse to greet a number of screen stars, the guests of Marcus Loew.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Pill"

(Jo-Rock-State Rights—Two Reels)

JOE ROCK, in the role of a bricklayer, suffers accident. The fact is, he is "beaned" by a falling brick, which calls for the services of Dr. Cook, who arrives to tender first aid.

When the doctor is finished he intends leaving a supply of pills for Rock to take, but does not intend to leave samples of his discovery, the "Nu-Life" pill. Rock takes one upon advice of the little bird in a cuckoo clock, and finds himself transformed into Africa, where he is among the native cavemen. When about to lose his life again, the cuckoo bird exclaims "take a pill," and when Rock does so, he is transformed into another life, etc. Therefore, this two-reeler is composed of several distinct sequences and in the last, Rock being hit by another brick, is transformed back into his original identity of a bricklayer.

The novelty element is more dominant than the comedy, but the offering is not without some entertainment value.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Sweetie"

(Baby Peggy)

(Century-Universal—Two Reels)

WE have ceased to be surprised at the talent displayed by Baby Peggy, infant screen leading woman. But when a child so tiny goes in for a complete characterization and triumphs, as Baby Peggy does in "Sweetie," it ceases to be commonplace.

Peggy is at first a street waif, whose income from selling newspapers is described as "smaller than herself." While crying "extree" a blind street musician takes his post beside her, but is later crowded out by two other street musicians, who proceed to abuse the blind man's privileges. Peggy rebels, assumes the attire of a foreign child and starts out to get enough money from the two mean men to reimburse the blind man for his losses. In a head-kerchief, grinding the organ and directing the monkey, she surely hits the mark. Later, when obliged to make a quick get-away in an automobile, she is arrested for speeding. A kindly rich woman alights from a limousine and demands the child's release. She takes Peggy home to the palatial dwelling and informs her husband she intends to adopt the child. He does not approve of children or monkeys, but Peggy insists upon sharing her fortune with the pet. Eventually, Peggy appears dressed up for a party, and displays such versatility as would put many older ladies of the screen to shame.

"Sweetie" is a splendid comedy for little folk, and a good dose of "laugh" for grown-ups.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Tight Shoes"

(Roach-Pathe—One Reel)

THERE are a lot of funny things that might happen to a green shoe clerk, especially if he served his apprenticeship during a rush sale. And in the picture, "Tight Shoes," all the things that could happen and a number of incidents that are not likely to come to pass, seem to make life exciting and precarious for Paul Parrott. The action takes place inside the shoe store and just outside the entrance, so that the fun is concentrated and does not have to jump from place to place in order to get laughs. One man endeavors to get away with three pairs of shoes by putting white stockings on over each pair tried on, while the clerk searches for something else. Then, with the proceeds in a shoe box, the unfortunate fellow gives the wrong box to a woman who bought the same pair of shoes three times, and innocently walked out with all the money. There is plenty of action good direction and laughable situations.

Jobyna Ralston decorates the cash desk and speeds the clerk on to victory, so that he may make enough money for two.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Frog and the Catfish"

(Pathe—Split Reel)

ONE of the funniest of the funny Aesop's Fables series. There is something ludicrously lifelike about the characters in these cartoons that places them several steps above others in the field, and this yarn of the bold frog which succeeded in knocking out the villainous catish after a series of really humorous adventures. Practically all the scenes are laid under water, and the cartoonist's conception of the cavernous depths of the bottom of the sea lends a remarkable background.—STUART GIBSON.

"The Balloonatic"

(Keaton-First National—Two Reels)

BUSTER KEATON rises to great heights in this release, both literally and figuratively, for the frozen-faced comedian goes sailing heavenward in a balloon, where he finds an opportunity for some brand new gags.

He becomes proprietor of a balloon, but first becomes aware of it when it bumps against the lower side of the clouds. In attempting to bring down a duck, he punctures the gas bag, ending in disaster. Even this has its silver lining, however, for he encounters Diana, a blonde beauty, in the person of Phyllis Haver, appearing to advantage in a one-piece bathing suit.

Buster's courtship and the "balloonatic" events that follow entitle this to a place as one of the most ingenious he has made since "The Boat." The story element is slender, as it should be when there are so many humorous gags present, and Buster's work is well up to his usual standard. Phyllis Haver, too, contributes in no small measure to the fun.—L. C. MOEN.

"Hangin' Around"

(Federated-State Rights—Two Reels)

MONTY BANKS is the comedian, and the first of the two reels is not without merit. The opening scenes resemble preliminary happenings usually attending a marriage ceremony, by showing a close up of a minister reading from his prayer-book, then close ups of the individual participants. But when the first long shot discloses a general view, it is found that the scene is that of a hanging, not a wedding. Following that surprise, comes one that the comedian was writing a short story, visualizing himself as the hero, but because his stories fail to sell, he finds it necessary to accept a "job" as a private detective. His assignment is in the home of wealthy folk, where the detective hopes to pin evidence upon a thief addicted to getting away with jewels. So Banks assumes the role of the butler. But when he attempts to serve a dinner, and knitting wool is accidentally placed in the plate meant for spaghetti, and is served, causing the guests to become nauseated and expectorate the food substitute, this ceases to come under the head of comedy, since it drops below zero and becomes nothing more than disconcerting non-laughable waste of footage. The good idea this two-reeler starts with becomes submerged in sparring for slap-stick comedy of gutter variety.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Bow Wow"

(First National—Two Reels)

WITH Louise Fazenda and Teddy, remarkable dog actor, both in the same picture, it is naturally going to be funny. Miss Fazenda, one of the few young females in the world who doesn't object to disguising her natural good looks for the movies' sake, is as awkward, as outlandish, as ever in this one, and Teddy is as dignified and sedately conservative as he always is. Some quaint bits of byplay are introduced in the film, which is an example of about the best in the broad comedy field.—STUART GIBSON.

Harold B. Franklin, former managing director of Shea's Hippodrome and now head of the theatre department for Paramount, stopped off in Buffalo last week on his way home from the opening of Grauman's theatre on the west coast. He had a chat with M. Shea of the Shea Amusement Company, greeted Vincent McFaul, manager of the "Hipp," and several other friends. From Buffalo Mr. Franklin went to Rochester to see Arthur Amm, house manager of the Eastman and then went to his offices in New York City. While in town Mr. Franklin declared that theatres all over the country are enjoying improved business.

Howard Waugh, exploitation manager for the Mozart, Wintergarden and Palace theatres in Jamestown, all operated by Peterson & Woods, put over a twelve-page special section in both the local newspapers on the Palace theatre opening which occurred Monday evening, Feb. 5. It was the biggest theatre publicity stunt ever put over in the Chautauqua Lake city. A large delegation of Buffalo exchange men attended. Mayor Samuel A. Carlson spoke at the opening. Leading exhibitors from western New York towns were also in attendance. "The Face in the Fog" was the opening film feature. The policy of the house is vaudeville and pictures.

The new State theatre has been opened in Corning, N. Y. James J. Kelly is managing the house, which is a link in the Associated Theatres, Inc., chain of which H. P. Dygert of East Rochester is president and Mayor W. J. MacFarlane of Canandaigua, vice-president. The State is the former Opera House, remodeled and redecorated.

Herman E. Schultz, director of the Shea Court Street theatre orchestra, is in Jacksonville, Fla., where he is being treated by specialists following a nervous breakdown at Miami, where he was stopping on his way to the former city.

W. W. Kincaid, president and J. D. Pardee, vice president and treasurer of the Spirella Company of Niagara Falls, N. Y., have become interested in Pictorial Clubs, Inc., producers of educational pictures for the non-theatrical field. The company has been in existence for several years with studios in Los Angeles, but new blood is being put into the organization, which plans to organize clubs in churches, schools and rural communities.

Bruce Fowler writes Buffalo friends that business is coming along fine at the Indiana theatre, Terra Haute, Ind., and that Mrs. Fowler and son have gone to Miami Florida, for a two months' vacation. Mr. Fowler formerly managed the Elmwood here.

Along Buffalo's Film Row

J. R. LEVEE has resigned as manager of the W. B. exchange in the Beyer building, effective February 17. His successor has not as yet been named. Mr. Levee came to Buffalo only a few months ago. He was very popular along Film Row. He succeeded P. H. Smith as W. B. manager. Mr. Smith, by the way, is now interested in the sale of stocks and bonds. When seen on the street the other day he looked like J. P. Morgan.

Bob Murphy, manager of the new Renown exchange, is instituting a drive on his western subjects and has been successful in signing up much business on these pictures. The novel contract forms on "The World's a Stage" and "Environment" are catching the eyes of exhibitors. They contain scenes from the pictures. Once you get an exhibitor's eyes on a contract, the rest is easy, says Bob.

H. E. Hughes, formerly with Fox, has joined the local Hodkinson sales force to cover the Rochester territory, succeeding Fenton D. Lawlor, who has been engaged by Manager C. W. Anthony as a Vitagraph salesman.

H. E. Thompson, sales manager for Associated Exhibitors, made a tour down-state last week end, arriving in New York for Sunday and Lincoln's Birthday.

L. B. Rozelle, formerly covering the Rochester district for Vitagraph, has been transferred to the Albany office of the same company.

Henry W. Kahn has just returned from a trip to Syracuse and New York. In the former city Henry helped arrange a reception party at the station for Jackie Coogan. But Jackie was taken sick in Chicago. After the party, including the mayor, waited at the station for two hours, a wire came telling of Jackie's illness. The party departed. Mr. Kahn is now having last spring's suit cleaned and pressed and declared it will be just as good as new on Easter Sunday, when he usually parades down the avenue under a high hat and "wearing a cane."

Gene Markens, city salesman for First National, had dinner in Rayfield's tea room the other day. It is rumored that he was also seen dining in Miss Vincent's tea emporium. We can't understand this tea business unless he is trying to get the bootleg taste out of his mouth.

Exchange men noticed in the audience at the opening of the new Palace theatre in Jamestown last Monday night were: W. A. Mack, Pathe; R. T. Murphy, Renown; Sydney Samson, Bond; Hub Taylor, Pathe; Harry Thompson, Associated Exhibitors; C. W. Anthony, Vitagraph; Charlie Goodwin, Universal; E. E. Weekly, Metro; Otto Siegel, Goldwyn; J. Emerson Dickman and Charles N. Johnston, Fox; J. R. Levee, W. B.; Sherman Webster, Goldwyn and others.

Wendell G. Shields, general manager for Plymouth Film corporation, a non-theatrical organization, was in town last week in the interest of his firm's product.

Ralph Myerson, manager of Macmy Pictures, made a flying trip to Florida last week to visit relatives. Mrs. William Bork, secretary to Mr. Myerson, has completely recovered from a minor operation at a local hospital.

Old Bill Fickeisen, formerly famous as Merit exchange manager here, is now peddling Packards in Binghamton. Quite a jump from Bill's noted blimp of other days.

N. I. Filkins, manager of the Merit exchange, is looking for an army of salesmen, to help him sell the carload of feathers recently purchased by the New York office.

A. W. Moses, who recently resigned as manager of the American releasing exchange, is confined to his bed with an attack of pleurisy. Come on out of that stuff, Arch, try the Coue method. You're not sick, you just imagine you are.

Around the Des Moines Branches

FRED YOUNG is registering effectively as new branch manager at the F. B. O. offices. He comes from the Kansas City F. B. O. offices.

Other office changes are the placing of William Benjamin as special representative for F. B. O. from Des Moines for the Middle West. This covers Kansas City, Omaha, Minneapolis, etc. The position of biller at the F. B. O. office was eliminated and Miss Fay Hellman, who had been doing well in this position, changed her services to the Fox Electric Co.

Mr. Davie, of the Universal exchange, reports that at the end of the fourth week of Universal's contest for the big cup that Des Moines leads the exchanges. The drive covers six weeks.

The F. B. O. exchanges are also contesting for sales records and the Des Moines exchange has entered the race which runs for fifty days.

"The Flirt" took Iowa City by storm, and cleaned up some record business there. Three-fourths of the college students saw the picture.

Des Moines Items

Ed Helmts, manager of the Strand theatre, Des Moines, suffered a sad bereavement when his mother died after an illness of ten days. Mr. Helmts was able to reach his mother at her home in Atlantic on Tuesday, and she died two days later quite unexpectedly. Mr. Helmts' father and mother were planning soon to leave for Florida for the winter.

Mr. Groves, manager of the Des Moines theatre, denied that Norma Talmadge's popularity had waned in the least in Iowa. He said that in his opinion she was their best star, their surest drawing card. "A lot of film with Norma," he says, "is enough to draw them into the best business."

Providence Notes

An organ to cost $50,000 will soon be installed in the Victory theatre. The new instrument will be the largest, it is said, of any theatre organ in New England with the exception of the one in the Fenway theatre in Boston.

The Rialto theatre obtained considerable free exploitation during the showing of "The Streets of New York," the week of February 12, through co-operation with the Evening Tribune, which ran several pages of store advertising applicable to the picture. A large sum of money was spent on exploitation and generous results followed.

Harry F. Storin, a native of Pawtucket, who has been associated with Paul Gerard Smith, New York playwright, returns to his home city to become manager of the Keith-Bijou theatre in which he is already installed.

Two bills affecting motion pictures have been introduced in the State Legislature. One provides that all films must show the source of origin and the name of the producer, while the other is aimed to prevent overcrowding of theatres. A third would legalize Sunday movies.

Central Penn. Notes

C. Floyd Hopkins, manager of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg and Reading, Pa., a total of ten houses, who is recovering after a very severe illness which he suffered at his home in Harrisburg, during which it was feared for a time that he would not recover, has left that city on a six weeks' pleasure trip for purposes of convalescence. He stopped first in Atlantic City and then took the ocean trip to Bermuda, where he will remain for several weeks.

The longest run of any play of any sort in any theatre in the city of Harrisburg was made in the latter part of January by the Harold Lloyd film, "Dr. Jack," in the Colonial theatre, a Wilmer & Vincent picture house. Heretofore no play—legitimate, motion picture, vaudeville or stock—had ever shown for more than one week in a Harrisburg theatre. The Lloyd film was booked originally for one week at the Colonial, but it met with such success that it was arranged to extend the contract for another week, thus breaking the city's record.

Washington Close Ups

Mrs. Minnigerode Andrews, of Washington, playwright and scenarist, member of local clubwomen's motion picture committees, and president of the National Association of Theatre Arts, a national service for pageantry, has been appointed a member of the Commission on Pageantry and Drama, in the Department of Religious Education of the National Council, Protestant Episcopal Church, by the Rt. Rev. Thomas F. Gailor, Bishop of Tennessee, who presides over the Council, to relieve the aged Presiding Bishop, Dr. Tuttle of Missouri. This organization maintains its headquarters in New York City, although Mrs. Andrews' organization is located in Washington.

The building permit office announced Saturday that "official permission to proceed with the construction of the new Ambassador theatre, to replace the Knickerbocker, was granted." The formal permit allows the theatre concern to "make repairs" to the collapsed structure at an estimated cost of $100,000.

As a special attraction to the home-coming A. F. G. recently landed from the transport St. Mihiel at Savannah William Randolph Hearst sent a special film of "When Knighthood Was in Flower" to Savannah, where at the theatre parties given by local picture houses to the boys and their brides, the Marion Davies special prints were flashed on the screen.

Exhibitors may be interested to know that the Mint is now coining the Monroe 50-cent piece to be used during the Los Angeles Movie Fair next July. They would make a unique tie-up and otherwise be interesting in publicity and exploitation stunts to boost feature pictures, etc.

Work of the D. C. Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations was shown in motion pictures last Tuesday and Wednesday at the Avenue Grand, York, Savoy and Apollo theatres during the regular Community Service and Neighbohood Hour arranged by Mrs. Locher.

The fourth week of "Robin Hood" is putting an excessive strain on Manager Mark Gates and his assistant, Harry Howe, and staff, at the Columbia theatre here. The record run here was for "The Birth of a Nation," which lasted eight weeks, playing at the National for five weeks, and then appearing for a second showing later of three weeks. As it stands now the recent Columbia records are tied, with four weeks each for the Davies and Fairbanks costume super-specials, and two weeks for "Peg O' My Heart" and "Tess."

St. Louis Brevities

Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Valentino were booked for a six days' run at the Delmonte theatre, St. Louis, commencing Monday, February 12. Valentino was scheduled to deliver an address on "Americanization" while Mrs. Valentino appeared in a solo dance. They had their own orchestra.

It will be recalled that several weeks ago Valentino signed a contract for a week of personal appearances at the Delmonte, but was blocked in his plans when Paramount objected. On advice of his counsel he appeared at the Delmonte once to explain why it was impossible to fulfill his contract with the theatre.

The Americanization speech of Valentino was prepared for use in raising funds for the Italian-American Republican National Party, an organization interested in the Americanization of Italians.

Steve Remus, of Lincoln, Ill., opened his new Lincoln theatre on Lincoln's Birthday. The house cost $250,000.

In the Washington Exchanges

SINCE his regime at Hodkinson's local office has put the branch on the map again, Manager Faulkner is sporting a Cadillac coupe. Bill Airey was in town from the North Carolina field, where he is now special representative for the local Hodkinson exchange. The partitions have been removed and the exchange is improved by the workmanlike appearance now presented.

District Manager J. S. Hebrew, of Philadelphia, formerly of the Washington office of the Fox exchanges, was in town during the week. Manager George Roberts, of Fox, has been ill with a mild attack of la grippe, and is expected to return to his desk on Monday.

Harry Green, formerly of New York City, has been assigned to cover the territory served until recently by Bill Airey, formerly with Fox, but now in the Hodkinson organization here.

Gus Solomon, of New York City, and formerly of Warner Brothers there, is now a member of the Washington sales force of Harry Hunter's Paramount exchange. He is a brother of Martin Solomon, formerly with Universal here.

An event of considerable interest in local film circles was the wedding early last week of R. Clinton Robin, popular manager of the Pathe exchange, to Miss O'Connor. Mr. Robin is expected to return Wednesday from a brief honeymoon.

The First National exchange is initiating something new in Washington's social circles. For the first time in its history the Congressional Club (composed of wives, daughters and sisters of members of the House, Senate, Supreme Court and in some cases the Cabinet officers' ladies) had a film pre-view at the February luncheon, Monday, February 12, at Rauscher's. "The Guy Bates Post Filmization of 'Omar the Tentmaker'" was shown to this exclusive gathering of the nation's social leaders. Mrs. Byrnes, wife of the veteran member from the Carolinas, presided for the first time since her election as president of the club, in succession to Mrs. Frelinghuysen. Ralph Edmunds, exploiteer extraordinary for the local First National exchanges, is handling the arrangements. Later the photoplay will make its debut at the Metropolitan.

A letter received from the New York headquarters of C. C. Burr asks that a statement crediting Earnest M. Ooge as being manager of Burr's Washington branch be corrected. The letter points out that the gentleman in charge of the Burr office in Washington is E. A. Sherwood, Exhibitors' Film Exchange, Mather Building.

Earl Taylor, formerly with E. R. Campion's Arrow Films, is now assistant to Al Garner in the publicity and exploitation department of the Sidney Lust Super-Films Enterprise.

Miss Marion Lynch, formerly of Pathe, is now with the Independent Films, local Warner Brothers distributors, as office manager for Manager Lester Rosenthal, Mrs Lehman, who had held the position for several months, having resigned

Miss Helen Schultze is now serving in the local F. B. O. office as private secretary to Manager F. L. McNamee, while Booker Loeffler functions as office manager during McNamee's visits to the trade.

W. F. Corby, formerly of the Universal exchange at Charlotte, N. C., is a salesman for the local office of F. B. O., covering Eastern Virginia and the "Clinch Valley."

J. A. Bachman, secretary of the film managers' organization, and manager of the local exchange of Educational, has just returned from a visit to the home office in New York City.

Around the St. Louis Branches

HARRY STRICKLAND has been named St. Louis manager for American Releasing. He formerly travelled for United Artists. At one time he was St. Louis manager for the old General Film Company.

W. D. Hatwell has been transferred from Atlanta to St. Louis to handle publicity for Paramount. Harry Wiemeyer, local Paramounter, resigned last week.

Charley Raymond is now in charge of Publicity for Goldwyn in the St. Louis district, including Kansas City and Omaha.

George Gambril, formerly movie editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, is in charge of publicity and exploitation for the Local F. B. O. office.

Milton Simon of F. B. O. staged a grand opening of his exchange last Monday. In the evening "The Fighting Blood" series were screened for local sport writers.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" was given a trade showing Monday afternoon, February 5. On Tuesday, February 13, "Mighty Lak' a Rose" was shown to the trade in the New Grand Central.

George McFarland, formerly of Chicago, is travelling Eastern Missouri for F. B. O.

The Martin theatre, Red Bud, Ill., is now in charge of Sam Bradley, formerly of Willisville, Ill.

The premier showing of the Junior Players' film "Jack and the Bean Stalk" was given in the St. Louis Art League quarters last Friday evening.

Milwaukee Chatter

From the motion picture theatre to the church is but a step, according to the lights of Rev. A. A. Hobson, pastor of First Baptist church, Milwaukee, when his congregation witnessed the screening of "From the Manger to the Cross" in the church last Sunday night. A billboard was also placed outside the church advertising the picture sermon with the invitation "All Welcome."

"From the Manger to the Cross" details the life of Jesus and the crucifixion, and the subtitles are quotations from the New Testament. Explanatory remarks by the Rev. Mr. Hobson, and hymns and religious music formed an accompaniment.

While admitting the idea was to attract non church-going persons, Dr. Hobson asserted that the innovation is not an acknowledgment of the failure of religion, but rather that "it is a proved theory that visual impressions are many times more effective than auditory ones, and motion pictures are coming activities of the church."

Dr. Hobson does not intend to hold entirely to film versions of biblical stories. "Parsifal" will be this week's picture sermon, and he expects very shortly to show "The Stream of Life," a modern picture with a moral. Religious pageants, dramas, and readings, are also to be a part of the Sunday night services.

Milwaukee movie fans are to be given the opportunity of seeing several prime favorites in person in the next couple of weeks. Eugene O'Brien will appear at the Davidson theatre the week of February 18 in his new play, "Steve." The same week Theodore Roberts, premiere character artist of the screen, will be seen at the Palace; and Bessie Barriscale, also a screen star, will be seen at the Palace the week following.

H. Reavy is now covering Southern Wisconsin for Goldwyn, and L. A. Anger represents them in the northern part of the state.

Omaha Briefs

S. A. MacIntyre has returned to Omaha as branch manager for Metro Pictures Corporation, succeeding Charles R. Osborn who has been transferred to managership of the Cincinnati office. Mr. MacIntyre represented Metro in Omaha for two years prior to the coming of Mr. Osborn who held the post here two years. During the last two years "Mac" has been charge d'affaires of the Atlanta, Ga., Metro office. It has been stated that Metro will have a publicity man to work between Minneapolis and Omaha.

Police Magistrate Frank M. Dineen of Omaha sentenced Rose Payne and Mrs. Robert Johnson to witness "What's Wrong With the Women?" at the Sun theatre.

There was a reason.

Rose averred before his honor that she was entitled to priority of interest in one Robert Johnson to whom her rival was married. When she heard of the wedding, Rose hied to the habitat of Mrs. Johnson and is said to have greeted her with several bricks, deftly hurled through a window. Mrs. Johnson resented the demonstration of Rose. A lot of action stuff followed; police patrol; court room scene.

"What's Wrong With the Women?" asked Judge Dineen. And he is a bachelor, too.

Seattle Jottings

For the first time in a great many months the Columbia theatre of this city put over a real double-feature program, consisting of two features, each of five-reel length. The pictures that Manager R. W. Case used for his program were "A Dangerous Game" and "Kindled Courage," and the way they were received by the public was taken as an indication that a regular showing of two features, without the regular comedy, scenic and other fillers commonly used, was a welcome innovation to the theatregoers here. To balance up his program, Mr. Case offered a short news reel and an orchestra concert number, putting over the entire show in just about two hours. Double-feature programs, in the true sense of the word, are novelties in this city, and seem to please the public when they are infrequently offered.

"The Glorious Adventure" and Nazimova in "Salome" are two United Artists attractions announced for early showing at John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre here. "The Three Must Get Theirs" was booked to play in the Blue Mouse the week of February 10, in conjunction with the latest Fox-Tom Mix release, "Just Tony."

Announcement has just been made here that Ralph Winsor, former manager of the Colonial, one of the Jensen-Von Herberg theatres in Tacoma, has left that city and gone to Portland, where it is expected that he will enter the exhibition end of the motion picture game. Mr. Winsor's successor has not yet been named, and Charles F. McManus is at present acting as manager, under the direction of F. I. Meyrick, manager of the Rialto theatre, another Jensen-Von Herberg house in Tacoma.

B. Fox, formerly advertising and exploitation manager for John Danz's four local houses, recently left that position to hold the same office for the Cosmopolitan Players, a group of Seattle professionals who rented the Orpheum theatre and have been presenting stock productions at popular prices.

William Faversham, former motion picture star, was the headline attraction at the Moore theatre, playing Orpheum vaudeville, the week of February 4. John Davidson, also a former actor in the silent drama, was a recent attraction at the same house.

With the Seattle Exchanges

L. K. BRIN, head of the L. K. Brin exchanges, handling Warner Brothers' productions, was expected to return to this city about the middle of February, after a trip to New York to confer with Warner Brothers' heads in regard to their new products. On his way to the East, Mr. Brin visited his exchanges in this territory, stopping off for several days in Denver and Portland.

The latest American Releasing Corporation production, "The Grubstake," has been sold by Manager Louis Amacher of the local exchange to the John Hamrick-Blue Mouse circuit, according to an announcement made this week. The feature was booked to open in Seattle on March 3, with additional showings in Portland on February 24 and Tacoma on March 10.

Bookings during the 1923 First National week were the largest ever made at the local exchange, according to an announcement made recently. "The Voice from the Minaret" was booked in Seattle, Portland, Eugene, Salem, Spokane, Everett, Butte, and Great Falls, the broadest simultaneous bookings ever made in the Northwest, and "Fury" also had a strong showing, being shown in seven cities around the territory. G. C. Maxey, head of the local First National exchange, recently returned to the city from a tour around the territory, and has inaugurated a policy of weekly showings of latest releases to his staff, with additional semi-monthly staff meetings, to increase the efficiency and interest of his organization. J. L. Johnston, exploitation director for the exchange, is scheduled to leave the city on about February 20 for a month's trip around the territory, where he will visit the large cities of Montana and southern Idaho. A private showing of "Mighty Lak a Rose" was given at the exchange the first week in February for the sales staff and exhibitors of this city, and "The Pilgrim" has also been exhibited at the exchange and will soon be booked around the territory.

Robert Bender, publicity and exploitation director for the Universal exchange, left for Tacoma and Portland recently, to arrange for the showings of "The Flirt" in those cities. The picture opened at the Rialto in Tacoma on February 10, and was scheduled for a later showing in Portland.

"Catching Salmon with Dry Flies," the latest Field and Stream short reel to be handled through the local W. W. Hodkinson exchange, has been booked in the Seattle Blue Mouse theatre by J. R. Beal, exchange manager. The picture was to be a special feature of "Sportsmen's Week" the latter part of February.

Kansas City Film Row News

GEORGE W. HINTON has resigned from the Kansas City Paramount sales force to become branch manager of the Kansas City Hodkinson office. Mr. Honton formerly was manager of the Associated Producers office in Kansas City when that organization was taken over by First National.

Success beyond expectation of the Warner Brothers' float in Kansas was reported by Al Kahn, manager of the Crescent Film Exchange, who is with the float on its tour through Kansas, Wichita, Augusta, Winfield, Arkansas City, Newton, Florence, Ottawa, Atchison, Manhattan and Emporia are the latest towns in Kansas to be closed on the Warner Bros. Classics, in addition to Carthage, Mo., and Webb City, Mo.

Judging from the early reception of the Exhibitors Poster Exchange, organized a few days ago by Al Kahn, manager of Crescent Film Exchange, Kansas City, the new venture is headed for success. Letters from exhibitors in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma express great approval of the exchange.

"The Flirt," Universal production, was indorsed by 600 members of the Women's City Club at Kansas City this week at a special showing at the Liberty theatre.

A. J. Simmons and O. W. Whitaker have been added to the Associated Exhibitors sales force at Kansas City. They will be under the direction of Dan Martin and will cover the Kansas territory.

Facts recently compiled at the Winter Garden theatre here showed that Manager Frank Edwards was drawing a larger attendance to his house than any other theatre of its size in the United States. The Winter Garden maintains a straight ten cent admission price policy at all times. Long waiting lines stand in front of the theatre every night awaiting admission, and lines on Saturday and Sunday afternoon often extend a half block or more.

Harry Reed, former organist at the Strand theatre, who left a few months ago to play in an Oregon theatre, returned to Manager H. B. Wright's house recently and is again presiding at the console of the Strand. Mr. Reed succeeds L. Blackwell.

William Cutts, former manager of the Columbia theatre, left the city this week after a visit of several weeks in the local territory and returned to California, after spending a few days at the Universal exchange in Portland.

Kansas City Flashes

A fire Wednesday night which threatened the town of Liberty, Mo., destroyed the Lyric theatre, operated by C. R. Wilson, a member of the M. P. T. O. Western Missouri Board of Directors, who has been acting as business manager. The loss was estimated at $35 000, including an adjoining building. A high wind made the flames uncontrollable for more than an hour. Mr. Wilson, who recently opened M. P. T. O. Western Missouri headquarters in Kansas City, has been confined to his home because of illness for the last ten days.

A committee from the M. P. T. O. Western Missouri, the Kansas City Women's Club and the Kansas City Parent-Teacher Association left for Jefferson City Thursday to attend a hearing to oppose the censorship bill now before the legislative committee of the lower House. This action follows a recent meeting of ministers and civic workers with Charles Pettijohn, at which the censorship bill was forcefully opposed. Film exchanges of Kansas City are appealing to the public through regional advertising to thwart the passage of Missouri's radical censorship bill, which is backed by religious and reform organizations.

For the second time in two months the Circle theatre, Kansas City suburban house, has been damaged by fire, this time to the extent of $3,500.

A burglar entered the home of Richard Biechley, owner of the Osage theatre, Kansas City, Kan., about two o'clock Wednesday morning of last week. Mrs. Biechley awakened her husband just in time for the latter to hear the thief slam the back door and beat a hasty retreat with $53 in cash and a check for $70.

A new 500-seat theatre in Eureka, Kan., is being built by the Meade Theatres Company, F. W. Meade, of that organization, announced this week. The new house, which will be ready for opening in about thirty days, will be named the Regent theatre. The Meade theatre, at Kingham, Kan.; the Cozy and Elite theatres, at Pratt, Kan., and the Pastime, at Cunningham, Kan., already are included in the circuit.

A pre-view showing of "The Third Alarm," which will be shown at the Pantages theatre, Kansas City, next week, has been arranged for members of the Kansas City Fire and Water Board and City Council, while all firemen will be guests of Chief Alex. D. Henderson, of the Fire Department. A prologue, with Chief Henderson giving a talk on "Fire Prevention," also has been arranged by Grant Pemberton, manager of the theatre.

With the radio "bug" predominating many theatrical programs in Kansas City, the Capitol Enterprises have introduced a policy of giving a way a complete radio outfit at their Linwood theatre, a suburban house, this week, and the increase in attendance already has more than justified the small additional expense.

So widespread has become the interest in the Nodaway County (Mo.) plan of visualized education by use of motion pictures that a staff representative of the Kansas City Star was sent to Maryville, Mo., this week, and two and one-half columns were devoted to the project. Competition among the schools of the county, as well as instruction, has resulted from the films, which depict the various activities of the schools. The plan was originated by Leslie G. Somerville, County Superintendent of Schools.

Detroit Items

Rudolph Valentino—to be spelled with a "u" since the litigation with Famous Players-Lasky—and his wife, Winifred Hudnut Valentino, also known as Natacha Rambova, began a week's dancing engagement Feb. 4, at the New Majestic Dance Hall. The Valentinos have a seven minute dancing act, the tango, and have their own orchestra.

There has been some misunderstanding between the Valentinos and the dance hall manager which now seems to be adjusted. For the remainder of the week they will appear with the entire cast of the Music Box Revue in what is advertised as the Greatest Theatrical Night in the history of the dance hall.

Motion Picture Day which is expected to be one of the big events in local film history has been postponed from Feb. 14 to Feb. 27.

The Department of Visual Instruction of the Board of Education, under the direction of E. H. Reeder, is doing a large and active work. This work has been developed so that now it is being utilized in 52 schools, 46 grammar, 4 intermediate and 2 high schools. The Detroit Board of Education realizes the value of this form of instruction and has allowed a yearly budget of $6,000 for film rental.

It is expected that an agreement will be reached next week adjusting the differences between the Michigan M. P. T. O. and United Artists. The trouble arose between the organizations on account of the sale of "Robin Hood" to Shadukiam Grotto, a fraternal order, and the subsequent boycott of United Artists films by the Michigan exhibitors.

Forest Little, formerly booker of the Cleveland offices, has been transferred to the Detroit offices of Famous Players-Lasky. He will continue his work in the same capacity.

News of the Carolinas

It's a bad day when Percy W. Wells of Wilmington, N. C., doesn't attend or preside over directors', officers' or stockholders' meetings of some sort. Besides being president of the North Carolina M. P. T. O. he holds the following executive positions in the business life of the Cape Fear metropolis: President, Howard-Wells Amusement Company; secretary - treasurer, Bijou Amusement Company; president, Lakeside Park Amusement Company; secretary-treasurer, Simmons Manufacturing Company; president, Greenfield Mineral Water Company; director, "Wilmington Dispatch" Publishing Company; chairman executive committee, Southeastern Fair Association. Besides, it is rumored that he is hooked up with a certain Texas oil syndicate which has been expecting to bring in a few "gushers" most any day for several months.

D. M. Bain, of the Howard-Wells Amusement Company used the well known candle-stunt for "The Eternal Flame" in Wilmington the past week. The candle was lighted five days before the picture opened, and was supposed to burn out in five and a quarter days. However, cold weather or poor ventilation in the window kept it burning for eight days so that the ducats to see Miss Talmadge's picture, offered as prizes could not be awarded until it's run was over!

T. P. Breen, formerly lessee of a theatre at Raeford, N. C., has accepted a position with the Howard-Wells theatres, Wilmington, N. C.

In the Butte Branch Offices

HAROLD McLAREN has arrived from Seattle to take charge of Universal's publicity work in the Montana territory. He went to Billings to assist the management of the Regent theatre with special exploitation for the "Flirt."

J. W. Rue, manager of the Universal film exchange in Butte, has been busy lining up first-run accounts for the "Baby Peggy" comedies with the first monthly release in March.

C. W. Koerner, manager of the First National office of Butte, has been touring the First National circuit in this territory the past two weeks. He returned on Tuesday and reports business conditions highly satisfactory. Mr. Koerner has aided the American and Rialto theatres in Butte by having a specially qualified writer of reviews to report on the big First National pictures. Butte has looked forward to these reviews as a foreword concerning the merit of the picture as well as to the personal touch its gives in added interest. The articles are signed, and the writer is often called up by local fans to give an opinion of the picture. The Pathe has adopted the same idea and is giving this same writer extra publicity work.

B. F. Cale, formerly with the Pathe as a salesman, has gone over to First National force.

C. C. Pratt, manager of the American theatre of Butte, is seriously ill at his home, suffering a relapse from la grippe of some weeks ago. It is hoped by his hosts of Butte friends that he will be out again within a short time.

Northwestern Briefs

Construction of a large motion picture studio at the upper end of Priest Lake, Idaho, is to be started by Miss Nell Shipman as soon as the weather permits. About it will be grouped a score of artistic buildings, which will compose a complete motion picture colony with laboratories, indoor stage, executive offices, projection rooms, dark rooms and power plant. Bert Van Tuyle, general manager and director for Miss Shipman, has announced full plans here. In constructing the studio and other buildings the whole colony will be built after the pattern of an old-time Hudson Bay trading post, so that they all may be used in the making of pictures. Mr. Van Tuyle speaks in high praise of the scenic advantages of Priest Lake, located not far from Spokane. "We can make pictures there for years to come without ever duplicating our locations," he said. Some of the scenes in "The Grub Stake," the latest Shipman picture, were made there.

"Strongheart," the Belgian police dog belonging to Jane Murfin, was on two Spokane screens recently, the Clemmer showing "Brawn of the North," a Trimble-Murfin production starring the dog, and the Rex showing "The Silent Call," in which the dog's loyalty to man is featured.

The Casino has "The Grub Stake," the Nell Shipman Spokane picture, booked for an indefinite run, beginning February 17.

Exciting scenes shot at Kettle Falls on the Columbia River northwest of Spokane are a feature of the photoplay, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," which was at the Liberty theatre for a week's run. The Metro stars featured in the production were through here last summer. Among the stars of the picture are Barbara La Marr, Blanche Sweet and John Bowers.

"The Third Alarm" will be shown at the Auditorium theatre February 24 to March 3 under the auspices of the Spokane Fire Fighters' Relief Society. Assistant Chief J. I. Lindsay of the local department is chairman of the committee arranging for the showing of the film.

Southwestern Bulletins

Two masked bandits entered the private office of the manager of the Capitol theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla., about 9 P. M., February 5, and after slugging H. H. Allen and C. O. Payne, assistant manager, with revolvers, took about $100 from the safe and made their escape, leaving no clew as to their identity. Several hundred people were in the auditorium and balcony witnessing the screening of "A Daughter of Luxury," but none of the audience was molested.

Three additional pieces have been added to the orchestra of the Palace theatre at Breckenridge, Texas, making six pieces in all.

M. J. Gilfillan has leased the Crown theatre at Donna, Texas.

The Elks theatre, at Port Arthur, Texas, is being remodelled by M. S. Goss and P. T. Williams and will show feature pictures and road shows.

To stimulate interest in Oklahoma City talent and to further its development, James H. Cooper, manager of the Criterion theatre, will co-operate with the Oklahoma City Federation of Women's Clubs in a plan which will replace professionals on the Criterion stage with young artists from Oklahoma City. These performers will be paid for their services, the money to go into a scholarship fund for their education.

These artists must possess a certain degree of talent and proficiency and must pass an examination before an examining board before they can appear. The general plans and details will be arranged in the near future.

A theatre to cost about $25,000 will be created at Helena, Ark., by Joy White, of New Boston, Texas.

C. Porter has opened a new theatre at Charleston, Ark.

A new road show and picture theatre is being built at Yoakum, Tex., with seating capacity of about 700. The theatre will be modern and up to date.

R. A. Kelly has purchased the Yale theatre at Cleburne, Tex., and will add many new improvements in the near future.

S. J. West has opened a new picture house at Plainview, Tex.

A. L. Strauss succeeds Neal Cornett as manager of the Opera House at Chandler, Tex.

New England Close-Ups

The Webster Square Theatre Company has been capitalized at $50,000 and has been chartered by the Massachusetts Secretary of State. The company will operate a motion picture theatre. The incorporators are Henry J. Steinberg and Helen R. Steinberg, of Webster, and Arthur R. Greeley, of Worcester.

The movie cracksman is on the job again. Last week he used his time honored can opening methods on the safe of the Orpheum theatre, New Bedford, Mass. He didn't find much money so "copped" a considerable roll of tickets for the theatre. Going in for speculation, perhaps.

Declaring that he had never really disposed of the films which he is charged with stealing, Leon P. Gorman, formerly Metro's Maine manager, was out on $5,000 bail last week after a jury had failed to agree after four hours. He is charged with the larceny of films worth $1,265.

More charters recently granted to Massachusetts corporations are to the Textile City theatres, of Boston, with capital of $10,000. Incorporators are Charles F. Atkinson and Philip Smith, of Brookline, and Samuel Markell, of Allston. Another is the Anderson Amusement Company, organized for amusement purposes and at home in Medford, Mass. Capitalization is $100,000; the men named being Arthur Anderson, of Sharon, Mass., and Frank K. Eldridge and Stanley Downey, of Boston.

"The Soul Call," a picture made last fall in the Atlas studio in Newton, Mass., was given a private showing last week at Tremont Temple. Numbering largely in the audience were those who watched the picture in the making or had helped with parts. They included many artists of the legitimate stage now playing in Boston. The general theme of the picture is Americanization.

John Buchanan, an old timer in Boston theatrical circles, having been in the game for more than 40 years, died last Thursday at his home, Rever street, Boston. He was in his seventy-second year and leaves a son and a daughter. He was connected with the Howard theatre for many years.

At the February session of the Derby (Conn.) Board of Aldermen, Mayor Frank J. Derby called attention to the theatrical situation in that city, expressing his opinion that the $5 per day rental paid the city for the Sterling theatre, motion picture house, located in the City Hall Building, $150 per month, is far too low. He stated that several years ago Ira L. Hoyt paid $1,800 per year, as rental, when the admission fee was much less than it is now. The board discussed the situation and the present rental and it was apparent that the present members of the board were of the opinion that an investigation should be held, at least. As a result, it was voted to hold a special meeting, probably the 16th, when Isaac Hoffman, member of the Derby Amusement Company, now operating the theatre, and representatives of the Derby Business Men's Association will discuss the phase from all angles.

Eastern New York

Motion picture theatres in this part of the state are having their troubles these days with the coal situation. The Hudson at Watervliet, owned and opened on December 25, by Elmer Crowninshield, and the Central Park in Schenectady, have already been forced to close through lack of coal. The Plaza in Chestertown, owned by Howard Richardson, is also in much the same position.

There is talk of putting in a new $8,000 organ at the Colonial, in Troy.

Joseph Fitzer, brother of Morris Fitzer, manager of the Empire, in Syracuse, started in this week as a salesman for F. B. O. out of Albany.

The Rose, in Troy, N. Y., being built by Jake Rosenthal, is scheduled to open on March 17.

Vic Bendell, manager of F. B. O., in Albany, made a trip to New York this week, visiting the home offices.

H. S. Gans has just been named as manager of the American Releasing Offices in Albany, succeeding Leo Cooper, who has returned to New York. The exchange has just moved into more commodious offices in the Enterprise building.

Scenes from the Paramount picture "Java Head," with Leatrice Joy as the Chinese wife of the New Englander.

Theodore Jelenk, former owner of the Albany, in Schenectady, now residing in New York, along with Paul Alberts, present manager of the Albany, was a visitor along Film Row in the Capital City this week.

Engineered by Miss Rene Craven, of the First National exchange in Albany, employees in the exchange have formed an association and will hold semi-monthly social functions, the first to be a sleigh ride and dinner during the coming week.

Heavy exploitation was done in connection with the week presentation of "The Hottentot" at the Albany, in Schenectady. With Saratoga only a few miles away, an exploitation scheme in the way of a race track tip to see "Hottentot," caught on with the residents of Schenectady.

William Smalley, and his smile, arrived in Albany last week. Mr. Smalley is beginning to have a state-wide reputation through acquiring house after house, until he has one of the most important chains in the state.

A. J. Herman, manager for First National in Albany, recent winner of $200 in a contest, has now started out to land a prize in a contest for salesmen and managers running to August 1.

Moe Mark and Walter Hayes, of the Mark-Strand circuit of thetres, were in Albany and Troy the past week, arranging details incidental to the opening of the newest house, to be known as The Troy.

Nat Marcus, who has been with Pathe in Albany for the last six months, has just gone with the Merit offices in the same city.

Fred Elliott, former owner of the Clinton Square in Albany, and who used to play to poor weeks once in a while, is now taking life easy, having leased his house for the next ten years. According to Mr. Elliott, it's much easier for him these days to see a picture at 28 cents, than to know that as he sees it on the screen, it is costing him a matter of $25 or more out of pocket.

The Universal has just succeeded in booking a complete Universal program for this week at the State in Schenectady. In addition to "The Flirt," there is an International News reel and a Baby Peggy comedy, known as "Peg of the Movies."

Four employees at Ben Apple's American in Troy were laid up with the grippe last week, with the result that Mr. Apple was everything from projectionist to ticket taker.

A new orchestra leader by the name of Best, coming from the Olympic in Watertown, has been added to the Griswold, in Troy.

Every exhibitor in the Albany territory, playing Universal pictures, no matter whether it's a 300 or a 3,000 seat house, will receive the services, if desired, of R. J. McCurdy, an exploitation man just assigned to the Albany exchange.

An excellent tie-up has been made with "The Third Alarm" in Troy, with the fire department of that city. The chief even going so far as to furnish a heavily placarded engine drawn by snow white horses.

From now on the Lincoln will change its pictures on Saturday instead of Sunday, and will run from 12 o'clock noon, instead of one o'clock. The Troy house will make no advance in admission prices regardless of how expensive a picture is booked. Under the direction of H. E. Wilkinson, the new house manager, important changes are being made. A new orchestra pit was completed the past week, and the orchestra has been enlarged to 14 pieces. A projection machine has also been placed in Mr. Wilkinson's private office for screening pictures.

Troy Masque will be the guests of the American theatre next week in connection with the showing of "Peg o' My Heart."

Famous Artists Coloring "Adam and Eva"

Gustav Brock, famous Danish miniature artist whose recent exhibition at the Ehrich Galleries in New York attracted wide attention, has been engaged by Cosmopolitan Productions to do the hand coloring on the prints of Marion Davies' latest picture "Adam and Eve." This is the first time that a famous miniature artist has been engaged for such work.

Baby Peggy Doll Sale Shown as News Reel

Pictures showing the entire personal appearance of Baby Peggy, four year old Century Comedy star, in Los Angeles when she sold "Peggy" dolls for crippled Peggy Wheeler, the twenty year old girl who makes them, were flashed on the screen of California Theatres as a news reel.
as a news reel. Loew's State, the Kinema, the California and others ran this interesting picture in Los Angeles where Baby Peggy sold 75 dolls in one day, for the poor girl. The dolls named after Baby Peggy are rag creations. An autographed photo of the little star was given to each purchaser of a doll.

Comedies, Short Subjects & Serials

"By Lantern Light" a Feb. 25 Release

"BY LANTERN LIGHT," the first of the new series of Robert C. Bruce Wilderness Tales released by Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., is scheduled for release on Feb. 25.

It is this subject that Robert Bruce expects will surpass in popularity his now famous short subject epic, "And Women Must Weep," which met with wide-spread approval.

"By Lantern Light" is a story of the sea. It was for this picture that Bruce traveled the length of the coast line of California, Washington and Portland to secure fitting backgrounds.

The story carries heart interest and suspense. Coupled with which is some wonderful photography of the ocean at night in its varying moods, calmly sleeping in the moonlight, fogbound, and finally lashed into fury by a sudden gale.

Pathe Serial to Run in Newspapers

In connection with Pathe's nation-wide newspaper campaign exploiting the new Pearl White serial, "Plunder," fresh evidence is noted of the extreme cordiality of newspaper editors and publishers to the serial idea—whether utilized in their columns or on the screen.

It is well known that nearly all of the widely circulated newspapers of the United States appreciate the hold which the serial idea has on their readers.

The Gumps, Gasolene Alley, Art Gum, Bringing Up Father, When a Feller Needs a Friend—these are published serially, daily.

America's biggest and most influential newspapers and magazines all realize to the fullest extent the wonderful "pull-'em-back" power of stories, cartoons, etc., published serially. The American public likes serials, wants serials, demands serials.

Pathe—"The House of Serials"—will shortly commence a big advertising campaign in connection with their forthcoming Pearl White Pathe serial, "Plunder."

Cast For "Two Twins" Announced

Bull Montana's supporting cast in "The Two Twins," the new Hunt Stromberg production for Metro, includes Chuck Reisner, Roy Atwell, Fontaine La Rue and Jimmie Clemons. Bull will be Buster Brown and Chuck Reisner will be Custer Brown. "The Two Twins" will be directed by Hunt Stromberg, photographed by Irving Reis and edited by Robert Parker.

New Activities at Christie Plant

Three New Comedies Under Way; the Wheels Turning Fast on Two Reelers

AL CHRISTIE has finished his new comedy, "A Hula Honeymoon." Scott Sidney is directing another Christie comedy at Riverside, while a third company is making another release under the direction of Harold Beaudine.

Henry Murdock, the latest comedian to be featured by the Christie organization, has already gone to work in his second picture, which is being called "Green as Grass." Most of the scenes for this are being made around the race track at the fair grounds at Riverside. Charlotte Merriam is the leading lady.

Harold Beaudine is directing Bobby Vernon in a farce comedy. Al Christie's picture will announce a new star and a supporting cast of all new and well known players within a few days.

C. H. Christie is in New York, where he will be in conference for three weeks with officials of Educational Film exchanges, which are distributing the entire product of twenty pictures this current season.

The Christie studios have undergone many improvements and additions in preparation for an active year. Buildings include a two-story brick building for certain mechanical departments, the addition of a third motor generator set for lighting, a new office building and laying of the foundations for another stage 100 x 175 feet in dimensions. These improvements will give to the Christie Company the greatest enclosed area of stage space, all equipped for exclusive work with electric lighting, of any organization devoted exclusively to the making of comedies.

Hodkinson Inaugurates Campaign

Unusual Exploitation Planned on Literary Digest and Fun from Press

15,000 salesmen are to sell "Fun From the Press" to the public, according to an announcement just made by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and the Literary Digest, producer of this weekly budget.

5,000 of them are adult men and women who go from family to family soliciting business, and 10,000 are younger salesmen who supply anywhere from 20 to 150 families per week, and they have received instructions, according to reports, to conduct a canvass, pointing out the laughter making qualities of "Fun From the Press" and urging families that they call upon, to go to motion picture theatres showing "Fun From the Press," as they will without a doubt find the rest of the program of such exhibitor also of high quality.

In addition to this it is also stated that 25,000 street cars will continue to carry car cards, exclusively exploiting "Fun From the Press"; 650 newspapers will carry one-third to full page advertisements in which "Fun From the Press" is heavily featured; the Literary Digest with its more than 5,000,000 readers, will have, in every issue, from one-third to a full page advertisement of "Fun From the Press" together with a reading notice; this month, as they did before, a special letter in a two-cent sealed envelope, in which "Fun From the Press" is conspicuously featured, will be sent to every telephone subscriber in the United States as well as to a supplementary list of every professional man and business man in every community.

It is felt that this is one of the largest and most remarkable exploitation campaigns that has ever been given any film and reports show that exhibitors everywhere are responding to the "Fun From the Press" slogan: "Sell it to the public first and make the exhibitor's market for him."

Moves of U. S. Troops Seen in Pathe News

Stirring pictorial echoes of the great war are contained in the final chapter of American Army occupation of German territory presented in current issues of Pathe News Nos. 12 and 13. These pictures include scenes of the Yankee troops leaving Coblenz, and of their arrival at Savannah aboard the steamship St. Mihiel, together with the ceremonies of their public welcome home at the American port.

These home-coming troops are the last 1,000 of the original Army of occupation. A little more than a week earlier they were still in barracks where the stars and stripes waved above Fort Ehrenbreitstein on the Rhine cliffs—the scene of their duties since 1918. General Allen is seen at the head of his departing command in their farewell march through the streets of Coblenz.

"Our Gang" Comedy Heads Pathe List

PATHE'S list of nine releases for Feb. 25 leads with another Our Gang Comedy, "The Big Show." All the choicest spirits of the "Gang" are in it—Sunshine Sammy, Mickey Daniels, Jackie Davis, Jackie Condon, Little Farina, the bow-legged pickaninny and the enlightened bull-dog.

The new Hal Roach one-reel comedy in this list is called "Tight Shoes," presenting Paul Parrott with Jobyna Ralston.

The Patheserial, "Plunder," with Pearl White, reaches its fifth episode, "The Mysterious Hat," the Aesop's Film Fable release concludes with the moral: "It matters not how good you are, someone is always better."

Pathe Review No. 8 presents in slow motion a section called "The Rodeo Roper;" "Eye for Eye" a camera analysis presenting facts about separate human features; French Pyranees are portrayed in Pathecolor—showing how the "Geese Castles" got their name.

Pathe News Nos. 18 and 19 and Topics of the Day No. 8 and Screen Snapshots No. 20 presents noted screen celebrities.

Educational's Approved by M. P. League

The current bulletin of the National Motion Picture League lists as family films, recommended for adults and young people, the Robert C. Bruce Wilderness Tale, "Jenkins and the Mutt," the Educational-Cameo Comedy, "Dog Sense," and Louise Fazenda's first two reel comedy for Educational, the Mermaid Comedy, "Pest of the Storm Country." The current issues of Kinograms, Educational's news reel are also listed in this bulletin.

First Comedy at New Grauman's a Christie

The first comedy attraction selected for Grauman's new Metropolitan theatre at Los Angeles, was the Christie Comedy, "In Dutch." It was added to the opening week bill on Wednesday, there being no comedy billed for the first week when the show was arranged.

Grauman's own first-run rights in Los Angeles to all of this year's twenty Christie Comedies. Some are to be played at the Metropolitan, some at Grauman's Million Dollar theatre, and others at Grauman's Rialto, where pictures are played for runs.

Christie's "Babies Welcome" and Dogs Arrive

The Christies, Al and Charles, directorial and managerial executives of Educational-Christie Comedies, have been splitting their time between various exhibitions of babies and dogs.

During the production of "Babies Welcome," a forthcoming Christie Comedy, Al Christie conducted an impromptu baby show on the set for a solid week and adopted regular baby show methods in handling the infants. At the same time he was devoting his nights to the Dog Show in Los Angeles.

Coincidental with the arrival of the print of "Babies Welcome" in New York came Charles Christie with a string of blooded and pedigreed dogs which he is exhibiting at the New York Dog Show. He hopes to take back a few cups and blue ribbons to add to the collection which now graces the mantel in the old Christie homestead.

Jimmy Adams Engaged by Al. Christie

Jimmie Adams is the latest featured comedian to be engaged by Al Christie. He goes to work this week in "Green As Grass" under the direction of Scott Sidney.

Adams has been featured in Mermaid Comedies, distributed by Educational, and his alliance with Christie Comedies will thus present him on the same comedy program, since all of the new Christie Comedies are released through Educational in the United States and Canada.

"Green As Grass" will be a March release and will be a rural type of picture, with scenes at the County Fair. In the production will also be Charlotte Merriam, Earl Rodney, Ward Caulfield, and William Irving.

"Ex-Kaiser in Exile" is Called an Epoch

Hanford MacNider, Past Commander of the American Legion, William P. O'Connor, National Chaplain, William F. Deegan, Past Commander of the New York State American Legion and many others, have enthusiastically approved the two-reel attraction "The Ex-Kaiser in Exile," produced by Fred E. Hamlin, according to the report made by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, the distributors for this production which, according to Mr. Hamlin, is the only authentic motion picture showing the Ex-Kaiser as he is today and it is about the only one that ever will be taken inasmuch as the Ex-Kaiser's exile has become more exclusive since the appearance of this film in America.

"Aesops Film Fables" Featured on Program

Reports of the recent opening of the new Civic theatre in Bristol, R. I., received by Pathe, tell of a packed house convulsed over "Aesop's Film Fables," the principal comedy feature of the bill. The Civic theatre idea is said to have so taken possession of all classes of residents that the demand for seats at the opening performance exceeded the capacity of the large auditorium several times over.

New Series of Our Gang Comedies

Pathe to Release 13 Subjects Following Present Output by Roach

GENERAL MANAGER ELMER PEARSON, Pathe, this week is sponsor for the statement that the "Our Gang" series of two-reel comedies had been signed for release for another year. This means that after all of the present series have been released, thirteen more will be produced to be published one every four weeks.

Hal Roach, who sponsored the idea of putting kids and animals into two reels of lively fun, and who has completed the first thirteen of the old contract, has just left for the Coast, with the new contract safe in his pocket.

The popularity of this series of laugh-producers, in which children co-star with domestic animals, has been attested to by exhibitors who have run the first and second series, and by the testimonials and lavish praise of the press.

It had been Hal Roach's idea to make these kid comedies in five reel features, but now that exhibitors are featuring the "Our Gang" comedies over their feature in Mickey Daniels, the kid with a million freckles, "Sunshine Sammy," the colored comic, and his sister Farina, together with the other kids whose faces and antics are now familiar on every screen, will continue to be the leading characters in this new series.

Bob McGowan, who has been so successful in handling the youngsters, will continue to direct.

Exploitation accessories will be a twenty-four-sheet on the series; one and three sheet on each comedy; lobby displays; slide and advertising cuts and mats.

Mr. Pearson is again authority for the statement that next week another important announcement of newly acquired product will be forthcoming from Pathe exchange.

"Smarty" Booked by Rialto, N.Y.

First in Series of Buddy Messinger-Century Comedies for 1923

THE Rialto theatre, N. Y., will show the first of the six 1923 Buddy Messinger-Century Comedies, dealing with different phases of boy life, named "Smarty" and it is on the Century March schedule. It arrived from the Century studios at Hollywood Tuesday, February 6th, and was immediately screened in the Universal projection room and rushed to the Rialto theatre. It was booked on sight, and will be used within a week or two.

Both Century and Universal are adhering to their new sales plan of blocks of six pictures for the three Century stars, Baby Peggy, Buddy Messinger and Brownie. The Baby Peggy six are well under way with the pre-release of her second picture, "Sweetie," at the Criterion theatre, New York. The Stern Brothers are now ready to give out the full list of the Buddy Messinger six, which will be completed under the direction of Harry Edwards and released at the rate of one a month as follows:

March release, "Smarty"; April, "The Bus Boy"; May, "Sister's Beau"; June, "So Long, Buddy"; July, "Dad's Boy"; and August, "Don't Get Fresh!"

Buddy Messinger is admitted to be one of the cleverest boys on the screen. He will have a chance to duplicate his success in "Shadows" and the Universal-Jewel "The Flirt" by appearing in another Universal Jewel "The Abysmal Brute." He will also be loaned to Universal for still a third Jewel production, yet to be announced.

Young Messinger has completed "The Bus Boy" dealing with the sorrows of life in a restaurant, and is working on his May release "Sister's Beau."

Buddy has his own leading woman, or rather little girl, specially engaged for him. She is ten-year old Sadie Campbell, a little pigtailed "tow head" of Scotch descent who has had screen experience with Paramount and Clara Kimball Young.

"Sweetie" With Baby Peggy at Criterion, N.Y

"Sweetie," the second of the six Baby Peggy Century Comedy releases, came to the Criterion Theatre, New York, the week beginning February 11th, on the same bill as "Driven," the Universal Jewel.

In this picture Baby Peggy plays the part of a poor little girl who grinds an organ to help a poor blind man. A wealthy woman who rescues Peggy. The rich lady gives a party and Peggy copies as much of the Egyptian dancer's scanty costume as she can. Her foster father is shocked and opines that Peggy is going to be too much trouble. But Peggy shows who is going to be boss, and all ends happily.

In this picture Baby Peggy is supported by Louise Lorraine, the pretty leading woman of "The Oregon Trail" and other Universal serials.

Coue's Message, in Pictures, Completed

"The Message of Emile Coue," the final scenes of which were finished a few days ago at the New Rochelle Studios of Motion Picture Arts, Inc., is finished.

Just before the teacher of auto-suggestion sailed for his native France, he issued a signed statement concerning the picture. He said:

"Despairing of being able to carry my message of self-help through auto-suggestion to all those who waited for it here, I accepted the plan of my friends and gave it to the cinema which reaches millions throughout the entire country.

"I found a sympathetic group of men who make motion pictures and working with them, I have tried to place my message on the screen in such a manner as would be understood by everyone.

"The completed picture carries my message in the most graphic manner possible and I am glad to endorse it and give it my approval as the best possible picturization of what I have taught for a score of years and will teach until the end. Anyone seeing the picture will be able to understand, and I feel sure that hundreds of thousands will be helped to help themselves by seeing the lesson it tells."

"Wild Waters" Title of Fox Educational

"Wild Waters," is the name of a Fox Educational which portrays Iguazu Falls, located at the juncture of three republics in South America, Brazil, Argentine and Paraguay. These falls are greater than Niagara. The contour of Niagara includes 5,000 feet; Iguazu comprises 10,000. Niagara longest drop is 180 feet; the greatest in the South American Falls is 213 feet. There are 275 cataracts in the river, one of them alone capable of producing twenty million horse-power, if harnessed to electric dynamos. Across the cataract, in continual splendor, glistens a rainbow that is reproduced in the picture.

De Rue to Direct Jimmy Adams for Century

Eugene de Rue is the latest addition to the ranks of Century Comedy directors. He formerly directed the famous team of Lyons and Moran for eight years. Later he worked for Arrow release, making pictures with Bobbie Dunn and others.

De Rue will direct Adams in a series of situation comedies. The story will be an original and six weeks will be devoted to its production. Well known talent is now being engaged. Zion Myers will act as assistant to this company.

"The Nuisance" Is New Title of Burr Comedy

The name of C. C. Burr's latest All-Star comedy, "The Nuisance," has been changed to "The Busybody." This was done to prevent confusing it with a comedy that was produced some time ago under the same title.

C.B.C. Feature Title Is Selected

"Her Accidental Husband" is the title that has been selected by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation for the new feature that company will release to the state right market.

This is the Dallas M. Fitzgerald production, featuring an all-star cast, including Miriam Cooper, Forrest Stanley, Mitchell Lewis, Richard Tucker, Maude Wayne and Kate Lester, to which C. B. C. secured distribution rights.

The title was selected as the best submitted among hundreds offered by actual theatre patrons. The picture was taken, under a working title, and run in two large theatres and a prize offered for the best title submitted.

"Mighty Lak A Rose" Is Lauded

New York Critics Agree on Merits of Production Directed by Edwin Carewe

EDWIN CAREWE seems to have accomplished his purpose in making "Mighty Lak a Rose" for First National release. At least the critics seem to agree that he has made a fine picture.

The critic of the Exhibitors Trade review writes:

"'Mighty Lak a Rose' registers a distinct triumph in the field of moving picture art. Its appeal is universal, every chord of human emotion is sounded in turn, the spectators thrill to the savagery of the inhabitants of the great city's underworld, respond sympathetically to the woes of the blind orphan girl and alternately to the rich vein of comedy which here and there offsets the serious trend of the story."

Film Daily's critic has this to say:

"'Mighty Lak a Rose' is a mighty fine picture and Edwin Carewe deserves a great deal of credit for the worthwhile offering which he contributes to the list of the year's best. Curtis Benton's story is a wholly absorbing crook theme that is almost entirely unlike the average and contains many thoroughly original and interesting twists that make it an unusually strong and appropriate screen vehicle."

C. S. Sewell writes in the Moving Picture World:

"When a director can produce a picture that will play upon your sympathy and love of the better things of life and tug at your heartstrings at times almost to the point of tears, and at the same time introduce such fine comedy touches as to bring forth a smile or a laugh without causing a discordant note, he has achieved a result that will find a mighty echo in the hearts of motion picture fans. This is just what Edwin Carewe has accomplished in the First National production, 'Mighty Lak a Rose.'"

Here is part of the Morning Telegraph's review:

"A sweet story, full of appeal and a great deal of fragile charm. It has been ably directed by Edwin Carewe who has touched it with life and beauty. The lighting and photography are most artistic and evidence of great care to make the entire picture a thing of beauty can be seen even in the smallest details."

High Praise For "The Christian"

N. Y. Reviewers Proclaim Tourneur Production Among Best of Year

THE reviewers of motion pictures on the New York newspapers are in agreement on the point that Goldwyn's Maurice Tourneur production of "The Christian," from Sir Hall Caine's novel, is one of the outstanding picture events of the year.

"'The Christian,' a moving and exceptional photoplay," was the headline used by P. W. Gallico over his review in the News. He went on to say: "When thought, care and heart are put into the making of a picture these qualities show themselves in the film from the opening views to the final fade. Such a photoplay is 'The Christian.' We recommend 'The Christian' unqualifiedly to all lovers of the best in moving pictures."

Harriette Underhill in the Tribune describes "The Christian" as "intensely thrilling," and also says: "Mae Busch, one of the most charming and whimsical actresses on the screen, plays Glory. Richard Dix is seen as John Storm, and it is the best thing he ever did."

J. O. Spearing in the Times: "It is, as advertised, a great show. It ought to satisfy those who look to the theatre for exciting entertainment—'The Christian' is a stirring production."

The New York Sun: "'The Christian' is very shrewdly, even brilliantly, put together. . . . Tourneur uses an effective economy of means, so that the interest is always centered in the two or three human hearts palpitating before one's gaze."

Don Allen in the Evening World: "For those of you who demand art with your pictures—'The Christian' is recommended; to those of you who do not care whether it is spelled with large or small 'A' 'The Christian' is recommended and for those who shout for 'real stories' on the screen we recommend 'The Christian.'"

The Journal critic wrote: "Broad in its scope, rich with beauteous adornment and spiced with action, 'The Christian' is great not so much for these things as for the fact that it vividly and poignantly pictures the soul of a man in whose breast there rages a tremendous struggle."

The Evening Telegram said: "Another notable chapter is written in motion picture history with 'The Christian' . . . a red letter achievement."

The Evening Post: "The Christian' is a thrilling and interesting film. The cast is really all-star. Richard Dix does his best work as John Storm."

Tom Mills Engaged by Choice Productions

Choice Productions, Inc., have added to their staff Director Thomas R. ("Tom") Mills, who will be recalled as the person responsible for the successful production of the first of the O. Henry series. Among his longer productions were "Indiscretion," starring Lillian Walker; "His Mother's Sin," starring Earle Williams; "The Unknown Quantity," with Corinne Griffith, and "The Invisible Divorce" for Selznick. Mills is now directing a series of two-reelers for Choice Productions which promise to do even better than his prior efforts.

"Streets of New York" Scores in Reading

In the face of one of the worst snowstorms in the history of Reading, the big Arrow special, "The Streets of New York," opened to big business at Carr and Schad's beautiful Arcadia theatre on Monday.

The picture was well advertised for a week before the showing, but no extraordinary or freak exploitation was resorted to. The campaign was under the direction of a representative of Arrow, and Paul E. Glase, director of advertising and publicity for Carr and Schad.

Foreign Rights Sold on C.B.C. Features

Foreign rights are selling quickly on the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation series of box office winners, and almost all the foreign territories have already been disposed of, according to C. B. C. Another sale was made this week when English rights were taken over on "Only a Shopgirl" by the Walturdaw Company, Ltd., of London.

Local aspects are being worked out in connection with the exploitation campaign. Prints are being delivered at once and the exploitation accessories are being sent over immediately so no time may be lost in launching the feature in England.

Nazimova's "Salome" Is Praised by Board

The Nazimova production of Oscar Wilde's "Salome" heads the list of exceptional photoplays in a recent issue of the National Board of Review's bulletin, "Exceptional Photoplays."

In commenting on this Allied Producers and Exhibitors Corporation release the Review speaks of the "rare courage required by Mme. Nazimova in attempting an authentic presentation of 'Salome' on the American screen," and goes on to say:

"Such an undertaking called for a great deal of artistic courage and no small degree of financial courage as well. The problem was to hold the interest of a popular audience with this exotic masterpiece of Oscar Wilde and at the same time steer clear of the imminent perils of censorship."

Goldwyn Inaugurates New Library

Consistent with its increased activity in all lines, the Goldwyn studio has inaugurated a complete, and fully equipped library and research department in charge of Harriet Morris, who, besides being a graduate of Smith College and special worker in drama courses at University of California, has had five years of motion picture experience with D. W. Griffith, Famous Players-Lasky and others.

Miss Morris will organize the department under supervision of June Mathis, Editorial Director, along broad lines which will fit it to give advice on matters of costume, properties, customs, modes of life; in fact, any question which might arise in connection with any period. The library will consist not alone of books, but will include hundreds, and finally thousands, of filed and indexed pictures of all sorts.

Tom Mix Favorite of Thomas Edison

That Tom Mix, the Fox star of Western melodrama, is one of his four favorite motion picture stars was declared by Thomas Edison in a newspaper interview on his seventy-sixth birthday last Monday, according to the Fox office.

Century Old Costumes Utilized

Prominent Quakeresses in Realistic Sets for "Down to Sea in Ships"

QUAINT costumes and customs of a century ago are picturesquely revived in Clifton's romance of the old whaling days, "Down to the Sea in Ships," shortly to be released as a special feature by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

According to Mr. Clifton, many of the still prominent Quakeresses of New Bedford, Mass., at which place the locale of this production was laid, gave their aid in providing a realistic setting and background for this production. Even the quaint, drab, though picturesque, meeting house used by the New Bedford Quakers for more than 100 years was utilized, including a faithful reproduction of a Quaker marriage ceremony, presided over by genuine members of the sect and carried out with all of the solemnity with which the service was solemnized since the earliest days of the faith.

It is further stated that when Mr. Clifton approached the citizens of New Bedford for their aid in preserving for all time a faithful reproduction of the whaling industry which has put the little town of New Bedford on the map, it was gladly given, and he had no trouble in persuading the quiet-mannered Quakers to give their assistance. Treasure chests, long since forgotten, were resurrected from musty attics and garrets. Gowns, the pride of their wearers in the long ago, were retrieved, quaint little nicknacks and mementoes were brought to light and not a single detail overlooked that would aid in providing a most realistic setting.

It is said that at least one of the Quaker gowns shown in the picture is more than 150 years old. It was worn by the grandmother of the present wearer, who is herself more than 80 years of age, and is the identical gown in which she was married three decades ago. Laces, shawls, bonnets, even handkerchiefs, which years and years ago were the prized possessions of their owners, were introduced.

"Down to the Sea in Ships" is a whaling story essentially, but embodies a theme that is replete with romance and heart interest, affords plenty of thrills, and is said to be convincingly realistic.

"Westbound 99" Nearly Ready

Emory Johnson Special for F. B. O. Will Be Ready for Release in Spring

EMORY JOHNSON, producer of "In the Name of the Law" and "The Third Alarm," is completing this week his third production for the Film Booking Offices of America, a railroad drama titled "Westbound 99." This production will be a big special F. B. O. release in the Spring.

Following up his successes in his first two pictures, Mr. Johnson has retained Ralph Lewis in the starring role. Mr. Lewis, according to reports from G. B. O. exchanges, has won a large following in his recent F. B. O. picture and many requests have been received from exhibitors that he be kept in stellar roles in forthcoming Johnson productions.

In the supporting cast with Mr. Lewis in "Westbound 99," are Johnny Harron and Ella Hall, who supply the romantic appeal. Miss Hall appeared in "In the Name of the Law" and "The Third Alarm." Harron, a brother of the late Bobby Harron, is a newcomer to the F. B. O. fold, and in this picture will play the most important role of his career. Claire McDowell, Taylor Graves, Wedgewood Nowell, Richard Morris, David Kirby and Jane Morgan complete the cast of principals. The story and scenario are by Emilie Johnson, author of both previous Johnson F. B. O. releases. Ross Fisher is behind the camera.

According to information received from the F. B. O. studio, "Westbound 99" will combine heart interest appeal with vigorous physical action. Among the big thrills of the picture is a railroad climax which it is claimed will rival in realism anything heretofore shown on the screen.

In "Westbound 99" Mr. Johnson will offer a production which will be of unusual interest to the hundreds of thousands of men and women connected with railroading in this country. The production will be an accurate picturization of the routine and the adventures of a railroadman's life, and in this respect will be unique in the annals of screen entertainment.

Fire Chief Sings for "Third Alarm"

To prove the extent of the cooperation extended by fire departments throughout the country on "The Third Alarm," Film Booking Offices of America, cites an instance in Durham, N. C., where Fire Chief Frank W. Bennett rendered "The Third Alarm" theme song, "A Fire Laddy," from the stage as a part of the picture's prologue.

William Conn, F. B. O. Charlotte branch manager, claims that this is the first time that such an unusual added attraction has been shown with "The Third Alarm." Needless to say the appearance of the chief on the stage helped fill the house to capacity during the two days of the showing.

Hirliman Establishes N. Y. Offices

In order to be nearer the film center, Charles J. Hirliman, president of the Hirlagraph Motion Picture Corporation, has opened executive offices in New York. Mr. Hirliman's developing and printing laboratory is located in Fort Lee, N. J.

Corinne Griffith, engaged by Goldwyn to play the leading role in Elinor Glyn's "Six Days."

Big Wichita House Books "Fighting Blood"

"Fighting Blood," the new series of two reel pictures now being offered by Film Booking Offices of America, will be shown in one of the finest theatres in the Middle West, according to an announcement recently received from the F. B. O. Kansas City exchange. These H. C. Witwer-Collier's Weekly stories have been booked by Stanley Chambers, of Miller's theatre, Wichita, Kansas. The Miller theatre is considered among the most representative houses of its territory.

In booking "Fighting Blood" Mr. Stanley personally gave his endorsement to the pictures as equal in every respects to his demands for high class short features. The entire series of twelve pictures will be shown at regular intervals.

"Mind Over Motor" Is Completed

Principal Pictures Corporation has announced the completion of "Mind Over Motor" based on a story written by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

"Mind Over Motor" is said to be a luxurious production starring Trixie Friganza, for many years one of the leading stars of the vaudeville and musical comedy branches of show business.

Jannings in "Othello" on B'way Feb. 25th

BEN BLUMENTHAL will present "Othello" with Emil Jannings in the title role at the Criterion Theatre, New York, beginning February 25th. This continental production, the United States, Canadian, New Zealand, and Australian rights to which are held by Ben Blumenthal of Export and Import Film Co. in conjunction with David P. Howells, is declared in the advance reports to be "a masterpiece of cinematographic art." Jannings' portrayal of Othello, it is claimed, "will be classed with the very greatest of Shakespearian performances."

The part of Iago is acted by Werner Kraus, who played the title role in "Dr. Caligari." Ica Lenkeffy, hitherto unknown in this country, plays the part of Desdemona. Dimitri Buchowetzki, the famous Russian director produced "Othello" for Mr. Blumenthal and David P. Howells.

Anti-Drug Movement Is Winning Big Support

National figures, municipal officials and others who are fighting the drug traffic are rallying to the support of Mrs. Wallace Reid in the production of her picture showing the menace of the drug evil. Educators, congressmen, police officials and representative citizens in all walks of life are sending messages to Mrs. Reid expressing their sympathy and commending her in her effort to eradicate the cancer gnawing at the heart of the American people and her unselfish proposal to found a free institution for the cure of addicts.

In Los Angeles, on Lincoln's birthday, the first gun was fired in a national crusade against the drug traffic by the organization of the Los Angeles Anti-Narcotic League. This is to be the first of many such bodies which will be formed throughout the country.

The Los Angeles committee includes such well-known people as Dr. R. B. Von Kleinschmidt, president of the University of Southern California, who is temporary president of the league, and George E. Cryer, mayor of Los Angeles.

Equity Decides on Future Policy

New Plan Inaugurated After Survey by Corps of Field Representatives

FOR the past three months Equity Pictures Corporation has had a corps of twelve special representatives out in the field of distribution and exhibition for the express purpose of getting first-hand information on the needs of the market. This policy was inaugurated by Equity Pictures for the express purpose of determining whether the independent market could absorb many or few pictures and just what kind of pictures were best suited for the Independent distributor and exhibitor.

This entire campaign came to a successful conclusion this week when a meeting was held at the Equity office and all twelve representatives were present with first-hand information on the various key centers and territories throughout the United States. After a careful study of conditions and a debate on the results of the investigation the following matters were agreed upon and the following policy determined for future Equity operations:

Exhibitors in every part of the country are only too glad to sign for independent product, if it is good product.

The advisability of making a few pictures that are worth-while and the concentration on these few productions for maximum results.

The firm decision to make only six pictures per year and to make these six pictures guaranteed successes for distributors and exhibitors.

"Has the World Gone Mad" will be Equity release No. 2 for the current year and will be followed by four more productions of the same class and caliber, in strict accordance with the plans already decided upon.

Warners Plan Advertising Drive

National Campaign Being Arranged for Series of Eighteen Classics

THE biggest national advertising drive in the history of the Warner Brothers organization is being planned and will be launched for the coming series of eighteen Warner classics of the screen, following the completion of the Sinclair Lewis novel, "Main Street," according to Harry M. Warner.

An approximate expenditure of $5,000,000 will be involved in the production and exploitation of the eighteen classics. A substantial portion of this amount will be spent in trade paper advertising, in a national billboard campaign, and in the leading fiction and motion picture magazines.

"In planning our national advertising campaign," said Mr. Warner, "we have taken into consideration the vital and unusual phases of the campaign. The trade in general and the public knows of the transcontinental tour being made by our float which is advertising the seven classics being released this season.

"We have planned something unusual and something with as wide and far reaching a scope as the float for the coming series of eighteen productions. And while I do not care to reveal my plan at this time, exhibitors can rest assured that our policy of co-operation will be doubly effective and productive of greater and bigger box-office results with our attractions."

The screen players already on the Warner roster include Marie Prevost, the featured player in "The Beautiful and Damned," Monte Blue, who plays a leading part in "Brass," and is at present playing the leading male role in "Main Street," and Harry Myers, who has appeared with Miss Prevost and Blue in the first two features.

Wesley "Freckles" Barry will be featured in several productions to be directed by William Beaudine, who directed the two current attractions starring the youngster. Two of the coming features are "Little Johnny Jones," and "George Washington, Jr.," both George M. Cohan stage successes.

Cosmopolitan Romance Colorful

Parisian Scenes Create Excitement as "Enemies of Women" is Picturized

IN filming "Enemies of Women," considered by many to be Vicente Blasco Ibanez's greatest romance, Cosmopolitan Productions probably occasioned more excitement in certain sections of Paris than the capital of France has witnessed since that memorable day in August, 1914, when the declaration of war was made. Although not the most predominant factor, the war itself is woven through the story, and many of the scenes in the picture reveal the patriotic fervor of the gay boulevardiers as they swarmed to the protection of La Belle France.

Paris, Nice and Monte Carlo, all being locations for "Enemies of Women," the Cosmopolitan Corporation, desirous of overlooking no opportunity to give to the photoplay the last touch of atmosphere, sent the entire company making the picture to Europe for six weeks. Of these six weeks two were spent in Paris, during which time many Parisians re-lived the days when the war cloud settled over Europe.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Samuel H. London, General Manager of Associated Photo-Plays, Inc., of the reorganization of that company, and re-establishment of their franchise plan of distribution.

The Associated Photo-Plays will re-enter the independent market with a series of five productions starring Milton Sills, directed by John Gorman, and produced by John Gorman Productions. The first production, "Why Women Re-Marry" has just been completed. It is a splendid human drama of every day life from the story by Van A. James.

Milton Sills has been surrounded with a star cast headed by Ethel Grey Terry, and including such well known screen players as Carol Holloway, Wilfred Lucas, Clarissa Selwynne and William Lowery.

A New York Office of the Associated Photo-Plays, Inc., has just been opened.

C.B.C. Adds New Stars to "Temptation"

Three more big names were added to the line for C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation's "Temptation" with the signing of Eva Novak, June Elvidge and Vernon Steele for important roles in this production.

Bryant Washburn is also in this production and the addition of the three new stars is looked upon by the producers and the territorial holders of the series as important.

Eva Novak's most recent achievements were with Paramount in the leading feminine role with Jack Holt in "The Making of a Man" and in "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" with Thomas Meighan.

June Elvidge played in the Meighan picture, "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow," and with Gloria Swanson in "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew."

Vernon Steele played most recently in "The Hands of Nara," "For the Defense," "When the Devil Drives," "The Girl Who Ran Wild," "The Danger Point" and "Thelma."

First F.X.B. Production Due in March

The first production of the F. X. B. Pictures. Inc., in which Whitman Bennett is presenting Francis X. Bushman, co-starring with Beverly Bayne, is well under way. Work is being carried on in order that this elaborate vehicle will be ready for distribution by the middle of March.

The story is adapted from a famous English novel, "Lady Varley," by Derick Vane. The continuity is by Dorothy Farnum, scenario writer for Mr. Bennett's Lionel Barrymore and Betty Blythe productions, and "Tess of the d'Ubervilles" for Marshall Neilan. Laurence Windom is the director and Edward F. Paul the cameraman.

"One Exciting Night" Liked in Detroit

"If 'One Exciting Night' doesn't run three weeks at the Strand we'll stop reviewing pictures and go to work," said J. L. K., critic for the Detroit Evening Times in his review of D. W. Griffith's mystery picture, a United Artists release, when it opened at the Broadway Strand theatre, Detroit, and started an indefinite run to a packed house. "Griffith has put another halo around the genius that 'shot' 'The Birth of a Nation.' Movie fans have seen Griffith in romance, Griffith in spectacle, Griffith in pathos and Griffith in war, but never Griffith in mystery melodrama. Try it just once. You'll like him in melodrama, too!"

"D. W. Griffith's 'One Exciting Night' is that and a lot more," said the critic for the Detroit News. "It is decidedly novel entertainment and will doubtless prove one of the most talked of pictures of the current season. Although there are only two film veterans in the cast, the picture is unusual if only for its excellent acting."

MacLean Progressing on "Going Up"

Douglas MacLean has been at work for three weeks now on the production of "Going Up," his first feature for Associated Exhibitors, and has progressed sufficiently to give a pretty clear idea of what may be expected in the finished film. Persons who have been privileged to witness the shooting of some of the scenes declare that "Going Up" is easily the biggest thing the popular comedian has ever attempted. Mr. MacLean himself predicts it will be even more entertaining than "The Hottentot," the Thomas H. Ince production in which he is featured.

Raymond Griffith, who wrote the scenario for "Going Up," is said to have followed closely the story of the original musical comedy, which was by Otto Harbach, with music by Louis A. Hirsch. The musical comedy, which was adapted from "The Aviator," by James Montgomery, was one of the biggest Broadway stage successes during the winter 1917-1918, and contained a wealth of material easily capable of use on the screen.

Metro Cast is Selected for "Desire"

The cast for "Desire," Louis Burston's new picture which will be filmed at the Metro studios, includes many well-known and capable players. For the interpretations in this story by John V. Clymer and Henry R. Symonds, Mr. Burston has selected Marguerite De La Motte, John Bowers, Estelle Taylor, David Butler, Walter Long, Lucille Hutton, Edward Connelly, Noah Beery, Ralph Lewis, Russell Simpson, Hank Mann and Chester Conklin.

Each of these players has hitherto been featured prominently in big screen productions, and their being assembled in the cast of one play is an indication of the high standard being set by Mr. Burston for this production.

"Desire" is being directed by Rowland V. Lee, and photographed by George Barnes. J. J. Hughes is art director.

Popular Novels on Goldwyn List

"The Christian" Heads List to Which "The Spoilers" Is Latest Addition

THE motion picture industry is again turning to the world's great novels for material for its pictures. Goldwyn has just completed, or is now making, photoplays based upon six novels which have been translated into the language of nearly every important country on the globe. And Goldwyn has more announcements along this line to come.

The first novel to be filmed in the present list of productions was Sir Hall Caine's "Christian," which Maurice Tourneur directed, and which has just been released. This film has had a number of pre-release showing and has aroused enthusiasm wherever shown. Many prominent reviewers and film people have called it one of the few greatest photoplays which have ever been made. In the cast are Richard Dix, Mae Busch, Phyllis Haver, Gareth Hughes, Claude Gillingwater and a score more.

Then came Marshall Neilan's first production in association with Goldwyn, "The Strangers' Banquet," from Donn Byrne's novel. This picture is said to be making new Neilan "fans" wherever films are screened and is undoubtedly one of his biggest successes. Claire Windsor, Rockecliffe Fellowes, Hobart Bosworth, Eleanor Boardman, Nigel Barrie, Claude Gillingwater and about thirty more prominent screen actors appear in it.

Hugo Ballin and his wife, Mabel Ballin, have just completed a special feature based upon Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," which Goldwyn is distributing Mabel Ballin is starred in the role of Becky Sharp. Hobart Bosworth is the Lord Steyne; Harrison Ford the George Osborne; Earle Foxe the Captain William Dobbin, and George Walsh the Joseph Sedley.

Marshall Neilan is going to picturize another famous novel for Goldwyn, Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles." The only member of the cast yet engaged is Blanche Sweet who will play the leading role of Tess.

By an arrangement just entered into with Jesse D. Hampton who is making a new screen version of Rex Beach's Alaskan gold strike novel, "The Spoilers," the production will be made at the Goldwyn studios and will be distributed by that firm. Lambert Hillyer will direct the picture. Four stars have been engaged thus far for its leading roles, Milton Sills, Anna Q. Nilsson, Bryant Washburn and Wallace MacDonald.

And then there is Gen. Lew Wallace's "Ben Hur" the screen rights to which Goldwyn purchased from A. L. Erlanger, who made the stage production, for close to a million dollars. The continuity has been prepared by June Mathis.

"Driven" Acclaimed by Critics

Reviewers on N. Y. Dailies Praise Brabin Production at Criterion Showing

CHARLES J. BRABIN'S Universal Jewel production "Driven" had its premiere public showing last Sunday in the Criterion theatre, New York, and definitely established itself with theatregoers.

It received an unusually hearty reception at the hands of newspaper reviewers in New York.

In the N. Y. Times the feature was reviewed in part, as follows:

"'Driven,' the motion picture of Southern mountaineer life, which opened an engagement at the Criterion theatre yesterday afternoon, is one of the most genuine films ever shown on Broadway. Except for its ending, which is in part a concession to the popular taste for theatrical hokum, it is convincingly sincere. And, most important of all, it is intensely dramatic."

Helen Pollock, of the N. Y. Morning Telegraph, said:

"Without attempting to compromise with his audience, Brabin has presented the drab life of a group of mountaineers and has succeeded in enlisting sympathy through sheer realism, devoid of cheap sentimentality."

The N. Y. Evening Telegram had this to say:

"'Driven,' a screen version of 'The Flower of the Flock,' which was unreeled at the Criterion theatre last night, is among the best cinemas produced here in a long time. Not only is the story plausible and well told, but every character in it fits like a glove. There are many thrilling moments during the unfolding of the story."

P. W. Gallico, in the N. Y. Daily News, wrote:

"'Driven,' to us, stands out as one of the best photoplays we have ever seen from an American producer. This is a tall statement, but we stick to it. It is powerfully dramatic, brilliantly acted and directed, and makes no concessions."

Harriette Underhill, in the N. Y. Tribune, characterized the film feature as "fascinating and real," and a picture which Brabin had done "perfectly."

"It is well worth seeing," she concluded.

"Driven" was made by Brabin in the Southern mountains, where he took his small cast of players. The cast includes Elinor Fair, Charles E. Mack, (by courtesy of D. W. Griffith), Emily Fitzroy, Burr McIntosh, George Bancroft and several others.

Laurie Books Feature in Two Houses

Jake Laurie has booked the Associated Exhibitors feature, "Breaking Home Ties," for simultaneous runs of a week each in his Modern and Beacon theatres, Boston.

"Drug Traffic" Due for for Early Release

THE systematic campaign being waged nationally to suppress the use of narcotics seems to have made the Harvey 'Gates' release, "The Drug Traffic" a timely picture, judging by the deals closed this week for distribution. Prints of the picture were completed last week and it will be ready for bookings for the first week in March. The following exchanges this week closed deals for distribution of the feature:

Renowned Pictures Exchange for New York City, northern New Jersey and New York State.

Gene Marcus of Twentieth Century Film Exchange of Philadelphia for eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey.

Standard Film Exchange of Pittsburgh, Detroit, Cleveland and Cincinnati for Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio and Michigan.

Midwest Film Exchange of Milwaukee for Wisconsin.

Si Griever of Griever Productions, Inc., of Chicago for Illinois.

Ben Friedman of Friedman Film Exchange of Minneapolis for Minnesota, North and South Dakotas.

All-Star Features Exchange for Washington, Idaho, Montana and Oregon.

De Luxe Film Exchange of Washington for District of Columbia, Maryland and Virginia.

Book Trade Publication Urges Tieups

The current issue of Publishers' Weekly, a leading publication of the book trade, carries a double-page advertisement of Joseph Hergesheimer's novel, "Java Head," and the George Melford Paramount production of the same title. The publisher of the book, A. A. Knopf, is co-operating with Paramount in the advertising, and the copy is embellished with stills from the picture, a reproduction of the special jacket used for the photoplay edition and a photograph of the crowd outside the New York Rivoli theatre taken while the picture was being shown there.

Miami Swelldom Seen in "The Net"

A number of the exteriors for "The Net," the Fox special production directed by J. Gordon Edwards, to be released Feb. 25, were made in Miami, Florida. The principal scene of the Maravene Thompson story taken in Miami was the wedding of the heroine. It was staged on the law of the Royal Palm Hotel, with a remarkable assembly of wedding guests.

A notice was posted in the lobby of the hotel, the day before, inviting any of the guests who might care to act as friends and acquaintances of the bride to be on hand at a certain hour. Fifty regular extras had been engaged, and director Edwards was hopeful that a dozen or so of the guests of the exclusive Royal Palm might think it a lark to take part in the making of a moving picture. To his surprise, over four hundred of the patrons of the hotel, properly attired, were on hand and entered into the spirit of the scene with an enthusiastic interest that delighted the director.

Guy Bates Post Signed by Lesser

Star's First Vehicle for Principal Pictures to be Story by Curwood

GUY BATES POST, one of the best known stage and screen stars, has signed a contract with Sol Lesser of Principal Pictures Corporation.

The consummation of the Post-Lesser deal was brought about through the efforts of Robert T. Thornby and E. de B. Newman, executives of the Courtland Pictures Corporation. These film men will participate in the production of the initial offerings starring Mr. Post, and all distribution will sail through the channels of Principal Pictures Corporation.

It is understood that Mr. Post's recent contract with Richard Walton Tully during the filming of "The Masquerader" and "Omar, the Tentmaker" was in the neighborhood of $50,000 a picture, with a fifty-fifty sharing arrangement on the profits of each production. The financial end of the Principal Pictures contract that Mr. Post today signed with Lesser is said to equal this amount.

Work will commence on the initial picture in the immediate future with Roberty Thornby directing.

One of the outstanding features in this contract is the fact that Mr. Post will lay aside his costume roles and will be seen in stories of the great American outdoors. The first production is to be a James Oliver Curwood story which the author is writing especially for Mr. Post. The title is "The Man From Ten Strike."

Kane Enthuses Over Production

Says "Courtship of Miles Standish" Is Charles Ray's Greatest Achievement

"THE greatest achievement of Charles Ray's film career" was a phrase used this week by Arthur S. Kane, president of the Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corporation, in discussing "The Courtship of Miles Standish," on the production of which Mr. Ray is now engaged.

Mr. Ray has surrounded himself with a large cast of name parts. An exact replica of the Mayflower has been built in the Ray studios and will, of course, have a prominent place in the photoplay. The boat was christened on Forefathers' Day, in December last, when more than a hundred members of the California Society of Mayflower Descendants held their annual meeting on its deck.

For many months the research department of Mr. Ray's organization, reinforced by a number of special experts, devoted the entire time to a painstaking study of the history and traditions of the Mayflower adventure. The investigation disclosed that the Pilgrim Fathers overcame even more and greater difficulties than are recorded in most of the text books. Some of these will be revealed in the picture, and already historical, genealogical and religious authorities, realizing the value of the film in contributing to general knowledge, have given their indorsement to Mr. Ray's project.

The basis of the story is Longfellow's epic poem, with the love story—the first in American history—of John Alden and Priscilla Mullens knitting together the larger fabric of the play. Mr. Ray portrays the immortal lover who spoke for his friend Miles Standish, only to win his own life partner. Mr. Kane made it clear that the picture is to be much more than a historical film or even a great spectacular production.

Paramount Company Back in U.S.

Return From Panama Where Exteriors For "Ne'er-Do-Well" Were Made

AFTER six weeks in Panama, where exterior scenes for Rex Beach's "The Ne'er-Do-Well," were filmed, Thomas Meighan and a company of players under the direction of Alfred E. Green arrived in New York this week on board the S.S. Toloa. The company will begin work immediately at the Paramount Long Island studio on the interior scenes for the picture.

Scenes were made in Panama City, Colon, in the Canal Zone and on the island of Toboga. Among the interesting places used were the ruins of Old Panama, which was destroyed in 1625 by Morgan, the pirate; the old Cherokee prison, famous in early Spanish history of the country, and the famous Union Club. Scenes of the Panama Canal locks were filmed both from the air by government planes and from ships passing through the locks.

On the return trip the company spent two days in Costa Rica, visiting San Jose, a mountain resort, where the most beautiful Spanish women in the world are said to reside. While in Costa Rica a baseball team composed of members of the Paramount company with Alfred Green as the pitcher played two games of baseball with the city team, winning one and losing one.

In Panama the Paramount company was so well liked that the president of the Republic, Senor Parraz, entertained the members at a San Cocho, a native festival, and at the Panama race course the Thomas Meighan handicap was run and a Lila Lee cup was presented to the winning jockey.

Principal Closes Deal in Northwest

Another sales deal of importance was negotiated this week by Harry Rathner, sales representative of Principal Pictures Corporation, according to a telegram Eastern Manager Irving Lesser received from him. Mr. Rathner who has been on the road several weeks has closed several important deals. This week he closed a transaction with Ben Friedman of Friedman Film Exchange of Minneapolis whereby Mr. Friedman will in the future handle the output of Principal Pictures Corporation. The first two releases include "The World's A Stage," based on Elinor Glyn's story and starring Dorothy Phillips, whose services were acquired through permission granted by Associated First National; and "Environment" starring Milton Sills and Alice Lake. Friedman also purchased "Flesh and Blood," an all-star special.

This is the third big deal closed by Principal Pictures Corporation in as many weeks. Two weeks ago Mr. Rathner closed a deal with the Enterprise Distributing Corporation which will handle Principal productions in the South and Southeast. Last week Mr. Lesser negotiated a deal with Harry Charnas whereby Mr. Charnas' exchanges in Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit will handle Principal Pictures.

Special Press Sheet For Warner Feature

An eight page press sheet containing a large number of helpful publicity and exploitation aids for exhibitors has been published by the Warner Brothers advertising and publicity staff in connection with the latest Warner classic, "Little Church Around the Corner," which has been adapted by Olga Printzlau from the play by Charles Blaney and the novel by Marion Russell.

The sheet is of newspaper size, and each page is filled with material suitable for publication. Three and one half pages have been devoted to stories concerning the production. Feature yarns of moderate length, production cuts, suggestions for a mailing campaign, program readers, advance and current reviews, and forceful one, two and three column newspaper advertisements are to be found throughout the broadside press sheet.

Gilbert Again Due in Romantic Role

"Truxton King," the latest John Gilbert picture, produced by Fox Film Corporation, scheduled for February 18, gives the public an excellent opportunity to contrast the star's performance of the romantic role of Edmund Dantes in "Monte Cristo" with his acting of an up-to-date American thrown into the intrigues of a European principality and madly in love with a lady of the court, according to the Fox office. Through this romantic atmosphere John Gilbert's striking personality maintains the same magnetism and charm it displayed in the Dumas story, it is claimed.

"One Exciting Night" Baffles Sleuths

That professional sleuths, even to those in the United States Secret Service, are not more clever at unravelling screen mystery than the average motion picture fan was demonstrated recently when the management of the Broadway Strand theatre, Detroit, gave a special review of D. W. Griffith's "One Exciting Night," a United Artists release, a day or two before the opening of an indefinite run.

It was strictly a professional audience at the review. Men from the U. S. Secret Service were present as were men from private detective agencies. Police Commissioner Inches of Detroit, could not attend but his department was well represented. Every detective, every secret service man, and every agency operator, sat spellbound all through the unreeling of "One Exciting Night," and not one of them had the mystery action solved before the last flicker of the last reel, it is said.

Paramount Stars Silk Show Feature

Leatrice Joy and Nita Naldi, two popular Paramount picture actresses, were featured at the International Silk Show last week at the Grand Central palace. Miss Joy appeared Friday night in the Chinese costume she wore in "Java Head," George Melford's Paramount picture which is being shown on Broadway now. With the Russian Symphony orchestra playing an oriental tune, Miss Joy was carried on a Chinese dais down the grand stairway to the magnificent Corticelli silk booth. She was given a great ovation by the throng of visitors of the Silk Show.

On Tuesday night Miss Naldi, wearing a rich red gown of brocaded silk, completely took the show by storm when she walked down the grand stairway while the orchestra played "The Sheik."

Russell at Work on New Production

L. Case Russell is at work on the next Blazed Trail Productions feature for John Lowell. The title of this special, which is scheduled to follow Blazed Trail's present release, "Lost in a Big City," is not announced, but it is understood that the working title is "Power." George Irving, who directed "Lost in a Big City," will direct, Joseph Settle will photograph, and it is understood that Evangeline Russell, is to appear opposite Mr. Lowell in this new feature.

"Darkness and Daylight" Is Completed

Albert W. Plummer, Director, has completed "Darkness and Daylight," his first production for Bancroft Pictures Corporation. The story was taken from an old popular melodrama which played throughout America for over 30 years. Some of the finest homes in New England were used to advantage by the producer. The cast includes a number of favorite screen players.

Palmer Photoplay Enters Field

Starts Work on "Out Of Night," First of Series of Big Features

THE entry of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation into the producing field brings with it the promise to the public for better stories, and the removal of the barrier between gifted outside writers and the screen.

Camera work has begun upon "Out of the Night," the first of the series of big photodramatic features to be produced. It was written by Mrs. Ethel Styles Middleton of Pittsburgh, who trained herself in screen technique through the Palmer Educational Deartment. Joseph De Grasse, whose recent successes have placed him in the top rank of directors, has been entrusted with the direction. Lloyd Hughes, who played opposite Mary Pickford in her second "Tess of the Storm Country," has the leading role. Lucille Ricksen plays opposite him; George Hackathorne, Myrtle Stedman, Philo McCullough, Claire McDowell, Frankie Darrel and Muriel MacCormick make up the supporting cast.

"Our avowed policy of strict honesty and truth-telling begins with this announcement," said President Roy L. Manker. "We say, therefore, that we do not guarantee to turn out a 'world beater' in our first production. We have a splendid story that is the selection from a great process of elimination which brought forth from so-called 'outside' writers nearly a hundred photoplays so good, so original, and so effective from the motion picture standpoint, that the final choice was a matter of extreme difficulty. Upon the foundation of this masterful story we shall build a production that has all the other advantages we can obtain for it in the entire industry.

"Our policy is nothing short of a declaration of independence that may be interpreted as predicting the beginning of a new era in motion picture making. We hope to prove that the talented, trained 'outside' author is capable of supplying a fresh, virile, inspiring screen literature, a literature peculiar to the motion picture. Moreover, we are creating the precedent of paying these hitherto unrecognized authors a royalty upon the profits of the pictures.

"If our success with 'Out of the Night' does not measure up to our own high expectations, we shall admit the fact, and set ourselves to proving that our foundation is sound by starting upon our next production, and another, and another; the general public, our students, our other friends and the industry in general must judge us by the ensemble rather than by our first effort."

Critics Praise Laurette Taylor

Chicago Reviewers Commend Star as One of Screen's Greatest Actresses

THE fulsome praise bestowed by New York critics upon Laurette Taylor in the leading role in the screen version of "Peg o' My Heart" has been repeated by the Chicago reviewers. This Metro photoplay, from J. Hartley Manners' great stage success which scored a supreme triumph in the metropolis, was met with the highest delight in the western city. The critics were unanimous in classing Miss Taylor as one of the screen's greatest actresses by virtue of this, her first photoplay.

Carl Sandberg, writing in the Chicago Daily News, says:

"Not often are we so pleasantly surprised as in the case of Laurette Taylor of the spoken play stage, entering the silent picture drama and coming across with notable, extraordinary pantomimic ability of the kind necessary in the photoplay worth while."

Genevieve Harris writes in the Evening Post:

"Laurette Taylor as a screen debutante is really quite remarkable. Part of her success is due to the fact that she is a mistress of pantomime. Her eyes and mouth express every shade of passing emotion. Her movements, her gestures, are as perfectly suited to a screen role as are those of two of the 'veterans' of pictures, Mary Pickford and Mabel Normand— . . . The picture has been beautifully photographed, with many exquisite exteriors and pleasing interior sets. A good supporting cast aids the star. . . ."

Virginia Dale writes in the Journal:

"There she shines. There her eyes roll, her lips curl whimsically, and the very dew of youth is in the artifices and the ingenuousness of Peg."

The Herald and Examiner says:

"Miss Taylor obtained as her director, King Vidor, one of the most resourceful and competent men in the business. . . . The picture has been pronounced one of the most perfect pieces of winsome love action ever put into film."

Vitagraph Special Aids Benefit Fund

"My Wild Irish Rose," was the medium selected in Toledo to raise funds to equip the home of The Little Sisters of the Poor with electric lights. Through arrangement with the management of the Alhambra theatre the Vitagraph special was shown for a full week, twenty per cent. of the gross receipts going to the Knights for the fund. Monday night was set aside as Toledo Night, and each following night was named after some section of the city closing with Saturday as Interurban Night. On the Saturday before the opening there was a big parade, the marchers singing "My Wild Irish Rose," a song made famous by Chauncey Olcott and which plays an important part in the picture.

Rintintin—famous German Police Dog and world war hero, to be featured in "Wolf Fangs," a Chester M. Franklin production, to be supervised by Harry Rapf, for Warner Bros.

Toronto Aids Approval to "Robin Hood"

"Undoubtedly the biggest spectacle Douglas Fairbanks has ever done," said the critic for the Toronto Mail and Empire when "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," a United Artists release, was shown recently at the Hippodrome, Toronto, Can. "In fact, few productions that can come anywhere near this one ever have been placed on the screen. The scenes showing tournaments and warfare in the days of chivalry contain some of the finest photography ever seen in the movies."

"Thrill follows thrill," said the reviewer for the Evening Telegram, "and Douglas Fairbanks in the stellar role much more than fulfills expectations. A magnificent spectacle was the tournament."

"A fine picture; everything is well done," said the critic for the Toronto Globe.

"Does It Pay?" Due for March Release

"Does It Pay?" the Fox special featuring Hope Hampton, will be given to the public early in March. This screen drama, which handles a familiar and vital phase of modern life, is given an added interest on account of presenting Miss Hampton in the role of a 1923 vamp. The character calls for all the allurement of youth and beauty and a correct taste in the matter of expensive and beautiful gowns. Miss Hampton is said to fill all three conditions with complete success.

Pathe Program Sets New Precedent

THE conspicuous success of the run of "Dr. Jack" and "Fruits of Faith" at the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, has caused the Stanley circuit for the first time in its history to play the same bill, same day and date, at two of its theatres in the same city.

At the close of the Stanley theatre run of the Lloyd and Rogers pictures, they were billed together at the Carlton and Victoria. Uniformly enthusiastic reviews of both pictures in the Philadelphia newspapers are given part of the credit for this innovation in Stanley circuit history.

At the Carlton and Victoria the entire bill is composed of Pathe product. In addition to "Dr. Jack" and "Fruits of Faith" it presents Pathe News and an Aesop's Film Fable.

Warners Enlarge N. Y. Headquarters

The growth of the Warner Brothers during the past season has necessitated the taking over of additional floor space in the Mecca Building, 1600 Broadway, New York. Fifty-five hundred square feet were secured, and the organization now occupies the entire ninth floor of the building, comprising 11,000 square feet.

British Like Doug's "Robin Hood"

Newspaper Critics Are Unanimous in Acclaiming it Exceptional Production

THAT "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" is proving exceedingly popular with the British public and that there is no question this Fairbanks feature will set a new record for gross receipts for the British Isles, are statements contained in a letter just received from abroad from a representative of the Fairbanks organization.

"This film sets a standard in production which will be hard to follow," said the London Evening News. "Clean, invigorating, noble in purpose and execution, it is a picture to show to young people."

"If you want to spend a thoroughly entertaining evening, go and see this picture. You will feel better for it," said the Star.

"It is the finest pro-English film that has been seen on the screen," said the Sunday London Illustrated. "The picture is a tonic and, incidentally, a fine boost for England."

"It is one of the most splendid spectacles ever seen on the screen," said the review of the London Sunday Chronicle.

"Physically gigantic, spiritually satisfying, artistically a triumph," said the critic for the London Sunday Pictorial. "This is the finest screen romance I have yet seen."

"'Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood' is unquestionably the most splendid photoplay ever made," said the review for the London Sunday Express. "The truth is that 'Robin Hood' is a great work of art, a new and altogether different kind of classic, something that will live forever in the memory of those who see it and will live in the imagination of one generation of youth if not of several."

"'Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood' is a first-rate film, a fine spectacle and extremely good fun, as well," said the Daily Chronicle.

"Nothing finer in the way of reconstruction of the past has been done on the film," said the London Daily News.

"'Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood' must certainly be the greatest show on earth, the most thrilling and gorgeous entertainment ever presented to the public," thought the reviewer for the London Daily Express.

"The film will be enjoyed by old and young whenever it is seen," said the critic for the Pall Mall Gazette. "There is never a dull moment, and there is plenty of sparkle and fun."

"If Winter Comes" Due on Broadway Soon

Arrangements are being perfected for the showing on Broadway of Fox Film Corporation's screen version of the A. S. M. Hutchinson story "If Winter Comes."

This "best seller" was filmed in England among the actual scenes described by the author, strength of characters and plot. Fox Film Corporation has taken every precaution to insure a masterly moving picture version of the novel, and Director Harry Millarde, who made "Over the Hill" and "The Town That Forgot God" has worked faithfully and well that ample justice should be done to the picture.

With Percy Marmont in the part of Mark Sabre, Ann Forrest as Nona, and other important parts intrusted to Arthur Metcalf, Sydney Herbert, William Riley Hatch, Raymond Bloomer, Leslie King, Margaret Fielding, Gladys Leslie, Dorothy Allen and Eleanor Daniels, the men and women of Hutchinson's imagination became a reality on the screen.

Distribution Planned on Paramount Trailers

Paramount has made arrangements with the National Screen Service, with offices in New York and Chicago, for the distribution of the de luxe trailers on its big productions, similar to those which were issued on "Blood and Sand," "Fool's Paradise" and other pictures.

Trailers on the following productions are to be distributed under the new arrangement: "Adam's Rib," "Bella Donna," "The Covered Wagon," "The Glimpses of the Moon," "Hollywood," "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife" and "The Enemies of Women." They will be made in their entirety at the Paramount studios, will be embellished with art titles and will run approximately 200 feet in length.

American Releasing Films Commended

FOUR pictures distributed by American Releasing Corporation are picked for special mention by The National Board of Review on its January bulletin of noteworthy subjects. They are "As a Man Lives," "One Million in Jewels," "Outlaws of The Sea" and "Solomon in Society."

The notation accompanying these pictures stresses their value as good entertainment suitable for the entire family.

"As a Man Lives" is an Achievement Films' production directed by J. Searle Dawley. "One Million in Jewels" marks the return of Helen Holmes to the screen, and was directed by J. P. McGowan who also plays the stellar role.

"Outlaws of The Sea" is a John Brunton production with Marguerite Courtot, Pierre Gendron and Gordon Standing in the leading roles. Wm. H. Strauss in "Solomon in Society," with Brenda Moore in the featured role, was produced by Cardinal Pictures under the supervision of Whitman Bennett.

Mexico Would Finance More Pictures

Fred Niblo, who has filmed the great American play, "The Famous Mrs. Fair," for the Metro-Louis B. Mayer forces, is enthusiastic about Mexico as a locale for the filming of pictures. He has just returned to Hollywood with his wife, Enid Bennett, from a trip to Mexico City.

Mr. Niblo says that in the near future he will produce Prescott's "Conquest of Mexico." The Mexican government, he explains, is anxious for photoplays to be made and produced there, for by that means it hopes to advertise to the world that Mexico is not the arid, bandit-ridden land it commonly is supposed to be. Capital in abundance, Mr. Niblo is informed, may be obtained from the financial leaders of the country, who join the government in the desire that the beauties of Mexico be spread before the eyes of the world.

Mr. Niblo is at present cutting the completed film of "The Famous Mrs. Fair," by James Forbes. This is the first of a series of Fred Niblo productions presented by Louis B. Mayer and distributed by Metro Pictures Corporation. Frances Marion made the screen adaptation. Charles J. Van Enger did the photography.

"The Hypocrites" Is Being Titled

Work will commence this week on the titling of "The Hypocrites" starring Wyndham Standing. Releasing arrangements are under the supervision of Producers Security Corporation. Direction was by Charles Giblyn.

This film is made from the famous play "The Hypocrites," by Henry Arthur Jones which had a phenominal Broadway run.

Fundamentals of Light for Understanding of Cinematography

Principles of Physics and Chemistry Intimately Related to Photography

Extracts from "Motion Picture Photography" by Carl L. Gregory, published by New York Institute of Photography

CHAPTER III

AS the whole structure of photography rests upon the application of the science of physics and chemistry, the student of photography or of cinematography can never be too well informed upon these subjects. While we shall endeavor to merely touch upon the more important principles of physics and chemistry, which are most intimately concerned in their relation to photography, it would be well for the reader, who is earnestly in search of information, to dig up his high school text-books and study the subjects of the physics of light and the chemistry of the salts of silver. If he has no such books, he will find a mine of interesting information in the public libraries, which are so numerous over the country that there are very few who do not have access to them. He who has considered these subjects dull and uninteresting will find they contain an unsuspected interest when he comes to trace their relation to and use in photography. It is not necessary to go deep into these subjects to get the simple facts upon which photography is based. When one has a clear conception of these facts, they will form a firm foundation upon which to build a sound structure of photographic knowledge. New facts acquired will then fit upon this foundation like bricks into a wall. If the student is uncertain as to what books to consult to acquire the knowledge which he wishes, he may find some assistance in consulting the bibliography or list of suitable text books given in another place in this volume.

Ideas 200 Years Ago

It is hardly two hundred years ago since people first had any adequate idea that our atmosphere exists and that we live and move about at the bottom of a sea of air—the weight of which presses upon us and all other objects about us with a pressure of approximately fourteen pounds to the square inch. With our present day knowledge gained from barometers, airships and balloons floating in the air and from hundreds of other common facts, we accept the presence of the atmosphere as a matter of course.

The existence of an all-pervading ether is, however, somewhat more difficult to grasp. Much like our knowledge of the air, its existence is only an inference from observed facts. Ether is an all-pervading medium in which the entire universe is submerged, and by means of radiation or vibration, are transmitted light, radiant heat, actinic radiation, X-rays, electromagnetic oscillations, magnetism, and Hertzian waves. Of these forms of radiant energy, light, or those radiations which enable the eye to see objects, are the only ones with which we are to deal.

Light is transmitted through the ether in straight lines, by very minute waves or vibrations, which travel with great rapidity.

Difference in Sound and Light Waves

For purposes of comparison, we often refer to the similarity of light waves to sound waves, but sound waves are carried by the atmosphere at a comparatively slow rate. It will be noted when viewing the steam emitted by a whistle at some distance from the observer that the steam is seen some little time before the sound is heard, showing that the light waves from the object travel much more quickly than the sound. Ether waves do not correspond to sound waves in some other respects. For instance, sound waves are composed of alternate compressions and refractions, while the wave movement or displacement in light waves is from side to side at right angles to the direction in which the light is traveling.

Figure one is an illustration of the movement of light waves from side to side as it might appear if it were possible to magnify a ray of light and render it visible. Light itself is not visible. When we say we see a ray of light, as we sometimes do when the sunshine falls through a window or through the foliage of trees, we do not actually see the ray of light—what we see is small particles of dust floating in the atmosphere which show us where the ray of light is passing. The particles of dust reflect to our eye a small portion of the light which comes through the window or between the leaves, as the case may be. In ordinary diffused light these particles are too small to be seen, but under the strong light of the sun, each particle becomes a tiny luminous point. For an experiment to prove this, turn the light of a projection machine on in a quiet room, and if the atmosphere has not been disturbed so as to stir up dust, the path of the light will not be visible, but if we stir up a little dust, or blow a puff of smoke in front of the machine, we will see the path of the light spring out so that we can see it distinctly.

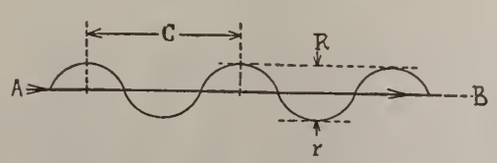

Fig. 1—A B represents a minute section of a ray of light traveling in the direction indicated by the arrows. The curved line represents light waves. The distance from crest to crest of two consecutive waves is the wave length designated by C. The distance Rr from the crest to the bottom of the curve is called the amplitude of vibration.

To return to the vibration of the ether waves back and forth in a ray of light, we see that in the first diagram the waves are represented as traveling like the crests and hollows of waves on water, which move forward without moving the water which composes them forward. This we know, because a boat floating upon water agitated by waves, does not move forward with the waves, but simply bobs up and down in the same spot. In the same manner light waves pass through the ether without the ether moving forward in the direction of the waves. There is a difference in the light waves and the water waves, however; for while the waves in water move up and down only, the vibrations, or waves, which occur in the ether, take place in every conceivable direction—sideways as well as up and down. Figure 2 represents a cross section of a ray of light in which may conceive that the wave or ray is vibrating back and forth in every direction within the limits of a circle.

Paths Followed by Light

Waves of light pass through any transparent medium, which may be air, glass, water, celluloid, amber or any other substance through which we can see. As long as light travels in the same substance or medium, it goes forward in a straight line, but as soon as it strikes the surface of a different medium, it is deflected or bent at a slight angle, depending upon the nature of the substance, and does not bend again until it encounters another medium. This is called the rectilinear propagation of light, which simply means, as before stated, that in any particular medium—whether air, water or glass—light always travels in straight lines.

The principal sources of light are from objects heated to a high temperature. The most common source of light is, of course, the sun, which is a heavenly body incandescently hot. In the arc light, the light is emitted by the carbon tips heated to incandescency by the passing of the electric current. Incandescent lights give forth light because their filaments are heated by the passing of the electric current. Ordinary kerosene lamp flames are luminous, because of the hot particles in their flames to be heated to incandescency. There are exceptions to this rule of light being accompanied by heat, such as the glow of the glow-worm, phosphorescence of phosphorus, and light from some kinds of electric discharges. These exceptions are not very well understood and are seldom of any use in connection with photography.

In the Cooper-Hewitt lamp vapor of mercury is rendered incandescent by the passing of the electric current. A luminous body, that is, anything giving forth light, sends forth the light in all directions from itself, just as a pebble dropped on the surface of quiet water sends out ripples which leave the place where the pebble dropped in ever-widening circles. Do not become confused by the idea of the circle. Remember that any point on the crest of any of these ripples or waves has come outward from the pebble in a straight line. In a similar way, light waves move out in straight lines from their point of origin, not only in one plane, as the ripples do from the surface of the water, but in every direction. (Fig. 3.)

The velocity at which light travels is 186,000 miles per second; that is, nearly eight times the distance around the earth in one second. What increases the heat in a light source, increases the amount of light from that source, so by increasing the amount of an electric light current or energy through an electric arc light its brightness is increased.

Variation in Size of Light Waves

The size of the waves or vibrations of light varies as do the size of the ripples in a pond when stones of different size have been thrown in, but no matter what size these vibrations possess, they move forward at the same speed or velocity. The ether waves produced by a luminous body vary from 20,000,000,000,000 to 40,000,000,000,000,000 waves per second, and the wave length in ether accordingly varies from one 3,250,000th of an inch to about 1,675th of an inch. Light waves, as they travel through ether, are all alike in every respect except that of size, and in that respect they differ only in wave length and amplitude of vibration.

In Figure 1 the distance from A to B represents a ray of light traveling in the direction indicated by the arrow. The curved line represents light waves. The distance from crest to crest of a wave is the wave length. The distance from the crest and in that respect, they differ only in wave length and amplitude of the vibration.

Color Due to Length of Waves

Light waves of different lengths produce different effects when they strike a solid body. Those of the greatest wave length give the sensation of red light; as the wave length shortens, the color changes to orange-red, then to orange, and so on through orange-yellow, yellow, yellow-green, green, greenish blue, blue, blue-violet and violet. Waves of shorter lengths than these cannot be seen by the eye at all, but they are still able to produce an effect upon a photographic plate. They are called ultra-violet, or actinic waves. There is no fixed line between actinic waves and visible waves; that is, between light which we can see and light which we cannot see, but which will have an effect upon a photographic plate, because most of the light, which we can see, also has an effect upon a photographic plate.

Actinic light simply means the light which has the strongest action upon a photographic plate, whether visible or not.

Fig. 3—This diagram roughly illustrates how a luminous point S radiates light outwardly in every direction like the radii of a sphere, in this case the figure represents a cross-section of such a sphere

There are also light waves which are so long that they are not visible; they are longer than the visible red rays and are called infra-red or heat waves.

The intensity of light refers to its brightness. For example, a sunshiny day possesses a more intense or brighter light (degree of illumination) than a cloudy day.

Law of Light Intensity

The intensity of light diminishes in proportion to the square of the distance from its source. For instance, let us refer to Figure No. 4, which represents light rays emanating from a small source, such as an arc lamp or the flame of a candle. Let the square A represent screen one foot square placed at a distance of one foot from the light, and the square B screen placed at a distance of two feet from the light. These two squares are in a line with the light; square A exactly shades square B. If we remove square A the same amount of light which fell upon square A will now fall upon square B. Square B is twice the diameter of square A, or four times its area. Since the same amount of light which fell upon square A covers a surface four times as great as twice the distance, it follows that the intensity of the light falling upon B is only one-fourth of the intensity of light falling upon A, or conversely, the intensity of the light falling upon A is four times the intensity of light on screen B.

This law of illumination must be taken into account very particularly where artificial illumination is used, for if it takes a certain number of lights to illuminate a certain small set properly, it will require four times as many lights to properly illuminate a set which is only twice as large. Therefore it is practically impossible to artificially illuminate a very large set since the limit of the practical number of artificial lights is soon reached.

Reflection Permits Photography

When light strikes an object, part of it is reflected or thrown back. It is because of this fact that we are enabled to see objects and to photograph them. The kind or quality of light reflected enables one to photograph objects. The violet light is quite active photographically, while the other end of the spectrum, red, is not.

If the object reflects all blue or violet the photographic sensitive surface will be strongly affected and the object easily photographed, but if the object reflects yellow and red waves only, the sensitive surface will be only feebly affected.

It is for this reason that photographic operations are carried on in dark rooms which are illuminated only by faint red or orange light. All dark room lights should be carefully tested by exposing a sample of the most sensitive surface that is to be worked under the light in question for a greater period of time than such sample would be exposed under any ordinary working conditions. If on development the sample shows traces of fog, the light should be changed or its intensity decreased. When a certain color of light predominates, the unaided eye is not able to distinguish a contamination of another color, consequently wherever possible it is very desirable to make a spectroscopic examination of the light passed by screens used for dark room illumination.

From this it will be seen that much depends upon the quality of light reflected in photographic work.

(To be continued in an early issue)

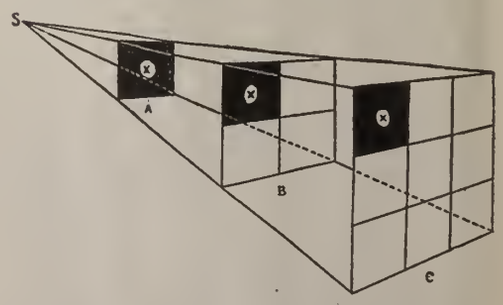

Fig. 4—The intensity of light falling upon a given area varies inversely as the square of the distance from which it is removed from the light source. The black squares marked X are the hole, one fourth, and one ninth, respectively, of the larger squares A, B and C. A is one foot, B, two feet and C, three feet away from the light source S. The black squares being of the same size will receive less light as they are removed from the arc light

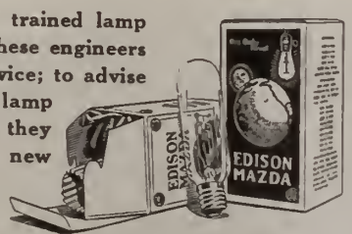
If your theatre has a throw of less than 120 ft.; or a picture width of not more than 16 ft.;—and you are using carbon arcs—you can save real money each month through the use of Edison MAZDA lamps for projection.

You can get better pictures; pictures evenly illuminated, without flicker; pictures that are kind to the eye; pictures that make audiences notice the difference in projection between your theatre and the one down the block;—and at a considerably less operating cost to you.

It costs you nothing to investigate. Why not join the ranks of hundreds of other exhibitors who are demonstrating daily that Incandescent Projection pays.

You run good pictures. You operate good machines. Why not project with the best light you can get, especially when it costs you less to run and the saving pays for the cost of the necessary new equipment in a short time.

The Edison Lamp Works maintains a staff of trained lamp engineers who know projection from A to Z. These engineers stand ready at all times to render you a free service; to advise you definitely as to whether or not incandescent lamp projection will prove profitable. In many cases they personally assist and inspect the installation of new equipment.



Edison MAZDA lamps for motion projection are handled by live distributors all over the country. There is one near you who is ready to serve you at all times and who carries complete apparatus for incandescent lamp projection. If you do not know his name, or if your present distributor or supply house does not carry Edison MAZDA lamps, write to us and we will put you in touch with our distributor in your locality.

Equipment Dealers' Association Select Chicago for Annual Convention

THAT the Association of Motion Picture Equipment Dealers of America has made splendid progress since it was organized in Indianapolis last July, was revealed at the meeting of the directors, held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, on February 8th and 9th.

There are now fifty-six active members in the association, out of a possible sixty eligibles. All are fully paid up and there is a substantial fund in the treasury.

During its brief existence the association has already ironed out many trade abuses and has put the supply business on a better basis, which will result in benefit to not only supply dealers but manufacturers and exhibitors as well.

At the meeting of the directors plans were made for the annual convention, which will be held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, on July 12th, 13th and 14th, and which, according to members of the board, promises to be the most important event of its kind ever put on by Supply Dealers. Many men of national prominence in the motion picture industry, and equipment manufacturers are expected to attend and address the members.

Chicago members state that while they will not be allowed to overshadow the business meetings, some interesting social functions will also be provided.

Those present at the directors' meeting included: President Leo Dwyer, Cleveland, Ohio; Vice-President B. A. Benson, Chicago; Secretary Otto Dieckman, Cincinnati, Ohio; Joe Hornstien, New York; C. E. Cornwall, Charleston, W. Va., and Harry Bogue, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Letters pledging their continued support and explaining their absences were due to illness, were received from Sid Lows, Minneapolis; Robert L. Hosmer, Boston; H. A. Mohrbacker, Denver, and Henry Jay Smith, Pittsburgh.

New Madison Being Constructed

Construction has been started on the new Madison Theatre, Ward avenue and Madison road, Madisonville, Ohio, and the opening will probably take place by June 1st. There will be 750 seats in the structure, which will be fireproof throughout. The front of the building will be two stories high, with two storerooms on the first floor and space for three offices on the floor above. Rough tapestry pressed brick, with stone trim, is specified for the exterior.

Restrooms for men and women are included in the plans. The air will be changed every six minutes through the use of a modern ventilating system. Size of the plot on which the structure is being erected is 69 1-2 by 140 feet, Charles Weigel, well-known Cincinnati exhibitor, is the owner of the new theatre.

Chaplin Installs Robert-Morton Organ

Movie fans in the country seldom realize the true character of their screen stars.

Screen action, plot, and the vehicle representing our favorite doesn't always fully interpret the temperament of the actor.

It may be news to many of your readers that Charlie Chaplin is a clever musician, playing violin, piano and organ with unusual skill.

The first intimation that many of Chaplin's friends and followers knew of this musical talent was the placing of an order for a Robert-Morton organ to be installed in his new Beverley Hills home in the course of construction. This is one of the finest residences in the Hollywood district. In the music room provision was also made for an echo organ and a special role device will also be installed on the instrument.

It is expected that Charlie will "shoulder arms" over the console of the new instrument when the Pipes of Pan are playing in the springtime.

Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Texas, Opens as Twentieth Century Playhouse

WITH its brilliant reflection of white lights against an imposing front of the same character, the Capitol theatre, the latest trade venture to be backed by Col. Leon S. Gohlman, opened at Dallas, Texas, to more than capacity business and with S. R. O. signs hanging out.

The house holds 1044 seats, all on one floor, in a building 50 feet wide, which is built of stone, brick and reinforced concrete and strictly modern, up to date and fireproof. Music consists of a Barton organ and an orchestra of six pieces. Projection is from a Proctor machine on a Minusa screen. A roomy lobby faces the street, while back of it is a foyer of agreeable proportions. One very attractive feature is the arrangement of the electric sign, which is built in a recess position across the face of the front, over the lobby entry, and throws light out and down.

While the wall and ceiling decorations are not elaborate or of extra expensive nature, the house has an atmosphere of refinement and elegance, all appointments being in good taste.

The heating and cooling systems are of the latest patterns and guaranteed to be a warm theatre in winter and a cool one in the summer.

On the opening night the foyer was crowded with a collection of rare floral gifts, sent to the theatre by the management. A steady line of eager patrons passing through the many rows of different colored lights created a sight seldom witnessed by theatre-goers.

The Popular Amusement Company, owners of the theatre, was organized in Dallas about a year ago. Construction on the new house was started soon after the formation of the company. In operating the Capitol theatre, Leon S. Gohlman has been named as general manager and L. A. Goodwin, manager.

Christian Franke will conduct the orchestra. Miss Genevie Clements and Albert Harris are the organists. Admission prices will be 15 cents matinee and 25 cents evenings.—Noble.

Alex E. Levin, well known in the San Francisco film industry, and Attorney Joseph L. Levin have purchased from Jacob Weissbein the northwest corner at Geary St. & 18th Ave. and plans have been drawn by Reid Bros., architects, for the immediate erection of a magnificent theatre to seat 2000 persons and represent an outlay of $250,000. The new theatre will be one of the finest residential theatres in America involving latest construction features, lighting and ornamentation and every known comfort. The general scheme of architecture is dignified Egyptian. No name has yet been chosen for this theatre which is to be a ground floor house with a raised section and the seats ranging along inclined tiers.

Simplified Electricity for Projectionists

Mathematical Terms and Equations

Lesson I—Part I

CONFUCIUS, the great Chinese philosopher, is credited with the saying that "the most common cause for misunderstanding among men is lack of a common basis of expression." According to a more modern saying, "There's more truth than poetry in those words." Undoubtedly, the most common cause for trouble among persons working with electricity is a general misunderstanding of the expressions used in describing, and the units used in measuring, electrical effects and their causes.

Now mathematics is the very essence of electricity. Certainly no person can hope to successfully understand this very interesting subject unless he can read and speak the language in which it is written. Mathematics is truly the language of electricity. This does not necessarily mean that without an elaborate education in this branch of science a study of the subject is hopeless. On the contrary, all that is needed for the projectionist to obtain a fairly accurate working knowledge is to be able to read and understand this language so that when a piece of electrical apparatus does a particular thing he will know why it does it and how it happens.

Electrical engineering, like every other science, for that matter, is built on laws. Our social life is made and controlled by man-made laws which all of us, presumably, must obey if we wish to escape the "hoosegow." The laws of the science of electricity, however, are not man-made. Rather, some men spend a considerable part of their life conducting endless experiments in an effort to find out what these laws are. Once the law of an electrical action is found, the future behavior of the action can be easily determined.

Equations

These laws are expressed in the form of equations, which form the language of electricity. Now an equation is nothing more than an expression of equality between two or more things. In other words, it simply states that one thing is equal to another. Thus, if you thought that Tom Brown was as good a man as John Jones, you could express it by writing

$$\text{Tom Brown} = \text{John Jones}$$

This means that Tom Brown is equal to John Jones. Every equation is made up of parts called terms and these terms are joined together by signs, or symbols. In the following equation

$$2 + 4 = 12 - 6$$

2, 4, 12 and 6 are the terms and +, =, and — are the signs. The terms tell us what quantities or amounts are being handled, and the signs what is being done with these amounts. Instead of using numbers we can use letters, as

$$B + B + B = 12, \text{ where } B = 4,$$

or we can condense this and say

$$3 \times B = 12$$

or just

$$3B = 12$$

Letters, then, are time-savers. That is, they save time in writing and serve to condense the equation. Many different signs are used in equations, and it is quite necessary to understand them in order to be able to read equations. Some of the most common signs are as follows:

$+$ (plus) means to add
$-$ (minus) means to subtract
$\times$ (times) means to multiply
$\cdot$ also means to multiply
$\div$ means to divide
$\pm$ means to either subtract or add
$\mp$

When dividing sometimes a line is drawn separating the two numbers, as

$$\frac{12}{4}, \text{ or } 12/4 = 12 \div 4 = 3$$

Sometimes signs are omitted and the terms are so joined as to imply their use. In the above equation the use of the division sign is implied by placing one number over the other. When multiplying one term by another the $\times$ is left out, as

$$A \times B = 6$$

or simply

$$AB = 6$$

Subscripts, or markings, are used to distinguish one like term from another. It is common practice to use a particular letter always for the same thing. Thus, "I" usually means "electric current." But in equations where many different electrical currents are used some means of telling which currents are meant is necessary, as for instance,

1 ampere + 4 amperes + 7 amperes — 3 amperes = 9 amperes

This can also be written

$$I_1 + I_2 + I_3 - I_4 = 9$$

or

$$I_{\text{I}} + I_{\text{II}} + I_{\text{III}} - I_{\text{IV}} = 9$$

There are many ways of distinguishing between the individual currents, as a matter of fact.

When terms are enclosed by these marks ( ), called brackets, it means that the terms so enclosed are to be treated together. Thus if we saw

$$2\,(4+7) = 22$$

We know that what is meant is

$$2 \times 11 = 22$$

Keep For Reference

THIS article on Mathematical Terms and Equations, the first of a series dealing with Simplified Electricity for Projectionists, should be given special attention in that it takes up the fundamentals of mathematics which are essentiol for an intelligent understanding of electricity. As this series of articles will take up in detail a great many phases of electricity which are of particular interest to projectionists, it is recommended that the issues of the NEWS carrying these articles be filed or else the articles cut from the magazine and bound.

Any comments or questions which the projectionist wishes to make concerning the various subjects treated through these articles will be gladly considered by the editor.

or the terms enclosed by the brackets are to be operated on first.

Exponents and Roots

We now come to something a little more difficult. Consider the equation shown below:

$$A \times A = 16$$

This means that a certain number multiplied by itself equals 16. The number obviously is 4. However, we can write this a different way, as

$$A^2 = 16$$

Here the smaller number 2 is called an exponent (Ex-po-nent) and means that the number before it is to be multiplied by itself as many times as the exponent calls for. Thus

$$A^3 = A \times A \times A.$$
$$B^4 = B \times B \times B \times B.$$

Suppose, however, that we wish to reverse this process and, having the exponential value of A, wish to write the value for A alone. We would write

$$A = \sqrt{A^2}$$

Squares and square roots are used a great deal in figuring alternating current circuits so the idea should be well grasped. The sign $\sqrt{\ }$ is called a "square root" sign and means just the reverse of the exponent. If the exponent had been 3 the sign would have been $\sqrt[3]{\ }$ (cube root); or if 4, $\sqrt[4]{\ }$ (fourth root). The process of finding the value of such a term is called "extracting the root."

Simplifying Equations

Equations, however, are not always so simple in form as those shown above. Indeed many of them become so long and complicated that it is necessary to simplify and condense them in order to effect a solution. One of the most common methods of simplifying equations is to transpose and cancel like terms. Thus,

$$y \div 2 = 6$$

This really means

$$y \times \tfrac{1}{2} = 6$$

We can also write this

$$\tfrac{1}{2}y = 6$$

or

$$\frac{y}{2} = 6$$

Now in order to find what y is we must "juggle" the equation, so to speak, so that y stands alone on one side of the equation. In order to do this in the above case we must move the figure "2" to the other side of the equation. This can be done by multiplying each side by 2. Thus

$$2 \times \frac{y}{2} = 2 \times 6$$

But on the left hand side of the equation it will be seen that y is multiplied by 2 and also divided by 2. These two operations are just the reverse of each other and one nullifies or cancels the other. In other words the value of y is not changed. If you give two dollars to one person and another person gives you two dollars you have the same amount of money you first had. So these two operations cancel each other and this leaves the equation as follows:

$$2\frac{y}{2} = 2 \times 6$$

$$y = 12$$

Simplified Electricity for Projectionists

In common practice we do not really multiply each side (or member) by 2, but merely move the number in question from one side of the equation to the other, as

$$\frac{y}{2} = 6$$

$$y = 2 \times 6$$

Fractions

Fractions are quite puzzling to some people, yet when once the principle is grasped there is nothing more simple. Now a fraction is nothing more than some part of a whole number; 1 (one) is a whole number, such as also are 2, 3, 4, 5, etc. Fractional values can really be expressed in two ways. One is commonly called the true fractional value and the other the decimal value. These two are readily interchangeable and it is fortunate that this is so because the decimal value is far more convenient to handle than the true fraction.

Suppose we start out with 1 (one) dollar. Now one dollar is divided into 100 cents. We can express any part of a dollar as a fraction or a decimal. Thus a half a dollar can be written either as ½ or .5 ($.50) of a dollar. Similarly 25 cents is either ¼ dollar or $.25; also ⅛ dollar = $.125; 1/16 dollar = $.0625, etc.

Fractions can be added, subtracted, multiplied, divided, etc., just as any other number. When adding or subtracting, however, it is necessary that the two bottom numbers of the fractions be of the same figure. Thus when adding ⅛ to ¼ we would change the ¼ to eighths and then add the two top figures, as

$$1/8 + 2/8 = 3/8$$

Similarly when adding 1/3 to 1/4 we would choose the smallest number into which 3 and 4, both, could be divided. This is obviously 12. We would then divide 3 into 12 and get 4 for the top figure of one fraction. Then we would divide 4 into 12 and get 3 for the other top figure. These two fractions would then appear as follows:

$$\frac{1}{3} + \frac{1}{4} = \frac{4}{12} + \frac{3}{12} = \frac{7}{12}$$

When multiplying and dividing, however, a different method is used. If we wished to multiply 3/8 by 2/3 we would proceed as follows: Multiply the two top numbers by each other and then multiply the two bottom numbers by each other. These two numbers give the top and bottom figures of the new fraction. Thus

$$\frac{3}{8} \times \frac{2}{3} = \frac{6}{24} = \frac{3}{12} = \frac{1}{4}$$

Reducing the numbers of the fraction so that it contains the smallest possible figures is called simplifying the fraction.

Reciprocals

Reciprocals (re-cip-ro-cals) are nothing more than simple fractions. The top number is always the figure one (1) and the bottom number any designated figure. The reciprocal of a number is that number divided into one (1). Thus, the reciprocal of 4 is 1/4; of 3 is 1/3; of 18 is 1/18. Reciprocals are much used in figuring the combined value of electrical resistances in parallel and in lens problems. Hence it is important that they be well understood at this time. It can be seen from what has been said concerning fractions that reciprocals can also be expressed as decimals. Thus 1/8 is 1 divided by 8, or .0125. It is very convenient, when handling reciprocals, to convert them to decimal values. They can then be easily added and subtracted, etc. Suppose we wish to add 1/6 and 1/9. First find the decimal value of 1/6, which is $1 \div 6 = .167$, and then find the decimal value of 1/9, which is $1 \div 9 = .111$. Adding these two numbers, we get .278.

A table showing the values of squares, cubes, square roots, cube roots, and reciprocals is shown in table 1. Use the table as follows: For example, opposite the figure 8 in the first column is found the square of the number (64), in the next column the cube (512), in the following column the square root (2.828), then the cube root (2.0), and last the reciprocal (.125).

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

New applicants when sending in blanks for membership in the N. A. M. please enclose twenty-five cents for a membership button.

If it is in the negative, you will get it in the print, on

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

Detail in highest highlight or deepest shadow, with every step of gradation in between,—Eastman Positive Film reproduces it all and carries the quality of the negative through to the screen.

Eastman Film, both regular and tinted base—now available in nine colors, is identified throughout its length by the words "Eastman" "Kodak" stenciled in black letters in the transparent margin.

New Utah House Challenges Comparison With Any in State

LOGAN, Utah, has a new motion picture theatre which challenges comparison with any theatre its size in the United States. It is the Capitol theatre, with B. G. Thatcher as manager. It will open in a few weeks.

It is built of structural steel and reinforced concrete with a Johns-Manville asbestos roof. It is fireproof in every way. The entrance is 30 by 114 feet. The building is 70 feet wide and 165 feet long.

The plaster work of the interior is in the style of the Italian and French Renaissance. This is beautifully painted in oils in colors to harmonize with the drapes, which are in old rose, French greys and taupes. The carpetings will be luxuriously rich and in old rose and black to harmonize with the drapes and walls.

The overhead pressure system of ventilation has been installed and not only keeps the place filled with fresh air but maintains an even temperature the year round. The air is changed every two minutes.

The ticket office in the center of the entrance is made of marble and plate glass. The lobby is attractively decorated. There is a baby carriage garage and a well appointed smoking and rest room for men. In the foyer are roomy divans and arm chairs upholstered in old rose. Everything has been arranged to give the feeling of rest and comfort. Running off from the foyer on the right is a ramp which rises at an easy incline, to the mezzanine floor, the ladies' rest room and the loges. An ample check room is next to the ramp on the right. Off from the left a broad stairway leads to the mezzanine, the rest room and the loges.

The foyer opens directly by means of two large entrances into the body of the house. Two spacious aisles run down from these entrances to the stage. Other aisles at the back of the side sections and along the side walls make every seat easily accessible. Nearly nine hundred seats, all giving a full view of the stage, are placed on the main floor. These seats are all wide and roomy. They are full springed and upholstered in a heavy old rose velour. The woodwork is in French grey.

At the rear of the right hand section of the seats on the main floor is a nursery designed especially for the use of mothers with babes in arms. It is unique and consists of a roomy section, seated with the finest of upholstered chairs and separated from the rest of the auditorium by a low wall, above which, running to the ceiling, is a partition of heavy plate glass. Through this plate partition an excellent view of the stage can be secured. The room is soundproof, and thus crying children will in no way bother patrons of the theatre.

The mezzanine floor is roomy and furnished with easy divans and upholstered chairs which match the drapery. Off this floor is a carefully appointed ladies' rest room, fitted up with complete lavatory equipment and a drinking fountain.

From the mezzanine floor, entrances on either side of the house lead to the seven loges, where 116 people can be seated. These loges all command excellent views of the stage and of a large section of the orchestra floor. They are fitted with comfortable, roomy chairs, upholstered in old rose.

A short ramp on the right and an easy stairway on the left lead from the mezzanine floor to the balcony. In the front balcony are seats for 186 people. The two front rows are furnished with the same wide, upholstered chairs that are found in the loges and downstairs.

Above the balcony is gallery, where between 350 and 400 seats will be kept for general admission.

The projection room is ingeniously placed above the ceiling of the main floor and under the floor of the front balcony. The machines project through the front of the balcony. The room is really a huge concrete box, thus shutting all films and projecting machines off from the rest of the building in a fire-proof encasement.

The lighting system is one designed to bring out the greatest beauty of the house and one that can be used to produce in the auditorium the same atmosphere that is produced in the picture on the screen or in the setting on the stage. It is known as the semi-direct system, and was devised by Thatcher after a close study of daylight lighting systems in Europe. Placed on the ceiling of the auditorium and forming an integral part of the decorations will be large shades, behind each of which will be a powerful reflector. These shades will be in various colors. Hundreds of them will cast a glowing white light, some will be blue, red or amber. They will be fitted with dimmers, and thus can be used in varying intensity. By using part of these lights or by using them in various combinations and intensities, different lighting effects can be produced in the body of the theatre.

An entire orchestra of fifty pieces can be placed in the pit. To accomplish this the pit extends in steps back under the stage for several feet. At the back of the orchestra pit and therefore farther under the stage, is the organ pit, where a large pipe organ will be installed. Special planning has made it possible to secure ample room for the organ pipes, a thing not possible in the ordinary playhouse.

The stage is one of the largest in the state. It is 36 feet deep and 70 feet wide. The height is 65 feet to the gridiron, above which is ample space for the stage hands to stand upright in arranging settings. There are 40 lines, taking in all four miles of rope, used in hanging the scenery.

The proscenium opening measures 36 feet wide by 28 feet high. At either side of the opening, between the stage and the audience, are artificially arranged flower gardens where colored lights will play. The curtain is of the heaviest asbestos. With its counter weights it will weigh from 1,500 to 2,000 pounds.

The system of stage lighting installed is in advance of anything in the West, which allows for the setting up, in advance, of two preselections. This means that, before any show begins, switches can be set for two completely different lighting effects to be used with two different acts or to give atmosphere to two different parts of a picture. These effects can then be produced by the closing of a single switch.—Hunt.

Little Stories of

Successful Exhibitors No. 6

Harry M. Crandall

Harry M. Crandall, at the age of 42, is a living example of the real opportunities in the exhibiting field. And like so many other big men Mr. Crandall had no easy start. He was born in Washington, D. C., and at the age of 12 he left school to work in a grocery at $1.50 per week. By turns he was telegraph boy and telephone operator. While in this latter position he married at the age of 19 on a salary of $8 per week.

Not long after, he established a livery and stable business, after which Mr. Crandall entered his present field in 1907 when he opened the Casino with 80 seats and a ten minute 5-cent show. From this humble beginning has grown the Crandall Circuit of 15 theatres, 10 of which are in the city of Washington and the balance in Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland.

Mr. Crandall, who is president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the District of Columbia, could have used a GOLD SEAL Automatic Ticket Register to advantage in his first 80-seat Casino, had they been manufactured at that time. He now uses them in all the theatres on his circuit. The GOLD SEAL is a proven necessity for the smallest houses as well as the biggest. And the low cost and convenient terms make it so easy to buy that you need delay no longer.

You are in business to make money. So protect your profits with an easy-to-buy GOLD SEAL. Write for prices today.

New National Theatre, Richmond, Va., to Have Excellent Ventilation

WORK is progressing rapidly on the construction of the new National theatre in Richmond, Va. All signs point to completion by June 1st.

Built by the First National Amusement Company, the National will be under the same management as the Broadway theatre of Richmond, and controlled by Frank Ferrandini and Pryor Bros. The cost, running well into the half-million-dollar mark, assumes that this magnificent new motion picture palace will be one of the finest and most attractive in the entire south.

Naturally enough, the first consideration throughout is the comfort of the public. The most careful attention is being paid to projection, to seats and to atmospheric conditions. In winter an abundance of fresh air will be supplied to meet the most exacting ventilation requirements, but before it is passed into the theatre it will be warmed to a comfortable temperature so as to insure entire absence of drafts. Two 8-foot Typhoons are used for this operation, and their work in similar installations all over the country assures full air supply and silence.

In summer—in the very hottest weather—the patrons of the National theatre will be able to enjoy the shows in absolute comfort. Nothing has been left undone to make the National theatre one of the best ventilated and coolest theatres in the country. The engineers of the Typhoon Fan Company were given carte blanche in the designing of a Typhoon system that would be the acme of cooling perfection.

The scheme used in the one found to be most effective by Typhoon engineers in their long and varied experience is cooling and ventilating thousands of theatres throughout the United States. Breezes—pine and refreshing—cool and delightful—all over the house, is the result that will be produced.

Between the roof and ceiling five immense Typhoon breeze makers will be placed—four of them nine feet in diameter and one of them eight feet. When going at full capacity, which would be only be in extremely warm summer weather, they will blow in a total of 385,000 cubic feet of fresh, wholesome air per minute. And this would be further augmented by the two heating Typhoons in the basement with an additional 130,000 cubic feet per minute—making a total of nearly 31,000,000 cubic feet per hour.

To assist in a better distribution of the cooling breezes, two two and one-half-foot Typhoons will be located advantageously in the foyer.

Community Theatre for the Oranges

The Prospect Theatre Company incorporated recently for the purpose of building a community theatre to be operated by the residents of the Oranges, New Jersey. The Prospect Theatre Company has its offices at 523 Main street, East Orange, N. J. The "Prospect" is situated in the heart of the Brick Church section of East Orange on Prospect Place, convenient to transportation. The building will be of fireproof construction throughout, with the most modern electric, heating and ventilating systems. Seating capacity will provide for 1,600. The management of the theatre will be under the personal direction of Richard A. Reilly, former manager of the Palace, Lyceum and Colonial, and secretary of the Prospect Theatre Company.

New Norwich Palace Progressing

Contract for general construction of the new $150,000 Playhouse of the Palace Theatre Corporation of Norwich, Ct., was last week let to the H. Wales Lines Company of Meriden, Ct. Other contracts, such as heating, interior decorating, organ and other equipment, have yet to be awarded. Work on the new theatre will be inaugurated as soon as machinery arrives and weather permits. The contract states that work is to be completed by Aug. 1, 1923. It is stated that the theatre will be one of the best equipped and safest in Connecticut, being, what is called, a strictly ground-floor house with a number of exits. —Agard.

E. H. Adams Building in Newmarket

E. H. Adams, of Newmarket, Ontario, a town about twenty miles north of Toronto, has started the construction of a brand new moving picture theatre. Mr. Adams has been a barber in Newmarket for a number of years, but has now branched out into the moving picture business. His new house, which is of solid brick and stone.

S. M. P. E. Spring Convention Scheduled for Atlantic City May 7-8-9-10

THE dates for the Spring Convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers have been set for May 7, 8, 9 and 10th, to be held at Atlantic City, N. J. The Hotel Traymore, located on the beach front, will be the headquarters and meeting place for the Society during this convention.

This meeting will mark the sixteenth convention of the Society which was founded on July 24, 1916. During the past few years, the popularity and membership of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers has been increasing by leaps and bounds as the importance of the Society to the industry is more fully realized. The great percentage of leading engineers of all the various technical branches of the motion picture industry are affiliated with the Society of Motion Picture Engineers who present during the semiannual conventions papers on the advancement and standard practices of motion picture engineering. There is no source of information to which the person interested in motion pictures may turn which equals that presented through the various papers of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

Every indication points to an exceedingly interesting and heavily attended meeting at Atlantic City. There are several subjects which will be treated that will be of unusual interest to this industry. There is also no denying that the location selected for this convention will aid in lending to its popularity.

Everyone in the motion picture industry who is desirous of advancing in his profession should be a member of this Society in that it offers the means of personal acquaintances with those best informed in the various lines of motion picture engineering, and also permits the most advanced and scientific methods pertaining to motion picture engineering. Detailed information may be secured from the office of the Secretary, Room 402, 729 7th Ave., New York City.

News from Washington, D. C.

The Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., is to occupy its new motion picture and photographic laboratories on C street, near 14th, S. W., in a few days. On the top floor is a fine sky-lighted studio, well lighted by day, and to be equipped later with Cooper-Hewitts for night work. In effect the building is exchange, production unit, studio, laboratory and storage center. Drying rooms, inspection rooms, six large vaults, all-steel, projection room and booth, basement storage space, office rooms, developing rooms, laboratory, etc., are all of fire proof concrete and steel construction. Director Perkins feels that he now has the best plant in the East, South of New York.

The War Department theaters office here is gathering and testing optical lenses and condensers from all co-operating domestic and foreign manufacturers. It is said that they plan to do a little research in manufacture of projection supplies, for their own houses only.

The National Literary Society is to establish a "Temple of Literature" here, says its founder, Dr. H. Harrison. The three story structure will have fifty columns to represent the States, Alaska, and the District. Two theatres will be features of the building, one to be a model theatre, and the smaller one to be a children's theatre. Of the seven busts in the rotunda one is to represent drama. Each bust is to be of some American or foreign leader in that line.

Hudson Falls Adds Another

The Hudson Falls Theatre Corporation recently opened their new theatre, The Strand, which gives Hudson Falls' visitors and natives another attraction to gaze upon. The Hudson Falls Theatre Corporation's officers are L. J. Shearer, President and Treasurer L. A. Buettner, Vice President and General Manager and M. J. Carroll, Secretary and Assistant Treasurer.

Associated Theatres, Inc., Building

The Lock City theatre which is being built by Associated Theatres, Inc., in Lockport, N. Y. will be opened in the fall. It will cost $225,000, and seat 1800. The same organization is building a 1,000 seat house in Bath, N. Y. The new Capitol in Newark, N. Y. will open May 1. Harold P. Dygert of East Rochester, N. Y. is head of Associated Theatres. Mr. Dygert says that his company will soon have 12 houses in its chain. Mayor James MacFarlane of Canandaigua, N. Y., is vice-president of Associated.

Liberal use of cut-outs and lobby display material for "A Dangerous Adventure" by Manager George Rea of the Colonial theatre, Washington Court House, Ohio

THE WILLIAMS PRINTING COMPANY, NEW YORK

Simplex

THE HOTEL ASTOR
NEW YORK CITY
IS SIMPLEXIZED

Following the example of the leading New York exhibitors, the management of this internationally famous film men's hostelry has installed two type "S" Motor-Driven Simplex projectors in a specially constructed permanent projection room located in the balcony of the Grand Ball Room.

The Proof of the Picture is in the Print—

The Proof of the Printing is in the Screening!

An ordinary print makes a good picture appear ordinary and injures and offends the Exhibitor—arouses ill-will.

An ordinary print of an ordinary picture is simply terrible*—an insult which the Exhibitor is quick to resent.*

The Exhibitor is entitled to the best you can give him. When he screens a Rothacker Print he is showing all that is good in the negative.

You protect the Exhibitor and save money when you specify Rothacker Prints because not only do Rothacker Prints look better but they wear longer—and, they include the value-established Rothacker Service.
